

EXHIBIT D

Row #	Citation	Headnote #	Headnote Text	Judicial Text	Memo Question
7	Taylor v. Jewish Hosp. & St. Mary's Healthcare, Inc., 26 F. Supp. 3d 642, 648 (W.D. Ky. 2014)	4	Under Kentucky law, in determining whether a person is acting as another's agent or independent contractor, the following factors must be considered: (1) the extent of control which, by the agreement, the master may exercise over the details of the work; (2) whether or not the one employed is engaged in a distinct occupation or business; (3) the kind of occupation, with reference to whether, in the locality, the work is usually done under the direction of the employer or by a specialist without supervision; (4) the skill required in the particular occupation; (5) whether the employer or the workman supplies the instrumentalities, tools, and the place of work for the person doing the work; (6) the length of time for which the person is employed; (7) the method of payment, whether by the time or by the job; (8) whether or not the work is a part of the regular business of the employer; and (9) whether or not the parties believe they are creating the relationship of master and servant.	Kentucky Dep't of Educ., 113 S.W.3d 145, 151 (Ky.2003). In determining whether a person is acting as another's agent or independent contractor, the following factors must be considered: (a) the extent of control which, by the agreement, the master may exercise over the details of the work; (b) whether or not the one employed is engaged in a distinct occupation or business; (c) the kind of occupation, with reference to whether, in the locality, the work is usually done under the direction of the employer or by a specialist without supervision; (d) the skill required in the particular occupation; (e) whether the employer or the workman supplies the instrumentalities, tools, and the place of work for the person doing the work; (f) the length of time for which the person is employed; (g) the method of payment, whether by the time or by the job; (h) whether or not the work is a part of the regular business of the employer; and (i) whether or not the parties believe they are creating the relationship of master and servant.	What are the factors that determine if a person is acting as an agent or independent contractor?
11	Kelly v. New W. Fed. Sav., 49 Cal. App. 4th 659, 669–70, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 803, 808 (1996)	2	Motions in limine permit more careful consideration of evidentiary issues than would take place in heat of battle during trial, minimize side-bar conferences and disruptions during trial and allow for uninterrupted flow of evidence, and, by resolving potentially critical issues at outset, enhance efficiency of trials and promote settlements.	Motions in limine serve other purposes as well. They *670 permit more careful consideration of evidentiary issues than would take place in the heat of battle during trial. They minimize side-bar conferences and disruptions during trial, allowing for an uninterrupted flow of evidence. Finally, by resolving potentially critical issues at the outset, they enhance the efficiency of trials and promote settlements. [Citation.]”	"Do motions in limine permit more careful consideration of evidentiary issues than would take place in heat of battle during trial, minimize side-bar conferences and disruptions during trial and allow for uninterrupted flow of evidence, and, by resolving potentially critical issues at outset, enhance efficiency of trials and promote settlements?"

12	Manhattan Ice & Cold Storage v. City of Manhattan, 294 Kan. 60, 69 (2012)	5	A motion in limine may be granted when a district court finds two factors are present: (1) the material or evidence in question will be inadmissible at a trial; and (2) the pretrial ruling is justified as opposed to a ruling during trial because the mere offer or mention of the evidence during trial may cause unfair prejudice, confuse the issues, or mislead the jury; the consideration of the issue during the trial might unduly interrupt and delay the trial and inconvenience the jury; or a ruling in advance of trial may limit issues and save the parties time, effort, and cost in trial preparation.	"[A] motion in limine may be granted when a district court finds two factors are present: (1) The material or evidence in question will be inadmissible at a trial; and (2) The pretrial ruling is justified as opposed to a ruling during trial because the mere offer or mention of the evidence during trial may cause unfair prejudice, confuse the issues, or mislead the jury; the consideration of the issue during the trial might unduly interrupt and delay the trial and inconvenience the jury; or a ruling in advance of trial may limit issues and save the parties time, effort, and cost in trial preparation.	Are pretrial grants of a motion in limine justified as opposed to a ruling during the trial because the offer or mention of evidence during trial may cause unfair prejudice?
15	BAC Home Loan Servicing, LP v. Bertram, 51 Misc. 3d 770, 782 (NY S. Ct. 2016)	4	A party in default who opposes a motion for a default judgment may have the default vacated and obtain leave to serve and file a late answer without service of a notice of cross motion seeking leave to extend the time to answer; however, the granting of such relief is dependent upon a demonstration of the elements of a claim for a discretionary vacatur of a default on excusable default grounds, namely, a reasonable excuse for the default and a meritorious defense to the action. McKinney's CPLR 3012(d).	While it has been held in recent appellate case authorities that a party in default who opposes a motion for a default judgment may have the default vacated and obtain leave to serve and file a late answer pursuant to CPLR 3012 (d), without service of a notice of cross motion seeking leave to extend the time to answer, the granting of such relief is dependent upon a demonstration of the elements of a claim for a discretionary vacatur of a default on excusable default grounds, namely, a reasonable excuse for the default and a meritorious defense to the action	Can a party in default who opposes a motion for a default judgment have the default vacated and obtain leave to serve and file a late answer without service of a notice of cross motion seeking leave to extend the time to answer?
17	Martinez v. United States, 793 F.3d 533, 552 (6th Cir. 2015)	23	The rule of non-inquiry bars courts from evaluating the fairness and humaneness of another country's criminal justice system, requiring deference to the Executive Branch on such matters; this rule has a narrow scope and is typically cited only to bar inquiry into humanitarian concerns or a lack of procedural rights in a foreign criminal justice system.	This principle, known as the rule of non-inquiry, bars courts " 'from evaluating the fairness and humaneness of another country's criminal justice system, requiring deference to the Executive Branch on such matters.' " Hilton, 754 F.3d at 83-84 (quoting Khouzam v. Att'y Gen. of United States, 549 F.3d 235, 253 (3d Cir.2008)). This rule has a narrow scope and is typically cited only to bar inquiry into humanitarian concerns or a lack of procedural rights in a foreign criminal justice system.	"Does the rule of non-inquiry bar courts from evaluating the fairness and humaneness of another country's criminal justice system, requiring deference to the Executive Branch on such matters; this rule has a narrow scope and is typically cited only to bar inquiry into humanitarian concerns or a lack of procedural rights in a foreign criminal justice system?"

19	Reverse Mortg. Solutions, Inc. v. Unknown Heirs, 207 So. 3d 917, 920 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2016)	1	Before dismissing a case with prejudice based on a party's failure to comply with a court rule or order, the court must consider and make explicit findings on the following factors: (1) whether the attorney's disobedience was willful, deliberate, or contumacious, rather than an act of neglect or inexperience; (2) whether the attorney has been previously sanctioned; (3) whether the client was personally involved in the act of disobedience; (4) whether the delay prejudiced the opposing party through undue expense, loss of evidence, or in some other fashion; (5) whether the attorney offered reasonable justification for noncompliance; and (6) whether the delay created significant problems of judicial administration. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.420(b).	Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.420(b) authorizes the trial court to dismiss a case based on a party's failure to comply with a court rule or order. But, before dismissing a case with prejudice, the court must consider and make explicit findings on the following factors: 1) whether the attorney's disobedience was willful, deliberate, or contumacious, rather than an act of neglect or inexperience; 2) whether the attorney has been previously sanctioned; 3) whether the client was personally involved in the act of disobedience; 4) whether the delay prejudiced the opposing party through undue expense, loss of evidence, or in some other fashion; 5) whether the attorney offered reasonable justification for noncompliance; and 6) whether the delay created significant problems of judicial administration.	What factors should a Court consider before dismissing a case with prejudice based on a party's failure to comply with a court rule or order?
21	Doe v. Qi, 349 F. Supp. 2d, 1258, 1295 (N.D. Cal. 2004)	20	Under three-factor balancing test to determine whether the act of state doctrine bars suit: (1) the greater the degree of codification or consensus concerning a particular area of international law, the more appropriate it is for the judiciary to render decisions regarding it; (2) the less important the implications of an issue are for our foreign relations, the weaker the justification for exclusivity in the political branches; and (3) the balance of relevant considerations may also be shifted if the government which perpetrated the challenged act of state is no longer in existence.	As discussed above, the Supreme Court in Sabbatino developed a three-factor balancing test to determine whether the act of state doctrine bars suit: [1] [T]he greater the degree of codification or consensus concerning a particular area of international law, the more appropriate it is for the judiciary to render decisions regarding it ... [2] [T]he less important the implications of an issue are for our foreign relations, the weaker the justification for exclusivity in the political branches. [3] The balance of relevant considerations may also be shifted if the government which perpetrated the challenged act of state is no longer in existence	What is the three-factor balancing test to determine whether the act of state doctrine bars suit?

22	Victims of Hungarian Holocaust v. Hungarian State Railways, 798 F. Supp. 2d 934, 939 (N.D. Ill. 2011)	8	In considering the applicability of the act of state doctrine, district court looks at several factors, including the degree of codification or consensus concerning a particular area of international law, and whether the government which perpetrated the challenged act of state is still in existence. Restatement (Third) of Foreign Relations Law of the United States, § 443 comment.	In considering the applicability of the act of state doctrine, the court looks at several factors, including the “degree of codification or consensus concerning a particular area of international law” and whether “the government which perpetrated the challenged act of state” is still in existence.	"In considering the applicability of acts of state doctrine to set of claims, will the court look at several factors, including the degree of codification or consensus concerning a particular area of international law, and whether the government which perpetrated challenged act of state is still in existence?"
23	Animal Sci. Prods., Inc. v. Hebei Welcome Pharm. Co. (In re Vitamin C Antitrust Litig.), 837 F.3d 175, 183 (2d Cir. 2016)	5	"Comity," in the legal sense, is neither a matter of absolute obligation, on the one hand, nor of mere courtesy and good will, upon the other; it is the recognition which one nation allows within its territory to the legislative, executive, or judicial acts of another nation, having due regard both to international duty and convenience, and to the rights of its own citizens or of other persons who are under the protection of its laws.	"Comity, in the legal sense, is neither a matter of absolute obligation, on the one hand, nor of mere courtesy and good will, upon the other." Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U.S. 113, 163-64, 16 S.Ct. 139, 40 L.Ed. 95 (1895) (internal quotations omitted). "[I]t is the recognition which one nation allows within its territory to the legislative, executive or judicial acts of another nation, having due regard both to international duty and convenience, and to the rights of its own citizens or of other persons who are under the protection of its laws." Id.	"Is comity the recognition which one nation allows within its territory to the legislative, executive, or judicial acts of another nation, having due regard both to international duty and convenience, and to the rights of its own citizens or of persons who are under protection of its laws?"
24	Milliken & Co. v. Bank of China, 758 F. Supp. 2d 238, 245–46 (S.D.N.Y. 2010)	5	"Comity," in the legal sense, is neither a matter of absolute obligation, on the one hand, nor of mere courtesy and good will, upon the other; it is a recognition which one nation allows within its territory to the legislative, executive or judicial acts of another nation, having due regard both to international duty and convenience, and to the rights of its own citizens, or of other persons who are under the protection of its laws.	"Comity," in the legal sense, is neither a matter of absolute obligation, on the one hand, nor of mere courtesy and good will, upon the other. But it is a recognition which one nation allows within its territory to the legislative, executive or judicial acts of another nation, having due regard both to international duty and convenience, and to the rights of its own citizens, or of other persons who are under the protection of its laws.	"Is comity the recognition which one nation allows within its territory to the legislative, executive or judicial acts of another nation, having due regard both to international duty and convenience, and to the rights of its own citizens or of other persons who are under the protection of its laws?"

25	Alvarado v. Snow White, 8 So. 3d 388, 388-89 (Fla. App. 2009)	2	To ensure that the sanction of dismissal is prudently applied, trial courts must first make certain preliminary findings of fact, including: (1) whether the attorney's disobedience was willful, deliberate, or contumacious, rather than an act of neglect or inexperience; (2) whether the attorney has been previously sanctioned; (3) whether the client was personally involved in the act of disobedience; (4) whether the delay prejudiced the opposing party through undue expense, loss of evidence, or in some other fashion; (5) whether the attorney offered reasonable justification for noncompliance; and (6) whether the delay created significant problems of judicial administration.	To ensure that the sanction of dismissal is prudently applied, trial courts must first *389 make certain preliminary findings of fact. Tianvan v. AVCO Corp., 898 So.2d 1208, 1209 (Fla. 4th DCA 2005). These findings must address: 1) whether the attorney's disobedience was willful, deliberate, or contumacious, rather than an act of neglect or inexperience; 2) whether the attorney has been previously sanctioned; 3) whether the client was personally involved in the act of disobedience; 4) whether the delay prejudiced the opposing party through undue expense, loss of evidence, or in some other fashion; 5) whether the attorney offered reasonable justification for noncompliance; and 6) whether the delay created significant problems of judicial administration.	What findings must the trial court address to ensure that the sanction of dismissal is prudently applied?
26	Prestenback v. Hearn, 85 So. 3d 256, 259 (2012)	3	Dismissal for abandonment is not intended to be punitive; rather, it balances two competing policy considerations: (1) the desire to see every litigant have his day in court without the risk of losing same due to technical carelessness or unavoidable delay; and (2) the legislative purpose that suits, once filed, should not linger indefinitely, preserving stale claims from the normal extinguishing operation of prescription. LSA-C.C.P. art. 561.	Dismissal for abandonment is not intended to be punitive; rather, it balances two competing policy considerations: (1) the desire to see every litigant have his day in court without the risk of losing same due to technical carelessness or unavoidable delay, and (2) the legislative purpose that suits, once filed, should not linger indefinitely, preserving stale claims from the normal extinguishing operation of prescription.	"Is the desire to see every litigant have his day in court without the risk of losing same due to technical carelessness or unavoidable delay, a policy consideration for dismissal of abandonment?"
29	Prestenback v. Hearn, 85 So. 3d 256, 259 (2012)	3	Dismissal for abandonment is not intended to be punitive; rather, it balances two competing policy considerations: (1) the desire to see every litigant have his day in court without the risk of losing same due to technical carelessness or unavoidable delay; and (2) the legislative purpose that suits, once filed, should not linger indefinitely, preserving stale claims from the normal extinguishing operation of prescription. LSA-C.C.P. art. 561.	Dismissal for abandonment is not intended to be punitive; rather, it balances two competing policy considerations: (1) the desire to see every litigant have his day in court without the risk of losing same due to technical carelessness or unavoidable delay, and (2) the legislative purpose that suits, once filed, should not linger indefinitely, preserving stale claims from the normal extinguishing operation of prescription.	"Is the legislative purpose for a suits dismissal for abandonment which is not intended to be punitive that suits once filed, should not linger indefinitely, preserving stale claims from the normal extinguishing operation of prescription?"

30	GMS Mine Repair & Maint. v. Miklos, 798 S.E.2d 833, 833 (W. Va. 2017)	5	The civil procedure rules require active judicial management of a case, and mandate that a trial court shall enter a scheduling order establishing time frames for the joinder of parties, the amendment of pleadings, the completion of discovery, the filing of dispositive motions, and generally guiding the parties toward a prompt, fair and cost-effective resolution of the case. W. Va. R. Civ. P. 16(b).	"Rule 16(b) of the West Virginia Rules of Civil Procedure [1998] requires active judicial management of a case, and mandates that a trial court 'shall ... enter a scheduling order' establishing time frames for the joinder of parties, the amendment of pleadings, the completion of discovery, the filing of dispositive motions, and generally guiding the parties toward a prompt, fair and cost-effective resolution of the case."	"Does the Civil Procedure Rule governing scheduling orders require active judicial management of a case, and mandates that a trial court enter a scheduling order establishing time frames for the joinder of parties?"
31	Wilson v. John Crane, 385 Md. 185, 215 (2005)	13	In reaching any decision regarding withdrawal or amendment of deemed admissions in relation to allegedly inadvertent admissions, it is imperative that courts consider whether the party seeking the withdrawal or amendment has acted with due diligence; courts should seek to ascertain whether the aggrieved party was careless in not timely filing its responses to valid requests for admissions. Md.Rule 2-424(d).	Moreover, in reaching any decision regarding withdrawal or amendment of admissions in relation to allegedly inadvertent admissions, it is imperative that courts consider whether the party seeking the withdrawal or amendment has acted with due diligence. In more general terms, courts should seek to ascertain whether the aggrieved party was careless in not timely filing its responses to valid requests for admissions.	"In reaching any decision regarding withdrawal or amendment of deemed admissions in relation to allegedly inadvertent admissions, is it imperative that courts consider whether the party seeking the withdrawal or amendment has acted with due diligence; courts should seek to ascertain whether the aggrieved party was careless in not timely filing its responses to valid requests for admissions?"
37	Hamlet at Willow Creek Dev. Co. v. Ne. Land Dev. Corp., 64 A.D.3d 85, 106 (N.Y. S. Ct. 2009)	16	Doctrine of equitable subrogation includes every instance in which one pays a debt for which another is primarily answerable, and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter, so long as payment was made either under compulsion or protection of some interest of payer, and in discharge of existing liability.	The doctrine of equitable subrogation "is broad enough to include every instance in which one party pays a debt for which another is primarily answerable and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter, so long as the payment was made either under compulsion or for the protection of some interest of the party making the payment, and in discharge of an existing liability"	"Does the doctrine of equitable subrogation include every instance in which one pays a debt for which another is primarily answerable, and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter, so long as payment was made either under compulsion or protection of some interest of payer, and in discharge of existing liability?"
44	Miller v. Nelms, 966 So. 2d 437, 440 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2007)	6	A fraud that warrants dismissal of a complaint arises when it is clearly and convincingly demonstrated that a party has sentiently set in motion some unconscionable scheme calculated to interfere with the judicial system's ability impartially to adjudicate a matter by improperly influencing the trier of fact or unfairly hampering the presentation of the opposing party's claim or defense.	A fraud that warrants dismissal of a complaint arises when it is clearly and convincingly demonstrated "that a party has sentiently set in motion some unconscionable scheme calculated to interfere with the judicial system's ability impartially to adjudicate a matter by improperly influencing the trier of fact or unfairly hampering the presentation of the opposing party's claim or defense."	Does a fraud that warrants dismissal of a complaint arise when it is clearly and convincingly demonstrated that a party has sentiently set in motion some unconscionable scheme calculated to interfere with the judicial system's ability impartially?

48	McCullough v. Spitzer Motor Center, Inc., 108 Ohio App. 3d 530, 537 (Ohio Ct. App. 1996)	5	Motion in limine, if granted, is tentative, interlocutory, precautionary ruling by trial court reflecting its anticipatory treatment of evidentiary issue; accordingly, proponent who has been temporarily restricted from introducing evidence by virtue of motion in limine must seek introduction of evidence by proffer or otherwise at trial to enable court to make final determination as to its admissibility and to preserve any objection on record for purposes of appeal.	A motion in limine, if granted, is a tentative, interlocutory, precautionary ruling by the trial court reflecting its anticipatory treatment of the evidentiary issue. Accordingly, a proponent who has been temporarily restricted from introducing evidence by virtue of a motion in limine, must seek the introduction of evidence by proffer or otherwise at trial in order to enable the court to make a final determination as to its admissibility and to preserve any objection on the record for purposes of appeal.	Must a proponent who has been temporarily restricted from introducing evidence by virtue of motion in limine seek introduction of evidence by proffer or otherwise at trial to enable court to make final determination as to its admissibility and to preserve any objection on record for purposes of appeal?
49	Manhattan Ice & Cold Storage v. City of Manhattan, 294 Kan. 60, 69 (2012)	5	A motion in limine may be granted when a district court finds two factors are present: (1) the material or evidence in question will be inadmissible at a trial; and (2) the pretrial ruling is justified as opposed to a ruling during trial because the mere offer or mention of the evidence during trial may cause unfair prejudice, confuse the issues, or mislead the jury; the consideration of the issue during the trial might unduly interrupt and delay the trial and inconvenience the jury; or a ruling in advance of trial may limit issues and save the parties time, effort, and cost in trial preparation.	"[A] motion in limine may be granted when a district court finds two factors are present: (1) The material or evidence in question will be inadmissible at a trial; and (2) The pretrial ruling is justified as opposed to a ruling during trial because the mere offer or mention of the evidence during trial may cause unfair prejudice, confuse the issues, or mislead the jury; the consideration of the issue during the trial might unduly interrupt and delay the trial and inconvenience the jury; or a ruling in advance of trial may limit issues and save the parties time, effort, and cost in trial preparation.	When the court finds evidence inadmissible at trial should it grant a motion in limine?
50	Manhattan Ice & Cold Storage v. City of Manhattan, 294 Kan. 60, 69 (2012)	5	A motion in limine may be granted when a district court finds two factors are present: (1) the material or evidence in question will be inadmissible at a trial; and (2) the pretrial ruling is justified as opposed to a ruling during trial because the mere offer or mention of the evidence during trial may cause unfair prejudice, confuse the issues, or mislead the jury; the consideration of the issue during the trial might unduly interrupt and delay the trial and inconvenience the jury; or a ruling in advance of trial may limit issues and save the parties time, effort, and cost in trial preparation.	"[A] motion in limine may be granted when a district court finds two factors are present: (1) The material or evidence in question will be inadmissible at a trial; and (2) The pretrial ruling is justified as opposed to a ruling during trial because the mere offer or mention of the evidence during trial may cause unfair prejudice, confuse the issues, or mislead the jury; the consideration of the issue during the trial might unduly interrupt and delay the trial and inconvenience the jury; or a ruling in advance of trial may limit issues and save the parties time, effort, and cost in trial preparation.	Are pretrial grants of a motion in limine justified as opposed to a ruling during the trial?

51	State v. Shadden, 290 Kan. 803, 803 (2010)	3	A motion in limine may be granted when a district court finds two factors are present: (1) the material or evidence in question will be inadmissible at a trial, and (2) the pretrial ruling is justified as opposed to a ruling during trial because the mere offer or mention of the evidence during trial may cause unfair prejudice, confuse the issues, or mislead the jury, the consideration of the issue during the trial might unduly interrupt and delay the trial and inconvenience the jury, or a ruling in advance of trial may limit issues and save the parties time, effort, and cost in trial preparation.	A protective order issued on a motion in limine may be granted when a district court finds two factors are present: (1) The material or evidence in question will be inadmissible at a trial; and (2) The pretrial ruling is justified as opposed to a ruling during trial because the mere offer or mention of the evidence during trial may cause unfair prejudice, confuse the issues, or mislead the jury; the consideration of the issue during the trial might unduly interrupt and delay the trial and inconvenience the jury; or a ruling in advance of trial may limit issues and save the parties time, effort, and cost in trial preparation.	Are pretrial grants of a motion in limine justified as opposed to a ruling during the trial?
52	Hanson v. Versarail Sys., 175 Or. App. 92, 95-96 (2001)	1	The workers' compensation scheme involves a quid pro quo, in which the employer gives up the right to defend against certain actions involving workplace injuries, while receiving the benefit of a limit on potential damages; conversely, the employee is compensated for injuries regardless of whether the employer would be liable in tort, while giving up the right to pursue other statutory or common-law remedies.	The workers' compensation scheme involves a quid pro quo, in which the employer gives up the right to defend against certain actions involving workplace injuries, while receiving *96 the benefit of a limit on potential damages. Conversely, the employee is compensated for injuries regardless of whether the employer would be liable in tort, while giving up the right to pursue other statutory or common-law remedies.	Does the workers compensation scheme involve a quid pro quo in which the employer gives up the right to defend against certain actions involving workplace injuries while receiving the benefit of a limit on potential damages?
55	Todeva v. Oliver Iron Min. Co., 232 Minn. 422, 428, 45 N.W.2d 782, 788 (1951)	4	In certain limited sense, rights and liabilities for workmen's compensation arise out of contract, on theory that Compensation Act becomes part of contract of employment but strictly speaking, such rights and liabilities are created independently of any actual or implied contract and, pursuant to police power, are imposed on employment status or relationship as a cost of industrial production. M.S.A. S 176.01 et seq.	In a certain limited sense, the rights and liabilities arise out of contract, on the theory that the statute becomes a part of the contract of employment, see Warner v. Zaiser, 184 Minn. 598, 239 N.W. 761; Sandy v. Walter Butler Shipbuilders, Inc., 221 Minn. 215, 218, 21 N.W.2d 612, 614; but, strictly speaking, such rights and liabilities are created independently of any actual or implied contract and, pursuant to the police power, are imposed upon the employment status or relationship as a cost of industrial production.	"Do the rights and liabilities for workmens compensation arise out of contract in certain limited senses, on the theory that the Compensation Act becomes part of the employment contract, while strictly speaking, such rights and liabilities are created independently of any actual or implied contract and are imposed on the employment status pursuant to the police power?"

56	Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust Co. v. Lippi, 78 So. 3d 81, 85 (Fla. App. 2012)	12	When deciding whether to sanction a party by dismissing its case with prejudice, a court should consider the following factors: (1) whether the attorneys' disobedience was willful, deliberate, or contumacious, rather than an act of neglect or inexperience; (2) whether the attorney has been previously sanctioned; (3) whether the client was personally involved in the act of disobedience; (4) whether the delay prejudiced the opposing party through undue expense, loss of evidence, or in some other fashion; (5) whether the attorney offered reasonable justification for noncompliance; and (6) whether the delay created significant problems of judicial administration.	When deciding whether to sanction a party by dismissing its case with prejudice, a court should consider the following factors: 1) whether the attorneys' disobedience was willful, deliberate, or contumacious, rather than an act of neglect or inexperience; 2) whether the attorney has been previously sanctioned; 3) whether the client was personally involved in the act of disobedience; 4) whether the delay prejudiced the opposing party through undue expense, loss of evidence, or in some other fashion; 5) whether the attorney offered reasonable justification for noncompliance; and 6) whether the delay created significant problems of judicial administration.	"When deciding whether to sanction a party by dismissing its case with prejudice, should a court consider any factors?"
57	DeBenedetto v. Denny's, 421 N.J. Super. 312, 317 (2010)	1	In addressing a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted, a court's inquiry is limited to examining the legal sufficiency of the facts alleged on the face of the complaint; however, the court must search the complaint in depth and with liberality to ascertain whether the fundament of a cause of action may be gleaned even from an obscure statement of claim, opportunity being given to amend if necessary. R. 4:6-2(e).	In addressing a motion to dismiss brought pursuant to Rule 4:6-2(e) a court's "inquiry is limited to examining the legal sufficiency of the facts alleged on the face of the complaint." Printing Mart-Morristown v. Sharp Elecs. Corp., 116 N.J. 739, 746, 563 A.2d 31 (1989). However, the court must search the complaint "in depth and with liberality to ascertain whether the fundament of a cause of action may be gleaned even from an obscure statement of claim, opportunity being given to amend if necessary." "	"Before a court dismisses a civil complaint with prejudice, should it search the complaint in depth and with liberality to ascertain whether the fundament of a cause of action can be gleaned even from an obscure statement of claim an opportunity to amend if necessary?"
58	Manhattan Ice & Cold Storage v. City of Manhattan, 294 Kan. 60, 69 (2012)	5	A motion in limine may be granted when a district court finds two factors are present: (1) the material or evidence in question will be inadmissible at a trial; and (2) the pretrial ruling is justified as opposed to a ruling during trial because the mere offer or mention of the evidence during trial may cause unfair prejudice, confuse the issues, or mislead the jury; the consideration of the issue during the trial might unduly interrupt and delay the trial and inconvenience the jury; or a ruling in advance of trial may limit issues and save the parties time, effort, and cost in trial preparation.	"[A] motion in limine may be granted when a district court finds two factors are present: (1) The material or evidence in question will be inadmissible at a trial; and (2) The pretrial ruling is justified as opposed to a ruling during trial because the mere offer or mention of the evidence during trial may cause unfair prejudice, confuse the issues, or mislead the jury; the consideration of the issue during the trial might unduly interrupt and delay the trial and inconvenience the jury; or a ruling in advance of trial may limit issues and save the parties time, effort, and cost in trial preparation.	What factors must be present for a district court to grant a motion in limine?

59	In re Vitamin C Antitrust Litig., 584 F. Supp. 2d 546, 551 (E.D.N.Y. 2008)	4	The defense of foreign sovereign compulsion focuses on the plight of a defendant who is subject to conflicting legal obligations under two sovereign states, and rather than being concerned with the diplomatic implications of condemning another country's official acts, the foreign sovereign compulsion doctrine recognizes that a defendant trying to do business under conflicting legal regimes may be caught between the proverbial rock and a hard place where compliance with one country's laws results in violation of another's.	The defense of foreign sovereign compulsion, on the other hand, focuses on the plight of a defendant who is subject to conflicting legal obligations under two sovereign states. Rather than being concerned with the diplomatic implications of condemning another country's official acts, the foreign sovereign compulsion doctrine recognizes that a defendant trying to do business under conflicting legal regimes may be caught between the proverbial rock and a hard place where compliance with one country's laws results in violation of another's.	Does the defense of foreign sovereign compulsion focus on the plight of a defendant who is subject to conflicting legal obligations under two sovereign states?
60	Noyel v. City of St. Gabriel, 202 So. 3d 1139, 1147 (La. Ct. App. 2016)	8	In order to convict one accused of looting during a declared emergency, the State must prove that the alleged perpetrator: (1) intentionally entered a building, plant, establishment, or other structure, (2) that lacked normal security because of a hurricane, flood, act of God, or force majeure of any kind, (3) during a declared state of emergency that the defendant knew or should have known existed, and (4) that the defendant obtained, exerted control over, damaged, or removed property of the owner; additionally, the State must prove the identity of the defendant as the perpetrator. LSA-R.S. 14:62.5(C).	In order to convict one accused of looting during a declared emergency, the State must prove that the alleged perpetrator: (1) intentionally entered a building, plant, establishment, or other structure, (2) that lacked normal security because of a hurricane, flood, act of God, or force majeure of any kind, (3) during a declared state of emergency that the defendant knew or should have known existed, and (4) that the defendant obtained, exerted control over, damaged, or removed property of the owner. See State v. Harris, 2007-124 (La.App. 5 Cir. 9/25/07), 968 So.2d 187, 193. Additionally, the State must prove the identity of the defendant as the perpetrator.	What must the state prove in order to convict a defendant for looting during a declared emergency?
61	Brougham Casket & Vault Co. v. DeLoach, 323 Ga. App. 701, 704 (2013)	5	If the burden of proof on the subject matter of a request for admission is on the requestor, the movant for withdrawal of the admission is required to show the admitted request either can be refuted by admissible evidence having a modicum of credibility or is incredible on its face, and the denial is not offered solely for purposes of delay; if the movant fails to make the required showing, then the trial court is authorized to deny the motion to withdraw the admissions. West's Ga.Code Ann. § 9-11-36(b).	If the burden of proof on the subject matter of the request for admission is on the requestor, the movant is required to show the admitted request either can be refuted by admissible evidence having a modicum of credibility or is incredible on its face, and the denial is not offered solely for purposes of delay. If the movant fails to make the required showing to satisfy the first prong of the test, then the trial court is authorized to deny the motion to withdraw the admissions.	"Is the movant for withdrawal or amendment of an admission required to show the admitted request either can be refuted by admissible evidence having a modicum of credibility or is incredible on its face, and the denial is not offered solely for purposes of delay?"

67	Vidal v. Ricciardi, 81 A.D.3d 635, 915 N.Y.S. 2d 630, 635 (2011)	1 Plaintiff seeking to restore a case to the trial calendar more than one year after it has been marked "off," and after it has been dismissed must demonstrate the existence of a potentially meritorious cause of action, a reasonable excuse for the delay in prosecuting the action, a lack of intent to abandon the action, and a lack of prejudice to the defendant; all four components of the test must be satisfied before the dismissal can be properly vacated and the case restored. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	A plaintiff seeking to restore a case to the trial calendar more than one year after it has been marked "off," and after it has been dismissed pursuant to CPLR 3404, must demonstrate the existence of a potentially meritorious cause of action, a reasonable excuse for the delay in prosecuting the action, a lack of intent to abandon the action, and a lack of prejudice to the defendant (see Nasuro v. PI Assoc., LLC, 78 A.D.3d 1030, 912 N.Y.S.2d 86; Mooney v. City of New York, 78 A.D.3d 795, 911 N.Y.S.2d 395; Leinas v. Long Is. Jewish Med. Ctr., 72 A.D.3d 905, 906, 898 N.Y.S.2d 500; Basetti v. Nour, 287 A.D.2d 126, 131, 731 N.Y.S.2d 35). All four components of the test must be satisfied before the dismissal can be properly vacated and the case restored.	"Should a plaintiff seeking to restore a case to the trial calendar more than one year after it has been marked ""off,"" and after it has been dismissed demonstrate the existence of a potentially meritorious cause of action?"
69	Oregon v. Kennedy, 456 U.S. 667, 676 (1982)	9 Where prosecutorial error even of a degree sufficient to warrant a mistrial has occurred, the most important consideration for double jeopardy clause purposes is that defendant retain primary control over the course to be followed in the event of such error, and only where the governmental conduct is intended to "goad" defendant into moving for a mistrial may defendant raise the bar of double jeopardy to a second trial after having proceeded in aborting the first on his own motion. U.S.C.A.Const.Amend. 5.	Where prosecutorial error even of a degree sufficient to warrant a mistrial has occurred, "[t]he important consideration, for purposes of the Double Jeopardy Clause, is that the defendant retain primary control over the course to be followed in the event of such error." United States v. Dinitz, supra, 424 U.S., at 609, 96 S.Ct., at 1080. Only where the governmental conduct in question is intended to "goad" the defendant into moving for a mistrial may a defendant raise the bar of double jeopardy to a second trial after having succeeded in aborting the first on his own motion.	"Only where the governmental conduct in question is intended to goad the defendant into moving for a mistrial, can a defendant raise the bar of double jeopardy to a second trial after having succeeded in aborting the first on his own motion?"

70	Robinson v. Texas Auto. Dealers Ass'n, 214 F.R.D. 432, 438 (E.D. Tex. 2003)	3	Elements necessary to establish that material is protected by the federal attorney-client privilege are: (1) the asserted holder of the privilege is or sought to become a client; (2) the person to whom the communication was made is a member of a bar of a court, or his subordinate, and in connection with this communication is acting as a lawyer; (3) the communication relates to a fact of which the attorney was informed by his client without the presence of strangers for the purpose of securing primarily either an opinion on law or legal services or assistance in some legal proceeding, and not for the purpose of committing a crime or tort; and (4) the privilege has been claimed and not waived by the client.	The elements necessary to establish that material is protected by the federal attorney-client privilege are: (1) the asserted holder of the privilege is or sought to become a client; (2) the person to whom the communication was made is (a) a member of a bar of a court, or his subordinate, and (b) in connection with this communication is acting as a lawyer; (3) the communication relates to a fact of which the attorney was informed (a) by his client (b) without the presence of strangers (c) for the purpose of securing primarily either (i) an opinion on law or (ii) legal services (iii) or assistance in some legal proceeding, and (d) not for the purpose of committing a crime or tort; and (4) the privilege has been (a) claimed and (b) not waived by the client.	What should a party invoking the protection of the attorney-client privilege establish?
71	Columbia Cmty. Bank v. Newman Park, LLC, 166 Wash. App. 634, 643, 279 P.3d 869, 873–74 (2012), aff'd, 177 Wash. 2d 566, 304 P.3d 472 (2013)	3	Subrogation is appropriate to prevent unjust enrichment if the person seeking subrogation performs an obligation under the following circumstances: (1) in order to protect his or her interest; (2) under a legal duty to do so; (3) on account of misrepresentation, mistake, duress, undue influence, deceit, or other similar imposition; or (4) upon a request from the obligor or the obligor's successor to do so, if the person performing was promised repayment and reasonably expected to receive a security interest in the real estate with the priority of the mortgage being discharged, and if subrogation will not materially prejudice the holders of intervening interests in the real estate.	¶ 29 Subrogation is appropriate to prevent unjust enrichment if the person seeking subrogation performs an obligation under the following circumstances: (1) in order to protect his or her interest; (2) under a legal duty to do so; (3) on account of misrepresentation, mistake, duress, undue influence, deceit, or other similar imposition; or (4) upon a request from the obligor or the obligor's successor to do so, if the person performing was promised repayment and reasonably expected to receive a security interest in the real estate with the priority of the mortgage being discharged, and if subrogation will not materially prejudice the holders of intervening interests in the real estate."	When is equitable subrogation appropriate to prevent unjust enrichment?

73	State v. Johnston, 249 Ga. 413, 415 (1982)	4	Trial court has absolute right to refuse to decide admissibility of evidence, allegedly violative of some ordinary rule of evidence, prior to trial; if, however, trial court decides to rule on admissibility of evidence prior to trial, court's determination of admissibility is similar to a preliminary ruling on evidence at a pretrial conference and it controls the subsequent course of action unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice.	The trial court has an absolute right to refuse to decide the admissibility of evidence, allegedly violative of some ordinary rule of evidence, prior to trial. Cf. Wiggins v. State, supra; Coats v. State, 234 Ga. 659, 217 S.E.2d 260 (1975). If, however, the trial court decides to rule on the admissibility of evidence prior to trial, the court's determination of admissibility is similar "to a preliminary ruling on evidence at a pretrial conference" and it "controls the subsequent course of action, unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice."	"If the trial court decides to rule on the admissibility of evidence prior to trial, is the court's determination of admissibility similar to a preliminary ruling on evidence at a pretrial conference and will it control the subsequent course of action, unless modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice?"
76	Heine v. Allen Memorial Hosp. Corp., 549 N.W.2d 821, 823 (Iowa 1996)	1	Rule providing that court may hear and determine any point of law raised in any pleading that goes to whole or any material part of case allows adjudication if either there are no material facts in dispute or if court is presented with legal issues independent of disputed factual issue and ruling favorable to applying party will necessarily be dispositive of case in whole or in part. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 105.	The court may "hear and determine any point of law raised in any pleading which goes to the whole or any material part of the case." We have interpreted the rule to allow an adjudication if either there are no material facts in dispute or if the court is presented with a "legal issue that is independent of a disputed factual issue and a ruling favorable to the applying party will necessarily be dispositive of the case in whole or in part."	"Does a Rule providing that court may hear and determine any point of law raised in any pleading that goes to whole or any material part of case, allow adjudication if there are no material facts in dispute?"

77	Columbia Cmty. Bank v. Newman Park, LLC, 166 Wash. App. 634, 643, 279 P.3d 869, 873–74 (2012), aff'd, 177 Wash. 2d 566, 304 P.3d 472 (2013)	3	Subrogation is appropriate to prevent unjust enrichment if the person seeking subrogation performs an obligation under the following circumstances: (1) in order to protect his or her interest; (2) under a legal duty to do so; (3) on account of misrepresentation, mistake, duress, undue influence, deceit, or other similar imposition; or (4) upon a request from the obligor or the obligor's successor to do so, if the person performing was promised repayment and reasonably expected to receive a security interest in the real estate with the priority of the mortgage being discharged, and if subrogation will not materially prejudice the holders of intervening interests in the real estate.	¶ 29 Subrogation is appropriate to prevent unjust enrichment if the person seeking subrogation performs an obligation under the following circumstances: (1) in order to protect his or her interest; (2) under a legal duty to do so; (3) on account of misrepresentation, mistake, duress, undue influence, deceit, or other similar imposition; or (4) upon a request from the obligor or the obligor's successor to do so, if the person performing was promised repayment and reasonably expected to receive a security interest in the real estate with the priority of the mortgage being discharged, and if subrogation will not materially prejudice the holders of intervening interests in the real estate."	When is subrogation appropriate to prevent unjust enrichment?
81	Mueller v. Shacklett, 156 Neb. 881, 882 (Neb. 1953)	9	Where a party properly serves request for admissions of relevant matters of fact or genuineness of relevant documents, and all objections thereto are heard and appropriately denied by court, and other party has been ordered to respond thereto, failure of such party to do so within time allotted constitutes admission of facts sought to be elicited. R.S.Supp.1951, S 25-1267.41.	In that connection, the applicable rule here is that where a party properly serves a request for admissions of relevant matters of fact or the genuineness of relevant documents, and all objections thereto are heard and appropriately denied by the court, and the other party has been ordered to respond thereto, his failure to do so within the time allotted constitutes an admission of the facts sought to be elicited.	"Where a party properly serves a request for admissions of relevant matters of fact or genuineness of relevant documents, and all objections are heard and denied by the court, and the other party has been ordered to respond thereto, does failure of the party to do so within the time allotted constitute admission of facts sought to be elicited?"
82	Am. Coll. Connection v. Berkowitz, 332 Ga. App. 867, 868 (2015)	2	When a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction is decided without an evidentiary hearing and based solely upon the written submissions of the parties, any disputes of fact must be resolved in the light most favorable to the party asserting the existence of personal jurisdiction, and the Court of Appeals reviews the decision of the trial court de novo.	Furthermore, when the motion is decided without an evidentiary hearing and based solely upon the written submissions of the parties, as it was here, "any disputes of fact must be resolved in the light most favorable to the party asserting the existence of personal jurisdiction, and we review the decision of the trial court de novo."	"When a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction is decided without an evidentiary hearing and based solely upon the written submissions of the parties, must any disputes of fact be resolved in the light most favorable to the party asserting the existence of personal jurisdiction?"

85	City of New Orleans v. Benson, 665 So. 2d 1196, 1200 (La. App. 1995)	5	Where defendant previously has sustained criminal penalty and civil penalty sought in subsequent proceeding bears no rational relation to goal of compensating government for its loss, but rather appears to qualify as "punishment" under plain meaning of word, defendant is entitled to accounting of government's damages and costs to determine if penalty sought in fact constitutes second punishment which violates double jeopardy clause. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	In Halper, the court stated: Where a defendant previously has sustained a criminal penalty and the civil penalty sought in a subsequent proceeding bears no rational relation to the goal of compensating the Government for its loss, but rather appears to qualify as "punishment" in the plain meaning of the word, then the defendant is entitled to an accounting of the Government's damages and costs to determine if the penalty sought in fact constitutes a second punishment [double jeopardy]."	What happens where a defendant previously has sustained a criminal penalty and the civil penalty sought in the subsequent proceeding bears no rational relation to the goal of compensating the Government for its loss?
86	Jackson v. Computer Science Raytheon, 36 So. 3d 754, 758 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2010)	6	Because issues relating to an employee's entitlement to workers' compensation benefits and a carrier's right to various offsets are founded on statutory and legal bases, there is no occasion, or allowance, for the District Court of Appeal to graft onto an otherwise coherent statutory scheme, general equitable principles so as to permit non-legal, or equitable, permutations of such rights.	Because issues relating to an employee's entitlement to benefits and a carrier's right to various offsets are founded on statutory and legal bases, there is no occasion (or allowance) for this court to graft onto an otherwise coherent statutory scheme, general equitable principles so as to permit non-legal (equitable) permutations of such rights.	" Since issues relating to an employees entitlement to benefits and a carriers right to various offsets are founded on statutory and legal bases, when can a court graft onto the otherwise coherent statutory scheme, general equitable principles?"
87	Wasko v. Manella, 269 Conn. 527, 532-33 (2004)	5	The doctrine of legal or equitable subrogation is broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting as a mere volunteer or intruder, pays a debt for which another is primarily liable, and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter.	As now applied, the doctrine of [legal or] equitable subrogation is broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting as a mere volunteer or intruder, pays a debt for which another is primarily liable, and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter."	"Is the doctrine of equitable subrogation broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting as a mere volunteer or intruder, pays a debt for which another is primarily liable, and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter?"

88	Columbia Cmty. Bank v. Newman Park, LLC, 166 Wash. App. 634, 643, 279 P.3d 869, 873–74 (2012), aff'd, 177 Wash. 2d 566, 304 P.3d 472 (2013)	3 Subrogation is appropriate to prevent unjust enrichment if the person seeking subrogation performs an obligation under the following circumstances: (1) in order to protect his or her interest; (2) under a legal duty to do so; (3) on account of misrepresentation, mistake, duress, undue influence, deceit, or other similar imposition; or (4) upon a request from the obligor or the obligor's successor to do so, if the person performing was promised repayment and reasonably expected to receive a security interest in the real estate with the priority of the mortgage being discharged, and if subrogation will not materially prejudice the holders of intervening interests in the real estate.	¶ 29 Subrogation is appropriate to prevent unjust enrichment if the person seeking subrogation performs an obligation under the following circumstances: (1) in order to protect his or her interest; (2) under a legal duty to do so; (3) on account of misrepresentation, mistake, duress, undue influence, deceit, or other similar imposition; or (4) upon a request from the obligor or the obligor's successor to do so, if the person performing was promised repayment and reasonably expected to receive a security interest in the real estate with the priority of the mortgage being discharged, and if subrogation will not materially prejudice the holders of intervening interests in the real estate."	Is subrogation an appropriate means of preventing unjust enrichment?
89	Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Maryland Cas. Co., 65 Cal. App. 4th 1279, 1296, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 296, 305–06 (1998)	12 Aim of equitable subrogation in the insurance context is to place the burden for a loss on the party ultimately liable or responsible for it and by whom it should have been discharged, and to relieve entirely the insurer or surety who indemnified the loss and who in equity was not primarily liable therefor; in contrast, the aim of equitable contribution is to apportion a loss between two or more insurers who cover the same risk, so that each pays its fair share and one does not profit at the expense of the others. West's Ann.Cal.Civ.Code § 1432.	The aim of equitable subrogation is to place the burden for a loss on the party ultimately liable or responsible for it and by whom it should have been discharged, and to relieve entirely the insurer or surety who indemnified the loss and who in equity was not primarily liable therefor. (Caito v. United California Bank, supra, 20 Cal.3d at p. 704; , 144 Cal.Rptr. 751, 576 P.2d 466 11 Witkin, Summary of Cal. Law, supra, Equity, § 169, pp. 848–850.) On the other hand, the aim of equitable contribution is to apportion a loss between two or more insurers who cover the same risk, so that each pays its fair share and one does not profit at the expense of the others.	"Is the aim of equitable subrogation to place the burden for loss on the party ultimately responsible for it and by whom it should have been discharged, and to entirely relieve insurer or surety who indemnified loss and who in equity was not primarily liable for it?"

91	Gainer v. Koewler, 200 Wis. 2d 113, 122 (1996)	3	To increase costs associated with deceptive behavior, particularly as it regards violating motion in limine orders, courts must be alert to possibility that lawyer who is violating order is assuming there will be little or no risk associated with bringing out damaging material during long trial.	To increase the costs associated with deceptive behavior, particularly as it regards violating motion in limine orders, our courts must be alert to the possibility that the lawyer who is violating the order is assuming there will be little or no risk associated with bringing out the damaging material during a long trial.	"To increase costs associated with deceptive behavior, particularly as it regards violating motion in limine orders, must courts be alert to possibility that lawyer who is violating order is assuming there will be little or no risk associated with bringing out damaging material during long trial?"
92	DiQuinzio v. Panciera Lease Co., 612 A.2d 40, 42 (R.I. 1992)	5	Under Workers' Compensation Act, injured employee is ensured timely and certain, though limited, compensation, in exchange for which he or she gives up right to pursue action at law that, although potentially more remunerative, is likely to be protracted and may well be unsuccessful. Gen.Laws 1956, § 28-29-20.	Hence under the Rhode Island Workers' Compensation Act an injured employee is ensured timely and certain, though limited, compensation. In exchange he or she gives up the right to pursue an action at law that, although potentially more remunerative, is likely to be protracted and may well be unsuccessful.	"Under the Workers Compensation Act, are injured employees ensured timely and certain, though limited, compensation, in exchange for which he or she gives up the right to pursue action at law that, although potentially more remunerative, is likely to be protracted and may well be unsuccessful?"
93	Beck v. Sapet, 937 So. 2d 945, 951 (Miss. 2006)	6	Trial judges are afforded considerable discretion in managing the pre-trial discovery process in their courts, including the entry of scheduling orders setting out various deadlines to assure orderly pre-trial preparation resulting in timely disposition of the cases.	Our trial judges are afforded considerable discretion in managing the pre-trial discovery process in their courts, including the entry of scheduling orders setting out various deadlines to assure orderly pre-trial preparation resulting in timely disposition of the cases.	"Are trial judges afforded considerable discretion in managing the pre-trial discovery process in their courts, including the entry of scheduling orders setting out various deadlines to assure orderly pre-trial preparation resulting in timely disposition of the cases?"
94	Hysong v. Lewicki, 811 A.2d 46, 50 (Pa. 2002)	5	Although district courts have considerable discretion over whether to permit withdrawal or amendment of admissions made pursuant to rule governing requests for admission, once trial has begun a court may grant a motion to withdraw only if it determines that doing so is necessary to prevent manifest injustice. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 4014, 42 Pa.C.S.A.	Although district courts have considerable discretion over whether to permit withdrawal or amendment of admissions made pursuant to Rule 36, once trial has begun a court may grant a motion to withdraw only if it determines that doing so is necessary to prevent manifest injustice.	"Although district courts have considerable discretion over whether to permit withdrawal or amendment of admissions made pursuant to rule governing requests for admission, once trial has begun, may a court grant a motion to withdraw only if it determines that doing so is necessary to prevent manifest injustice?"
96	Indianapolis-Marion County Public Library v. Shook, LLC, 835 N.E.2d 533, 540 (Ind. Ct. App. 2005)	7	When reviewing a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the relevant question is whether the type of claim presented falls within the general scope of the authority conferred upon the court by constitution or statute. Trial Procedure Rule 12(B)(1).	When reviewing a Trial Rule 12(B)(1) motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the relevant question is whether the type of claim presented falls within the general scope of the authority conferred upon the court by constitution or statute.	"When reviewing a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, is the relevant question whether the type of claim presented falls within the general scope of the authority conferred upon the court by constitution or statute?"

98	Kenny v. Banks, 289 Conn. 529, 533 (Conn. 2008)	4	When a defendant challenges personal jurisdiction in a motion to dismiss, the court must undertake a two-part inquiry to determine the propriety of its exercising such jurisdiction over the defendant; trial court must first decide whether the applicable state long-arm statute authorizes the assertion of jurisdiction over the defendant, and if the statutory requirements are met, its second obligation is then to decide whether the exercise of jurisdiction over the defendant would violate constitutional principles of due process. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 14.	"When a defendant challenges personal jurisdiction in a motion to dismiss, the court must undertake a two part inquiry to determine the propriety of its exercising such jurisdiction over the defendant. The trial court must first decide whether the applicable state long-arm statute authorizes the assertion of jurisdiction over the [defendant]. If the statutory requirements [are] met, its second obligation [is] then to decide whether the exercise of jurisdiction over the [defendant] would violate constitutional principles of due process.....	"When a defendant challenges personal jurisdiction in a motion to dismiss, must the court undertake a two-part inquiry to determine the propriety of its exercising such jurisdiction over the defendant?"
100	Hair v. Morton, 36 So. 3d 766, 769 (Fla. App. 2010)	2	The severe sanction of dismissal based on fraud is appropriate only when it is established by clear and convincing evidence that a party has sentiently set in motion some unconscionable scheme calculated to interfere with the judicial system's ability impartially to adjudicate a matter by improperly influencing the trier of fact or unfairly hampering the presentation of the opposing party's claim or defense.	Indeed, the severe sanction of dismissal is appropriate only when it is established by clear and convincing evidence "that a party has sentiently set in motion some unconscionable scheme calculated to interfere with the judicial system's ability impartially to adjudicate a matter by improperly influencing the trier of fact or unfairly hampering the presentation of the opposing party's claim or defense."	Is the severe sanction of dismissal based on fraud appropriate only when it is established by clear and convincing evidence that a party has sentiently set in motion some unconscionable scheme?
101	ARB Upstate Commc'ns LLC v. R.J. Reuter, 93 A.D.3d 929, 940 N.Y.S.2d 679, 683 (2012)	1	Courts considering a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a cause of action must liberally construe the pleadings, accept the facts alleged in the complaint as true, give plaintiffs the benefit of every possible favorable inference, and determine whether the alleged facts fit within any cognizable legal theory. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	Courts considering a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a cause of action must liberally construe the pleadings (see CPLR 3026), accept the facts alleged in the complaint as true, give plaintiffs the benefit of every possible favorable inference, and determine whether the alleged facts fit within any cognizable legal theory (see ABN AMRO Bank, N.V. v. MBIA Inc., 17 N.Y.3d 208, 227, 928 N.Y.S.2d 647, 952 N.E.2d 463 [2011]; Leon v. Martinez, 84 N.Y.2d 83, 87–88, 614 N.Y.S.2d 972, 638 N.E.2d 511 [1994]).	Should courts considering a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a cause of action liberally construe the pleadings and accept the facts alleged in the complaint as true?

102	In re Dufton, 158 N.H. 784, 787 (2009)	1	In ruling upon a motion to dismiss, the trial court is required to determine whether the allegations contained in a petitioner's pleadings are sufficient to state a basis upon which relief may be granted, and to make this determination, the court will normally accept all facts pled by a petitioner to be true and construe all reasonable inferences in the light most favorable to her.	Usually, in ruling upon a motion to dismiss, the trial court is required to determine whether the allegations contained in a petitioner's pleadings are sufficient to state a basis upon which relief may be granted. To make this determination, the court would normally accept all facts pled by a petitioner to be true and construe all reasonable inferences in the light most favorable to her.	"In ruling upon a motion to dismiss, is the trial court required to determine whether the allegations contained in the petitioners' pleadings are sufficient to state a basis upon which relief can be granted?"
103	Meyer v. N. Shore-Long Island Jewish Health Sys., 137 A.D.3d 880, 27 N.Y.S. 3d 188, 189 (2016)	1	A court may consider evidentiary material submitted by a defendant in support of a motion to dismiss a complaint, and the motion has not been converted to one for summary judgment, the criterion is whether the plaintiff has a cause of action, not whether he or she has stated one, and, unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the plaintiff to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it, dismissal should not eventuate. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7), (c).	A court may consider evidentiary material submitted by a defendant in support of a motion to dismiss pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7) (see CPLR 3211(c); Sokol v. Leader, 74 A.D.3d at 1181, 904 N.Y.S.2d 153). When evidentiary material is considered on a motion to dismiss a complaint pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7), and the motion has not been converted to one for summary judgment, the criterion is whether the plaintiff has a cause of action, not whether he or she has stated one, and, unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the plaintiff to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it, dismissal should not eventuate (see Guggenheimer v. Ginzburg, 43 N.Y.2d 268, 275, 401 N.Y.S.2d 182, 372 N.E.2d 17).	"Where evidentiary material is submitted and considered on a motion to dismiss a complaint and the motion is not converted into one for summary judgment, does the question become whether the plaintiff has a cause of action?"
105	People v. Jackson, 178 Cal. App. 4th 590, 598 (2009)	6	In order to support a conviction for attempted criminal threat, the jury must find that the defendant specifically intended to threaten to commit a crime resulting in death or great bodily injury with the further intent that the threat be taken as a threat, under circumstances sufficient to convey to the person threatened a gravity of purpose and an immediate prospect of execution so as to reasonably cause the person to be in sustained fear for his or her own safety or for his or her family's safety. West's Ann.Cal.Penal Code SS 21a, 422.	We conclude that in order to support a conviction for attempted criminal threat the jury must find that the defendant specifically intended to threaten to commit a crime resulting in death or great bodily injury with the further intent that the threat be taken as a threat, under circumstances sufficient to convey to the person threatened a gravity of purpose and an immediate prospect of execution so as to reasonably cause the person to be in sustained fear for his or her own safety or for his or her family's safety.	What must the jury find the defendant intended to do in order to support a conviction for attempted criminal threat?

106	Houser v. Cty. of Volusia, 25 So. 3d 75, 77 (Fla. App. 2009)	2	Before a trial court can dismiss a case with prejudice for disobedience of court orders it must consider: (1) whether the attorney's disobedience was willful, deliberate, or contumacious, rather than an act of neglect or inexperience; (2) whether the attorney has been previously sanctioned; (3) whether the client was personally involved in the act of disobedience; (4) whether the delay prejudiced the opposing party through undue expense, loss of evidence, or in some other fashion; (5) whether the attorney offered reasonable justification for the noncompliance; and (6) whether the delay created significant problems of judicial administration.	Before a trial court can dismiss a case with prejudice under these circumstances, it must consider all of the following factors: 1) whether the attorney's disobedience was willful, deliberate, or contumacious, rather than an act of neglect or inexperience; 2) whether the attorney has been previously sanctioned; 3) whether the client was personally involved in the act of disobedience; 4) whether the delay prejudiced the opposing party through undue expense, loss of evidence, or in some other fashion; 5) whether the attorney offered reasonable justification for the noncompliance; and 6) whether the delay created significant problems of judicial administration.	What are the factors to be considered before a trial court can dismiss a case with prejudice for disobedience of court orders?
107	Deloatch v. Becker, 698 A.2d 94, 96 (Pa. 1997)	3	In order to prove entitlement to relief from non pros judgment, burden is upon moving party to demonstrate that petition to open and/or strike judgment was promptly filed; reasonable explanation or legitimate excuse exists for default or delay, and there exist sufficient facts to support a cause of action.	In order to prove entitlement to relief from a non pros judgment, the burden is upon the moving party to demonstrate that: (1) a petition to open and/or strike the judgment was promptly filed; (2) a reasonable explanation or legitimate excuse exists for the default or delay; and (3) there exist sufficient facts to support a cause of action.	"In order to prove entitlement to relief from non pros judgment, is the burden upon a moving party to demonstrate that a petition to open and/or strike judgment was promptly filed?"
111	Hourani v. Mirtchev, 796 F.3d 1, 14 (D.C. Cir. 2015)	20	A decision by a foreign government to engage in official speech about its own nationals' domestic activities is the kind of distinctly sovereign act and formal governmental action concerning internal affairs that triggers the act of state doctrine's and international comity's traditional concerns.	And that decision by a foreign government to engage in official speech about its own nationals' domestic activities is the kind of "distinctly sovereign" act and "formal governmental action" concerning internal affairs that triggers the Act of State doctrine's and international comity's traditional concerns.	Is a decision by a foreign government to engage in official speech about its own nationals' domestic activities the kind of distinctly sovereign act and formal governmental action concerning internal affairs that triggers the act of state doctrine's and international comity's traditional concerns?
112	Allstate Ins. Co. v. Palumbo, 109 Conn. App. 731, 735 (Conn. App. 2008)	5	The doctrine of equitable subrogation is broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting as a mere volunteer or intruder, pays a debt for which another is primarily liable, and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter.	As now applied, the doctrine of equitable subrogation is broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting as a mere volunteer or intruder, pays a debt for which another is primarily liable, and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter."	"Is the doctrine of equitable subrogation broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting as a mere volunteer or intruder, pays a debt for which another is primarily liable, and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter?"

113	Cottman Transmission Sys. v. Kershner, 536 F. Supp. 2d 543, 562 (E.D. Pa. 2008)	19	Prejudice is the touchstone for determining whether the right to arbitrate has been waived by litigation; to make this determination, courts consider factors, including: (1) timeliness or lack thereof of a motion to arbitrate, (2) the degree to which the party seeking to compel arbitration has contested the merits of its opponent's claims, (3) whether that party has informed its adversary of the intention to seek arbitration even if it has not yet filed a motion to stay the district court proceedings, (4) the extent of its non-merits motion practice, (5) its assent to the trial court's pretrial orders, and (6) the extent to which both parties have engaged in discovery.	[P]rejudice is the touchstone for determining whether the right to arbitrate has been waived by litigation." Id. at 222. To make this determination, courts consider a list of factors, including: 1) "the timeliness or lack thereof of a motion to arbitrate"; 2) "the degree to which the party seeking to compel arbitration has contested the merits of its opponent's claims"; 3) "whether that party has informed its adversary of the intention to seek arbitration even if it has not yet filed a motion to stay the district court proceedings"; 4) "the extent of its non-merits motion practice"; 5) "its assent to the [trial] court's pretrial orders"; and 6) "the extent to which both parties have engaged in discovery.	What are the factors considered by the Court to determine whether waiver has occurred?
115	State v. Jack, 125 P.3d 311, 318 (Alaska 2005)	5	Under the "right of innocent passage doctrine," a coastal nation is not authorized to assert jurisdiction over a foreign vessel unless the consequences of the crime extend to the coastal State, or the crime is of a kind to disturb the peace of the country or the good order of the territorial sea.	Under the right of innocent passage doctrine, a coastal nation is not authorized to assert jurisdiction over a foreign vessel unless "the consequences of the crime extend[s] to the coastal State," or "the crime is of a kind to disturb the peace of the country or the good order of the territorial sea."	"Under the right of innocent passage doctrine, is a coastal nation authorized to assert jurisdiction over a foreign vessel or can it assert jurisdiction only if the consequences of the crime extend to the coastal State, or the crime is of a kind to disturb the peace of the country or the good order of the territorial sea?"

117	Fairholme Funds v. United States, 132 Fed. Cl. 49, 54 (Fed.Cl., 2017)	4	When deciding whether to allow the participation of an amicus curiae, Court of Federal Claims may consider a number of factors, including: (1) whether the court is persuaded that participation by the amicus will be useful to it, as contrasted with simply strengthening the assertions of one party, (2) whether the parties consent to the participation of the amicus curiae, (3) whether one of the parties is not interested in or capable of fully presenting one side of the argument, (4) whether the court's decision would directly affect the movant's rights or would set a controlling precedent regarding a claim of the movant, and (5) whether participation by an amicus curiae would unnecessarily delay the litigation.	When deciding whether to allow the participation of an amicus curiae, the court may consider a number of factors, including (1) "whether the court is persuaded that participation by the amicus will be useful to it, as contrasted with simply strengthening the assertions of one party," id.; (2) whether the parties consent to the participation of the amicus curiae, id.; (3) whether "one of the parties is not interested in or capable of fully presenting one side of the argument," id.; (4) whether "the court's decision would directly affect [the movant's] rights or would set a controlling precedent regarding a claim of [the movant]," [Fluor Corp., 35 Fed.Cl. at 285]; and (5) whether participation by an amicus curiae would unnecessarily delay the litigation,	What discretion and authority is available to the Courts of Federal Claims in allowing participation by amici curiae?
118	Thrasher v. U. S. Liab. Ins. Co., 19 N.Y.2d 159, 278 N.Y.S.2d 793, 799 (1967)	9	The law maintains fiction that insured is real party in interest at trial of underlying negligence action in order to protect insurer against overly sympathetic juries, but once judgment has been rendered, and suit is subsequently brought against insurance company on judgment against insured, reason for fiction no longer exists, since factor of insurance is then one of essential elements of pending cause of action. Insurance Law, S 167, subd. 1(b).	The law maintains the fiction that the insured is the real party in interest at the trial of the underlying negligence action in order to protect the insurance company against overly sympathetic juries (see Leotta v. Plessinger, 8 N.Y.2d 449, 461—462, 209 N.Y.S.2d 304, 312—313, 171 N.E.2d 454, 459—460). Once a judgment has been rendered, however, and a suit is subsequently brought against the insurance company, the reason for the fiction no longer exists for the factor of insurance is now one of the essential elements of the pending cause of action (see Oltarsh v. Aetna Ins. Co., supra, 15 N.Y.2d p. 118, 256 N.Y.S.2d p. 582, 204 N.E.2d p. 626).	"Is the fiction that the law maintains i.e., that the insured is the real party in interest at the trial of underlying negligence action, only to protect the insurance company against overly sympathetic juries?"

119	Ayr-Way Stores, Inc. et al. v. Chitwood, 261 Ind. 86, 93-94 (Ind. 1973)	9	Neither pleadings, pretrial orders, nor theories postulated by either party should operate to frustrate trier of fact in finding facts which the evidence, including all reasonable inferences the trier may draw therefrom, convinces him, whether he be a judge or juror, by the preponderance thereof, is true or block him from awarding the relief, if any, which rules of substantive law say those facts merit.	Neither pleadings, pre-trial orders, or 'theories' postulated *94 by either party should then operate to frustrate the trier of fact in finding the facts which that evidence (including all reasonable inferences the trier may draw therefrom) convinces him (whether he be a judge or juror), by a preponderance thereof, is true or block him from awarding the relief, if any, which the rules of substantive law say those facts merit.'	"Do pleadings, pre-trial orders, or theories postulated by either party operate to frustrate trier of fact in finding facts that a preponderance of the evidence permits?"
120	Hysong v. Lewicki, 811 A.2d 46, 50 (Pa. 2002)	4	Provision providing that a court on motion may permit withdrawal or amendment of admissions where presentation of merits will be subverted, and party who obtained admission fails to convince court that it will suffer prejudice, emphasizes importance of resolving action on merits, and permits withdrawal where it promotes decision on merits while not prejudicing party who obtained admission. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 4014, 42 Pa.C.S.A.	Rule 36(b) expressly provides that a court on motion may permit withdrawal or amendment of admissions where presentation of the merits will be subverted and the party who obtained the admission fails to convince the court that it will suffer prejudice. This provision emphasizes the importance of resolving an action on the merits and "permits withdrawal where it promotes a decision on the merits while not prejudicing the party who obtained the admission."	"Will a provision providing that a court on motion permit withdrawal or amendment of admissions where presentation of merits be subverted, and party who obtained admission fails to convince court that it will suffer prejudice, emphasize importance of resolving action on merits?"
124	Silverberg v. Haji, 2015 IL App (1st) 141321, ¶¶ 32-33 (2015)	5	The relevant factors to consider when determining whether to grant a motion to dismiss based on plaintiff's lack of reasonable diligence in serving a defendant, include, but are not limited to: (1) the length of time used to obtain service of process, (2) the activities of plaintiff, (3) plaintiff's knowledge of defendant's location, (4) the ease with which defendant's whereabouts could have been ascertained, (5) actual knowledge on the part of the defendant of pendency of the action as a result of ineffective service, (6) special circumstances which would affect plaintiff's efforts, and (7) actual service on defendant. Sup.Ct. Rules, Rule 103(b).	The relevant factors to consider when determining whether to grant a Rule 103(b) motion, include, but are not limited to: (1) the 224 *968 length of time used to obtain service of process; (2) the activities of plaintiff; (3) plaintiff's knowledge of defendant's location; (4) the ease with which defendant's whereabouts could have been ascertained; (5) actual knowledge on the part of the defendant of pendency of the action as a result of ineffective service; (6) special circumstances which would affect plaintiff's efforts; and (7) actual service on defendant.	"In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of diligence in service of process, can a court consider the following nonexclusive factors?"

125	U.S. v. Biaggi, 909 F.2d 662, 683 (2d Cir. 1990)	25	If United States congressman demands payment for taking official action as to matter that requires some legal services, his demand is extortion if he instructs payer to retain his son's law firm for needed services and to pay sum for both firm's legal services and his own official action; in such cases, however, evidence must suffice to permit jury to find beyond reasonable doubt that unlawful purposes were of substance, not merely vague possibilities that might attend otherwise legitimate transaction. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1951.	For example, if a Congressman demands a payment for taking official action as to a matter that requires some legal services, his demand is nonetheless extortion if he instructs the payer to retain his son's law firm for the needed legal services and to pay a sum for both the firm's legal services and his own official action. In such cases, however, the evidence must suffice to permit the jury to find beyond a reasonable doubt that the unlawful purposes were of substance, not merely vague possibilities that might attend an otherwise legitimate transaction.	Is it possible that a payment to law firm become unlawful under bribery statutes?
126	Putnam v. State, 245 Ga. App. 95, 97 (Ga. Ct. App. 2000)	13	Although the trial judge should explain on the record that he or she considered and rejected alternative remedies to mistrial, the fact that the lower court failed to do so does not, standing alone, render the judge's determination so unwarranted as to preclude the defendant's retrial on grounds of former jeopardy. O.C.G.A. § 16-1-8(a)(2).	Although the trial judge should also explain on the record that he or she considered and rejected alternative remedies, the fact that the lower court failed to do so here "does not, standing alone, render *98 [his] 387 determination so unwarranted as to preclude the defendant's retrial on grounds of former jeopardy."	"Although the trial judge should explain on the record that he or she considered and rejected alternative remedies to mistrial, does the fact that the lower court failed to do so not render the judge's determination so unwarranted as to preclude the defendant's retrial on grounds of former jeopardy?"
127	Trask v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, LP, 462 B.R. 268, 277 (B.A.P. 1st Cir. 2011)	16	Traditional doctrine of "equitable subrogation" enables one who pays, otherwise than as a volunteer, an obligation for which another is primarily liable, to be given by equity the protection of any lien or other security for the payment of the debt to the creditor, and to enforce such security against the principal debtor or collect the obligation from him.	The traditional doctrine of equitable subrogation "enables '[o]ne who pays, otherwise than as a volunteer, an obligation for which another is primarily liable,' to be 'given by equity the protection of any lien or other security for the payment of the debt to the creditor,' and to 'enforce such security against the principal debtor or collect the obligation from him.'"	"Does equitable subrogation traditionally enable one who pays, other than as volunteer, an obligation for which another is primarily liable to be given by equity the protection of any lien or other security for payment of debt to creditor, and to enforce such security against the principal debtor or collect obligation from him?"
128	In re Shavers, 418 B.R. 589, 605 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. 2009)	21	In Mississippi, the doctrine of equitable subrogation applies, in general, wherever any person other than a mere volunteer pays a debt or demand which in equity and good conscience should have been satisfied by another, or where one person finds it necessary for his own protection to pay the debt for which another is primarily liable.	In Mississippi, this doctrine applies, in general, "wherever any person other than a mere volunteer pays a debt or demand which in equity and good conscience should have been satisfied by another, or where one person finds it necessary for his own protection to pay the debt for which another is primarily liable...."	"Does the doctrine of equitable subrogation apply, in general, wherever any person other than a mere volunteer pays a debt or demand which in equity and good conscience should have been satisfied by another, or where one person finds it necessary for his own protection to pay the debt for which another is primarily liable?"

129	Breimhorst v. Beckman, 227 Minn. 409, 411 (Minn. 1949)	26	In the exercise of police power, the vesting by the legislature in the industrial commission of quasi-judicial powers inclusive of power to determine facts and apply the law thereto in employment-accident controversies is not in violation of state constitutional provisions for the division of the powers of government or for the vesting of judicial power in the courts as long as the commission's awards and determinations are not only subject to review by certiorari but lack judicial finality in not being enforceable by execution or other process in the absence of a binding judgment entered thereon by duly established court. M.S.A.Const. art. 1, SS 2, 8; art. 3, S 1; art. 6, S 1.	In the exercise of the police power, the vesting by the legislature in the industrial commission of quasi-judicial powers-inclusive of the power to determine facts and apply the law thereto in employment-accident controversies-is not in violation of state constitutional provisions for the division of the powers of government or for the vesting of the judicial power in the courts, as long as the commission's awards and determinations are not only subject to review by certiorari, but lack judicial finality in not being enforceable by execution or other process in the absence of a binding judgment entered thereon by a duly established court.	Is vesting of quasi-judicial powers in an administrative agency constitutional when its decisions are subject to judicial review?
130	Schwartz v. Hasty, 175 S.W.3d 621, 626-27 (Ky. Ct. App. 2005)	11	Collateral source rule and the principles of subrogation work in tandem by ensuring that the tortfeasor bears the ultimate responsibility for payment of damages without diminishment for benefits received by the injured party from collateral sources, while preventing double recovery by the injured party where the party providing the collateral source benefits seeks reimbursement through subrogation.	The collateral source rule and the principles of subrogation work in tandem by ensuring that the tortfeasor bears the ultimate responsibility for payment of damages without diminishment for benefits received by the injured party from collateral sources, while preventing double recovery by the injured party where the party providing the collateral source benefits seeks reimbursement through subrogation.	Does the collateral source rule and the principles of subrogation work in tandem by ensuring that the tortfeasor bears the ultimate responsibility for payment of damages without diminishment for benefits received by the injured party from collateral sources?
132	In re Fresh & Process Potatoes Antitrust Litig., 834 F. Supp. 2d 1141, 1180 (D. Idaho 2011)	45	The act of state doctrine bars judicial review of claim if (1) there is official act of foreign sovereign performed within its own territory and (2) relief sought or defense interposed in action would require court in United States to declare invalid foreign sovereign's official act.	The Act of State Doctrine bars judicial review of a claim if "(1) there is an official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory; and (2) the relief sought or the defense interposed in the action would require a court in the United States to declare invalid the foreign sovereign's official act."	"Does the act of state doctrine bar judicial review of claim if there is an official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory, and relief is sought or a defense interposed that require a court in United States to declare invalid the foreign sovereign's official act?"
134	Mayekawa Mfg. Co. v. Sasaki, 76 Wn. App. 791, 800 (Wash. Ct. App. 1995)	5	A generally recognized rule of international comity states that an American court will only recognize a final and valid judgment; however, modifiable foreign orders can be granted extraterritorial effect even though they might not be final for purposes of res judicata.	A generally recognized rule of international comity states that an American court will only recognize a final and valid judgment. Pilkington Bros. P.L.C. v. AFG Indus., Inc., 581 F.Supp. 1039, 1045 (D.Del.1984). However, "[m]odifiable foreign orders can be granted extraterritorial effect even though they might not be 'final' for purposes of res judicata."	"Does a generally recognized rule of international comity state that an American court will only recognize a final and valid judgement however, modifiable foreign orders can be granted extraterritorial effect even though they might not be final for purposes of res judicata?"

135	In re Bruetman, 259 B.R. 649, 669 (N.D. Ill. 2001)	41	"Comity" is defined as recognition which one nation allows within its territory to legislative, executive, or judicial acts of another nation, having due regard both to international duty and convenience, and to rights of its own citizens, or of other persons who are under protection of its laws.	Comity is defined as "the recognition which one nation allows within its territory to the legislative, executive, or judicial acts of another nation, having due regard both to international duty and convenience, and to the rights of its own citizens, or of other persons who are under the protection of its laws."	"Is comity defined as recognition which one nation allows within its territory to legislative, executive, or judicial acts of another nation, having due regard both to international duty and convenience, and to rights of its own citizens, or of other persons who are under protection of its laws?"
136	Trugman-Nash, Inc. v. New Zealand Dairy Bd., 942 F. Supp. 905, 914 (S.D.N.Y. 1996)	3	It is necessary factual predicate for application of act of state doctrine that relief sought or defense interposed would have required court in United States to declare invalid official act of foreign sovereign performed within its own territory.	It is a necessary factual predicate for application of the act of state doctrine that "the relief sought or the defense interposed would have required a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory." W.S.	Is it a necessary factual predicate for the application of an act of state doctrine that relief sought or defense interposed would have required court in United States to declare invalid official act of foreign sovereign performed within its own territory?
138	Polansky v. Berenji, 393 S.W.3d 362, 367 (Tex. App. 2012)	3	Although rule regarding nonsuits allows the trial court to hold hearings and enter orders affecting costs, attorney fees, and sanctions after a nonsuit is filed, the rule does not forestall the nonsuit's effect of rendering the merits of the case moot. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 162.	Although rule 162 allows the trial court to hold hearings and enter orders affecting costs, attorneys' fees, and sanctions after a nonsuit is filed, the rule "does not forestall the nonsuit's effect of rendering the merits of the case moot."	"Although rule regarding nonsuits allows the trial court to hold hearings and enter orders affecting costs, attorney fees, and sanctions after a nonsuit is filed, does the rule forestall the nonsuit's effect of rendering the merits of the case moot?"
139	Angerame v. Nissenbaum, 208 A.D.2d 579, 617 N.Y.S.2d 194, 194 (1994)	1	While it is true that plaintiff should be permitted to discontinue action without prejudice in order to rectify tactical error, simplify form of action, or avoid juror confusion, leave to discontinue action without prejudice generally should not be granted to enable plaintiff to circumvent effect of court order in defendant's favor, since prejudice would inure to defendant.	While it is true that a plaintiff should be permitted to discontinue an action without prejudice in order to rectify a tactical error, simplify the form of the action, or avoid juror confusion, generally leave to discontinue an action without prejudice should not be granted to enable a plaintiff to circumvent the effect of a court order in the defendant's favor, since prejudice would inure to the defendant (see, Brenhouse v. Anthony Industries Inc., 156 A.D.2d 411, 548 N.Y.S.2d 533; Valladares v. Valladares, 80 A.D.2d 244, 438 N.Y.S.2d 810).	"Should leave to discontinue an action without prejudice generally not be granted to enable a plaintiff to circumvent an effect of a court order in a defendant's favor, since prejudice would inure to a defendant?"

141	Bland v. Graves, 99 Ohio App. 3d 123, 129 (Ohio App. 1994)	2	Under Supreme Court's Unger test, objective factors that may be considered by trial court in assessing propriety of motion for continuance include length of requested delay, whether other continuances have been requested and received, inconvenience to litigants, witnesses, opposing counsel and the court, whether requested delay is for legitimate reasons or is dilatory, purposeful or contrived, whether moving party contributed to circumstance which gives rise to request for continuance, and other relevant factors, depending on unique facts of case.	Under the Unger test, the objective factors that may be considered by the trial court in assessing the propriety of a motion for continuance include "the length of the delay requested; whether other 122 continuances have been requested and received; the inconvenience to litigants, witnesses, opposing counsel and the court; whether the requested delay is for legitimate reasons or whether it is dilatory, purposeful, or contrived; whether the [moving party] contributed to the circumstance which gives rise to the request for a continuance; and other relevant factors, depending on the unique facts of each case."	What are the objective factors which may be considered by the trial judge in determining a motion for a continuance?
143	United States v. Barash, 365 F.2d 395, 401 (2d Cir. 1966)	11	If a government officer threatens serious economic loss unless paid for giving a citizen his due, the latter is entitled to have the jury consider this, not as a complete defense like duress, but as bearing on the specific intent required for the commission of bribery. 18 U.S.C.A. S 201(b).	We think that if a government officer threatens serious economic loss unless paid for giving a citizen his due, the *402 latter is entitled to have the jury consider this, not as a complete defense like duress but as bearing on the specific intent required for the commission of bribery.	"If a government officer threatens serious economic loss unless paid for giving a citizen his due, is the citizen entitled to have the jury consider this as bearing on the specific intent required for the commission of bribery?"
146	Chacha v. Transport USA, Inc., 78 So. 3d 727, 731 (Fla. App. 2012)	7	An order granting a dismissal or default for fraud on the court must include express written findings demonstrating that the trial court has carefully balanced the equities and supporting the conclusion that the moving party has proven, clearly and convincingly, that the non-moving party implemented a deliberate scheme calculated to subvert the judicial process.	Thus, we hold that an order granting a dismissal or default for fraud on the court must include express written findings demonstrating that the trial court has carefully balanced the equities and supporting the conclusion that the moving party has proven, clearly and convincingly, that the non-moving party implemented a deliberate scheme calculated to subvert the judicial process.	Should an order granting a dismissal or default for fraud on the court include express written findings demonstrating that the trial court has carefully balanced the equities?

149	Mariano v. Fiorvante, 118 A.D.3d 961, 989 N.Y.S.2d 55, 56 (2014)	1	In assessing motion to dismiss complaint for failure to state a cause of action, facts as alleged in complaint and opposition papers must be accepted as true; court must accord plaintiff the benefit of every possible favorable inference and determine only whether the facts as alleged fit within any cognizable legal theory. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	In assessing a motion pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7) to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a cause of action, the facts as alleged in the complaint and the opposition papers must be accepted as true; the court must accord the plaintiff the benefit of every possible favorable inference and determine only whether the facts as alleged fit within any cognizable legal theory (see Siegmund Strauss, Inc. v. East 149th Realty Corp., 20 N.Y.3d 37, 43 n. 4, 956 N.Y.S.2d 435, 980 N.E.2d 483; Nonnon v. City of New York, 9 N.Y.3d 825, 827, 842 N.Y.S.2d 756, 874 N.E.2d 720; Leon v. Martinez, 84 N.Y.2d 83, 87, 614 N.Y.S.2d 972, 638 N.E.2d 511).	"In assessing a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a cause of action, should facts as alleged in complaint and opposition papers be accepted as true?"
150	Zellner v. Odyl, 117 A.D.3d 1040, 986 N.Y.S.2d 592, 592-93 (2014)	1	In determining a motion to dismiss complaint for failure to state a claim, the sole criterion is whether the pleading states a cause of action, and if from its four corners factual allegations are discerned which taken together manifest any cause of action cognizable at law, the motion for dismissal will fail. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	In determining a motion to dismiss the complaint pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7), "the sole criterion is whether the pleading states a cause of action, and if from its four corners factual allegations are discerned which taken together manifest any cause of action cognizable at law [, the] motion for dismissal will fail" (Guggenheimer v. Ginzburg, 43 N.Y.2d 268, 275, 401 N.Y.S.2d 182, 372 N.E.2d 17; see Wilner v. Allstate Ins. Co., 71 A.D.3d 155, 159, 893 N.Y.S.2d 208)..	Is the sole criterion determining a motion to dismiss pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7) that factual allegations of a pleading's four corners are discerned which taken together manifest any cause of action cognizable at law a motion for dismissal for failure to state a cause of action?
152	Warth v. Seldin, 422 U.S. 490, 501 (1975)	17	For purposes of ruling on a motion to dismiss for want of standing, both the trial and reviewing courts must accept as true all material allegations of the complaint, and must construe the complaint in favor of the complaining party; at the same time, it is within trial court's power to allow or require plaintiff to supply, by amendment to the complaint or by affidavits, further particularized allegations of fact deemed supportive of standing.	For purposes of ruling on a motion to dismiss for want of standing, both the trial and reviewing courts must accept as true all material allegations of the complaint, and must construe the complaint in favor of the complaining party. E.g., Jenkins v. McKeithen, 395 U.S. 411, 421—422, 89 S.Ct. 1843, 1848—1849, 23 L.Ed.2d 404 (1969). At the same time, it is within the trial court's power to allow or to require 2207 the plaintiff to supply, by amendment to the complaint or by affidavits, further particularized allegations of fact deemed supportive of plaintiff's standing.	"On a motion to dismiss for want of standing, do courts accept as true all material allegations in the complaint and affidavits and construe them in favor of the plaintiffs?"

154	Fonseca v. Fong, 167 Cal. App. 4th 922, 931 (2008)	10	The initial inquiry into whether a state statute relating to immigration is preempted by federal law is whether the state statute constitutes an attempted regulation of immigration that is per se preempted because of the exclusivity of federal power to regulate in the area under the United States Constitution; if this is not the case, the statute may nevertheless be preempted under a second test, which is whether it was the clear and manifest purpose of Congress to effect a complete ouster of state power-including state power to promulgate laws not in conflict with federal laws with respect to the subject matter of the state statute-because Congress intended to occupy the field to which the state statute applies. U.S.C.A. Const. Art. 6, cl. 2.	The De Canas court established a three-part test for determining whether a state statute relating to immigration is preempted by federal law. The initial inquiry is whether the state statute constitutes an attempted "regulation of immigration" that is per se preempted because of the exclusivity of federal power to regulate in this area under the United States Constitution. If this is not the case, the statute may nevertheless be preempted under the second test, which is whether it was the "clear and manifest purpose of Congress" to effect a "complete ouster of state power -including state power to promulgate laws not in conflict with federal laws" with respect to the subject matter of the state statute-because Congress intended to "occupy the field" to which the state statute applies.	Are state statutes relating to immigration preempted by federal law?
157	Laguerre v. State, 799 S.E.2d 736, 739 (Ga. 2017)	6	A trial court has acted within its sound discretion in rejecting possible alternatives and in granting a mistrial if reasonable judges could differ about the proper disposition, even though in a strict, literal sense, the mistrial is not necessary; this great deference means that the availability of another alternative does not without more render a mistrial order an abuse of sound discretion.	A trial court has acted within its sound discretion in rejecting possible alternatives and in granting a mistrial, if reasonable judges could differ about the proper disposition, even though in a strict, literal sense, the mistrial is not necessary. This great deference means that the availability of another alternative does not without more render a mistrial order an abuse of sound discretion.	"Does a Court act within its sound discretion in rejecting possible alternatives and in granting a mistrial, for the purposes of double jeopardy analysis, differ about the proper disposition that mistrial is not necessary?"
159	Jackson v. Bank of Am., N.A., 149 A.D.3d 815, 53 N.Y.S.3d 71, 76 (2017)	4	On a motion to dismiss a pleading for failure to state a cause of action, the court must afford the pleading a liberal construction, accept all facts as alleged in the pleading to be true, accord the plaintiff or petitioner the benefit of every possible favorable inference, and determine only whether the facts as alleged fit within any cognizable legal theory. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	On a motion to dismiss a pleading pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7) for failure to state a cause of action, the court must afford the pleading a liberal construction, accept all facts as alleged in the pleading to be true, accord the plaintiff or petitioner the benefit of every possible favorable inference, and determine only whether the facts as alleged fit within any cognizable legal theory (see Leon v. Martinez, 84 N.Y.2d at 87, 614 N.Y.S.2d 972, 638 N.E.2d 511; Breytman v. Olinville Realty, LLC, 54 A.D.3d 703, 703-704, 864 N.Y.S.2d 70).	"While a plaintiffs' pleadings are liberally interpreted in the context of motion to dismiss for failure in a CPLR 3211(a)(7) motion to state a cause of action, will such liberal standard not save allegations that consist of bare legal conclusions?"

160	Murray v. Cadle Co., 257 S.W.3d 291, 299 (Tex. App. 2008)	12	"Equitable subrogation" is a legal fiction whereby an obligation, extinguished by a payment made by a third person, is treated as still subsisting for the benefit of this third person, so that by means of it one creditor is substituted to the rights, remedies, and securities of another.	Equitable subrogation "is a legal fiction" whereby "an obligation, extinguished by a payment made by a third person, is treated as still subsisting for the benefit of this third person, so that by means of it one creditor is substituted to the rights, remedies, and securities of another.	"Is equitable subrogation a legal fiction whereby an obligation, extinguished by a payment made by a third person, is treated as still subsisting for the benefit of this third person, so that by means of it one creditor is substituted to the rights, remedies, and securities of another?"
164	Ottenheimer Publishers v. Regal Publishers, 626 S.W.2d 276, 281 (Tenn. Ct. App. 1981)	6	Generally a surety or guarantor, by payment of debt of his principal when he is obligated to make that payment, acquires an immediate right to subrogate it to extent necessary to obtain reimbursement or contribution to all rights, remedies and securities which were available to creditor to obtain payment from person or property of any person who, as to surety, is primarily liable to debt.	Generally a surety or guarantor, by payment of the debt of his principal when he is obligated to make that payment, acquires an immediate right to be subrogated to the extent necessary to obtain reimbursement or contribution to all rights, remedies and securities which were available to the creditor to obtain payment from the person or property of any person who, as to the surety, is primarily liable for the debt.	"Does a surety or guarantor, by payment of debt of his principal when he is obligated to make that payment, acquire an immediate right to subrogate it to the extent necessary to obtain reimbursement or contribution to all rights, remedies and securities which were available to creditor?"
167	Washington Legal Found. v. Legal Found. of Washington, 271 F.3d 835, 856 (9th Cir. 2001)	22	Because of the state's traditionally high degree of control of commercial dealings, the principles of takings law that apply to real property do not apply in the same manner to statutes imposing monetary liability; thus, even though taxes or special municipal assessments indisputably take money from individuals or businesses, assessments of that kind are not treated as per se takings under the Fifth Amendment. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Because of "the State's traditionally high degree of control of commercial dealings," Lucas, 112 S.Ct. at 2899, the principles of takings law that apply to real property do not apply in the same manner to statutes imposing monetary liability. Thus, even though taxes or special municipal assessments indisputably "take" money from individuals or businesses, assessments of that kind are not treated as per se takings under the Fifth Amendment.	"Does the principles of takings law that apply to real property, apply in the same manner to statutes imposing monetary liability?"
175	Indianapolis-Marion Cty. Pub. Library v. Shook, 835 N.E.2d 533, 540 (Ind. Ct. App. 2005)	7	When reviewing a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the relevant question is whether the type of claim presented falls within the general scope of the authority conferred upon the court by constitution or statute. Trial Procedure Rule 12(B)(1).	When reviewing a Trial Rule 12(B)(1) motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the relevant question is whether the type of claim presented falls within the general scope of the authority conferred upon the court by constitution or statute.	"In reviewing a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, is the question whether the type of claim presented falls within the general scope of the authority conferred upon the court by constitution relevant?"

177	Ramey v. Haverty Furniture Companies, 993 So. 2d 1014, 1018 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2008)	3	A "fraud on the court," upon which dismissal of action can be based, occurs where it can be demonstrated, clearly and convincingly, that a party has sentiently set in motion some unconscionable scheme calculated to interfere with the judicial system's ability impartially to adjudicate a matter by improperly influencing the trier or unfairly hampering the presentation of the opposing party's claim or defense.	"Fraud on the court occurs where 'it can be demonstrated, clearly and convincingly, that a party has sentiently set in motion some unconscionable scheme calculated to interfere with the judicial system's ability impartially to adjudicate a matter by improperly influencing the trier of fact or unfairly hampering the presentation of the opposing party's claim or defense.' "	"Does a ""fraud on the court"" occur where it can be demonstrated that a party has sentiently set in motion some unconscionable scheme calculated to interfere with the judicial system's ability?"
178	Lentz v. Phil's Toy Store, 228 N.C. App. 416, 421 (2013)	6	Before civil case may be involuntarily dismissed with prejudice for failure to prosecute, trial court must address the following three factors in its order: (1) whether plaintiff acted in manner which deliberately or unreasonably delayed the matter; (2) amount of prejudice, if any, to defendant caused by plaintiff's failure to prosecute; and (3) reason, if one exists, that sanctions short of dismissal would not suffice. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b), West's N.C.G.S.A. S 1A-1.	Before a civil case may be involuntarily dismissed with prejudice for failure to prosecute pursuant to N.C. Gen.Stat. 1A-1, Rule 41(b) (2003), the trial court must address the following three factors in its order: (1) whether the plaintiff acted in a manner which deliberately or unreasonably delayed the matter; (2) the amount of prejudice, if any, to the defendant [caused by the plaintiff's failure to prosecute]; and (3) the reason, if one exists, that sanctions short of dismissal would not suffice.	What factors should the court address before a case may be involuntarily dismissed with prejudice for failure to prosecute?
179	Xia-Ping Wang v. Diamond Hill Realty, 116 A.D.3d 767, 984 N.Y.S.2d 76, 78 (2014)	4	Where defendant has submitted evidentiary material in support of motion to dismiss complaint for failure to state cause of action, and motion has not been converted to one for summary judgment, criterion is whether plaintiff has a cause of action, not whether he or she has stated one, and, unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the plaintiff to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it, dismissal should not eventuate. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7),(c).	"Where a defendant has submitted evidentiary material in support of a motion to dismiss a complaint pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7), and the motion has not been converted to one for summary judgment (cf. CPLR 3211 [c]), 'the criterion is whether the [plaintiff] has a cause of action, not whether he [or she] has stated one, and, unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the [plaintiff] to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it ... dismissal should not eventuate' "	"Where a defendant has submitted evidentiary material in support of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action, is the criterion whether the plaintiff has a cause of action?"

180	Elmhurst Dairy v. Bartlett Dairy, 97 A.D.3d 781, 949 N.Y.S.2d 115, 117 (2012)	2	When the moving party submits evidentiary material in support of his or her motion to dismiss, the criterion then becomes whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action, not whether he or she has stated one; however, a motion to dismiss must be denied unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the pleader to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	When the moving party submits evidentiary material in support of his or her motion, "the criterion then becomes 'whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action, not whether he [or she] has stated one' " (Sokol v. Leader, 74 A.D.3d at 1181–1182, 904 N.Y.S.2d 153, quoting Guggenheimer v. Ginzburg, 43 N.Y.2d 268, 275, 401 N.Y.S.2d 182, 372 N.E.2d 17). However, "a motion to dismiss pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7) must be denied 'unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the pleader to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it' "	"When a movant submits evidentiary material in support of a motion to dismiss, does the criterion become whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action?"
181	Orlando v. New York Homes by J & J Corp., 128 A.D.3d 784, 11 N.Y.S.3d 76, 77 (2015)	1	When a defendant submits evidence in support of a motion to dismiss and the motion has not been converted into one for summary judgment, the criterion is whether the plaintiff has a cause of action, not whether he or she has stated one, and unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the pleader to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it, dismissal should not eventuate. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	When a defendant submits evidence in support of a motion to dismiss pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7), and the motion has *785 not been converted into one for summary judgment, the criterion is whether the plaintiff has a cause of action, not whether he or she has stated one (see Guggenheimer v. Ginzburg, 43 N.Y.2d 268, 275, 401 N.Y.S.2d 182, 372 N.E.2d 17; Paino v. Kaieyes Realty, LLC, 115 A.D.3d 656, 656–657, 981 N.Y.S.2d 770). "[U]nless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the pleader to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it, ... dismissal should not eventuate" (Guggenheimer v. Ginzburg, 43 N.Y.2d at 275, 401 N.Y.S.2d 182, 372 N.E.2d 17; see Xia–Ping Wang v. Diamond Hill Realty, LLC, 116 A.D.3d 767, 768, 984 N.Y.S.2d 76; Paino v. Kaieyes Realty, LLC, 115 A.D.3d at 657, 981 N.Y.S.2d 770; 78 Constructamax, Inc. v. Dodge Chamberlin Luzine Weber, Assoc. Architects, LLP, 109 A.D.3d 574, 574–575, 971 N.Y.S.2d 48).	"When a defendant submits evidence in support of a motion to dismiss and the motion has not been converted into one for summary judgment, is the criterion whether the plaintiff has a cause of action?"

182	Bd. of Managers of 100 Cong. Condo. v. SDS Cong., 152 A.D.3d 478, 59 N.Y.S.3d 381, 383 (2017)	4	When evidentiary material outside the pleading's four corners is considered, and a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action is not converted into one for summary judgment, the question becomes whether the pleader has a cause of action, not whether the pleader has stated one and, unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the pleader is not a fact at all, and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it, dismissal should not eventuate. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	"When evidentiary material outside the pleading's four corners is considered, and the motion is not converted into one for summary judgment, the question becomes whether the pleader has a cause of action, not whether the pleader has stated one and, unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the pleader is not a fact at all, and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it, dismissal should not eventuate" (Matter of Kunik v. New York City Dept. of Educ., 142 A.D.3d 616, 618, 37 N.Y.S.3d 22).	"During a motion to dismiss, when evidentiary material outside the pleading's four corners is considered, does the question become whether the pleader has a cause of action?"
184	New York Hosp. Med. Ctr. of Queens v. Microtech Contracting Corp., 98 A.D.3d 1096, 951 N.Y.S.2d 546, 549-50 (2012)	5	In order to preserve the national uniformity of the Immigration Reform and Control Act's (IRCA's) verification system and the sanctions imposed for violations, Congress expressly provided that IRCA preempts any State or local law imposing civil or criminal sanctions, other than through licensing and similar laws, upon those who employ, or recruit or refer for a fee for employment, unauthorized aliens; IRCA is silent, however, as to its preemptive effect on any other state or local laws. Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, § 101(a)(1), 8 U.S.C.A. § 1324a(h)(2).	"In order to preserve the national uniformity of this verification system and the sanctions imposed for violations, Congress expressly provided that IRCA would 'preempt any State or local law imposing civil or criminal sanctions (other than through licensing and similar laws) upon those who employ, or recruit or refer for a fee for employment, unauthorized aliens' " (Balbuena v. IDR Realty LLC, 6 N.Y.3d at 354, 812 N.Y.S.2d 416, 845 N.E.2d 1246, quoting 8 USC § 1324ah; see 550 Madeira v. Affordable Hous. Found., Inc., 469 F.3d at 231-232). "The statute is silent, however, as to its preemptive effect on any other state or local laws" (Madeira v. Affordable Hous. Found., Inc., 469 F.3d at 232).	Does IRCA preempt State or local laws imposing civil or criminal sanctions upon those who recruit or refer for a fee for employment unauthorized aliens?
185	Stephens v. Messick, 2002 PA Super 117, ¶ 8 (2002)	8	Once a judgment of non pros has been entered, a three-part test determines whether a party may obtain relief from the judgment, namely first, the petition seeking relief from the judgment of non pros must be promptly filed, second, there must be a reasonable explanation for the delay that preceded the entry of the judgment of non pros, and third, the movant must show facts to exist that would support a meritorious cause of action. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 3051, 42 Pa.C.S.A.	Once a judgment of non pros has been entered, a different three-part test determines whether a party may obtain relief from the judgment. First, the petition seeking relief from the judgment of non pros must be promptly filed. Second, there must be a reasonable explanation for the delay that preceded the entry of the judgment of non pros. Third, the movant must show facts to exist that would support a meritorious cause of action.	"Once a judgment of non pros has been entered, does a three-part test determine whether a party can obtain relief from the judgment?"

187	State v. Mercado, 121 So. 3d 604, 606 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2013)	6	Absent improper governmental action intended to provoke the defendant's mistrial request and subject the defendant to the substantial burden imposed by multiple prosecutions, the defendant waives his constitutional double jeopardy rights where the defendant moves for a mistrial, consents to one, or by his conduct causes one. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Thus, absent improper governmental action intended to provoke the defendant's mistrial request and subject the defendant to the substantial burden imposed by multiple prosecutions, the defendant waives his or her constitutional double jeopardy rights where the defendant moves for a mistrial, consents to one, or by his or her conduct causes one.	Absent improper governmental action intended to provoke the defendant's mistrial request and subject the defendant to the substantial burden imposed by multiple prosecutions; does the defendant waive his constitutional double jeopardy rights?
188	Wilcox v. State, 342 Ark. 388, 392 (2000)	2	Constitutional prohibition against "double jeopardy" was designed to protect an individual from being subjected to the hazards of trial and possible conviction more than once for an alleged offense; the underlying idea is that the State with all its resources and power should not be allowed to make repeated attempts to convict an individual for an alleged offense, thereby subjecting him to embarrassment, expense and ordeal and compelling him to live in a continuing state of anxiety and insecurity, as well as enhancing the possibility that even though innocent he may be found guilty. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; Const. Art. 2, S 8.	The constitutional prohibition against 'double jeopardy' was designed to protect an individual from being subjected to the hazards of trial and possible conviction more than once for an alleged offense.... The underlying idea, one that is deeply ingrained in at least the Anglo-American system of jurisprudence, is that the State with all its resources and power should not be allowed to make repeated attempts to convict an individual for an alleged offense, thereby subjecting him to embarrassment, expense and ordeal and compelling him to live in a continuing state of anxiety and insecurity, as well as enhancing the possibility that even though innocent he may be found guilty."	What is the underlying idea of the prohibition against double jeopardy?
189	Calvert Fire Ins. Co. v. James, 114 S.E.2d 832, 236 S.C. 431, 435 (1960)	2	Legal "subrogation" is not dependent upon contract; the doctrine is an equitable one, founded not upon any fixed law, but upon principles of natural justice; its purpose is to require the ultimate discharge of a debt by the person who in equity and good conscience ought to pay it; and it is to be applied according to the dictates of equity and good conscience in the light of the actions and relationship of the parties.	Legal subrogation is not dependent upon contract. The doctrine is an equitable one, founded not upon any fixed law, but upon principles of natural justice; its purpose is to require the ultimate discharge of a debt by the person who in equity and good conscience ought to pay it; and it is to be applied according to the dictates of equity and good conscience in the light of the actions and relationship of the parties.	Is the purpose of equitable subrogation to require the ultimate discharge of debt by person who in equity and good conscience ought to pay it?

190	In re Cupp, 383 B.R. 84, 88 (E.D. Tenn. 2008)	6	Under Tennessee law, "subrogation" is equitable doctrine that facilitates adjustment of rights to avoid unjust enrichment in various situations, by substituting one person or entity in place of another in regard to some claim or right that a second person or entity may have against third party.	As applied in Tennessee, "[s]ubrogation is an equitable doctrine that facilitates the adjustment of rights to avoid unjust enrichment in many types of situations by substituting one person or entity in place of another in regard to some claim or right that the second person or entity may have against a third party."	"Is subrogation an equitable doctrine that facilitates adjustment of rights to avoid unjust enrichment in various situations, by substituting one person or entity in place of another in regard to some claim or right that a second person or entity may have against third party?"
191	Dean v. Tucker, 451 N.W.2d 571, 182 Mich. App. 27, 32 (Ct. App. 1990)	9	While trial court has authority to bar expert witness or dismiss action as sanction for failure to timely file witness list, fact that such action is discretionary rather than mandatory necessitates consideration of circumstances of each case to determine if such drastic sanction is appropriate.	While it is within the trial court's authority to bar an expert witness or dismiss an action as a sanction for the failure to timely file a witness list, the fact that such action is discretionary rather than mandatory necessitates a consideration of the circumstances of each case to determine if such a drastic sanction is appropriate.	"While a trial court has authority to bar expert witness or dismiss action as sanction for failure to timely file a witness list, is the fact that such action is discretionary rather than mandatory necessitate consideration of circumstances of each case? "
192	Calvert Fire Ins. Co. v. James, 114 S.E.2d 832, 236 S.C. 431, 435 (1960)	2	Legal "subrogation" is not dependent upon contract; the doctrine is an equitable one, founded not upon any fixed law, but upon principles of natural justice; its purpose is to require the ultimate discharge of a debt by the person who in equity and good conscience ought to pay it; and it is to be applied according to the dictates of equity and good conscience in the light of the actions and relationship of the parties.	Legal subrogation is not dependent upon contract. The doctrine is an equitable one, founded not upon any fixed law, but upon principles of natural justice; its purpose is to require the ultimate discharge of a debt by the person who in equity and good conscience ought to pay it; and it is to be applied according to the dictates of equity and good conscience in the light of the actions and relationship of the parties.	"Is the doctrine of equitable subrogation to be applied according to dictates of equity and good conscience, in light of actions and relationship of parties?"

194	Health Republic Ins. Co. v. United States, 129 Fed. Cl. 115, 116 (2016)	2	When deciding whether to allow the participation of an amicus curiae, Court of Federal Claims may consider a number of factors, including (1) whether the court is persuaded that participation by the amicus will be useful to it, as contrasted with simply strengthening the assertions of one party, (2) whether the parties consent to the participation of the amicus curiae, (3) whether one of the parties is not interested in or capable of fully presenting one side of the argument, (4) whether the court's decision would directly affect the movant's rights or would set a controlling precedent regarding a claim of the movant, and (5) whether participation by an amicus curiae would unnecessarily delay the litigation.	When deciding whether to allow the participation of an amicus curiae, the court may consider a number of factors, including (1) "whether the court is persuaded that participation by the amicus will be useful to it, as contrasted with simply strengthening the assertions of one party," (2) whether the parties consent to the participation of the amicus curiae, (3) whether "one of the parties is not interested in or capable of fully presenting one side of *117 the argument," (4) whether "the court's decision would directly affect [the movant's] rights or would set a controlling precedent regarding a claim of [the movant];" and (5) whether participation by an amicus curiae would unnecessarily delay the litigation.	What are the important factors in courts determining whether to accept an amicus brief?
197	Morgan Creek Residential v. Kemp, 153 Cal. App. 4th 675, 690 (Ct. App. 2007)	13	"Subrogation" is defined as the substitution of another person in place of the creditor or claimant to whose rights he or she succeeds in relation to the debt or claim; by undertaking to indemnify or pay the principal debtor's obligation to the creditor or claimant, the "subrogee" is equitably subrogated to the claimant, or "subrogor," and succeeds to the subrogor's rights against the obligor.	"Subrogation is defined as the substitution of another person in place of the creditor or claimant to whose rights he or she succeeds in relation to the debt or claim. By undertaking to indemnify or pay the principal debtor's obligation to the creditor or claimant, the 'subrogee' is equitably subrogated to the claimant (or 'subrogor'), and succeeds to the subrogor's rights against the obligor.	Is subrogation defined as the substitution of another person in place of the creditor or claimant to whose rights he or she succeeds in relation to the debt or claim by undertaking to indemnify or pay the principal debtor's obligation to the creditor or claimant?
198	World Wide Minerals, Ltd. v. Republic of Kazakhstan, 296 F.3d 1154, 1164 (D.C. Cir. 2002)	7	The "act of state doctrine" precludes the courts of the United States from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory, and is applicable when the relief sought or the defense interposed would require a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its boundaries.	The act of state doctrine "precludes the courts of this country from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory." Banco Nacional de Cuba v. Sabbatino, 376 U.S. 398, 401, 84 S.Ct. 923, 926, 11 L.Ed.2d 804 (1964). It is applicable when "the relief sought or the defense interposed would [require] a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within" its boundaries.	Does the act of state doctrine preclude United States courts from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory?

200	Republic of Iraq v. ABB AG, 768 F.3d 145, 165 (2d Cir. 2014)	10	In considering the applicability of the act-of-state doctrine, that is, the affirmative defense that precludes the courts of this country from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory, courts distinguish between public and private acts of a foreign official.	For instance, in considering the applicability of the act-of-state doctrine- the affirmative defense that "precludes the courts of this country from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory," Banco Nacional de Cuba v. Sabbatino, 376 U.S. 398, 401, 84 S.Ct. 923, 11 L.Ed.2d 804 (1964) ("Sabbatino")- courts distinguish "between public and private acts of a foreign official,"	"In considering the act-of-state doctrine, does the affirmative defense that precludes the courts of this country from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory, courts distinguish between public and private acts of a foreign official?"
201	State v. Grubb, 28 Ohio St. 3d 199, 203 (1986)	5	At trial, it is incumbent upon defendant, who has been temporarily restricted from introducing evidence by virtue of grant of motion in limine in favor of State, to seek introduction of the evidence by proffer or otherwise in order to enable trial court to make final determination as to its admissibility and to preserve any objection on record for purposes of appeal.	At trial it is incumbent upon a defendant, who has been temporarily restricted from introducing evidence by virtue of a motion in limine, to seek the introduction of the evidence by proffer or otherwise in order to enable the court to make a final determination as to its admissibility and to preserve any objection on the record for purposes of appeal.	Must a party who has been temporarily restricted from introducing evidence must seek to introduce it at trial in order to enable court to make final determination as to its admissibility and to preserve any objection on record?
202	Philadelphia Gear Corp. v. Philadelphia Gear de Mexico, S.A., 44 F.3d 187, 191 (3d Cir. 1994)	1	Under principle of "international comity," domestic court normally will give effect to executive, legislative, and judicial acts of a foreign nation, and comity should be withheld only when its acceptance would be contrary or prejudicial to the interest of the nation called upon to give it effect.	In general, "[u]nder the principle of international comity, a domestic court normally will give effect to executive, legislative, and judicial acts of a foreign nation." More specifically, we have stated that "[c]omity should be withheld only when its acceptance would be contrary or prejudicial to the interest of the nation called upon to give it effect."	"Under principle of ""international comity,"" will domestic courts normally give effect to executive, legislative, and judicial acts of a foreign nation, and should comity be withheld only when its acceptance would be contrary or prejudicial to the interest of the nation called upon to give it effect?"
203	United States v. Labs of Virginia, 272 F. Supp. 2d 764, 770 (N.D. Ill. 2003)	4	The "act of state doctrine" prohibits United States courts from sitting in judgment of official acts taken by another country within its own borders that might frustrate the conduct of foreign relations by the political branches of the government.	The act of state doctrine prohibits United States courts from sitting in judgment of official acts taken by another country within its own borders that might frustrate the conduct of foreign relations by the political branches of the government.	Does the act of state doctrine prohibit United States courts from sitting in judgment of official acts taken by another country within its own borders that might frustrate the conduct of foreign relations by the political branches of the government?

205	Tucker v. Interarms, 186 F.R.D. 450, 452 (N.D. Ohio 1999)	4	When possible, foreign law should be given effect in domestic courts, as matter of international comity, since recognition fosters international cooperation and encourages reciprocity, thereby promoting predictability and stability through satisfaction of mutual expectations.	The doctrine of international comity teaches that, when possible, foreign law "should be given effect in domestic courts, since recognition fosters international cooperation and encourages reciprocity, thereby promoting predictability and stability through satisfaction of mutual expectations.	"Should foreign law be given an effect in domestic courts, as matter of international comity, since recognition fosters international cooperation and encourages reciprocity, thereby promoting predictability and stability through satisfaction of mutual expectations?"
206	Fort Worth Hotel Ltd. P'ship v. Enserch Corp., 977 S.W.2d 746, 757 (Tex. App. 1998)	16	The trial court's ruling on a motion in limine is not a ruling that excludes or admits evidence, but is merely a tentative ruling that prohibits a party from asking a certain question or offering certain evidence in front of the jury without first approaching the bench for a ruling.	The trial court's ruling on a motion in limine is not a ruling that excludes or admits evidence; it is merely a tentative ruling that prohibits a party from asking a certain question or offering certain evidence in front of the jury without first approaching the bench for a ruling.	Is the trial court's ruling on a motion in limine a ruling that excludes or admits evidence; or is it merely a tentative ruling that prohibits a party from asking a certain question or offering certain evidence in front of the jury without first approaching the bench for a ruling?
212	Yanez v. Milburn, 932 S.W.2d 725, 728 (Tex. App. 1996)	6	In performing its ministerial function to dismiss action upon motion for nonsuit, trial court does not adjudicate merits of case but merely places parties in position they were in before action was brought and, subject to certain conditions, does not preclude plaintiff from filing subsequent action seeking same relief.	In performing its ministerial function to dismiss the action upon a motion for non-suit, the trial court does not adjudicate the merits of the case; the dismissal merely places the parties in the position they were in before the action was brought, Crofts v. Court of Civil Appeals, 362 S.W.2d 101, 104 (Tex.1962) (orig. proceeding), and, subject to certain conditions, as recognized by McDonald in section 27:39, supra, does not preclude the plaintiff from filing a subsequent action seeking the same relief.	"In performing its ministerial function to dismiss action upon motion for nonsuit, does a trial court adjudicate merits of case but merely places parties in position they were in before action was brought?"
213	United States v. Demko, 385 U.S. 149, 151 (Pa. 1966)	2	Historically, workmen's compensation statutes were offspring of desire to give injured workers quicker and more certain recovery than can be obtained from tort suits; they are practically always thought of as substitutes for, not supplements to, common-law tort actions.	Historically, workmen's compensation statutes were the offspring of a desire to give injured workers a quicker and more certain recovery than can be obtained from tort suits based on negligence and subject to common-law defenses to such suits. Thus compensation laws are practically always thought of as substitutes for, not supplements to, 384 common-law tort actions.	"Historically, were workmens compensation statutes the offspring of a desire to give injured workers quicker and more certain recovery than could be obtained from tort suits, and were they practically always thought of as substitutes for, not supplements to, common-law tort actions?"

214	Sheets v. Hill Bros. Distributors, 379 S.W.2d 514, 516 (Mo. 1964)	1	Workmen's Compensation Law is not supplemental or declaratory of any existing rule, right, or remedy but creates an entirely new right or remedy which is wholly substitutional in character and supplants all other rights and remedies, where employer and employee have elected to accept the law or are subject thereto by operation of law. Section 287.120, subd. 2 RSMo 1959, V.A.M.S.	Standard Steel Works, Mo., 319 S.W.2d 871, 875, 'The compensation act, * * * is not supplemental or declaratory of any existing rule, right or remedy, but creates an entirely new right or remedy and where the employer and employee have elected to accept the provisions of the act [or are subject thereto by operation of law] such new right or remedy is wholly substitutional in character and supplants all other rights and remedies, at common law or otherwise.'	"Is the Workmens Compensation Law a supplement or declaratory of any existing rule, right, or remedy, or does it create an entirely new right or remedy which is wholly substitutional in character and supplants all other rights and remedies where the employer and employee have elected to accept the law or who are subject to it by operation of law?"
215	Daugherty v. United States, 212 F. Supp. 2d 1279, 1287 (N.D. Okl. 2002)	17	In determining whether to review internal military affairs, if threshold requirements for review are met, court must examine substance of allegations in light of policy reasons behind nonreview of military matters, weighing following four factors: (1) nature and strength of plaintiff's challenge to military determination, (2) potential injury to plaintiff if review is refused, (3) type and degree of anticipated interference with military function, and (4) extent to which exercise of military expertise and discretion is involved.	If these threshold requirements are met, the court "must examine the substance of the allegations in light of the policy reasons behind nonreview of military matters," weighing the following four factors: (1) the "nature and strength of the plaintiff's challenge to the military determination"; (2) the "potential injury to the plaintiff if review is refused"; (3) the "type and degree of anticipated interference with the military function"; and the "extent to which the exercise of military expertise and discretion is involved."	What are the factors to be considered in determining whether the court should review a military decision?
216	Medina v. Raven, 492 S.W.3d 53, 62 (Tex. App. 2016)	5	Although a party moving to withdraw admissions ordinarily must prove the requirements of the governing rule, when the deemed admissions are merit-preclusive, good cause exists absent bad faith or callous disregard of the rules by the party seeking the withdrawal. Tex. R. Civ. P. 198.3(b).	Thus, although a party moving to withdraw admissions ordinarily must prove the requirements of Rule 198.3, when the deemed admissions are merit-preclusive, good cause exists absent bad faith or callous disregard of the rules by the party seeking the withdrawal.	"Although a party moving to withdraw admissions ordinarily must prove the requirements of the governing rule, when the deemed admissions are merit-preclusive, does good cause exist absent bad faith or callous disregard of the rules by the party seeking the withdrawal?"
217	French v. Banco Nacional de Cuba, 23 N.Y. 2d 46, 295 N.Y.S.2d 433, 443 (1968)	11	In area of international law where there is a wide divergence between national interests of capital importing and capital exporting nations and between the social ideologies of those countries that favor state control of a considerable portion of means of production and those that adhere to a free enterprise system judicial restraint is indicated.	In an area of international law where, for instance, there is a wide divergence 'between the national interests of capital importing and capital exporting nations and between the social ideologies of those countries that favor state control of a considerable portion of the means of production and those that adhere to a free enterprise system', judicial restraint is surely indicated (376 U.S., at p. 430, 84 S.Ct. at p. 941):	"Given the divergence between the national interests of capital importing and exporting nations, and the countries that favor state control of the means of production and those that adhere to a free enterprise system, would courts embark on adjudication which touches the practical and ideological goals of the various members of the community of nations?"

218	Somportex Ltd. v. Philadelphia Chewing Gum Corp., 453 F.2d 435, 440 (3d Cir. 1971)	5	Although more than mere courtesy and accommodation, comity does not achieve the force of an imperative or obligation; rather, it is a nation's expression of understanding which demonstrates due regard both to international duty and convenience and to the rights of persons protected by its own laws.	Although more than mere courtesy and accommodation, comity does not achieve the force of an imperative or obligation. Rather, it is a nation's expression of understanding which demonstrates due regard both to international duty and convenience and to the rights of persons protected by its own laws.	"Is comity more than mere courtesy and accommodation, which does not achieve the force of an imperative or obligation, or is it a nation's expression of understanding which demonstrates due regard both to international duty and convenience and to the rights of persons protected by its laws?"
220	Chacha v. Transp. USA, 78 So. 3d 727, 730 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2012)	2	The requisite fraud on the court occurs, as basis for dismissing a claim, where it can be demonstrated, clearly and convincingly, that a party has sentiently set in motion some unconscionable scheme calculated to interfere with the judicial system's ability impartially to adjudicate a matter by improperly influencing the trier of fact or unfairly hampering the presentation of the opposing party's claim or defense.	The requisite fraud on the court occurs where "it can be demonstrated, clearly and convincingly, that a party has sentiently set in motion some unconscionable scheme calculated to interfere with the judicial system's ability impartially to adjudicate a matter by improperly influencing the trier of fact or unfairly hampering the presentation of the opposing party's claim or defense."	"Does the requisite fraud on the court occur, as basis for dismissing a claim that a party has sentiently set in motion some unconscionable scheme?"
221	Cohen v. W.C.A.B. (City of Philadelphia), 589 Pa. 498, 514 (2006)	3	Workers' Compensation Act's uniquely detailed substantive and procedural provisions supplant traditional common law rights and remedies, limiting recoveries in a manner that, in any other context, would be beyond the Legislature's authority. 77 P.S. § 701 et seq.	As this Court has previously explained, the Workers' Compensation Act's "uniquely detailed substantive and procedural provisions" supplant traditional common law rights and remedies, limiting recoveries in a manner that, in any other context, would be beyond the Legislature's authority.	"Do the workers compensation act uniquely detailed substantive and procedural provisions supplant traditional common law rights and remedies, and would limiting recoveries in a manner that, in any other context, be beyond the Legislature's authority?"
224	U.S. ex rel. De Luca v. O'Rourke, 213 F.2d 759, 763 (8th Cir. 1954)	3	Aliens, so long as they are permitted to remain in the United States, are entitled to protection of its Constitution and laws with respect to their rights of person and of property and to their civil and criminal responsibility, but they continue to be aliens and, therefore, remain subject to power of Congress to expel them, or to order them to be removed or deported from the country whenever, in its judgment, their removal is necessary or expedient for the public interest.	Aliens, so long as they are permitted to remain in the United States, are entitled to the protection of its Constitution and laws with respect to their rights of person and of property and to their civil and criminal responsibility. 'But they continue to be aliens, * * * and therefore remain subject to the power of Congress to expel them, or to order them to be removed and deported from the country, whenever, in its judgment, their removal is necessary or expedient for the public interest.'.	Are aliens in United States entitled to the protection of its Constitution and laws with respect to their rights in both criminal and civil proceedings against them?

226	Porco v. Lifetime Entm't Servs., 147 A.D.3d 1253, 1254 (2017)	1	On a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a cause of action, a court must afford the complaint a liberal construction, accept as true the allegations contained therein, accord the plaintiff the benefit of every favorable inference and determine only whether the facts alleged fit within any cognizable legal theory. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	On a motion pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7) to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a cause of action, this Court "must afford the complaint a liberal construction, accept as true the allegations contained therein, accord the plaintiff the benefit of every favorable inference and determine only whether the facts alleged fit within any cognizable legal theory"	"On a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a cause of action, should a court afford the complaint a liberal construction?"
227	Kassab v. Kasab, 137 A.D.3d 1135, 1137, 29 N.Y.S.3d 39, 41 (2016)	1	In deciding a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a cause of action, a court must accept the facts alleged in the complaint as true and accord the plaintiff the benefit of every possible favorable inference, and determine only whether the factual allegations fit within any cognizable legal theory. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	In deciding a motion to dismiss a complaint pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7) for failure to state a cause of action, a court must accept the facts alleged in the complaint as true and accord the plaintiff the benefit of every possible favorable inference, and determine only whether the factual allegations fit within any cognizable legal theory	"In deciding a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a cause of action, should a court accept the facts alleged in the complaint as true?"
228	Meyer v. N. Shore-Long Island Jewish Health Sys., Inc., 137 A.D.3d 880, 881, 27 N.Y.S.3d 188, 189 (2016)	1	A court may consider evidentiary material submitted by a defendant in support of a motion to dismiss; when evidentiary material is considered on a motion to dismiss a complaint, and the motion has not been converted to one for summary judgment, the criterion is whether the plaintiff has a cause of action, not whether he or she has stated one, and, unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the plaintiff to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it, dismissal should not eventuate. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7), (c).	A court may consider evidentiary material submitted by a defendant in support of a motion to dismiss pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7) (see CPLR 3211[c]; Sokol v. Leader, 74 A.D.3d at 1181, 904 N.Y.S.2d 153). When evidentiary material is considered on a motion to dismiss a complaint pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7), and the motion has not been converted to one for summary judgment, the criterion is whether the plaintiff has a cause of action, not whether he or she has stated one, and, unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the plaintiff to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it, dismissal should not eventuate	"When evidentiary material is considered on a motion to dismiss a complaint, is the criterion whether the plaintiff has a cause of action?"
231	Wilner v. Allstate Ins. Co., 71 A.D.3d 155, 159, 893 N.Y.S.2d 208, 212 (2010)	1	In determining a motion to dismiss, the sole criterion is whether the pleading states a cause of action, and if from its four corners factual allegations are discerned which taken together manifest any cause of action cognizable at law a motion for dismissal will fail. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	In determining a motion to dismiss pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7), "the sole criterion is whether the pleading states a cause of action, and if from its four corners factual allegations are discerned which taken together manifest any cause of action cognizable at law a motion for dismissal will fail"	Is the sole criterion determining a motion to dismiss pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7) that factual allegations of a pleading's four corners are discerned which taken together manifest any cause of action cognizable at law a motion for dismissal for failure to state a cause of action?

232	City of Los Angeles v. Gleneagle Dev. Co., 62 Cal. App. 3d 543, 563, 133 Cal. Rptr. 212, 224 (Ct. App. 1976)	12	Penalty of dismissal against a dilatory plaintiff should be exercised with utmost care and when it appears that plaintiff has a good cause of action, the plaintiff has made some showing of excuse for delay, and where defendant does not claim actual prejudice and has waited until last possible moment to file a motion to dismiss, ends of substantial justice are best met by preference for policy of favoring trial on merits as contrasted with policy which favors presumptions of prejudice.	The penalty of dismissal against a dilatory plaintiff should be exercised with the utmost care; and where it appears that the plaintiff has a good cause of action, that plaintiff has made some showing of excuse for delay; and where defendant does not claim actual prejudice and has waited until the last possible moment to file a motion to dismiss, the ends of substantial justice are best met by a preference for the policy of favoring trials on the merits as contrasted with that policy which favors presumptions of prejudice.	Should penalty of dismissal against a dilatory plaintiff be exercised with utmost care?
233	Robinson v. Trenton Dressed Poultry Co., 344 Pa. Super. 545, 549 (1985)	3	When an action is dismissed with prejudice for failure to prosecute a claim, it is not a denial of relief to plaintiff because it is not an adjudication on the merits; rather, it means only that plaintiff whose complaint is thus dismissed cannot reinstate the complaint unless he first petitions the court to exercise discretion to remove the non pros and establishes certain facts.	[W]hen an action is dismissed with prejudice for failure to prosecute a claim, it is not a denial of relief to the plaintiff because it is not an adjudication on the merits; rather, it means only that the plaintiff whose complaint is thus dismissed cannot reinstate that complaint unless he first petitions the court to exercise its discretion to remove the non pros and establishes certain facts.	Can a plaintiff reinstate a complaint unless he first petitions a court to exercise its discretion to remove the non pros and establish certain facts?
234	Carrillo v. Superior Ct., 145 Cal. App. 4th 1511, 1524 (2006)	5	Once a defendant is placed on trial in a court of competent jurisdiction, on a valid accusatory pleading, before a jury duly impaneled and sworn, a discharge of that jury without a verdict is equivalent in law to an acquittal and bars a retrial, unless the defendant consents to the discharge or legal necessity requires it. U.S.C.A. Const.Amends. 5, 14; West's Ann.Cal. Const. Art. 1, S 15.	Once a defendant is placed on trial in a court of competent jurisdiction, on a valid accusatory pleading, before a jury duly impaneled and sworn, a discharge of that jury without a verdict is equivalent in law to an acquittal and bars a retrial, unless the defendant consents to the discharge or legal necessity requires it.	"Once a defendant is placed on trial in a court of competent jurisdiction, before a jury duly impaneled and sworn, is a discharge of that jury without a verdict equivalent in law to an acquittal and bars a retrial?"
235	People v. Haishun, 238 A.D.2d 521, 522, 656 N.Y.S.2d 660, 661 (1997)	2	Under United States Supreme Court's Ursery decision, court determining whether civil forfeiture proceeding constitutes punishment for double jeopardy purposes considers whether legislature intended proceeding to be criminal or civil in nature, and whether proceeding is so punitive that it may not legitimately be viewed as civil in nature. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	In United States v. Ursery , 518 U.S. 267, 116 S.Ct. 2135, 135 L.Ed.2d 549 [1996]), the Supreme Court set forth a two-prong test to determine whether a civil forfeiture proceeding constitutes punishment for purposes of double jeopardy including the questions of: (1) whether the Legislature intended the proceeding to be criminal or civil in nature, and (2) whether the proceeding is so punitive that it "may not legitimately be viewed as civil in nature" "	"Under the United States Supreme Court's Ursery decision, does a court determining whether civil forfeiture proceeding constitutes punishment for double jeopardy purposes consider whether legislature intended proceeding to be criminal or civil in nature?"

236	State v. Lamar, 205 Ariz. 431, 440 (2003)	16	A prosecutor's misconduct implicates a defendant's double jeopardy rights when: (1) mistrial is granted because of improper conduct or actions by the prosecutor; (2) such conduct is not merely the result of legal error, negligence, mistake or insignificant impropriety, but, taken as a whole, amounts to intentional conduct which the prosecutor knows to be improper and prejudicial, and which he pursues for an improper purpose with indifference to significant resulting danger of mistrial or reversal; and (3) the conduct causes prejudice to defendant which cannot be cured by means short of a mistrial. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5, 14; A.R.S. Const. Art. 1, SS 4, 10, 24.	Importantly, a prosecutor's misconduct implicates a defendant's double jeopardy rights under Pool only when: 1. Mistrial is granted because of improper conduct or actions by the prosecutor; and 2. such conduct is not merely the result of legal error, negligence, mistake or insignificant impropriety, but, taken as a whole, amounts to intentional conduct which the prosecutor knows to be improper and prejudicial, and which he pursues for any improper purpose with indifference to a significant resulting danger of mistrial or reversal; and 3. the conduct causes prejudice to the defendant which cannot be cured by means short of a mistrial.	When does a prosecutor's misconduct implicate a defendant's double jeopardy rights?
237	State ex rel. City of St. Louis v. Oakley, 354 Mo. 124, 128 (1945)	1	In condemnation suits under general statutes, easement in or title to private property is fully acquired by condemnor when it pays to owner, or into court for him, the amount of damages awarded by commissioners legally appointed, although judgment does not become final and appealable until all exceptions are determined and the commissioners' report finally approved.	In condemnation suits under our general statutes we have consistently held that the easement in or title to private property is fully acquired by the condemnor when it pays to the owner, or into court for him, the amount of damages awarded by commissioners legally appointed, although the judgment does not become final and appealable until all exceptions are determined and the commissioners' report finally approved.	"Is the easement in or title to the property condemned fully acquired by the condemnor when it pays to the owner, or into the court for him, the amount of the damages awarded by the commissioners, in condemnation suits?"
239	May v. May, 214 W. Va. 394, 399 (2003)	4	"Goodwill" may be defined generally as the advantage or benefit, which is acquired by an establishment, beyond the mere value of the capital stock, funds, or property employed therein, in consequence of general public patronage and encouragement, which it receives from constant or habitual customers, on account of its local position, or common celebrity, or reputation for skill or affluence, or punctuality, or from other accidental circumstances or necessities, or even from ancient partialities or prejudices.	Goodwill may be defined generally as [T]he advantage or benefit, which is acquired by an establishment, beyond the mere value of the capital stock, funds, or property employed therein, in consequence of general public patronage and encouragement, which it receives from constant or habitual customers, on account of its local position, or common celebrity, or reputation for skill or affluence, or punctuality, or from other accidental circumstances or necessities, or even from ancient partialities or prejudices.	What is defined as goodwill?

242	In re Nazi Era Cases Against German Defendants Litig., 236 F.R.D. 231, 241 (D.N.J. 2006)	6	Every sovereign State is bound to respect the independence of every other sovereign State, and the courts of one country will not sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another done within its own territory; redress of grievances by reason of such acts must be obtained through the means open to be availed of by sovereign powers as between themselves.	"Every sovereign State is bound to respect the independence of every other sovereign State, and the courts of one country will not sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another done within its own territory. Redress of grievances by reason of such acts must be obtained through the means open to be availed of by sovereign powers as between themselves."	"Under the act of the state doctrine, will a court review actions of a foreign sovereign because every sovereign state is bound to respect independence of every other sovereign state, and courts of one country will not sit in judgment on acts of government of another done within its own territory?"
243	Hand v. Pettitt, 258 Ga. App. 170, 171 (2002)	1	The grant of a motion in limine excluding evidence is a judicial power which must be exercised with great care, because it seeks to preclude by pretrial evidentiary ruling on the admission of evidence, without the trial court having any evidentiary foundation for the ruling in the context of the trial.	The grant of a motion in limine excluding evidence is a judicial power which must be exercised with great care, because it seeks to preclude by pre-trial evidentiary ruling on the admission of evidence without the trial court having any evidentiary foundation for the ruling in the context of the trial.	"Is the grant of a motion in limine excluding evidence a judicial power which must be exercised with great care, because it seeks to preclude by pretrial evidentiary ruling on the admission of evidence, without the trial court having any evidentiary foundation for the ruling in the context of the trial?"
244	United States v. Sum of $70,990,605, 234 F. Supp. 3d 212, 238 (D.D.C. 2017)	17	The act of state doctrine, under which federal and state courts in the United States must presume the validity of an official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory, applies when the relief sought or the defense interposed would require a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory.	Under the act of state doctrine, federal and state courts in the United States must "presume the validity of an 'official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory.' " Republic of Austria v. Altmann, 541 U.S. 677, 713, 124 S.Ct. 2240, 159 L.Ed.2d 1 (2004) (quoting W.S. Kirkpatrick & Co., Inc. v. Env'tl. Tectonics Corp. 493 U.S. 400, 405, 110 S.Ct. 701, 107 L.Ed.2d 816 (1990)). The doctrine applies when "the relief sought or the defense interposed would [require] a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory."	Does the act of state apply when the relief sought or the defense interposed would require a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory?
245	State v. Metz, 241 A.D.2d 192, 198, 671 N.Y.S.2d 79, 83 (1998)	2	Generally, function of motion in limine is to permit party to obtain preliminary order before or during trial excluding introduction of anticipated inadmissible, immaterial, or prejudicial evidence or limiting its use; purpose of motion is to prevent introduction of such evidence to trier of fact, in most instances a jury.	Generally, the function of a motion in limine is to permit a party to obtain a preliminary order before or during trial excluding the introduction of anticipated inadmissible, immaterial, or prejudicial evidence or limiting its use. Its purpose is to prevent the introduction of such evidence to the trier of fact, in most instances a jury.	"Is the function of a motion in limine to permit party to obtain preliminary order before or during trial excluding introduction of anticipated inadmissible, immaterial, or prejudicial evidence or limiting its use?"

246	Rossman v. Morasco, 115 Conn. App. 234, 254 (2009)	21	The motion in limine has generally been used in Connecticut courts to invoke a trial judge's inherent discretionary powers to control proceedings, exclude evidence, and prevent occurrences that might unnecessarily prejudice the right of any party to a fair trial.	"[T]he motion in limine ... has generally been used in Connecticut courts to invoke a trial judge's inherent discretionary powers to control proceedings, exclude evidence, and prevent occurrences that might unnecessarily prejudice the right of any party to a fair trial..	Has the motion in limine generally been used in courts to invoke a trial judge's inherent discretionary powers to prevent occurrences that might unnecessarily prejudice the right of any party to a fair trial?
248	Fed. Land Bank of Baltimore v. Joynes, 179 Va. 394, 401 (1942)	2	"Subrogation" is generally classified as being either legal or conventional, "legal subrogation" arising by operation of law where one having a liability, or right, or a fiduciary relation in the premises pays a debt due by another under such circumstances that he is in equity entitled to the security or obligation held by the creditor whom he has paid, and "conventional subrogation" arising where by express or implied agreement with the debtor, a person advancing money to discharge a prior lien might be substituted to the security of the prior lienee.	Subrogation has been generally classified as being either legal or conventional. Legal subrogation arises by operation of law where one having a liability, or right, or a fiduciary relation in the premises pays a debt due by another under such circumstances that he is in equity entitled to the security or obligation held by the creditor whom he has paid. Conventional subrogation, on the other hand, arises where by express or implied agreement with the debtor, a person advancing money to discharge a prior lien might be substituted to the security of the prior lienee.	How is subrogation classified under the law?
249	Dow Jones & Co. v. Harrods, Ltd., 237 F. Supp. 2d 394, 421 (S.D.N.Y. 2002)	19	State's exercise of jurisdiction to adjudicate, as adjunct of power to prescribe governing law, generally derives from relationship of state to particular person or thing that is subject of litigation, including defendant's presence, conduct, or ownership of property within state, or conduct occurring outside state's territorial boundaries but producing certain kinds of injury within state.	The state's exercise of jurisdiction to adjudicate, as an adjunct of the power to prescribe governing law, generally derives from the relationship of the state to the particular person or thing that is the subject of the litigation, including the defendant's presence, conduct, or ownership of property within the state, or conduct occurring outside the state's territorial boundaries but producing certain kinds of injury within the state.	Does a state's exercise of jurisdiction to adjudicate derive from the relationship of a state to a particular person or thing that is the subject of litigation?
250	Manufactured Hous. Communities of Wash. v. State, 90 Wash. App. 257, 267 (1998)	7	Owner of property subject to a regulation that constitutes physical invasion or total taking is entitled to relief regardless of the public interest reasons supporting regulation, unless state provides rebuttal evidence showing that the use violates nuisance or property laws. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; West's RCWA Const. Art. 1, S 6.	An owner of property subject to a regulation that constitutes a physical invasion or a total taking is entitled to relief regardless of the public interest reasons supporting the regulation unless the State provides rebuttal evidence showing that the use violates nuisance or property laws.	Is an owner of property subject to a regulation that constitutes a taking entitled to relief if the State fails to provide rebuttal evidence showing that the use violates nuisance or property laws?

252	City of Charleston v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n of W. Virginia, 57 F.3d 385, 391 (4th Cir. 1995)	5	Under West Virginia law, all contracts made by utility relating to public service must be deemed to be entered into in contemplation of exercise by state of its regulatory power whenever the public interest may make it necessary, although otherwise valid contract is binding on parties to it until departure from such contract has been directed by competent authority.	Moreover, under West Virginia law: [A]ll contracts made by a utility relating to the public service must be deemed to be entered into in contemplation of the exercise by the state of its regulatory power whenever the public interest may make it necessary ... although an otherwise valid *392 contract is binding on the parties to it until a departure from such contract has been directed by competent authority.	Are all contracts made by public utilities relating to public service deemed to be entered into with the exercise by the state of its regulatory powers?
253	Galimi v. Jetco, 514 F.2d 949, 952 (2d Cir. 1975)	1	Workmen's compensation laws are designed to assure employees that they will receive disability and medical benefits in case of injury; in return, the employer is assured of a fixed liability which is predictable enough so that he may insure against his probable costs.	On the one hand, workmen's compensation laws are designed to assure employees that they will receive disability and medical benefits in case of injury. In return, the employer is assured of a fixed liability which is predictable enough so that he may insure against his probable costs.	"Are the workmens compensation laws designed to assure employees that they will receive disability and medical benefits in the case of an injury, and in return, employers are assured of a fixed liability which is predictable enough so that he may insure against his protectable costs?"
255	Rozales v. Peerless Welder, 311 Minn. 6, 10 (1976)	1	Workers' Compensation Law is a substituted remedy created by legislature and, absent a reasonably clear indication of legislative action modifying rights created by the Law, the Supreme Court must proceed cautiously in attempting to infer legislative intent. M.S.A. S 176.021, subd. 3.	The workers' compensation law is a substituted remedy created by the legislature and absent a reasonably clear indication of legislative action modifying rights created by the act, this court *11 must proceed cautiously in attempting to infer legislative intent.	"Is the Workers' Compensation law a substituted remedy created by the Legislature, and absent a reasonably clear indication of legislative action modifying rights created by the law, how should the Supreme Court proceed in attempting to infer legislative intent?"
262	Thurmond v. Superior Ct. of City & Cnty. of San Francisco, 66 Cal. 2d 836, 840, 427 P.2d 985, 987-88 (1967)	4	Legislative policy of granting continuances of court proceedings so as not to interfere unduly with functions of the Legislature should be given full force and effect wherever and whenever it may be done without unduly adversely affecting the rights of others. West's Ann.Code Civ.Proc. S 595.	The legislative policy of granting continuances 276 988 of court proceedings so as not to interfere unduly with the functions of the Legislature, reflected in section 595, has been in the law since 1880 and should be given full force and effect wherever and whenever it may be done without unduly adversely affecting the rights of others.	Should the legislative policy of granting continuances of court proceedings so as not to interfere unduly with functions of the Legislature be given full force and effect without unduly adversely affecting the rights of others?

265	Nappe v. Town of E. Haven Bd. of Police Comm'rs, No. CV146045937S, 2014 WL 6476599, at *4 (Conn. Super. Ct. Oct. 23, 2014)	8	When a trial court decides a jurisdictional question raised by a pretrial motion to dismiss on the basis of the complaint alone, it must consider the allegations of the complaint in their most favorable light, and in this regard, a court must take the facts to be those alleged in the complaint, including those facts necessarily implied from the allegations, construing them in a manner most favorable to the pleader.	When a trial court decides a jurisdictional question raised by a pretrial motion to dismiss on the basis of the complaint alone, it must consider the allegations of the complaint in their most favorable light ... In this regard, a court must take the facts to be those alleged in the complaint, including those facts necessarily implied from the allegations, construing them in a manner most favorable to the pleader	"When a trial court decides a jurisdictional question raised by a pretrial motion to dismiss on the basis of the complaint alone, must it consider the allegations of the complaint in their most favorable light?"
268	Aeroflex Wichita v. Filardo, 294 Kan. 258, 270 (2012)	2	When a defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction is decided before trial on the basis of the pleadings, affidavits, and other written materials without an evidentiary hearing, any factual disputes must be resolved in the plaintiff's favor and the plaintiff need only make a prima facie showing of jurisdiction. Rules Civ.Proc., K.S.A. 60-212(b)(2).	Hence, we reject TIC's arguments and conclude that, even though there was discovery, when a defendant's K.S.A. 2011 Supp. 60-212(b)(2) motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction is decided before trial on the basis of the pleadings, affidavits, and other written materials and without an evidentiary 879 hearing, any factual disputes must be resolved in the plaintiff's favor and the plaintiff need only make a prima facie showing of jurisdiction.	"When a defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction is decided before trial on the basis of the pleadings, should any factual disputes be resolved in the plaintiff's favor?"
269	In re Risk Level Determination of J.V., 741 N.W.2d 612, 615 (Minn. Ct. App. 2007)	9	Generally, a case should not be dismissed on the ground of mootness if it implicates issues that are capable of repetition, yet evading review; but absent certification as a class action, this only applies to the situation where two elements are combined: (1) the challenged action was in its duration too short to be fully litigated prior to its cessation or expiration, and (2) there was a reasonable expectation that the same complaining party would be subjected to the same action again.	Generally, a case should not be dismissed on the ground of mootness if it implicates issues that are capable of repetition, yet evading review. Kahn, 701 N.W.2d at 821. But absent certification as a class action, this only applies "to the situation where two elements are combined: (1) the challenged action was in its duration too short to be fully litigated prior to its cessation or expiration, and (2) there was a reasonable expectation that the same complaining party would be subjected to the same action again."	Should a case be dismissed on the ground of mootness if it implicates issues that are capable of repetition?
270	Peterson v. McCawley, 135 Idaho 282, 284 (Ct. App. 2000)	5	Before ordering the most drastic sanction-the dismissal of an action or entry of judgment against a litigant-the trial court must first consider lesser sanctions and make specific findings that less severe sanctions would be inadequate. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 16(i).	Before ordering the most drastic sanction - the dismissal of an action or entry of judgment against a litigant-the trial court must first consider lesser sanctions and make specific findings that less severe sanctions would be inadequate.	"Before ordering the most drastic sanction-the dismissal of an action or entry of judgment against a litigant, must the trial court first consider lesser sanctions and make specific findings that less severe sanctions would be inadequate?"

271	Tomlinson-McKenzie v. Prince, 718 So. 2d 394, 396 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App.1998)	2	In determining whether to admit the testimony of a witness or permit introduction of an exhibit not disclosed pursuant to a pretrial order, trial court's discretion should be guided primarily by whether the objecting party would be prejudiced by the admission of the evidence.	A trial judge has broad discretion in determining whether to admit the testimony of a witness or permit introduction of an exhibit not disclosed pursuant to a pretrial order. See Binger v. King Pest Control, 401 So.2d 1310, 1313 (Fla.1981). However, the trial judge's discretion should be guided primarily by whether the "objecting party" would be prejudiced by the admission of the evidence.	"In determining whether to admit the testimony of a witness or permit introduction of an exhibit not disclosed pursuant to a pretrial order, should a trial court's discretion be guided primarily by whether the objecting party would be prejudiced?"
274	Legacy Acad. for Leaders v. Mt. Calvary Pentecostal Church, 999 N.E.2d 175, 179 (2013)	5	Motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted merely ascertain whether the complaint alleges the elements of the claim with sufficient particularity so that reasonable notice is given to the opposing parties, i.e., Ohio generally follows notice, rather than fact, pleading; plaintiffs need not prove their case at the pleading stage. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(B)(6).	Civ.R. 12(B)(6) motions, however, merely ascertain whether the complaint alleges the elements of the claim with sufficient particularity so that reasonable notice is given to the opposing parties, i.e., Ohio generally follows notice, rather than fact, pleading." In re Election Contest of Democratic Primary Held May 4, 1999 for Clerk, Youngstown Mun. Court, 87 Ohio St.3d 118, 120, 717 N.E.2d 701 (1999) Plaintiffs need not prove their case at the pleading stage	Do motions to dismiss for failure under Civ.R. 12(B)(6) to state a claim upon which relief can be granted merely ascertain whether the complaint alleges the elements of the claim with sufficient particularity so that reasonable notice is given to the opposing parties?
275	Waldman v. Pitcher, 2016-Ohio-5909, ¶ 15, 70 N.E.3d 1025, 1029	1	A trial court ruling on a motion for judgment on the pleadings must accept all material allegations in the nonmoving party's complaint as true, must construe all reasonable inferences in that party's favor, and can only grant a dismissal if it appears beyond doubt that the nonmoving plaintiffs cannot prove any set of facts entitling them to the requested relief. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(C).	{¶ 15} A trial court ruling on a Civ.R. 12(C) motion for judgment on the pleadings must accept all material allegations in the nonmoving party's complaint as true, must construe all reasonable inferences in that party's favor, and can only grant a dismissal if it appears beyond doubt that the nonmoving plaintiffs cannot prove any set of facts entitling them to the requested relief.	Should a trial court ruling on a motion for judgment on the pleadings accept all material allegations in the nonmoving party's complaint as true?

276	Lynch v. Helm Plumbing & Elec. Contractors, 108 S.W.3d 657, 660 (Mo. Ct. App. 2002)	5	To establish apparent authority, a party must show that: (1) the principal manifested his consent to the exercise of such authority or knowingly permitted the agent to assume the exercise of such authority, (2) the person relying on this exercise of authority knew of the facts and, acting in good faith, had reason to believe, and actually believed, the agent possessed such authority, and (3) the person reasonably relying on the appearance of authority changed his position, and will be injured or suffer loss, if the transaction executed by the agent does not bind the principal.	To establish apparent authority a party must show: "(1) the principal manifested his consent to the exercise of such authority or knowingly permitted the agent to assume the exercise of such authority; (2) the person relying on this exercise of authority knew of the facts and, acting in good faith, had reason to believe, and actually believed, the agent possessed such authority; and (3) the person relying on the appearance of authority changed his position and will be injured or suffer loss if the transaction executed by the agent does not bind the principal."	To establish apparent authority should a principal knowingly permit agent to act exercising that authority?
278	Larson v. State, Dep't of Corr., 284 P.3d 1, 7 (Alaska 2012)	6	When parties present additional materials outside of the pleadings in connection with a motion to dismiss, the superior court must expressly exclude the materials or convert the motion into a motion for summary judgment and allow all parties a reasonable opportunity to submit materials pertinent to such a motion. Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 12(b)(6), 56.	When parties present additional materials outside of the pleadings in connection with a motion to dismiss, the superior court must expressly exclude the materials or convert the motion into a motion for summary judgment under Alaska Civil Rule 56 and allow all parties a reasonable opportunity to submit materials pertinent to such a motion.	"When parties present additional materials outside of the pleadings in connection with a motion to dismiss, should the superior court expressly exclude the materials or convert the motion into a motion for summary judgment and allow all parties a reasonable opportunity to submit materials?"
279	N. Shore Towers Apartments Inc. v. Three Towers Assocs., 104 A.D.3d 825, 827, 961 N.Y.S.2d 504, 506 (2013)	3	On motion to dismiss complaint for failure to state a cause of action, court must afford pleading liberal construction, accept all facts as alleged in pleading to be true, accord plaintiff the benefit of every possible inference, and determine only whether facts as alleged fit within any cognizable legal theory. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	"On a motion to dismiss the complaint pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7) for failure to state a cause of action, the court must afford the pleading a liberal construction, accept all facts as alleged in the pleading to be true, accord the plaintiff the benefit of every possible inference, and determine only whether the facts as alleged fit within any cognizable legal theory"	"In evaluating the sufficiency of pleadings in deciding a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action, should the court afford the pleadings a liberal construction?"
280	Bryan R. v. Watchtower Bible & Tract Soc. of New York, 738 A.2d 839, 846-47 (Maine 1999)	17	To survive a motion to dismiss a claim for breach of fiduciary duty, the plaintiff must set forth specific facts constituting the alleged relationship with sufficient particularity to enable the court to determine whether, if true, such facts could give rise to a fiduciary relationship.	In order to survive a motion to dismiss a claim for breach of fiduciary *847 duty, the plaintiff must set forth specific facts constituting the alleged relationship with sufficient particularity to enable the court to determine whether, if true, such facts could give rise to a fiduciary relationship.	"To survive a motion to dismiss a claim for breach of fiduciary duty, should the plaintiff set forth specific facts constituting the alleged relationship with sufficient particularity?"

282	Babalola v. HSBC Bank, USA, N.A., 324 Ga. App. 750, 755 (2013)	16	When a plaintiff, particularly a pro se plaintiff, fails to identify specifically the allegedly fraudulent acts or statements on which his fraud claim is based, the proper remedy is a more definite statement, not a dismissal of the complaint or judgment on the pleadings, at least so long as the plaintiff is able and willing to amend his pleadings to conform to the statutory requirements. West's Ga.Code Ann. S 9-11-9(b).	Where a plaintiff (particularly a pro se plaintiff) fails to identify specifically the allegedly fraudulent acts or statements on which his fraud claim is based, however, "the proper remedy is a more definite statement, not a dismissal of the complaint or judgment on the pleadings, at least so long as the plaintiff is able and willing to amend his pleadings to conform to the statutory requirements."	"When a pro se plaintiff fails to identify specifically the allegedly fraudulent acts or statements on which his fraud claim is based, is the proper remedy a more definite statement?"
283	Clift v. Com., 105 S.W.3d 467, 472 (Ky. Ct. App. 2003)	5	In general, a party who moves for a mistrial may not thereafter invoke the bar of double jeopardy to prevent retrial; when the party who moved for a mistrial below seeks to prevent her retrial upon double jeopardy grounds, she must show that the conduct giving rise to the order of mistrial was precipitated by bad faith, overreaching or some other fundamentally unfair action of the prosecutor or the court. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; Const. S 13.	In general, a party who moves for a mistrial may not thereafter invoke the bar of double jeopardy to prevent retrial. 20 Thus, when the party who moved for a mistrial below seeks to prevent her retrial upon double jeopardy grounds, she must show that the conduct giving rise to the order of mistrial was precipitated by bad faith, overreaching or some other fundamentally unfair action of the prosecutor or the court.	"When the party who moved for a mistrial below seeks to prevent her retrial upon double jeopardy grounds, should she show that the conduct giving rise to the order of mistrial was precipitated by bad faith?"
284	State v. Denis, 692 So. 2d 1055, 1055 (La. 1997)	1	Principles of res judicata or double jeopardy do not preclude state in a single prosecution from adjudicating defendant a third offender and then adjudicating him a fourth offender in subsequent proceeding on basis of conviction and documentary evidence not used previously to determine his multiple offender status, as long as punishment imposed on defendant does not exceed what legislature has prescribed, and in the absence of any evidence that state sought separate hearings to oppress or harass defendant. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; LSA-R.S. 15:529.1.	As long as the punishment imposed on the defendant does not exceed what the legislature has prescribed, and in the absence of any evidence that the state sought separate hearings to oppress or harass the defendant, principles of res judicata or double jeopardy do not preclude the state in a single prosecution from adjudicating the defendant a third offender and then adjudicating him a fourth offender in a subsequent proceeding on the basis of a conviction and documentary evidence not used previously to determine his multiple offender status.	What do principles of res judicata or double jeopardy not preclude?

287	Greenberg Traurig of New York, P.C. v. Moody, 161 S.W.3d 56, 91 (Tex. App. 2004)	40	A "motion in limine" is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, prior to trial, certain evidentiary rulings the trial court may be asked to make; the purpose of the motion in limine is to prevent the other party from asking prejudicial questions or introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first asking the trial court's permission.	A motion in limine is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, prior to trial, certain evidentiary rulings the trial court may be asked to make. The purpose of the motion in limine is to prevent the other party from asking prejudicial questions or introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first asking the trial court's permission.	"Is a motion in limine a procedural device that permits a party to identify, prior to trial, certain evidentiary rulings the trial court may be asked to make and the purpose to prevent the other party from asking prejudicial questions or introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first asking the trial court's permission?"
288	Kaiser v. Umialik Ins., 108 P.3d 876, 879 (Alaska 2005)	2	When materials outside pleadings are submitted with regard to motion to dismiss, and superior court neither explicitly excludes materials or converts motion into one for summary judgment, but instead decides the motion without stating whether it is considering outside materials, the Supreme Court has three options: it may reverse and remand for proper consideration, or it may review superior court's decision as if motion for dismissal had been granted after exclusion of outside materials, or as if summary judgment had been granted after conversion of motion to dismiss into one for summary judgment. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(6).	When materials outside the pleadings are submitted with regard to a motion to dismiss, the superior court must either explicitly exclude the materials or convert the motion into one for summary judgment under Alaska Rule of Civil Procedure 56. 2 When the superior court does neither, but instead decides the motion under Rule 12(b)(6) without stating whether it is considering the outside materials or not, this court has three options: "[W]e may reverse and remand for proper consideration, or we may review the superior court's decision as if the motion for dismissal had been granted after exclusion of outside materials, or as if summary judgment had been granted after conversion of the motion to dismiss into one for summary judgment."	When can the superior court either exclude the evidence or convert the motion into one for summary judgment?
291	Bank of Am., N.A. v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 126 Wash. App. 710, 714-15 (2005)	4	As an equitable remedy, subrogation is designed to avoid one person receiving an unearned windfall, i.e., the intervening lienholder through an advancement in priority, at the expense of another, i.e., the new mortgagee who paid the prior debt. Restatement (Third) of Property: Mortgages S 7.6 comment.	As an equitable remedy, subrogation is designed to avoid one person receiving an unearned windfall, i.e., the intervening lienholder through an advancement in priority, at the expense of another, i.e., the new mortgagee who paid the prior debt.	"As an equitable remedy, is subrogation designed to avoid one person receiving an unearned windfall, i.e. intervening lienholders through an advancement in priority, at the expense of another, for example the new mortgagee who paid the prior debt?"

292	Fed. Land Bank of Baltimore v. Joynes, 179 Va. 394, 401 (1942)	2	"Subrogation" is generally classified as being either legal or conventional, "legal subrogation" arising by operation of law where one having a liability, or right, or a fiduciary relation in the premises pays a debt due by another under such circumstances that he is in equity entitled to the security or obligation held by the creditor whom he has paid, and "conventional subrogation" arising where by express or implied agreement with the debtor, a person advancing money to discharge a prior lien might be substituted to the security of the prior lienee.	Subrogation has been generally classified as being either legal or conventional. Legal subrogation arises by operation of law where one having a liability, or right, or a fiduciary relation in the premises pays a debt due by another under such circumstances that he is in equity entitled to the security or obligation held by the creditor whom he has paid. Conventional subrogation, on the other hand, arises where by express or implied agreement with the debtor, a person advancing money to discharge a prior lien might be substituted to the security of the prior lienee.	How is subrogation classified?
293	Bergen Cty. v. Dep't of Pub. Utilities, 117 N.J. Super. 304, 312 (App. Div. 1971)	11	The statutes governing public utilities reflect legislative recognition that public interest in proper regulation of public utilities transcends municipal or county lines, and that centralized control must be entrusted to an agency whose continually developing expertise will assure uniformly safe, proper and adequate service by utilities throughout the State. N.J.S.A. 48:2-1, 48:13A-4.	Title 48 reflects a legislative recognition that 'public interest in proper regulation of public utilities transcends municipal or county lines, and that a centralized control must be entrusted to an agency whose continually developing expertise will assure uniformly safe, proper and adequate service by utilities throughout the State.'	Does public interest in proper regulation of public utilities transcend municipal or county lines entrusting an agency to assure adequate utility services?
294	C. Green Scaping v. Westfield Ins. Co., 248 S.W.3d 779, 790 (Tex. App. 2008)	17	The doctrine of subrogation is broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, has paid a debt for which another was primarily liable and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter.	However, the doctrine is broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, has paid a debt for which another was primarily liable and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter.	"Is the doctrine of subrogation broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, has paid a debt for which another was primarily liable and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter?"
295	Bank of Am., N.A. v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 126 Wash. App. 710, 714-15 (2005)	4	As an equitable remedy, subrogation is designed to avoid one person receiving an unearned windfall, i.e., the intervening lienholder through an advancement in priority, at the expense of another, i.e., the new mortgagee who paid the prior debt. Restatement (Third) of Property: Mortgages S 7.6 comment.	As an equitable remedy, subrogation is designed to avoid one person receiving an unearned windfall, i.e., the intervening lienholder through an advancement in priority, at the expense of another, i.e., the new mortgagee who paid the prior debt.	"As an equitable remedy, is subrogation designed to avoid one person receiving an unearned windfall, i.e. intervening lienholders through an advancement in priority, at the expense of another or the new mortgagee who paid the prior debt?"

297	Doe I v. State of Israel, 400 F. Supp. 2d 86, 113 (D.D.C. 2005)	53	The act of state doctrine, which is a close cousin of the political question doctrine, prevents a court from deciding a case when the outcome turns upon the legality or illegality of official action by a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory.	A close cousin of the political question doctrine, the act of state doctrine prevents a court from deciding a case "when the outcome turns upon the legality or illegality ... of official action by a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory."	Does the act of state doctrine prevent a court from deciding a case when the outcome turns upon the legality or illegality of official action by a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory?
299	Nnaka v. Fed. Republic of Nigeria, 238 F. Supp. 3d 17, 31-32 (D.D.C. 2017)	25	"Act of state doctrine" is a function of the domestic separation of powers, reflecting the strong sense of the Judicial Branch that its engagement in the task of passing on the validity of foreign acts of state may hinder the conduct of foreign affairs.	The act of state doctrine is a function of the "domestic separation of powers, reflecting the strong sense of the Judicial Branch *32 that its engagement in the task of passing on the validity of foreign acts of state may hinder the conduct of foreign affairs."	"Is the act of state doctrine a function of the domestic separation of powers, reflecting the strong sense of the Judicial Branch that its engagement in the task of passing on the validity of foreign acts of state may hinder the conduct of foreign affairs?"
300	Nat'l Coal. Gov't of Union of Burma v. Unocal, 176 F.R.D. 329, 349 (C.D. Cal. 1997)	25	Act of state doctrine precludes court of United States from considering plaintiff's claims where either claims or defenses asserted would require court to determine that foreign sovereign's official acts performed in its own territory were invalid.	The act of state doctrine precludes a court of the United States from considering a plaintiff's claims where either the claims or the defenses asserted would require the court to determine that a foreign sovereign's official acts performed in its own territory were invalid.	Does the act of state doctrine preclude a court of the United States from considering plaintiff's claims where either claims or defenses asserted would require the court to determine that a foreign sovereign's official acts performed in its own territory were invalid?
301	Bandes v. Harlow & Jones, 826 F. Supp. 700, 705 (S.D.N.Y. 1993)	2	Two practical rationales underlie Act of State Doctrine: first, it permits political arms of government, and executive branch in particular, exclusive control over foreign policy; second, when disputed property is located in foreign sovereign, it would likely be futile, to say nothing of arrogant, for United States court to pronounce on self-contained activities of independent state.	Two practical rationales underlie the doctrine. First, it permits the political arms of government, and the executive branch in particular, exclusive control over foreign policy. Allied Bank International v. Banco Credito Agricola de Cartago, 757 F.2d 516, 520 (2d Cir.1985). Second, when the disputed property is located in the foreign sovereign, it would likely be futile, to say nothing of arrogant, for a United States court to pronounce on the self-contained activities of an independent state.	What are the two practical rationales that underlie the Act of State Doctrine?

302	United States v. One Gulfstream G-V Jet Aircraft, 941 F. Supp. 2d 1, 2 (D.D.C. 2013)	11	The "act of state doctrine" precluding domestic courts from inquiring into the validity of the public acts that a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory applies when the relief sought or the defense interposed would require a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its boundaries.	The act of state doctrine "precludes the courts of this country from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory." Banco Nacional de Cuba v. Sabbatino, 376 U.S. 398, 401, 84 S.Ct. 923, 11 L.Ed.2d 804 (1964). It applies when "the relief sought or the defense interposed would [require] a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory."	Does the act of state doctrine prevent any court in the United States from declaring that an official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory is invalid?
304	City of New York v. Consol. Edison Co. of New York, 274 A.D.2d 189, 194, 713 N.Y.S.2d 40, 44 (2000)	8	All property is held under the implied obligation that the owner's use of it shall not be injurious to the community, and the Takings Clause did not transform that principle to one that requires compensation whenever the state asserts its power to enforce it. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Long ago it was recognized that 'all property in this country is held under the implied obligation that the owner's use of it shall not be injurious to the community,' and the Takings Clause did not transform that principle to one that requires compensation whenever the State asserts its power to enforce it."	"Does the Takings Clause transform the principle that, all property in this country is held under the implied obligation that the owner's use of it shall not be injurious to the community, to one that requires compensation whenever the State asserts its power to enforce it?"
305	Roe v. Unocal Corp., 70 F. Supp. 2d 1073, 1077 (C.D. Cal. 1999)	5	Act of state doctrine may only be invoked to bar adjudication of plaintiff's claims when nature of claims or defenses will require court to declare invalid foreign sovereign's official acts, in other words, when outcome of case turns upon effect of official action by foreign sovereign.	In short, the act of state doctrine may only be invoked to bar adjudication of a plaintiff's claims when the nature of the claims or defenses will require the court to declare invalid a foreign sovereign's official acts, in other words, when "the outcome of the case turns upon [] the effect of official action by a foreign sovereign."	Can the act of state doctrine only be invoked to bar adjudication of plaintiff's claims when nature of claims or defenses will require the court to declare invalid foreign sovereign's official acts?
307	Compania de Gas de Nuevo Laredo, S. A. v. Entex, 686 F.2d 322, 325 (5th Cir. 1982)	1	Whether act of state doctrine is applicable is determined by balancing several factors, namely, the degree of involvement of the foreign state, whether the validity of its laws or regulation was in issue, whether the foreign state was a named defendant, and whether there was a showing of harm to American commerce.	As we noted in Mitsui, application of the doctrine is determined by balancing several factors, namely, the degree of involvement of the foreign state, whether the validity of its law or regulation was an issue, whether the foreign state was a named defendant, and whether there was a showing of harm to American commerce.	"Is the act of state doctrine applicable by balancing several factors, namely, the degree of involvement of the foreign state, whether the validity of its laws or regulation was in issue, whether the foreign state was a named defendant, and whether there was a showing of harm to American commerce?"

308	Commercial Credit Equip. Corp. v. Hatton, 429 F. Supp. 997, 1001 (N.D. Tex. 1977)	5	To the extent that a surety feels insecure and believes a debtor is in default, he is always entitled to pay off the indebtedness, be subrogated to the rights of the creditor, and then repossess, taking upon himself the significant risks of a wrongful repossession or of committing a breach of the peace in connection with the repossession.	To the extent that a surety feels insecure and believes a debtor is in default, he is always entitled to pay off the indebtedness, be subrogated to the rights of the creditor, and then repossess taking upon himself the significant risks of a wrongful repossession or of committing a breach of the peace in connection with the repossession.	"Is a surety always entitled to pay off indebtedness, be subrogated to the rights of the creditor, and then repossess, taking upon himself the significant risks of a wrongful repossession or of committing a breach of the peace in connection with the repossession?"
311	Maryland Cas. Co. v. Messina, 874 P.2d 1058, 1063 (Colo. 1994)	4	Workers' Compensation Act establishes administrative process designed to adjudicate promptly narrow issue of law containing limited legal questions, and creates just remedy of compensating workers for employment related injuries. C.R.S. 8-52-102(1)(b).	The Workers' Compensation Act establishes an administrative process designed to adjudicate promptly a narrow issue of law containing limited legal questions, and creates a just remedy of compensating workers for employment related injuries.	"Does the workers compensation act establish an administrative process designed to adjudicate promptly narrow issues of law containing limited legal questions, and creates a just remedy of compensating workers for employment related injuries?"
312	Wilhite v. Illinois Power Co., 139 F. Supp. 2d 971, 973-74 (C.D. Ill. 2001)	1	Illinois' Workers' Compensation Act entitles employees who have been injured in the course of employment to obtain an award of benefits without regard to fault; in exchange for this benefit, the employee accepts the Workers' Compensation Act as his exclusive remedy and forfeits his right to recover tort damages for the same injury. S.H.A. 820 ILCS 305/1 et seq.	Illinois' Workers' Compensation Act entitles employees who have been injured in the course of employment to obtain an award of benefits without regard to *974 fault. In exchange for this benefit, the employee accepts the Workers' Compensation Act as his exclusive remedy and forfeits his right to recover tort damages for the same injury.	"Does the Workers' Compensation Act allows employees who are injured in the course of their employment to obtain benefits, regardless of fault, in exchange for accepting this as their exclusive remedy, thereby forfeiting tort recovery for the injury?"
313	GMS Mine Repair & Maint. v. Miklos, 798 S.E.2d 833, 833 (W. Va. 2017)	5	The civil procedure rules require active judicial management of a case, and mandate that a trial court shall enter a scheduling order establishing time frames for the joinder of parties, the amendment of pleadings, the completion of discovery, the filing of dispositive motions, and generally guiding the parties toward a prompt, fair and cost-effective resolution of the case. W. Va. R. Civ. P. 16(b).	"Rule 16(b) of the West Virginia Rules of Civil Procedure [1998] requires active judicial management of a case, and mandates that a trial court 'shall ... enter a scheduling order' establishing time frames for the joinder of parties, the amendment of pleadings, the completion of discovery, the filing of dispositive motions, and generally guiding the parties toward a prompt, fair and cost-effective resolution of the case."	Do the civil procedure rules require active judicial management of a case?

315	B.J. v. State, 951 So. 2d 100, 100 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2007)	3	With regard to the first element of loitering and prowling, the state must prove that a defendant loitered and prowled, which means that he engaged in incipient criminal behavior in which law abiding people do not usually engage given the time, place, or manner of the conduct involved; the gist of the first element is aberrant and suspicious criminal conduct that comes close to, but falls short of, actual commission or attempted commission of a substantive crime. West's F.S.A. S 856.021(1).	With regard to the first element, the state must prove that the defendant *103 loitered and prowled, which means that he "engaged in incipient criminal behavior which law abiding people do not usually engage in" given "the time, place, or manner of the conduct involved." E.C. v. State, 724 So.2d 1243, 1244 (Fla. 4th DCA 1999). The gist of the first element "is aberrant and suspicious criminal conduct which comes close to, but falls short of, actual commission or attempted commission of a substantive crime."	Is engagement in suspicious criminal conduct an element of the offense of loitering?
316	United States v. Bryant, 885 F. Supp. 2d 749, 757 (D.N.J. 2012)	3	An honest services fraud prosecution for bribery requires Government to prove: (1) that the payor provided a benefit to a public official intending that he would thereby take favorable official acts that he would not otherwise take, and (2) that the official accepted those benefits intending, in exchange for the benefits, to take official acts to benefit the payor. 18 U.S.C.A. S 1346.	An honest services fraud prosecution for bribery after Skilling thus requires the Government to prove: (1) that "the payor provided a benefit to a public official intending that he w[ould] thereby take favorable official acts that he would not otherwise take," and (2) that "the official accepted those benefits intending, in exchange for the benefits, to take official acts to benefit the payor.	Does honest services fraud prosecution for bribery requires the Government to prove that the payor provided a benefit to a public official intending that he will thereby take favorable official acts that he would not otherwise take?
318	Lakewood Tr. Co. of Lakewood v. Fid. & Deposit Co. of Md., 81 N.J. Super. 329, 338 (1963)	2	Intention and rationale of discovery rule is to permit more liberal discovery by way of access to all relevant material contained in books, papers and documents to simplify issues, obviate lengthy and haphazard examination and cross-examination, and shorten trials and thus achieve substantial justice. R.R. 4:24-1.	The intention and rationale is to permit more liberal discovery by way of access to all relevant material contained in books, papers and documents to simplify the issues, obviate lengthy and haphazard examination and cross-examination, and shorten trials and thus achieve substantial justice.	"Is the intention and rationale of the discovery rule to permit more liberal discovery by way of access to all relevant material contained in books, papers and documents to simplify issues?"
319	Univ. of Texas Med. Branch at Galveston v. Est. of Blackmon ex rel. Shultz, 195 S.W.3d 98, 100-01 (Tex. 2006)	7	The civil procedure rule governing nonsuits permits the trial court to hold hearings and enter orders affecting costs, attorney fees, and sanctions, even after notice of nonsuit is filed, while the court retains plenary power. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 162.	Rule 162 permits the trial court to hold hearings and enter orders affecting costs, attorney's fees, and sanctions, even after notice of nonsuit is filed, while the court retains plenary power.	"Does the rule governing dismissals and non-suits permit the trial court to hold hearings and enter orders affecting costs, attorney fees, and sanctions, even after notice of nonsuit is filed, while the court retains plenary power?"

320	Calvert v. Berg, 177 Wash. App. 466, 473 (2013)	4	Although a voluntary dismissal generally deprives a court of authority to decide a case on the merits, the court retains jurisdiction for the limited purpose of considering a defendant's motion for fees, which is collateral to the underlying proceeding. CR 41(a)(1)(B).	Although a voluntary dismissal under CR 41(a)(1) (B) generally deprives a court of authority to decide a case on the merits, "the court retains jurisdiction for the limited purpose of considering a defendant's motion for fees," which is collateral to the underlying proceeding.	"Although a voluntary dismissal generally deprives a court of authority to decide a case on the merits, does the court retain jurisdiction for the limited purpose of considering a defendant's motion for fees, which is collateral to the underlying proceeding?"
321	Credit Car Ctr. v. Chambers, 969 S.W.2d 459, 462 (Tex. App. 1998)	5	Party seeking to withdraw deemed admissions establishes "good cause" by showing that its failure to file was not intentional or in conscious disregard of its obligation to answer the requests, and even a slight excuse for failure to answer will suffice. Vernon's Ann. Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 169.	A party seeking to withdraw deemed admissions establishes "good cause" by showing that its failure to file was not intentional or in conscious disregard of its obligation to answer the requests; thus, even a slight excuse for failure to answer will suffice.	"Does the party seeking to withdraw deemed admissions establish good cause by showing that its failure to file was not intentional or in conscious disregard of its obligation to answer the requests, and even a slight excuse for failure to answer will suffice?"
325	Shields v. Crump, 499 So. 2d 479, 479 (La. Ct. App. 1986)	1	Trial court's discretion should usually be exercised in favor of granting continuance to plaintiff who is no longer represented by counsel, so as to afford plaintiff additional opportunity to obtain counsel and to have day in court, even though plaintiff has not been diligent in obtaining new counsel.	We read these Supreme Court decisions to strongly indicate that a trial court's discretion should usually be exercised in favor of granting a continuance to a plaintiff who is no longer represented by counsel so as to afford the plaintiff an additional opportunity to obtain counsel and to have a day in court, even though the plaintiff has not been diligent in obtaining new counsel.	"Should a trial court's discretion usually be exercised in favor of granting continuance to a plaintiff who is no longer represented by counsel, so as to afford the plaintiff an additional opportunity to obtain counsel and to have a day in court, even though the plaintiff has not been diligent in obtaining new counsel?"
326	Colonial Pipeline Co. v. Westlake Club, 112 Ga. App. 412, 412 (1965)	3	No abuse of discretion in denying continuance is shown where it does not appear that movant invoked explicit remedy to which he was entitled, to wit, postponement of trial to another day in same term or until other panels could be drawn from which to select jury.	No abuse of discretion is shown where it does not appear that movant invoked the explicit remedy to which he was entitled, to wit, a postponement of the trial to another day in the same term or until other panels could be drawn from which to select a jury.	"Is no abuse of discretion in denying continuance shown where it does not appear that a movant invoked an explicit remedy to which he was entitled, to wit, postponement of trial to another day in same term or until other panels could be drawn from which to select a jury?"

330	Houston v. Houston, 64 Mass. App. Ct. 529, 533 (2005)	1	A judge may usually ameliorate the effect of the rule governing admissions when the presentation of the merits of the action will be advanced, and the party obtaining the admission fails to satisfy the court that withdrawal or amendment will prejudice him in maintaining his action or defense on the merits. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 36(b), 43A M.G.L.A.	In the usual case, a judge "may ameliorate the effect of the rule when: (1) the presentation of the 301 merits of the action will be advanced, and (2) the party obtaining the admission fails to satisfy the court that withdrawal or amendment will prejudice him in maintaining his action or defense on the merits.	"Can a judge usually ameliorate the effect of the rule governing admissions when the presentation of the merits of the action will be advanced, and when the party obtaining the admission fails to satisfy the court that withdrawal or amendment will prejudice him in maintaining his action or defense on the merits?"
331	Chen v. Guo Liang Lu, 144 A.D.3d 735, 736, 41 N.Y.S.3d 517, 519 (2016)	2	When opposing a motion to dismiss a complaint for lack of personal jurisdiction on the ground that discovery on the issue of personal jurisdiction is necessary, plaintiffs need not make a prima facie showing of jurisdiction, but instead need only demonstrate that facts may exist to exercise personal jurisdiction over the defendant. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(8).	"When opposing a motion to dismiss a complaint pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(8) on the ground that discovery on the issue of personal jurisdiction is necessary, plaintiffs need not make a prima facie showing of jurisdiction, but instead 'need only demonstrate that facts may exist to exercise personal jurisdiction over the defendant' "	"When opposing a motion to dismiss a complaint for lack of personal jurisdiction on the ground that discovery on the issue of personal jurisdiction is necessary, need plaintiffs make a prima facie showing of jurisdiction?"
332	Mayfield v. de Benavides, 693 S.W.2d 500, 506 (Tex. App. 1985)	15	When trespass is done in bad faith, measure of damages is value of things mined at time of severance without making deduction for cost of labor and other expenses incurred in committing wrongful act or for any value trespasser may have added to minerals by his labor.	When the trespass is done in bad faith, the measure of damages is "the value of the things mined at the time of severance without making deduction for the cost of labor and other expenses incurred in committing the wrongful act ... or for any value he may have added to the mineral by his labor." Cage Brothers v.	Is the measure of damages for bad faith trespass the value of the things mined at the time of severance without making deduction for the cost of labour and other expenses incurred in committing the wrongful act?
334	Verploegh v. Gagliano, 396 Ill. App. 3d 1041, 1045, 922 N.E.2d 428, 431-32 (2009)	7	Courts consider a number of factors when determining whether to grant a motion to dismiss for lack of diligence in obtaining service of process, including but not limited to: (1) the length of time used to obtain service of process; (2) the activities of the plaintiff; (3) plaintiff's knowledge of the defendant's location; (4) the ease with which the defendant's whereabouts could have been ascertained; (5) special circumstances which would affect plaintiff's efforts; and (6) actual service on the defendant. Sup.Ct.Rules, Rule 103(b).	Courts consider a number of factors 309 432 when determining whether to grant a Rule 103(b) motion, including but not limited to: (1) the length of time used to obtain service of process; (2) the activities of the plaintiff; (3) plaintiff's knowledge of the defendant's location; (4) the ease with which the defendant's whereabouts could have been ascertained; (5) special circumstances which would affect plaintiff's efforts; and (6) actual service on the defendant.	Should courts consider a number of factors when determining whether to grant a motion to dismiss for lack of diligence?

336	Montgomery v. SmithKline Beecham Corp., 910 So. 2d 541, 545 (Miss. 2005)	1	Ordinarily, under the civil procedure rule regarding service of process, if 120 days has expired after the filing of the complaint, a court must notify the plaintiff that, because of the failure to serve process, the case is subject to dismissal, and the plaintiff must then appear and attempt to show good cause why process was not served within the 120-day period for service. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 4(h).	Ordinarily under Rule 4(h), where the 120 days has expired, a court must notify the plaintiff that, because of the failure to serve process, the case is subject to dismissal. The plaintiff must then appear and attempt to show good cause why process was not served within the 120-day period for service. 4	"Under the civil procedure rule regarding service of process, if 120 days have expired after the filing of the complaint, must a plaintiff appear and attempt to show good cause?"
339	Gohel v. Montgomery Hosp., 698 A.2d 653, 654 (Pa. 1997)	3	Trial court may enter judgment of non pros where it finds failure to proceed diligently with reasonable promptitude, lack of compelling reason for delay, and delay has caused some prejudice to adverse party, which will be presumed in cases where delay exceeds two years. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 3051(b), 42 Pa.C.S.A.	The Penn Piping test allows a trial court to enter a judgment of non pros where it finds: 1) failure to proceed diligently with reasonable promptitude; 2) a lack of a compelling reason for the delay; and 3) the delay has caused some prejudice to the adverse party, which will be presumed in cases where the delay exceeds two years.	"Can court enter judgment of non pros where it finds failure to proceed diligently with reasonable promptitude, lack of compelling reason for delay, and delay has caused some prejudice to adverse party?"
341	Poola v. Howard Univ., 147 A.3d 267, 276 (D.C. 2016)	5	To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted, a complaint must plead enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face, i.e., factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. D.C. Super. Ct. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).	Under that standard, to survive a Super. Ct. Civ. R. 12 (b)(6) motion to dismiss, a complaint must plead "enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face," Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570, 127 S.Ct. 1955, i.e., "factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Comer, 108 A.3d at 371 (internal quotation marks omitted); see also Twombly, 550 U.S.	"To survive a 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, should a complaint plead enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face?"
343	Nappe v. Town of E. Haven Bd. of Police Comm'rs, No. CV1460459375, 2014 WL 6476599, at *4 (Conn. Super. Ct. Oct. 23, 2014)	8	When a trial court decides a jurisdictional question raised by a pretrial motion to dismiss on the basis of the complaint alone, it must consider the allegations of the complaint in their most favorable light, and in this regard, a court must take the facts to be those alleged in the complaint, including those facts necessarily implied from the allegations, construing them in a manner most favorable to the pleader.	"When a trial court decides a jurisdictional question raised by a pretrial motion to dismiss on the basis of the complaint alone, it must consider the allegations of the complaint in their most favorable light ... In this regard, a court must take the facts to be those alleged in the complaint, including those facts necessarily implied from the allegations, construing them in a manner most favorable to the pleader ...	"When a trial court decides a jurisdictional question raised by a pretrial motion to dismiss on the basis of the complaint alone, should it consider the allegations of the complaint in their most favorable light?"

345	Scovill Fasteners, Inc. v. Sure-Snap Corp., 207 Ga. App. 539, 539, 428 S.E.2d 435, 436 (1993)	4	When outcome of motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction depends on unstipulated facts, it must be accompanied by supporting affidavits or citations to evidentiary material in the record, and to the extent that defendant's evidence controverts complaint's allegations, plaintiff may not rely on mere allegations, but must also submit supporting affidavits or documentary evidence. Uniform Superior Court Rule 6.1.	However, when the outcome of the motion depends on unstipulated facts, it must be accompanied by supporting affidavits or citations to evidentiary material in the record. See Uniform Superior Court Rule 6.1. See also Behar v. Aero Med Intl., 185 Ga.App. 845, 846 (366 SE2d 223) (1988). Further, to the extent that defendant's evidence controverts the allegations of the complaint, plaintiff may not rely on mere allegations, but must also submit supporting affidavits or documentary evidence. Id. at 846 [, 366 SE2d 223].	Can a plaintiff rely on mere allegations in controverting the allegations of the complaint but also submit supporting affidavits or documentary evidence?
346	Chromalloy Am. Corp. v. Elyria Foundry Co., 955 S.W.2d 1, 3 (Mo. 1997)	5	Dismissal without prejudice may operate to preclude party from bringing another action for same cause and may be res judicata of what judgment actually decided; appeal from such dismissal can be taken where dismissal has practical effect of terminating litigation in form cast or in plaintiff's chosen forum.	A dismissal without prejudice may operate to preclude the party from bringing another action for the same cause and may be res judicata of what the judgment actually decided. An appeal from such a dismissal can be taken where the dismissal has the practical effect of terminating the litigation in the form cast or in the plaintiff's chosen forum.	Can a dismissal without prejudice operate to preclude a party from bringing another action for the same cause and can be res judicata of what the judgment actually decided?
347	Builders Apartment Corp. Condo. v. Gingold, 37 A.D.3d 635, 635–36, 831 N.Y.S.2d 448, 449 (2007)	1	Case stricken from the trial calendar and subsequently dismissed after one year may be restored to the trial calendar provided that the plaintiff demonstrates a meritorious cause of action, a reasonable excuse for the delay in seeking restoration of the action to the trial calendar, a lack of intent to abandon the action, and a lack of prejudice to the defendant. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	A case stricken from the trial calendar pursuant to CPLR 3404 and subsequently dismissed after one year may be restored to the trial calendar provided that the plaintiff demonstrates a meritorious cause of action, a reasonable excuse for the delay in *636 seeking restoration of the action to the trial calendar, a lack of intent to abandon the action, and a lack of prejudice to the defendant	Can a case stricken from the trial calendar and subsequently dismissed after one year be restored to the trial calendar provided that the plaintiff demonstrates a meritorious cause of action?
348	People v. Smith, 128 Misc. 2d 733	2	Where it is contended that the punishment imposed in a particular case is excessive, though within the limits prescribed by the Legislature, the Supreme Court should not disturb the sentence unless it clearly appears that the penalty constitutes a great departure from the fundamental law and its spirit and purpose, or that the penalty is manifestly in excess of the proscription of the constitutional requirement that all penalties shall be proportioned to the nature of the offense. S.H.A.Const. art. 2, S 11.	Where it is contended that the punishment imposed in a particular case is excessive, though within the limits prescribed by the legislature, this court should not disturb the sentence unless it clearly appears that the penalty constitutes a great departure from the fundamental law and its spirit and purpose, or that the penalty is manifestly in excess of the proscription of section 11 of article II of the Illinois constitution, S.H.A. which requires that all penalties shall be proportioned to the nature of the offense.	Can a sentence be disturbed on the basis that it is excessive if it is within the limitations prescribed by the legislature but also deemed to be greatly at variance with the purpose and spirit of the law?

352	Williams v. D'Angelo, 24 A.D.3d 538, 539, 806 N.Y.S.2d 238, 239 (2005)	2	A case marked off the trial calendar and subsequently dismissed after one year may be restored to the trial calendar provided that the plaintiff demonstrates a meritorious cause of action, a reasonable excuse for the delay in prosecuting the action, a lack of intent to abandon the action, and a lack of prejudice to the defendant. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	A case marked off the trial calendar pursuant to CPLR 3404 and subsequently dismissed after one year may be restored to the trial calendar provided that the plaintiff demonstrates a meritorious cause of action, a reasonable excuse for the delay in prosecuting the action, a lack of intent to abandon the action, and a lack of prejudice to the defendant	Can a case marked off the trial calendar and subsequently dismissed after one year be restored to the trial calendar provided that the plaintiff demonstrates a meritorious cause of action?
354	Levine v. Agus, 28 A.D.3d 719, 720, 814 N.Y.S.2d 215, 216 (2006)	1	Case marked off trial calendar and subsequently dismissed after one year may be restored to trial calendar provided that plaintiff demonstrates meritorious cause of action, reasonable excuse for delay in prosecuting action, lack of intent to abandon action, and lack of prejudice to defendant. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	"A case marked off the trial calendar pursuant to CPLR 3404 and subsequently dismissed after one year may be restored to the trial calendar provided that the plaintiff demonstrates a meritorious cause of action, a reasonable excuse for the delay in prosecuting the action, a lack of intent to abandon the action, and a lack of prejudice to the defendant"	Can a case marked off the trial calendar and subsequently dismissed after one year be restored to trial calendar provided that the plaintiff demonstrate a meritorious cause of action?
356	Stanley v. Superior Court, 206 Cal. App. 4th 265, 278–79 (2012)	1	The policies and protections underlying or afforded by double jeopardy principles include: (1) protecting the defendant from being subjected to the embarrassment, expense, ordeal, and anxiety of repeated trials, (2) preserving the finality of judgments, (3) precluding the government from retrying the defendant armed with new evidence and knowledge of defense tactics, (4) recognizing the defendant's right to have trial completed by a particular tribunal, and (5) precluding multiple punishment for the same offense. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; West's Ann.Cal. Const. Art. 1, S 15.	The policies and protections underlying or afforded by double jeopardy principles include: "(1) protecting the defendant from being subjected to the embarrassment, expense, ordeal, and anxiety of repeated trials, (2) preserving the finality of judgments, (3) precluding the government from retrying the *279 defendant armed with new evidence and knowledge of defense tactics, (4) recognizing the defendant's right to have trial completed by a particular tribunal, and (5) precluding multiple punishment for the same offense.	What are the policies and protections afforded by double jeopardy principles?
357	Taylorville City v. Adkins, 145 P.3d 1161, 1164 (Utah 2006)	8	Acquittals, unlike convictions, terminate the initial jeopardy, whether they are express or implied by a conviction on a lesser included offense; thus, whether the trial is to a jury or to the bench, subjecting the defendant to postacquittal factfinding proceedings going to guilt or innocence violates the Double Jeopardy Clause. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	"Acquittals, unlike convictions, terminate the initial jeopardy. This is so whether they are 'express or implied by a conviction on a lesser included offense.' " Id. (citation omitted). "Thus, whether the trial is to a jury or to the bench, subjecting the defendant to postacquittal factfinding proceedings going to guilt or innocence violates the Double Jeopardy Clause."	"Whether the trial is to a jury or to the bench, does subjecting the defendant to post acquittal fact-finding proceedings going to guilt or innocence violate the Double Jeopardy Clause?"

358	Pierson v. State, 398 S.W.3d 406, 412 (Tex. App. 2013)	5	Although a retrial is absolutely prohibited when a trial ends in an acquittal or a conviction, a retrial may not be automatically barred when a criminal proceeding is terminated without finally resolving the merits of the charges against the accused; under such circumstances, a retrial over the objection of a defendant is permitted only when the prosecutor demonstrates manifest necessity. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Although a retrial is absolutely prohibited when a trial ends in an acquittal or a conviction, a retrial may not be "automatically barred when a criminal proceeding is terminated without finally resolving the merits of the charges against the accused." Under such circumstances, a retrial over the objection of a defendant is permitted only when the prosecutor demonstrates "manifest necessity."	"Although a retrial is automatically barred when a trial ends with an acquittal or a conviction, is the same true when a criminal proceeding ends before a final resolution of the merits of the charges against the accused is reached?"
360	K.L.N. Constr. Co. v. Town of Pelham, 107 A.3d 658, 661 (N.H. 2014)	2	When a motion to dismiss does not challenge the sufficiency of the petitioners' legal claim but, instead, raises certain defenses, the trial court must look beyond the petitioners' unsubstantiated allegations and determine, based on the facts, whether the petitioners have sufficiently demonstrated their right to claim relief; a jurisdictional challenge based upon lack of standing is such a defense.	"When the motion to dismiss does not challenge the sufficiency of the petitioners' legal claim but, instead, raises certain defenses, the trial court must look beyond the petitioners' unsubstantiated allegations and determine, based on the facts, whether the petitioners have sufficiently demonstrated their right to claim relief." Id. (quotation and brackets omitted). "A jurisdictional challenge based upon lack of standing is such a defense." Id.	Is a jurisdictional challenge based upon lack of standing a defense that requires a trial court to look beyond the plaintiff's unsubstantiated allegations?
361	New York Hosp. Med. Ctr. of Queens v. Microtech Contracting Corp., 98 A.D.3d 1096, 1098–99, 951 N.Y.S.2d 546, 549–50 (2012)	5	In order to preserve the national uniformity of the Immigration Reform and Control Act's (IRCA's) verification system and the sanctions imposed for violations, Congress expressly provided that IRCA preempts any State or local law imposing civil or criminal sanctions, other than through licensing and similar laws, upon those who employ, or recruit or refer for a fee for employment, unauthorized aliens; IRCA is silent, however, as to its preemptive effect on any other state or local laws. Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, S 101(a)(1), 8 U.S.C.A. S 1324a(h)(2).	"In order to preserve the national uniformity of this verification system and the sanctions imposed for violations, Congress *1099 expressly provided that IRCA would 'preempt any State or local law imposing civil or criminal sanctions (other than through licensing and similar laws) upon those who employ, or recruit or refer for a fee for employment, unauthorized aliens' " (Balbuena v. IDR Realty LLC, 6 N.Y.3d at 354, 812 N.Y.S.2d 416, 845 N.E.2d 1246, quoting 8 USC § 1324a[h][2]; see 550 Madeira v. Affordable Hous. Found., Inc., 469 F.3d at 231–232). "The statute is silent, however, as to its preemptive effect on any other state or local laws" (Madeira v. Affordable Hous. Found., Inc., 469 F.3d at 232).	Does the IRCA preempt any State or local law imposing civil or criminal sanctions upon those who employ unauthorized aliens?

362	Baer v. New Hampshire Dep't of Educ., 160 N.H. 727, 729 (2010)	2	When the motion to dismiss does not challenge the sufficiency of the plaintiff's legal claim but, instead, raises certain defenses, the trial court must look beyond the plaintiff's unsubstantiated allegations and determine, based on the facts, whether the plaintiff has sufficiently demonstrated his right to claim relief.	"[W]hen the motion to dismiss does not challenge the sufficiency of the plaintiff's legal claim but, instead, raises certain defenses, the trial court must look beyond the plaintiff's unsubstantiated allegations and determine, based on the facts, whether the plaintiff has sufficiently demonstrated his right to claim relief."	"When the motion to dismiss does not challenge the sufficiency of the plaintiff's legal claim but, instead, raises certain defenses, must a court look beyond a plaintiff's unsubstantiated allegations?"
365	Harper v. Patterson, 270 Ga. App. 437, 441 (2004)	16	If the trial court decides to rule on the admissibility of evidence prior to trial, the court's determination of admissibility is similar to a preliminary ruling on evidence at a pretrial conference and it controls the subsequent course of action, unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice.	If, however, the trial court decides to rule on the admissibility of evidence prior to trial, the court's determination of admissibility is similar to a preliminary ruling on evidence at a pretrial conference and it controls the subsequent course of action, unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice.	"If the trial court decides to rule on the admissibility of evidence prior to trial, is the court's determination of admissibility similar to a preliminary ruling on evidence at a pretrial conference and will it control the subsequent course of action, unless modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice?"
366	Du Daobin v. Cisco Sys., 2 F. Supp. 3d 717, 725 (D. Md. 2014)	9	The act of state doctrine is a consequence of domestic separation of powers, reflecting the strong sense of the Judicial Branch that its engagement in the task of passing on the validity of foreign acts of state may hinder the conduct of foreign affairs.	The doctrine is "a consequence of domestic separation of powers, reflecting 'the strong sense of the Judicial Branch that its engagement in the task of passing on the validity of foreign acts of state may hinder' the conduct of foreign affairs".	"Is the act of state doctrine a consequence of domestic separation of powers, reflecting the strong sense of the Judicial Branch that its engagement in the task of passing on the validity of foreign acts of state may hinder the conduct of foreign affairs? "
368	Guilford Cty. ex rel. Holt v. Puckett, 191 N.C. App. 693, 696 (2008)	3	The doctrine of subrogation is one of equity and benevolence, and, like contribution and other similar equitable rights, was adopted from the civil law, and its basis is the doing of complete, essential, and perfect justice between all the parties without regard to form, and its object is the prevention of injustice.	"The doctrine [of subrogation] is one of equity and benevolence, and, like contribution and other similar equitable rights, was adopted from the civil law, and its basis is the doing of complete, essential and perfect justice between all the parties without regard to form, and its object is the prevention of injustice."	"Was the doctrine of subrogation adopted from the civil law, and its basis is the doing of complete, essential, and perfect justice between all the parties without regard to form, and its object is the prevention of injustice?"

369	W. States Petroleum Ass'n v. E.P.A., 87 F.3d 280, 284–85 (9th Cir. 1996)	4	While Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) may have power to adjust its policies and rulings in light of experience and to announce new principles in adjudicatory proceeding, it may not depart, sub silentio, from its usual rules of decision to reach different, unexplained result in single case; to the contrary, EPA must clearly set forth ground for its departure from prior norms so that Court of Appeals may understand basis of EPA's action and judge consistency of that action with EPA's mandate.	The EPA may have the power to adjust its policies and rulings in light of experience and to announce new principles in an adjudicatory proceeding. California Trucking Ass'n v. ICC, 900 F.2d 208, 212 (9th Cir.1990). However, the EPA “may not depart, sub silentio, from its usual rules of decision to reach a different, unexplained result in a single case.” Id. (citations omitted). To the contrary, the EPA must clearly set forth the ground for its departure from prior norms so that we may understand the basis of the EPA's action and judge the consistency of that action with the EPA's mandate.	“Should an agency, such as the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), explain the reasons for its departure from its usual set of rules to reach a different result in a case?”
370	Fort Worth Hotel Ltd. P'ship v. Enserch Corp., 977 S.W.2d 746, 757 (Tex. App. 1998)	16	The trial court's ruling on a motion in limine is not a ruling that excludes or admits evidence, but is merely a tentative ruling that prohibits a party from asking a certain question or offering certain evidence in front of the jury without first approaching the bench for a ruling.	The trial court's ruling on a motion in limine is not a ruling that excludes or admits evidence; it is merely a tentative ruling that prohibits a party from asking a certain question or offering certain evidence in front of the jury without first approaching the bench for a ruling.	Is a trial court's ruling on a motion in limine a tentative ruling that prohibits a party from asking a certain question or offering certain evidence in front of the jury without first approaching the bench for a ruling?
371	Spectrum Stores v. Citgo Petroleum Corp., 632 F.3d 938, 954 (5th Cir. 2011)	18	For act of state, as opposed to sovereign immunity, purposes, the relevant acts are not merely those of the named defendants, but any governmental acts whose validity would be called into question by adjudication of the suit; the burden lies on the proponent of the doctrine to establish the factual predicate for the doctrine's application.	“For act of state (as opposed to sovereign immunity) purposes, the relevant acts are not merely those of the named defendants, but any governmental acts whose validity would be called into question by adjudication of the suit.” Callejo, 764 F.2d at 1115, 1116 (emphasis added). The burden lies on the proponent of the doctrine to establish the factual predicate for the doctrine's application.	“For act of state purposes, are the relevant acts merely those of the named defendants, or are those any governmental acts whose validity would be called into question by adjudication of the suit?”

372	United States v. Sum of $70,990,605, 234 F. Supp. 3d 212, 238 (D.D.C. 2017)	17	The act of state doctrine, under which federal and state courts in the United States must presume the validity of an official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory, applies when the relief sought or the defense interposed would require a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory.	Under the act of state doctrine, federal and state courts in the United States must "presume the validity of an 'official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory.'" Republic of Austria v. Altmann, 541 U.S. 677, 713, 124 S.Ct. 2240, 159 L.Ed.2d 1 (2004) (quoting W.S. Kirkpatrick & Co., Inc. v. Env'tl. Tectonics Corp. 493 U.S. 400, 405, 110 S.Ct. 701, 107 L.Ed.2d 816 (1990)). The doctrine applies when "the relief sought or the defense interposed would [require] a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory."	Is an act of state doctrine applicable when the relief sought or the defense interposed would require an American court to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its boundaries?
376	Riverside Methodist Hosp. Ass'n of Ohio v. Guthrie, 3 Ohio App. 3d 308, 310 (1982)	4	Motion in limine may be used as equivalent of motion to suppress evidence, which is either not competent or improper because of some unusual circumstances, and as means of raising objection to area of inquiry to prevent prejudicial questions and statements until admissibility of questionable evidence can be determined during course of trial.	A motion in limine may be used in two different ways: (1) as the equivalent of a motion to suppress evidence, which is either not competent or improper because of some unusual circumstance; and (2) as a means of raising objection to an area of inquiry to prevent prejudicial questions and statements until the admissibility of the questionable evidence can be determined during the course of the trial.	Is a motion in limine a means of raising objection to an area of inquiry to prevent prejudicial questions and statements until the admissibility of the questionable evidence can be determined during the course of the trial?
377	Callejo v. Bancomer, S.A., 764 F.2d 1101, 1113 (5th Cir. 1985)	11	Under act of state doctrine, even if defendant is private party, not instrumentality of foreign state, and even if suit is not based specifically on sovereign act, United States will decline to decide merits of case if in doing so it would need to judge validity of public acts of sovereign state performed within its own territory.	In the act of state context, even if the defendant is a private party, not an instrumentality of a foreign state, and even if the suit is not based specifically on a sovereign act, we nevertheless decline to decide the merits of the case if in doing so we would need to judge the validity of the public acts of a sovereign state performed within its own territory.	Under the act of state doctrine will the United States decline to decide the merits of case if in doing so it would need to judge the validity of public acts of a sovereign state performed within its own territory?
378	Galu v. Swissair: Swiss Air Transp. Co., 873 F.2d 650, 653 (2d Cir. 1989)	1	The act of state doctrine precludes courts of this country from inquiring into the validity of public acts a recognized foreign power commits within its own territory, and the doctrine applies when the challenged conduct is the public act of those with authority to exercise sovereign powers of the foreign state.	The act of state doctrine precludes the courts of this country "from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign power committed within its own territory." The doctrine applies when the challenged conduct "was the public act of those with authority to exercise the sovereign powers" of the foreign state.	Does the act of state doctrine preclude US courts from inquiring into the validity of public acts a recognized foreign power commits within its own territory and apply when the challenged conduct is the public act of those with authority to exercise sovereign powers of the foreign state?

379	Ramirez de Arellano v. Weinberger, 745 F.2d 1500, 1534 (D.C. Cir. 1984)	38	When act of state doctrine is raised as defense in connection with motion to dismiss, court must be satisfied that there is no set of facts favorable to plaintiffs and suggested by complaint which would fail to establish occurrence of act of state; to extent crucial facts pertaining to defense are disputed, or not fully developed in a complete record, reviewing court must be certain that it does not lead to conclusions that are reviewable under unelaborated pleadings which could be refuted through ordinary process of discovery and fact-finding in district court. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 12(b)(6), 28 U.S.C.A.	When the defense is raised in connection with a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6), the court must be satisfied that there is no set of facts favorable to the plaintiffs and suggested by the complaint which could fail to establish the occurrence of an act of state. To the extent crucial facts pertaining to the defense are disputed, or not fully developed in a complete record, the reviewing court must be certain that it does not leap to conclusions arguable under the unelaborated pleadings but which could be refuted through the ordinary process of discovery and factfinding in the district court.	"When act of state doctrine is raised as defense in connection with motion to dismiss, must a court be satisfied that there is no set of facts favorable to plaintiffs and suggested by complaint which would fail to establish occurrence of act of state?"
380	Bandes v. Harlow & Jones, 570 F. Supp. 955, 960 (S.D.N.Y. 1983)	1	Act of state doctrine recognizes first, that to extent United States has interest in internal affairs of foreign sovereign, that interest is best represented by executive branch, and second, that, in any event, United States courts are without power to enforce their decrees as they apply to property held extraterritorially without consent of foreign sovereign.	So stated, the doctrine recognizes first, that to the extent that the United States has an interest in the internal affairs of a foreign sovereign, that interest is best represented by the executive branch, and second, that, in any event, the United States courts are without power to enforce their decrees as they apply to property held extra-territorially without the consent of the foreign sovereign.	Does the act of state doctrine recognize that interest is best represented by the executive branch and United States courts are without power to enforce their decrees?
381	Huckaby v. Cheatham, 272 Ga. App. 746, 753 (2005)	10	A party whose motion in limine was erroneously denied may decide to introduce the information in an attempt explain it to the jury without being found to have later opened the door to introduction of evidence on that topic.	A party whose motion in limine was erroneously denied may decide to introduce the information in an attempt to explain it to the jury without being found to have later "opened the door" to introduction of evidence on that topic.	Can a party whose motion in limine was erroneously denied decide to introduce the information in an attempt to explain it to the jury without being found to have later opened the door to introduction of evidence on that topic?
382	Fort Worth Hotel Ltd. P'ship v. Enserch Corp., 977 S.W.2d 746, 757 (Tex. App. 1998)	15	Motion in limine is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, before trial, certain evidentiary rulings that the court may be asked to make; its purpose is to prevent the other party from asking prejudicial questions and introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first asking the court's permission.	A motion in limine is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, before trial, certain evidentiary rulings that the court may be asked to make. The purpose of a motion in limine is to prevent the other party from asking prejudicial questions and introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first asking the court's permission.	"Is a motion in limine a procedural device that permits a party to identify, prior to trial, certain prejudicial evidentiary issues the court may be asked to rule upon?"

384	Bell v. Treasurer of Cambridge, 310 Mass. 484, 488 (Mass. 1941)	7	Events happening since the filing of a bill in equity and which have properly come to attention of court may be considered in drafting a final decree in order that relief granted may be adequate in view of situation then existing.	Events happening since the filing of a bill in equity and which have properly come to the attention of the court may be considered in drafting a final decree in order that the relief granted may be adequate in view of the situation then existing.	Do events happening since the filing of a bill in equity considered in drafting a final decree by a court in order that relief granted may be adequate in view of the situation then existing?
388	State v. Jason H., 215 W. Va. 439, 440 (2004)	2	Relation of partnership is fiduciary in character and imposes on members of the firm obligation of utmost good faith in their dealings with one another with respect to partnership affairs, of acting for common benefit of all partners in all transactions relating to firm business, and of refraining from taking any advantage of one another by the slightest misrepresentation, concealment, threat or adverse pressure of any kind.	"The relation of partnership is fiduciary in character, and imposes on the members of the firm the obligation of the utmost good faith in their dealings with one another with respect to partnership affairs, of acting for the common benefit of all the partners in all transactions relating to the firm business, and of refraining from taking any advantage of one another by the slightest misrepresentation, concealment, threat, or adverse pressure of any kind."	"Does a partner have the duty to ensure that he obtains no advantage in partnership affairs by misrepresentation, concealment, threat or adverse pressure?"
389	Diocese of W. N. C. of Protestant Episcopal Church v. Sale, 254 N.C. 218, 220 (1961)	1	Statute giving superior court judges, in their discretion, power to order parties to produce for inspection and copying, documents relating to merits of pending action is remedial and should be liberally construed. G.S. S 8-89.	s 8-89 which gives superior court judges, in their discretion, the power to order parties to produce for inspection and copying, books, records and documents relating to the merits of an action pending in the superior court. The section is remedial and should 401 be liberally construed.	"Is the statute giving superior court judges, in their discretion, power to order parties to produce for inspection and copying, documents relating to merits of pending action remedial and should be liberally construed?"
392	W. Grp. Nurseries, Inc. v. Ergas, 167 F.3d 1354, 1358 (11th Cir. 1999)	6	When a plaintiff takes a voluntary dismissal under Florida law, the effect is to remove completely from the court's consideration the power to enter an order, equivalent in all respects to a deprivation of jurisdiction; however, a court may retain jurisdiction to decide matters collateral to a case, such as attorney fees.	When a plaintiff takes a voluntary dismissal, "[t]he effect is to remove completely from the court's consideration the power to enter an order, equivalent in all respects to a deprivation of 'jurisdiction.'" Randle, 360 So.2d at 69. See also Miller v. Fortune Ins. Co., 484 So.2d 1221, 1223 (Fla.1986).However, a court may retain jurisdiction to decide matters collateral to a case, such as attorney's fees.	"When a plaintiff takes a voluntary dismissal, is the effect is to remove completely from the court's consideration the power to enter an order, equivalent in all respects to a deprivation of jurisdiction?"
393	Tucker v. McQuery, 107 Ohio Misc. 2d 31, 34 (1999)	7	In exercising this discretion whether to allow a party to amend answers deemed admitted, court must balance the importance of having the issues decided on their merits with the desirability of allowing the parties to rely on admissions in the preparation of trial. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 36(B).	"In exercising this discretion [i.e., allowing amendment to answers deemed admitted] the court must balance the importance of having the issues decided on their merits with the desirability of allowing the parties to rely on admissions in the preparation of trial."	"In exercising this discretion whether to allow a party to amend answers deemed admitted, must a court balance the importance of having the issues decided on their merits with the desirability of allowing the parties to rely on admissions in the preparation of trial?"

395	Hoehn v. Hoehn, 716 N.E.2d 479, 485-86 (Ind. Ct. App. 1999)	11	A trial court is not compelled to find good cause for a continuance based upon a bare allegation that the moving party is out-of-state, nor is it compelled to find good cause based upon an asserted inability to procure local counsel unless the moving party has acted with diligence in seeking counsel.	A trial court is not compelled to find good cause based upon a bare allegation that the moving party is out-of-state, see Multivest Properties v. Hughes, 671 N.E.2d 199, 201 (Ind.Ct.App.1996) nor is it compelled to find good cause based upon an asserted inability to procure local counsel unless the moving party has acted with diligence in seeking counsel.	Is a trial court compelled to find good cause based upon an asserted inability to procure local counsel unless the moving party has acted with diligence in seeking counsel?
396	Ramirez v. Noble Energy, 521 S.W.3d 851, 857 (Tex. App. 2017)	9	Using deemed admissions as the basis for summary judgment does not avoid the requirement of flagrant bad faith or callous disregard, the showing necessary to support a merits-preclusive sanction; it merely incorporates the requirement as an element of the movant's summary judgment burden. Tex. R. Civ. P. 198.3.	"Using deemed admissions as the basis for summary judgment therefore does not avoid the requirement of flagrant bad faith or callous disregard, the showing necessary to support a merits-preclusive sanction; it merely incorporates the requirement as an element of the movant's summary judgment burden." I	"Does using deemed admissions as the basis for summary judgment not avoid the requirement of flagrant bad faith or callous disregard, the showing necessary to support a merits-preclusive sanction?"
397	Ex parte Gudel AG, 183 So. 3d 147, 148 (Ala. 2015)	19	Although the standard for permitting jurisdictional discovery is quite low, the plaintiff requesting jurisdictional discovery must offer the court more than conjecture and surmise in support of the jurisdictional theory; a request for discovery that is predicated upon bare, attenuated, or unsupported assertions of personal jurisdiction is due to be denied.	As Bufkin notes, however, although the standard for permitting jurisdictional discovery is "quite low," the plaintiff requesting jurisdictional discovery "must offer the court "more than conjecture and surmise in support of [the] jurisdictional theory," " " and a request for discovery that is predicated " " upon 'bare,' 'attenuated,' or 'unsupported' assertions of personal jurisdiction" " " is due to be denied.	"Although the standard for permitting jurisdictional discovery is quite low, must the plaintiff requesting jurisdictional discovery offer the court more than conjecture and surmise in support of the jurisdictional theory?"
400	Estate of Despain v. Avante Grp., 900 So. 2d 637, 641 (Fla. App. 2005)	6	Although the punitive damages pleading statute is procedural in nature, it also provides a substantive right to parties not to be subjected to a punitive damages claim and attendant discovery of financial worth until the requisite showing under the statute has been made to the trial court. F.S.1999, S 768.72.	Accordingly, although section 768.72(1) is procedural in nature, it also provides a substantive right to parties not to be subjected to a punitive damage claim and attendant discovery of financial worth until the requisite showing under the statute has been made to the trial court.	Do parties have a substantive right not to be subjected to a punitive damages claim and attendant discovery of financial worth until the requisite showing under the punitive damages pleading statute has been made to the trial court?

401	Sleezer v. Lang, 170 Neb. 239, 254 (1960)	21	Ordinarily if plaintiff wishes to amend his petition by inserting new issue after he has rested, he should do so by asking leave to withdraw his rest for that purpose and, if granted, to introduce his evidence in support thereof and, if defendant makes it clear to court that he is not prepared to meet new issue, he should be granted continuance for that purpose on such terms as court may deem just, but such procedure is not necessary if evidence relied upon is already properly in record.	It is true, as appellant contends, that ordinarily if a plaintiff wishes to amend his petition by inserting a new issue he should do so, after he has rested, by asking leave to withdraw his rest for that purpose and, if granted, to introduce his evidence in support thereof. If such request is granted then the defendant, if he makes it clear to the court that he is not prepared to meet the new issue, should be granted a continuance for that purpose upon such terms as the court may deem just. However, such procedure is not necessary if the evidence relied on by plaintiff is already properly in the record.	"If a plaintiff wishes to amend his petition by inserting a new issue after he has rested, should he do so by asking leave to withdraw his rest for that purpose?"
405	Rickner v. Golfopoulos, 271 S.W.3d 32, 34 (Mo.App. W.D., 2008)	3	Generally, a nonsuit occurs when a court order terminates a cause of action without prejudice; however a "voluntary dismissal" under civil procedural rule constitutes a nonsuit because it allows a plaintiff to dismiss a civil action without prejudice and "without order of the court" any time prior to the introduction of evidence at trial. V.A.M.R. 67.02.	Generally, a nonsuit occurs when a court order terminates a cause of action without prejudice. However, under Rule 67.02, 2 a "voluntary dismissal" constitutes a nonsuit because it allows a plaintiff to dismiss a civil action without prejudice and "without order of the court " any time prior to the introduction of evidence at trial.	"Does a voluntary dismissal constitute a ""nonsuit"" because it allows a plaintiff to dismiss a civil action without prejudice and without order of the court any time prior to the introduction of evidence at trial?"
407	Tetreault v. Franchise Tax Bd., 255 Cal. App. 2d 277, 282, 63 Cal. Rptr. 326, 330 (Ct. App. 1967)	10	When dealing with proper domestic concerns and not trenching upon prerogatives of national government or violating guaranties of Federal Constitution, states have attributes of sovereign powers in devising their fiscal systems to ensure revenue and foster their local interests.	When dealing with their proper domestic concerns, and not trenching upon the prerogatives of the National Government or violating the guaranties of the Federal Constitution, the States have the attribute of sovereign powers in devising their fiscal systems to ensure revenue and foster their local interests.	Do states have attributes of sovereign powers in devising their fiscal systems to ensure revenue and foster their local interests when dealing with proper domestic concerns?
408	MAG-T v. Travis Cent. Appraisal Dist., 161 S.W.3d 617, 624 (Tex. App. 2005)	10	If an agency has exclusive jurisdiction to determine a matter, a litigant's failure to exhaust all administrative remedies before seeking judicial review of the administrative body's actions deprives the court of subject matter jurisdiction over claims within the body's exclusive jurisdiction, and the court must dismiss such claims without prejudice. V.T.C.A., Government Code S 2001.171.	If an agency has exclusive jurisdiction to determine a matter, a litigant's failure to exhaust all administrative remedies before seeking judicial review of the administrative body's actions deprives the court of subject matter jurisdiction over claims within the body's exclusive jurisdiction, and the court must dismiss such claims without prejudice.	Does a litigant's failure to exhaust all administrative remedies before seeking judicial review deprive the court of subject matter jurisdiction over claims within an agency's exclusive jurisdiction?

410	Williams v. Beemiller, Inc., 100 A.D.3d 143, 153, 952 N.Y.S.2d 333, 340 (2012), opinion amended on reargument, 103 A.D.3d 1191, 962 N.Y.S.2d 834 (2013)	7	In opposing a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, on the ground that discovery on the issue of personal jurisdiction is necessary, plaintiffs need not make a prima facie showing of jurisdiction, but instead must set forth a sufficient start, and show their position is not frivolous. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(8).	"However, in opposing a motion to dismiss pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(8) on the ground that discovery on the issue of personal jurisdiction is necessary, plaintiffs need not make a prima facie showing of jurisdiction, but instead must only set forth[] a sufficient start, and show [] their position not to be frivolous"	"In opposing a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, on the ground that discovery on the issue of personal jurisdiction is necessary, need plaintiffs not make a prima facie showing of jurisdiction?"
411	The Florida Bar v. Eubanks, 752 So. 2d 540, 543 (Fla., 1999)	1	Court may impose sanctions for party's failure to attend status conference, including striking pleadings and entering a default against the offending party; however, the sanction imposed must be commensurate with the offense, and this most severe sanction should be used sparingly and reserved to those instances where the conduct is flagrant, willful, or persistent. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.200(c).	Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.200(c) permits the court to impose sanctions for failing to attend a status conference. It is well established that sanctions under this rule can include striking pleadings and entering a default against the offending party; however, the sanction imposed must be commensurate with the offense, and this most severe sanction "should be used 'sparingly and reserved to those instances where the conduct is flagrant, willful or persistent.' "	"Can a court impose sanctions for party's failure to attend status conference, including striking pleadings and entering a default against the offending party?"
412	Flagg v. Judd, 198 So. 3d 665, 667 (Fla. App. 2015)	4	The dismissal of an action based on the violation of a discovery order will constitute an abuse of discretion where the trial court fails to make express written findings of fact supporting the conclusion that the failure to obey the court order demonstrated willful or deliberate disregard. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.380(b)(2)(C).	The dismissal of an action based on the violation of a discovery order will constitute an abuse of discretion where the trial court fails to make express written findings of fact supporting the conclusion that the failure to obey the court order demonstrated willful or deliberate disregard.	Is it an abuse of the trial court's discretion to dismiss an action for failure to obey a court order without making express written findings of fact supporting the conclusion?
415	Berz v. City of Evanston, 2013 IL App (1st) 123763	3	When reviewing motion for involuntary dismissal based upon certain defects or defenses, Appellate Court must consider whether a genuine issue of material fact exists which precludes dismissal and whether affirmative matter negates plaintiff's cause of action completely or refutes critical conclusions of law or conclusions of material unsupported fact. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-619.	When reviewing a section 2-619 motion to dismiss, we must consider whether a genuine issue of material fact exists which precludes dismissal and whether the affirmative 426 *737 matter negates the plaintiff's cause of action completely or refutes critical conclusions of law or conclusions of material unsupported fact.	Should the court consider whether affirmative matter negates plaintiff's cause of action completely or refutes critical conclusions of law or material unsupported fact?

416	People, Prop. Owners & Citizens of Pleasant Valley Sch. Dist. v. Burney, 151 Pa. Cmwlth. 124, 127 (1992)	3	Court may properly enter judgment of non pros when party to proceedings has shown want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude, and there has been no compelling reason for delay which has caused some prejudice to adverse party such as death of or unexplained absence of material witnesses.	A court may properly enter a judgment of non pros when a party to the proceedings has shown a want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude, and there has been no compelling reason for the delay which has caused some prejudice to the adverse party such as death of or unexplained absence of material witnesses.	Can court properly enter a judgment of non pros when a party to the proceeding has shown a want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude?
417	Everett v. Eastchester Police Dep't, 127 A.D.3d 1131, 1132, 8 N.Y.S.3d 360, 362 (2015)	1	Where evidentiary material is submitted and considered on a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim, and the motion is not converted into one for summary judgment, the question becomes whether the plaintiff has a cause of action, not whether the plaintiff has stated one and, unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the plaintiff to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it, dismissal should not eventuate. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	"Where evidentiary material is submitted and considered on a motion to dismiss a complaint pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7), and the motion is not converted into one for summary judgment, the question becomes whether the plaintiff has a cause of action, not whether the plaintiff has stated one and, unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the plaintiff to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it, dismissal should not eventuate"	"On a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a cause of action, does the question become whether the plaintiff has a cause of action?"
419	Sethness v. Sethness, 62 N.C. App. 676, 679, 303 S.E.2d 424, 427 (1983)	1	In ruling on motion to dismiss complaint for failure to state claim upon which relief can be granted, test to be applied by court is whether complaint alleges set of facts which would entitle plaintiff to some relief; allegations contained in complaint are liberally construed and treated as true, but conclusions of law or unwarranted deductions of fact are not admitted. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(6), G.S. S 1A-1.	In ruling on a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, the test to be applied by the court is whether the complaint alleges a set of facts which would entitle the plaintiff to some relief. Carolina Builders Corp. v. AAA Drywall, Inc., 43 N.C.App. 444, 259 S.E.2d 364 (1979); Yates v. City of Raleigh, 46 N.C.App. 221, 264 S.E.2d 798 (1980). For purposes of testing the sufficiency of a complaint to withstand a motion to dismiss under 12(b)(6), the allegations contained therein are liberally construed and treated as true. Shoffner Industries, Inc. v. W.B. Lloyd Construction Co., 42 N.C.App. 259, 257 S.E.2d 50, disc. rev. denied, 298 N.C. 296, 259 S.E.2d 301 (1979). However, " 'conclusions of law or unwarranted deductions of fact are not admitted.' "	"In ruling on a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state claim upon which relief can be granted, should courts construe allegations in a plaintiff's favor and accept allegations of fact as true?"

420	Hawaii Auto. Retail Gasoline Dealers Ass'n v. Brodie, 2 Haw. App. 99, 99 (1981)	2	Motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute is matter addressed to court's discretion and is properly granted where there is clear record of delay or contumacious conduct and where lesser sanctions would not serve best interests of justice. Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 41(b).	Hawaii Rules of Civil Procedure (HRCP) Rule 41(b), motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute, is a matter addressed to the court's discretion and is properly granted when there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct and where lesser sanctions would not serve the best interests of justice.	Is motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute properly granted where there is clear record of delay or contumacious conduct and where lesser sanctions would not serve best interests of justice?
421	Timmins v. Lindsey, 310 S.W.3d 834, 838 (Tenn.Ct.App., 2009)	2	In considering whether to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, the court must accept as true all well-pleaded facts and all reasonable inferences drawn therefrom alleged by the party opposing the motion.	In considering whether to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, the court must accept as true "all well-pleaded facts and all reasonable inferences drawn therefrom" alleged by the party opposing the motion.	"For purposes of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, does the court accept as true all facts well-pleaded in the complaint and the reasonable inferences therefrom?"
422	Tercero v. Roman Catholic Diocese of Norwich, Conn., 127 N.M. 294, 297 (1999)	2	When ruling upon a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, the trial court has discretion to permit discovery to help decide the issue or resolve the issue either upon written affidavits or through a pretrial evidentiary hearing. NMRA, Rule 1-012, subd. B(2).	When ruling upon a motion to dismiss under Rule 1-012(B)(2), the trial court has discretion to permit discovery to help decide the issue or resolve the issue either upon written affidavits or through a pretrial evidentiary hearing.	"When ruling upon a motion to dismiss, does a trial court have discretion to permit discovery to help decide an issue or resolve an issue either upon written affidavits or through a pretrial evidentiary hearing?"
423	Turner v. Turner, 216 A.D.2d 910, 910, 629 N.Y.S.2d 138, 139 (1995)	1	If plaintiff fails to take proceedings for entry of judgment within one year after default, complaint will be dismissed as abandoned unless plaintiff can establish that failure to seek default judgment was excusable and cause of action is meritorious. McKinney's CPLR 3215(c).	If a plaintiff "fails to take proceedings for the entry of judgment within one year after [a] default", the complaint will be dismissed as abandoned unless plaintiff can establish that (1) the failure to seek a default judgment within one year after the default is excusable and (2) the cause of action is meritorious	"If a plaintiff fails to take proceedings for entry of judgment within one year after default, will the complaint be dismissed as abandoned unless a plaintiff can establish that failure to seek default judgment was excusable?"

424	Cottman Transmission Sys. v. Kershner, 536 F. Supp. 2d 543, 545 (E.D. Pa. 2008)	19	Prejudice is the touchstone for determining whether the right to arbitrate has been waived by litigation; to make this determination, courts consider factors, including: (1) timeliness or lack thereof of a motion to arbitrate, (2) the degree to which the party seeking to compel arbitration has contested the merits of its opponent's claims, (3) whether that party has informed its adversary of the intention to seek arbitration even if it has not yet filed a motion to stay the district court proceedings, (4) the extent of its non-merits motion practice, (5) its assent to the trial court's pretrial orders, and (6) the extent to which both parties have engaged in discovery.	[P]rejudice is the touchstone for determining whether the right to arbitrate has been waived by litigation." Id. at 222. To make this determination, courts consider a list of factors, including: 1) "the timeliness or lack thereof of a motion to arbitrate"; 2) "the degree to which the party seeking to compel arbitration has contested the merits of its opponent's claims"; 3) "whether that party has informed its adversary of the intention to seek arbitration even if it has not yet filed a motion to stay the district court proceedings"; 4) "the extent of its non-merits motion practice"; 5) "its assent to the [trial] court's pretrial orders"; and 6) "the extent to which both parties have engaged in discovery.	What are the factors relevant to the prejudice inquiry in arbitration?
425	United States v. El-Mezain, 664 F.3d 467, 559 (C.A.5 (Tex.), 2011)	89	Although the Double Jeopardy Clause prohibits a second prosecution following an acquittal, a retrial is not automatically barred when a criminal proceeding is terminated without finally resolving the merits of the charges against the accused. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Although the Double Jeopardy Clause prohibits a second prosecution following an acquittal, a " 'retrial is not automatically barred when a criminal proceeding is terminated without finally resolving the merits of the charges against the accused.	"Although the Double Jeopardy Clause prohibits a second prosecution following an acquittal, is a retrial not automatically barred when a criminal proceeding is terminated without finally resolving the merits of the charges against the accused?"
426	Com. v. Cobb, 28 A.3d 930, 933-34 (Pa. 2011)	3	The determination by a trial court to declare a mistrial after jeopardy has attached is not one to be lightly undertaken, since the defendant has a substantial interest in having his fate determined by the jury first impaneled; additionally, failure to consider if there are less drastic alternatives to a mistrial creates doubt about the propriety of the exercise of the trial judge's discretion and is grounds for barring retrial because it indicates that the court failed to properly consider the defendant's significant interest in whether or not to take the case from the jury. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; Const. Art. 1, S 10.	The determination by a trial court to declare a mistrial after jeopardy has attached is not one to be lightly undertaken, since the defendant has a substantial interest in having his fate determined by the jury first impaneled. Additionally, failure to consider if there are less drastic alternatives to a mistrial creates doubt about the propriety of the exercise of the trial judge's discretion and is grounds for barring retrial because it indicates that the court failed *934 to properly consider the defendant's significant interest in whether or not to take the case from the jury.	Does failure to consider if there are less drastic alternatives to a mistrial create doubt about the propriety of the exercise of the trial judge's discretion?

427	State v. Vanlue, 216 S.W.3d 729, 733 (Mo. Ct. App. 2007)	1	Appellate courts are wary of claims that a trial court erred in failing to sua sponte make objections and rulings in the closing argument of a criminal case; to convict a trial court of an error not put forth by the defendant allows an accused to stand mute when incidents unfavorable to him or her occur during trial, gamble on the verdict, and then seek favorable results on appeal.	" 'Appellate courts are wary of claims that a trial court erred in failing to ... sua sponte [make objections and rulings] in [closing argument of] a criminal case.' " State v. Taylor, 166 S.W.3d 599, 608 (Mo.App.2005) (quoting State v. Derrick, 965 S.W.2d 418, 419 n. 1 (Mo.App.1998)) (emphasis added). " 'To convict a trial court of an error, not put forth by the defendant ... allows an accused to stand mute when incidents unfavorable to him or her occur during trial, gamble on the verdict, and then seek favorable results on appeal.' " Taylor, 166 S.W.3d at 608 (quoting State v. Tilley, 104 S.W.3d 814, 819 (Mo.App.2003)). Additionally, "review for plain error of a trial court's failure to sua sponte [take action in closing argument] is extremely limited." State v. Collins, 150 S.W.3d 340, 349 (Mo.App.2004).	Are appellate courts especially wary of a claim that the trial court failed to declare a mistrial sua sponte?
430	United States v. Biermann, 678 F. Supp. 1437, 1444 (N.D.Cal., 1988)	3	As general matter, international law prohibits any country from asserting jurisdiction over foreign vessels on high seas, but general rule does not apply if sufficient nexus indicates that acts aboard foreign vessel are likely to have criminal consequences within United States.	As a general matter, international law prohibits any country from asserting jurisdiction over foreign vessels on the high seas. See United States v. Marino-Garcia, 679 F.2d 1373, 1380 (11th Cir.1982). Defendants concede that this general rule does not apply if a "sufficient nexus" indicates that acts aboard the foreign vessel are likely to have criminal consequences within the United States.	Does international law apply if a sufficient nexus indicates that acts aboard foreign vessel are likely to have criminal consequences within United States?
431	Sporio v. W.C.A.B. (Songer Const.), 553 Pa. 44, 53 (1998)	7	Workers' Compensation Act substitutes a quick and inexpensive scheme to provide compensation for work-related injuries in place of the common law process where the employee must sue the appropriate parties for damages, and employers pay benefits at a set rate and are immune from common-law liability. 77 P.S. § 1 et seq.	The Act substitutes a quick and inexpensive scheme to provide compensation for work-related injuries in place of the common law process where the employee must sue the appropriate parties for damages. See Hankee v. Wilkes-Barre/ Scranton Int'l Airport, 532 Pa. 494, 500, 616 A.2d 614, 616 (1992)(discussing general scheme of Act). Employers pay benefits at a set rate and they are immune from common-law liability.	Does the Workers' Compensation Act substitute a quick and inexpensive scheme to provide compensation for work-related injuries in place of the common law process where the employee must sue the appropriate parties for damages?

433	Anderson Contracting v. DSM Copolymers, 776 N.W.2d 846, 854-55 (Iowa 2009)	9	While a court should consider all of the relevant evidence admitted at the class certification stage and resolve any factual disputes necessary to determine if the class certification requirements are met, the court should not assess any aspect of the merits unrelated to a class certification requirement and has the discretion to limit discovery and the extent of a hearing to assure that a class certification motion does not become a pretext for a partial trial of the merits.	While a court should consider all of the relevant evidence admitted at the class certification stage and resolve any factual disputes necessary to determine if the class certification requirements are met, the court "should not assess any aspect of the merits unrelated to a [class certification] requirement" and has the discretion to limit discovery and the extent of a hearing "to assure that a class certification motion does not become a pretext for a partial trial of the merits."	Should the court not assess any aspect of the merits unrelated to a class certification requirement and has the discretion to limit discovery?
435	Boss v. Washington State Dep't of Transp., 113 Wash. App. 543, 548 (2002)	2	The general rule in both administrative and judicial State Environmental Policy Act (SEPA) appeals is that they must combine review of SEPA issues with the related government action, so as to preclude judicial review of SEPA compliance before an agency has taken final action on a proposal, foreclose multiple lawsuits challenging a single agency action, and deny the existence of "orphan" SEPA claims unrelated to any government action. West's RCWA 43.21C.010 et seq.	The general rule in both administrative and judicial SEPA appeals is that they must combine review of SEPA issues with the related government action. As Professor Settle makes clear, the purposes of the linkage requirement are to: preclude judicial review of SEPA compliance before an agency has taken final action on a proposal, foreclose multiple lawsuits challenging a single agency action and deny the existence of "orphan" SEPA claims unrelated to any government action.	Should State Environmental Protection Act (SEPA) appeals combine review of SEPA issues with the related governmental action?
436	Calvert Fire Ins. Co. v. James, 236 S.C. 431, 435 (1960)	2	Legal "subrogation" is not dependent upon contract; the doctrine is an equitable one, founded not upon any fixed law, but upon principles of natural justice; its purpose is to require the ultimate discharge of a debt by the person who in equity and good conscience ought to pay it; and it is to be applied according to the dictates of equity and good conscience in the light of the actions and relationship of the parties.	Legal subrogation is not dependent upon contract. The doctrine is an equitable one, founded not upon any fixed law, but upon principles of natural justice; its purpose is to require the ultimate discharge of a debt by the person who in equity and good conscience ought to pay it; and it is to be applied according to the dictates of equity and good conscience in the light of the actions and relationship of the parties.	Is the doctrine of equitable subrogation founded upon principles of natural justice?

439	Johnson v. W. Suburban Bank, 225 F.3d 366, 371 (3d Cir. 2000)	6	Though TILA clearly contemplates class actions, there are no provisions within the law that create a right to bring them, or evince an intent by Congress that claims initiated as class actions be exempt from binding arbitration clauses; rather, the "right" to proceed to a class action, insofar as TILA is concerned, is a procedural one that arises from Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Truth in Lending Act, SS 102 et seq., 130, as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. SS 1601 et seq., 1640; Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 23, 28 U.S.C.A.	Though the statute clearly contemplates class actions, there are no provisions within the law that create a right to bring them, or evince an intent by Congress that claims initiated as class actions be exempt from binding arbitration clauses. The "right" to proceed to a class action, insofar as the TILA is concerned, is a procedural one that arises from the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.	Can Truth in Lending Act (TILA) claims initiated as class actions be exempt from binding arbitration?
441	Heflin v. Merrill, 154 So. 3d 887, 890 (Miss. App. 2013)	2	When granting a motion in limine, the circuit court must first find the following two factors present: (1) the material or evidence in question will be inadmissible at a trial under the rules of evidence; and (2) the mere offer, reference, or statements made during trial concerning the material will tend to prejudice the jury. (Per James, J., with one judge concurring and three judges concurring in part and in the result.)	When granting a motion in limine, the circuit court must first find the following two factors present: "(1) the material or evidence in question will be inadmissible at a trial under the rules of evidence; and (2) the mere offer, reference, or statements made during trial concerning the material will tend to prejudice the jury."	Should a motion in limine be granted only when material or evidence will be inadmissible and statements made during trial concerning material will tend to prejudice a jury?
442	In re Flamingo 55, 378 B.R. 893, 911 (D. Nev. 2007)	18	Under California's decisional law of equitable subrogation, one who claims to be equitably subrogated to the rights of a secured creditor must satisfy certain prerequisites: (1) payment must have been made by the subrogee to protect his own interest, (2) subrogee must not have acted as a volunteer, (3) the debt paid must be one for which the subrogee was not primarily liable, (4) the entire debt must have been paid, and (5) subrogation must not work any injustice to the rights of others.	Under California's decisional law of equitable subrogation, One who claims to be equitably subrogated to the rights of a secured creditor must satisfy certain prerequisites. These are: "(1) Payment must have been made by the subrogee to protect his own interest. (2) The subrogee must not have acted as a volunteer. (3) The debt paid must be one for which the subrogee was not primarily liable. (4) The entire debt must have been paid. (5) Subrogation must not work any injustice to the rights of others."	What certain prerequisites must be satisfied by one who claims to be equitably subrogated to the rights of a secured creditor?
444	Helmerich & Payne Int'l Drilling Co. v. Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, 971 F. Supp. 2d 49, 61 (D.D.C. 2013)	7	The act of state doctrine is applicable when the relief sought or the defense interposed would require a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its boundaries.	The act of state doctrine "applies when the relief sought or the defense interposed would require a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its boundaries."	Is the act of state doctrine applicable when the relief sought or the defense interposed would require a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its boundaries?

445	United States v. Sum of $70,990,605, 234 F. Supp. 3d 212, 238 (D.D.C. 2017)	17	The act of state doctrine, under which federal and state courts in the United States must presume the validity of an official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory, applies when the relief sought or the defense interposed would require a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory.	Under the act of state doctrine, federal and state courts in the United States must "presume the validity of an 'official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory.'" Republic of Austria v. Altmann, 541 U.S. 677, 713, 124 S.Ct. 2240, 159 L.Ed.2d 1 (2004) (quoting W.S. Kirkpatrick & Co., Inc. v. Env'tl. Tectonics Corp. 493 U.S. 400, 405, 110 S.Ct. 701, 107 L.Ed.2d 816 (1990)). The doctrine applies when "the relief sought or the defense interposed would [require] a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory."	Does the act of state doctrine apply when the relief sought or the defense interposed would require a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory?
446	Cassirer v. Kingdom of Spain, 580 F.3d 1048, 1059-60 (9th Cir. 2009)	19	Doctrine of exhaustion of domestic remedies is a well-established rule of customary international law, under which a state is not required to consider a claim made by a person against a foreign state, and alleging a violation of international law, until that person has exhausted domestic remedies, unless such remedies are clearly sham or inadequate, or their application is unreasonably prolonged.	The doctrine of exhaustion of domestic remedies is a "well-established rule of customary international law." See Sarei, 550 F.3d at 829 (quoting Interhandel Case (Switz. v. U.S.), 1959 I.C.J. 6, 26 (Mar. 29)). This rule generally provides that a state is not required to consider a claim, made by a person against a foreign state, and alleging a violation of international law "until that person has exhausted domestic remedies, unless such remedies are clearly sham or inadequate, or their application is unreasonably prolonged."	"Under the doctrine of exhaustion of domestic remedies, is a state required to consider a claim made by a person against a foreign state that alleges a violation of international law?"
447	First Nat. City Bank v. Banco Nacional de Cuba, 406 U.S. 759, 763 (1972)	3	The act of state doctrine represents an exception to the general rule that a court of the United States, where appropriate jurisdictional standards are met, will decide cases before it by choosing the rules appropriate for decision from among the various sources of law including international law. (Per Mr. Justice Rehnquist with The Chief Justice and another Justice concurring and two Justices concurring in result.)	The act of state doctrine represents an exception to the general rule that a court of the United States, where appropriate jurisdictional standards are met, will decide cases before it by choosing the rules appropriate for decision from among various sources of law including international law.	"Where the act of state doctrine is inapplicable, will a court of United States will decide cases for it by choosing the rules appropriate for decision from among various sources of law including international law?"

449	Huber v. Rohrig, 280 Neb. 868, 869 (2010)	30	Purpose of a motion in limine is to prevent the proponent of potentially prejudicial matter from displaying it to the jury, making statements about it before the jury, or presenting the matter to the jury in any manner until the trial court has ruled upon its admissibility in the context of the trial itself.	A motion in limine's purpose is to prevent the proponent of potentially prejudicial matter from displaying it to the jury, making statements about it before the jury, or presenting the matter to the jury in any manner until the trial court has ruled upon its admissibility in the context of the trial itself.	"Is the purpose of a motion in limine to prevent the proponent of potentially prejudicial matter from displaying it to the jury, making statements about it before the jury, or presenting the matter to the jury in any manner until the trial court has ruled upon its admissibility in the context of the trial itself?"
452	Vaughan v. Greater Huntington Park & Recreation Dist., 223 W. Va. 583, 588, 678 S.E.2d 316, 321 (2009)	4	A motion in limine is a procedure which enables the trial court to become acquainted with a potentially troublesome evidentiary issue in advance of the offer of the evidence in order to prevent the jury from being exposed to inadmissible evidence.	"A motion in limine is a procedure which enables the trial court to become acquainted with a potentially troublesome evidentiary issue in advance of the offer of the evidence ... in order to prevent the jury from being exposed to inadmissible evidence."	Is a motion in limine a procedure which enables the trial court to become acquainted with a potentially troublesome evidentiary issue in advance of the offer of the evidence in order to prevent the jury from being exposed to inadmissible evidence?
453	Kaplan v. Cent. Bank of Islamic Republic of Iran, 961 F. Supp. 2d 185, 196–97 (D.D.C. 2013)	10	Act of state issues only arise when a court must decide, that is, when the outcome of the case turns upon, the effect of official action by a foreign sovereign; when it applies, the doctrine serves as a rule of decision for the courts of the United States, which requires courts to deem valid the acts of foreign sovereigns taken within their own jurisdictions.	"Act of state issues only arise when a court must decide- that is, when the outcome of the case turns upon-the effect of official action by a foreign sovereign." Id. at 406, 110 S.Ct. 701. "When it applies, the doctrine serves as a 'rule of decision for the courts of this country,' which requires courts to deem valid the acts of foreign sovereigns taken within their own jurisdictions."	Does an act of state issues only arise when a court must decide the outcome of the case turns upon-the effect of official action by a foreign sovereign?
454	Riedel v. Bancam, S.A., 792 F.2d 587, 592 (C.A.6 (Ohio), 1986)	4	Under "act of state doctrine," courts exercise jurisdiction but prudentially decline to decide merits of case if in doing so court would need to judge validity of public acts of sovereign state performed within its own territory.	Under the "act of state doctrine," courts exercise jurisdiction but prudentially "decline to decide the merits of the case if in doing so we would need to judge the validity of the public acts of a sovereign state performed within its own territory."	"Under the act of state doctrine, do courts exercise jurisdiction but prudentially decline to decide the merits of a case if in doing so the court would need to judge validity of public acts of a sovereign state performed within its own territory?"

456	In re Grand Jury Proc. Bank of Nova Scotia, 740 F.2d 817, 831 (11th Cir. 1984)	10	Act of state doctrine is not required by considerations of sovereignty, international law or the Constitution, but instead derives from judiciary's concern for its possible interference with conduct of foreign affairs by political branches of government.	The doctrine is not required by considerations of sovereignty, international law or the Constitution. Banco Nacional de Cuba v. Sabbatino, 376 U.S. 398, 421–27, 84 S.Ct. 923, 936–40, 11 L.Ed.2d 804 (1964); Timberlane Lumber Co. v. Bank of America, 549 F.2d 597, 605 (9th Cir.1976). Instead the doctrine "derives from the judiciary's concern for its possible interference with the conduct of foreign affairs by the political branches of the government."	"Is the act of state doctrine not required by considerations of sovereignty, international law or the Constitution, but instead derives from judiciary's concern for its possible interference with conduct of foreign affairs by political branches of government?"
457	Bodner v. Paribas, 202 F.R.D. 370, 375 (E.D.N.Y. 2000)	7	The French blocking statute does not subject defendants to a realistic risk of prosecution, and cannot be construed as a law intended to universally govern the conduct of litigation within the jurisdiction of a United States court.	As held by numerous courts, the French Blocking Statute does not subject defendants to a realistic risk of prosecution, and cannot be construed as a law intended to universally govern the conduct of litigation within the jurisdiction of a United States court.	"Does the French blocking statute subject defendants to a realistic risk of prosecution, and cannot be construed as a law intended to universally govern the conduct of litigation within the jurisdiction of a United States court?"
460	Fort Worth Hotel Ltd. P'ship v. Enserch Corp., 977 S.W.2d 746, 757 (Tex. App. 1998)	15	Motion in limine is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, before trial, certain evidentiary rulings that the court may be asked to make; its purpose is to prevent the other party from asking prejudicial questions and introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first asking the court's permission.	A motion in limine is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, before trial, certain evidentiary rulings that the court may be asked to make. The purpose of a motion in limine is to prevent the other party from asking prejudicial questions and introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first asking the court's permission.	"Is a motion in limine a procedural device that permits a party to identify, pre-trial, certain evidentiary issues the court may be asked to rule upon, in order to avoid prejudicing the jury?"
461	Duquesne Light Co. v. Pennsylvania Pub. Util. Comm'n, 164 Pa. Super. 166, 173 (Pa. Sup. 1949)	2	A public utility company, in exercise of its managerial functions, may determine, in first instance, type and extent of its service to public within limits of adequacy and reasonableness, but such service must conform with Public Utility Commission's regulations and orders, and company is bound, on commission's order, to make such changes in service or facilities as are deemed necessary in public interest. 66 P.S. 1171.	A utility company in the exercise of its managerial functions may, in the first instance, determine the type and extent of its service to the public, within the limits of adequacy and reasonableness. Such service however must conform with the regulations and subsequent orders of the Commission, and the utility, on order, is bound to make such changes in its service or facilities as shall be deemed necessary in the public interest.	Can a public utility determine the extent of service to the public within the limits of reasonableness in the exercise of its managerial functions?

462	Butte Min. PLC v. Smith, 876 F. Supp. 1153, 1168 (Mont. 1995)	20	When predicate acts upon which Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) claim is bottomed consist merely of use of United States communications systems in furtherance of domestic activities which are preparatory to foreign securities fraud, and court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over underlying securities fraud claims, court also lacks subject matter jurisdiction over RICO claims which are primarily predicated upon securities fraud. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1961 et seq.	In summary, the court holds that when the predicate acts upon which a RICO claim is bottomed, consist merely of the use of United States communications systems in furtherance of domestic activities which are preparatory to a foreign securities fraud, and the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the underlying securities fraud claims, the court also lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the RICO claims which are primarily predicated upon the securities fraud.	When does a court lack subject matter jurisdiction over RICO claims which are primarily predicated upon securities fraud?
463	Strawberry Elec. Serv. Dist. v. Spanish Fork City, 918 P.2d 870, 877-878 (Utah, 1996)	13	For purposes of constitutional takings analysis, to create protectable property interest, contract must establish rights more substantial than unilateral expectation of continued privileges; absent exclusive franchise or equivalent thereof, no vested, legally enforceable interest arises and, consequently, there is no property that can provide basis for compensation in inverse condemnation proceeding. Const. Art. 1, § 22.	However, to create a protectable property interest, a contract must establish rights more substantial than a unilateral expectation of continued privileges. "Absent an exclusive franchise or the equivalent thereof, no vested, legally enforceable interest arises, and consequently, there is no property that can provide the basis for compensation in an inverse condemnation proceeding."	When an exclusive franchise or the equivalent is absent can there be property that can provide the basis for compensation in an inverse condemnation proceeding?
466	Black v. Don Schmid Motor, 232 Kan. 458, 468 (1983)	14	Purpose of pretrial order is to define and clarify the issues and, when entered pursuant to statute, the order has full force and effect of other orders of the court and controls the subsequent course of the trial unless modified to prevent manifest injustice. Rules Civ.Proc., K.S.A. 60-216.	This court has often held that the purpose of the pretrial order is to define and clarify the issues, and when entered pursuant to K.S.A. 60-216, has the full force and effect of other orders of the court and controls the subsequent course of trial unless modified to prevent manifest injustice.	"When pretrial order is entered by trial court pursuant to rule, does it have the full force and effect of other orders of court and controls subsequent course of trial unless modified to prevent manifest injustice?"
469	In re Liebl's Estate, 201 Misc. 1102, 1106 (N.Y. Sur. Ct. 1951)	8	Necessary intercourse between subjects of independent governments gives rise to sort of compact that their municipal institutions shall receive a degree of reciprocal efficacy and sanction within their respective dominions.	As was said in King v. Sarria, 69 N.Y. 24, 31: 'It is the necessary intercourse of the subjects of independent governments, which gives rise to a sort of compact, that their municipal institutions shall receive a degree of reciprocal efficacy and sanction within their respective dominions.	" it the necessary intercourse of the subjects of independent governments, which gives rise to a sort of compact, that their municipal institutions shall receive a degree of reciprocal efficacy and sanction within their respective dominions?"

470	Pirito v. Penn Eng'g World Holdings, 833 F. Supp. 2d 455, 475 (E.D.Pa., 2011)	16	"Comity," in the legal sense, is neither a matter of absolute obligation, on the one hand, nor of mere courtesy and good will, upon the other; rather, comity is the recognition which one nation allows within its territory to the legislative, executive, or judicial acts of another nation, having due regard both to international duty and convenience, and to the rights of its own citizens, or of other persons who are under the protection of its laws.	comity: 'Comity,' in the legal sense, is neither a matter of absolute obligation, on the one hand, nor of mere courtesy and good will, upon the other. But it is the recognition which one nation allows within its territory to the legislative, executive, or judicial acts of another nation, having due regard both to international duty and convenience, and to the rights of its own citizens, or of other persons who are under the protection of its laws.	"If comity is not an absolute obligation or a matter of mere courtesy and good will, what is it?"
471	Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 297 (1971)	14	Attorneys, under guise of having business requiring their presence elsewhere, ought not to be allowed to delay, defeat or prevent a litigant from having his case tried or being heard on a motion at some reasonably suitable and convenient time.	Attorneys, under the guise of having business requiring their presence elsewhere, ought not to be allowed to delay, defeat or prevent a litigant from having his case tried or being heard on a motion at some reasonably suitable and convenient time.	"Ought attorneys, under the guise of having business requiring their presence elsewhere, be allowed to delay, defeat or prevent a litigant from having his case tried or being heard on a motion at some reasonably suitable and convenient time?"
472	Connor v. Scroggs, 821 So. 2d 542, 553 (La. 2002)	28	Generally, a litigant whose lawyer withdraws at or near trial may be entitled to a continuance to employ another attorney; however, because defendant's desire to have case against him tried is also a factor, plaintiff is not entitled to indefinite continuances simply because he is unable to secure counsel. LSA-C.C.P. art. 1601.	Generally, a litigant whose lawyer withdraws at or near trial may be entitled to a continuance to employ another attorney. Sands v. State Through La. State Med. [Center] School of Dentistry, 458 So.2d 960 (La.App. 4th Cir.1984), writ denied, 460 So.2d 1044 ([La.]1984). However, because the defendant's desire to have the case against him tried is also a factor, the plaintiff is not entitled to indefinite continuances simply because he is unable to secure counsel.	"Because defendant's desire to have case against him tried is also a factor, is a plaintiff entitled to indefinite continuances simply because he is unable to secure counsel?"
473	Thomsen v. Farmers Mut. United Ins. Co., Inc., 485 N.W.2d 179, 179, 240 Neb. 886, 886 (Neb.,1992)	1	Request for admission made pursuant to rules of discovery is deemed to have been admitted unless within 30 days, or within such shorter or longer time as designated by court, written answer or objection is filed by party to whom request is directed. Sup.Ct.Rules, Discovery Rule 36(a).	A request for admission under Neb.Ct.R. of Discovery 36 (rev. 1989) is admitted unless within 30 days, or within such shorter or longer time as designated by the court, a written answer or objection is filed by the party to whom the request is directed.	"Is a request for admission made pursuant to rules of discovery deemed to have been admitted unless within 30 days, or within such shorter or longer time as designated by the court, a written answer or objection is filed by a party to whom a request is directed?"

474	Ikomoni v. Exec. Asset Mgmt., 309 Ga. App. 81, 83-84 (2011)	2	Where a party has failed to answer a request for admissions within the requisite time and the admissions have removed from the jury at least one essential element of the party's claims, the other party is entitled to a grant of its motion for summary judgment. West's Ga.Code Ann. S 9-11-36(a)(2).	"Where a party failed to answer a request for admissions within the requisite time and the admissions removed [from the jury at least one essential element of the party's claims], the other party [is] entitled to a grant of its motion for summary judgment."	"Where a party has failed to answer a request for admissions within the requisite time and the admissions have removed from the jury at least one essential element of the party's claims, is the other party entitled to a grant of its motion for summary judgment?"
478	Morgan v. E. Baton Rouge Par. Sch. Bd., 2016-1065 (La. App. 1 Cir. 2/17/17), 215 So. 3d 442, 444 (2017)	1	Trial court renders a pretrial order after holding a pretrial conference, and the order controls the subsequent course of the action, unless modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice; theory inherent in pretrial procedure is to avoid surprise and to allow orderly disposition of cases. La. Code Civ. Proc. Ann. art. 1551(B).	Pursuant to La. Code Civ. P. art. 1551(B), a trial court renders a pretrial order after holding a pretrial conference, and the order "controls the subsequent course of 4 the action, unless modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice." The theory inherent in pretrial procedure is to avoid surprise and to allow orderly disposition of cases.	Does a pretrial order control the subsequent course of the action unless modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice?
480	Behr v. Hook, 173 Vt. 122, 127 (2001)	6	Standardized waiver-of-subrogation clause in a construction contract between private parties in relatively equal bargaining positions is intended to allow the parties to exculpate each other from personal liability in the event of property loss or damage to the work to the extent each party is covered by insurance; by shifting the risk of loss to the insurance company regardless of which party is at fault, these clauses seek to avoid the prospect of extended litigation which would interfere with construction.	The instant case concerns a standardized waiver-of- subrogation clause in a construction contract between private parties in relatively equal bargaining positions. Such clauses are intended to allows the parties "to exculpate each other from personal liability in the event of property loss or damage to the work to the extent each party is covered by insurance." IRMA v. O'Donnell, Wicklund, Pigozzi & Peterson Architects, Inc., 295 Ill.App.3d 784, 229 Ill.Dec. 750, 692 N.E.2d 739, 744 (1998). By shifting the risk of loss to the insurance company regardless of which party is at fault, these clauses seek to avoid "the prospect of extended litigation which would interfere with construction."	Are waiver-of-subrogation clauses intended to allow the parties to exculpate each other from personal liability in the event of property loss or damage to the work to the extent each party is covered by insurance?

483	Oldroyd v. Elmira Sav. Bank, FSB, 134 F.3d 72, 75-76 (C.A.2 (N.Y.), 1998)	3	Court asked to stay proceedings pending arbitration must resolve four issues: first, it must determine whether parties agreed to arbitrate; second, it must determine scope of that agreement; third, if federal statutory claims are asserted, it must consider whether Congress intended those claims to be nonarbitrable; and fourth, if court concludes that some, but not all, of claims in case are arbitrable, it must then decide whether to stay balance of proceedings pending arbitration. 9 U.S.C.A. § 1 et seq.	A court asked to stay proceedings pending arbitration must resolve four issues: first, it must determine whether the parties agreed to arbitrate; second, it must determine the scope of that agreement; third, if federal statutory claims are asserted, it must consider whether Congress intended those *76 claims to be nonarbitrable; and fourth, if the court concludes that some, but not all, of the claims in the case are arbitrable, it must then decide whether to stay the balance of the proceedings pending arbitration.	What issues must a court resolve to stay proceedings pending arbitration?
484	Christian v. Lincoln Auto. Co., 403 Ill. App. 3d 1038, 1042 (2010)	6	After a defendant has made a case-specific prima facie showing the plaintiff failed to exercise reasonable diligence in effectuating service after filing suit, the burden shifts to the plaintiff to offer an explanation for his actions. Sup.Ct.Rules, Rule 103(b).	After the defendant has made a case-specific prima facie showing the plaintiff failed to exercise reasonable diligence in effectuating service after filing suit, the burden shifts to the plaintiff to offer an explanation for his actions.	"After a defendant has made a case-specific prima facie showing the plaintiff failed to exercise reasonable diligence in effectuating service after filing suit, does the burden shift to the plaintiff to offer an explanation for his actions?"
485	Christian v. Lincoln Auto. Co., 403 Ill. App. 3d 1038, 1042 (2010)	6	After a defendant has made a case-specific prima facie showing the plaintiff failed to exercise reasonable diligence in effectuating service after filing suit, the burden shifts to the plaintiff to offer an explanation for his actions. Sup.Ct.Rules, Rule 103(b).	After the defendant has made a case-specific prima facie showing the plaintiff failed to exercise reasonable diligence in effectuating service after filing suit, the burden shifts to the plaintiff to offer an explanation for his actions.	Does the burden shift to a plaintiff to offer an explanation for his actions after a defendant has made a case-specific prima facie showing the plaintiff failed to exercise reasonable diligence in effectuating service after filing suit?
486	Kole v. Brubaker, 325 Ill. App. 3d 944, 949 (2001)	3	In moving for dismissal for lack of diligence, the defendant is initially required to make a prima facie showing that the plaintiff failed to exercise reasonable diligence in effectuating service after filing suit; no absolute time frame exists that will shift the burden and require the plaintiff to offer an explanation for his or her actions, rather, because of the nature of the issue, the determination of whether the defendant has established a prima facie case of lack of diligence must be made on a case-by-case basis. Sup.Ct.Rules, Rule 103(b).	In moving for dismissal under Rule 103(b), the defendant is initially required to make a prima facie showing that the plaintiff failed to exercise reasonable diligence in effectuating service after filing suit. Martin v. Lozada, 23 Ill.App.3d 8, 11, 318 N.E.2d 334, 336 (1974); Michael, Illinois Practice, Civil Procedure, § 8.7 at 93 (1989). No absolute time frame exists that will shift the burden and require the plaintiff to offer an explanation for his or her actions. Rather, because of the nature of the issue, the determination of whether the defendant has established a prima facie case of lack of diligence must be made on a case-by-case basis.	Does no absolute time frame exist that will shift the burden and require the plaintiff to offer an explanation for his or her actions in delaying service on a defendant?

487	Vierra v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd., 154 Cal. App. 4th 1142, 1147 (Cal. Ct. App. 2007)	2	The workers' compensation system enacted by the Legislature is exclusive of all other statutory and common law remedies, and substitutes a new system of rights and obligations for the common law rules governing liability of employers for injuries to their employees. West's Ann.Cal. Const. Art. 14, S 4; West's Ann.Cal.Labor Code S 3200 et seq.	The workers' compensation system enacted by the Legislature "is exclusive of all other statutory and common law remedies, and substitutes a new system of rights and obligations for the common law rules governing liability of employers for injuries to their employees."	"Is the workers compensation system enacted by the Legislature exclusive of all other statutory and common law remedies, and substitutes a new system of rights and obligations for the common law rules governing liability of the employer for injuries to their employees?"
488	Stichting Ter Behartiging Van de Belangen Van Oudaandeelhouders In Het Kapitaal Van Saybolt Int'l B.V. v. Schreiber, 327 F.3d 173, 179–80 (2d Cir. 2003)	1	In order to obtain a conviction under the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA), the government must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that a defendant is (1) a domestic concern (2) that made use of a means or instrumentality of interstate commerce (3) corruptly (4) in furtherance of an offer or payment of anything of value to any person (5) while knowing that the money would be offered or given directly or indirectly to any foreign official (6) for purposes of influencing any act or decision of such foreign official in his official capacity. Foreign Corrupt Practices Act of 1977, S 30A, as amended, 15 U.S.C.A. S 78dd-1 et seq.	Thus, in order to obtain a conviction under this portion of the statute, the government must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant is 1. a domestic concern *180 2. that made use of a means or instrumentality of interstate commerce 3. corruptly 4. in furtherance of an offer or payment of anything of value to any person 5. while knowing that the money would be offered or given directly or indirectly to any foreign official 6. for purposes of influencing any act or decision of such foreign official in his official capacity.	What are the elements of a conviction under the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA)?
490	United States v. Barash, 365 F.2d 395, 401-402 (C.A.2 (N.Y.), 1966)	11	If a government officer threatens serious economic loss unless paid for giving a citizen his due, the latter is entitled to have the jury consider this, not as a complete defense like duress, but as bearing on the specific intent required for the commission of bribery. 18 U.S.C.A. S 201(b).	We think that if a government officer threatens serious economic loss unless paid for giving a citizen his due, the *402 latter is entitled to have the jury consider this, not as a complete defense like duress but as bearing on the specific intent required for the commission of bribery.	"If a government officer threatens serious economic loss unless paid for giving a citizen his due, is the latter entitled to have the jury consider this?"
491	Valence Operating Co. v. Anadarko Petroleum Corp., 303 S.W.3d 435, 444 (Tex. App. 1993)	16	Purpose of allowing a trial court to dismiss a suit for want of prosecution is to provide a penalty when a party seeks to take advantage over its opponent by deliberate neglect and delay and a reluctance to have the merits of the case judged in a trial.	The purpose of allowing a trial court to dismiss a suit for want of prosecution is to provide a penalty when a party seeks to take advantage over its opponent by deliberate neglect and delay and a reluctance to have the merits of the case judged in a trial.	Is the purpose of allowing a trial court to dismiss a suit for want of prosecution to provide a penalty when a party seeks to take advantage over its opponent by deliberate neglect and delay?

492	Dinger v. Cefola, 133 A.D.3d 816, 817 (N.Y. App. Div. 2015)	1	On a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a cause of action, the court must liberally construe the complaint, accept all facts as alleged in the pleading to be true, accord the plaintiff the benefit of every favorable inference, and determine only whether the facts as alleged fit within any cognizable legal theory. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	On a motion to dismiss a complaint pursuant to CPLR 3211(a) (7), the court must liberally construe the complaint, accept all facts as alleged in the pleading to be true, accord the plaintiff the benefit of every favorable inference, and determine only whether the facts as alleged fit within any cognizable legal theory (see Leon v. Martinez, 84 N.Y.2d 83, 87–88, 614 N.Y.S.2d 972, 638 N.E.2d 511; Rabos v. R & R Bagels & Bakery, Inc., 100 A.D.3d 849, 851, 955 N.Y.S.2d 109; Daub v. Future Tech Enter., Inc., 65 A.D.3d 1004, 1005, 885 N.Y.S.2d 115).	"On a motion to dismiss a complaint pursuant to CPLR 3211(a) (7), should the court liberally construe the complaint and accept all facts as alleged in the pleading to be true?"
493	Scoville v. Shaffer, 9 S.W.3d 201, 204 (Tex. App. 1999)	7	In determining whether a party has demonstrated a lack of diligence in prosecuting a claim, a trial court may consider the entire history of the case, including the length of time the case was on file, the extent of activity in the case, whether a trial setting was requested, and the existence of reasonable excuses for delay; no single factor is dispositive, and a belated trial setting or stated readiness to proceed to trial does not conclusively establish diligence.	In determining whether a party has demonstrated a lack of diligence in prosecuting a claim, a trial court may consider the entire history of the case; including the length of time the case was on file, the extent of activity in the case, whether a trial setting was requested, and the existence of reasonable excuses for delay. Scoville v. Shaffer, 9 S.W.3d 201, 204 (Tex.App.-San Antonio 1999, no pet.); King v. Holland, 884 S.W.2d 231, 237 (Tex.App.-Corpus Christi 1994, writ denied). No single factor is dispositive, and a belated trial setting or stated readiness to proceed to trial does not conclusively establish diligence.	Will a court consider the entire history of the case in determining whether a party has demonstrated a lack of diligence in prosecuting a claim?
494	Moses v. Dirghangi, 430 S.W.3d 371, 375 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2013)	4	Motions to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted are not favored and are rarely granted in light of the liberal pleading standards contained in the Tennessee Rules of Civil Procedure. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12.02(6).	A Tennessee Rule of Civil Procedure 12.02(6) motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted tests the legal sufficiency of the complaint. Lanier v. Rains, 229 S.W.3d 656, 660 (Tenn.2007). It admits the truth of all relevant and material allegations, but asserts that such allegations do not constitute a cause of action as a matter of law. See Riggs v. Burson, 941 S.W.2d 44, 47 (Tenn.1997). These motions are not favored and are rarely granted in light of the liberal pleading standards contained in the Tennessee Rules of Civil Procedure.	Are motions to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted not favored and are rarely granted in light of the liberal pleading standards contained in the rules of civil procedure?

496	Canney v. City of Chelsea, 925 F. Supp. 58, 64 (Mass. 1996)	7	Restatement (Second) of Agency, portions of which have been incorporated into Massachusetts law, defines agency relationship as having three essential characteristics: (1) power of agent to alter legal relationships between principal and third parties and principal and himself; (2) existence of fiduciary relationship toward principal with respect to matters within scope of agency; and (3) right of principal to control agent's conduct with respect to matters within scope of agency. Restatement (Second) of Agency §§ 12-14.	The Restatement (Second) of Agency, portions of which have been incorporated into Massachusetts law, defines an agency relationship as having three essential characteristics: (1) the power of the agent to alter the legal relationships between the principal and third parties and the principal and himself; 2) the existence of a fiduciary relationship toward the principal with respect to matters within the scope of the agency; and 3) the right of the principal to control the agent's conduct with respect to matters within the scope of the agency.	"Is the power of the agent to alter the legal relationships between the principal and third parties, an essential characteristic of agency?"
497	Com. v. LePore, 40 Mass. App. Ct. 543, 545-46 (1996)	1	For purpose of statute criminalizing disorderly conduct, person is "disorderly" if, with purpose to cause public inconvenience, annoyance or alarm, or recklessly creating risk thereof, he: engages in fighting or threatening, or in violent or tumultuous behavior; makes unreasonable noise or offensively coarse utterance, gesture or display, or addresses abusive language to any person present; or creates hazardous or physically offensive condition by act which serves no legitimate purpose of actor. M.G.L.A. c. 272, § 53.	A person is "disorderly" under G.L. c. 272, § 53, "if, with purpose to cause public inconvenience, annoyance or alarm, or recklessly creating a risk thereof; he: (a) engages in fighting or threatening, or in violent or tumultuous behavior; or (b) makes unreasonable *546 noise or offensively coarse utterance, gesture or display, or addresses abusive language to any person present; or (c) creates a hazardous or physically offensive condition by an act which serves no legitimate purpose of the actor."	What conduct of an individual would come under the term disorderly?
499	Shiffman v. K, Inc., 657 P.2d 401, 403 (Alaska 1983)	1	For purposes of rule providing for dismissal of suits for want of prosecution, a case stands stagnant when to the court it appears that for lack of activity of record neither party has taken the steps, acts or measures to be reasonably expected in the pursuit or defense of the particular cause of action. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(e).	A case stands stagnant when to the court it appears that for lack of activity of record neither party has taken the steps, acts or measures to be reasonably expected in the pursuit or defense of the particular cause of action.	Does a case stand stagnant when to the court it appears that for lack of activity of record neither party has taken the steps to be reasonably expected in the pursuit or defense of the particular cause of action?
500	Shiffman v. K, Inc., 657 P.2d 401, 403 (Alaska 1983)	1	For purposes of rule providing for dismissal of suits for want of prosecution, a case stands stagnant when to the court it appears that for lack of activity of record neither party has taken the steps, acts or measures to be reasonably expected in the pursuit or defense of the particular cause of action. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(e).	A case stands stagnant when to the court it appears that for lack of activity of record neither party has taken the steps, acts or measures to be reasonably expected in the pursuit or defense of the particular cause of action.	Does a case stand stagnant when to the court it appears that for lack of activity of record neither party has taken the steps to be reasonably expected in the pursuit or defense of the particular cause of action?

501	UMC Dev. v. D.C., 120 A.3d 37, 43 (D.C. 2015)	5	For purposes of ruling on a motion to dismiss for want of standing, when a defendant makes a factual, as opposed to a facial, attack on the plaintiff's complaint, the trial court may conduct an independent review of the evidence submitted by the parties, including affidavits, to resolve factual disputes concerning whether subject-matter jurisdiction exists. Civil Rule 12(b)(1).	Thus, when a defendant makes a "factual" (as opposed to a "facial") attack on the plaintiff's complaint under Super. Ct. Civ. R. 12(b)(1), 18 the trial court may "conduct an independent review of the evidence submitted by the parties, including affidavits, to resolve factual disputes concerning whether subject-matter jurisdiction exists."	"Will the court conduct an independent review of the evidence submitted by the parties, including affidavits, to resolve factual disputes to determine subject-matter jurisdiction?"
505	In re Mario S., 38 Misc. 3d 444, 449 (N.Y. Fam. Ct. 2012)	6	Creation of the special immigrant juvenile (SIJ) status shows a congressional intent to assist a limited group of abused children to remain safely in the country with a means to apply for lawful permanent resident status. Immigration and Nationality Act, S 101(a)(27)(J), 8 U.S.C.A. S 1101(a)(27)(J).	The creation of the special immigrant juvenile classification "show [s] a congressional intent to assist a limited group of abused children to remain safely in the country with a means to apply for [lawful permanent resident] status"	Was Special Immigrant Juvenile (SIJ) status created to assist or help a limited group of abused children to remain safely in the country with a means to apply for Lawful Permanent Resident (LPR) status?
506	Wynter v. Our Lady of Mercy Med. Ctr., 3 A.D.3d 376, 378, 771 N.Y.S.2d 94, 96 (2004)	1	If a case is dismissed for failure to timely effect substitution pursuant to the rules of civil procedure, the plaintiff, in order to achieve reinstatement, must demonstrate a prima facie showing of merit, a reasonable excuse for the delay, and no undue prejudice to the defendants. McKinney's CPLR 1021.	If a case is dismissed for failure to timely effect substitution pursuant to CPLR 1021, the plaintiff, in order to achieve reinstatement, must demonstrate a prima facie showing of merit, a reasonable excuse for the delay and no undue prejudice to the defendants (Schwartz v. Montefiore Hospital and Medical Center, 305 A.D.2d 174, 176, 761 N.Y.S.2d 5).	"Should the plaintiff, in order to achieve reinstatement, demonstrate a prima facie showing of merit, a reasonable excuse for the delay, and no undue prejudice to the defendants?"
507	Thompson v. Houston, 2003 PA Super 467, ¶ 9 (2003)	1	Some of the circumstances a court should consider in determining whether counsel's failure to appear for trial should be excused are: 1) whether the failure to appear was inadvertent; 2) whether counsel's failure to appear was part of a pattern of improper behavior, misconduct or abuse; 3) whether the court attempted to contact counsel prior to dismissing the appeal; 4) whether the opposing party would be prejudiced by the delay; and 5) whether the court gave any consideration to lesser sanctions.	Some of the circumstances a court should consider in determining whether counsel's failure to appear should be excused are: 1) whether the failure to appear was inadvertent; 2) whether counsel's failure to appear was part of a pattern of improper behavior, misconduct or abuse; 3) whether the court attempted to contact counsel prior to dismissing the appeal; 4) whether the opposing party would be prejudiced by the delay; and 5) whether the court gave any consideration to lesser sanctions.	Should some of the circumstances a court should consider in determining whether counsel's failure to appear for trial be excused?

508	Hawes v. 1997 Jeep Wrangler, 602 N.W.2d 874, 878 (Minn. App. 1999)	6	In determining whether an in rem civil forfeiture is "punishment" for double jeopardy purposes, the court must first examine the governing statute to determine whether the legislative body intended the forfeiture proceedings to be criminal/punitive or civil/remedial, and then must consider whether the party challenging the statute has shown by the clearest proof that the forfeiture is so punitive in fact that it may not legitimately be viewed as civil in nature. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; M.S.A. Const. Art. 1, § 7.	In Ursery, the Supreme Court articulated a two- step test for determining whether a civil forfeiture constitutes "punishment" for double jeopardy purposes. Under that test: First, a court must examine the governing statute to determine whether the legislative body intended the forfeiture *369 proceedings to be criminal/punitive or civil/remedial. Next, the court must consider whether the party challenging the statute has shown by the clearest proof that the forfeiture is so punitive in fact that it may not legitimately be viewed as civil in nature.	"In determining whether an in rem civil forfeiture is ""punishment"" for double jeopardy purposes, should the court first examine the governing statute to determine whether the legislative body intended the forfeiture proceedings to be criminal or punitive?"
509	State v. Greene, 196 W. Va. 500, 503 (1996)	2	To determine whether particular statutorily defined penalty is civil or criminal for double jeopardy purposes, court must ask whether legislature, in establishing penalty, indicated either expressly or impliedly that statutory penalty was intended to be civil or criminal, and, if legislature indicated intention to establish civil penalty, whether statutory scheme was so punitive either in purpose or effect as to negate that intention. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; Const. Art. 3, § 5.	We hold that to determine whether a particular statutorily defined penalty is civil or criminal for the purpose of double jeopardy under Article III, § 5 of the West Virginia Constitution, we must ask: (1) whether the Legislature, in establishing the penalizing mechanism, indicated either expressly or impliedly that the statutory penalty in question was intended to be civil or criminal; and (2) where we find that the Legislature has indicated an intention to establish a civil penalty, whether the statutory scheme was so punitive either in purpose or effect as to negate that intention.	"Should a court ask whether a legislature, in establishing a penalty, indicated either expressly or impliedly that statutory penalty was intended to be civil or criminal?"

511	Kourtsounis by Kourtsounis v. Chakrabarty, 254 A.D.2d 394, 395, 679 N.Y.S.2d 84, 85 (1998)	1	Party wishing to restore a case to the trial calendar after dismissal may have the action reinstated upon a demonstration of four essential factors: (1) the case has merit; (2) there is a reasonable excuse for the delay; (3) there was no intent to abandon the matter; and (4) there is no prejudice to the nonmoving party. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	It is well established that a party wishing to restore a case to the trial calendar after it has been dismissed pursuant to CPLR 3404 may have the action reinstated upon a demonstration of four essential factors, (1) the case has merit, (2) there is a reasonable excuse for the delay, (3) there was no intent to abandon the matter, and (4) there is no prejudice to the nonmoving party (see, e.g., Prado v. Catholic Med. Ctr. of Brooklyn & Queens, 237 A.D.2d 341, 655 N.Y.S.2d 58; Swedish v. Bourie, 233 A.D.2d 495, 650 N.Y.S.2d 765; Carter v. City of New York, 231 A.D.2d 485, 647 N.Y.S.2d 28; Knight v. City of New York, 193 A.D.2d 720, 597 N.Y.S.2d 737; Civello v. Grossman, 192 A.D.2d 636, 596 N.Y.S.2d 464).	"Can a party wishing to restore a case to the trial calendar after dismissal, have the action reinstated upon a demonstration of four essential factors?"
512	Am. Asphalt Paving Co. v. Zoning Hearing Bd. of Jackson Twp., 706 A.2d 1283, 1285 (Pa. 1998)	1	Trial court may exercise its discretion and enter judgement of non pros where: (1) party has shown lack of due diligence by failing to proceed with reasonable promptness; (2) there is no compelling reason for delay; and (3) delay has caused prejudice to adverse party.	A trial court may exercise its discretion and enter a judgement of non pros where: (1) a party has shown a lack of due diligence by failing to proceed with reasonable promptness; (2) there is no compelling reason for the delay; and (3) the delay has caused prejudice to the adverse party.	Can a trial court exercise its discretion and enter judgement of non pros where a party has shown lack of due diligence by failing to proceed with reasonable promptness?
514	Walker v. Allen, 119 So. 3d 1111, 1113 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013)	2	Rule of civil procedure allowing a defendant to move for the dismissal of an action when a plaintiff fails to prosecute embodies the tenet that any court of law or equity may exercise the power to dismiss for want of prosecution; this power, inherent to the courts, is necessary as a means to the orderly expedition of justice and the court's control of its own docket. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	Mississippi Rule of Civil Procedure 41(b) allows a defendant to move for the dismissal of an action when a plaintiff fails to prosecute. "Rule 41(b) embodies the tenet that any court of law or equity may exercise the power to dismiss for want of prosecution. This power, inherent to the courts, is necessary as a means to the orderly expedition of justice and the court's control of its own docket."	"Is the Rule of civil procedure allowing a defendant to move for the dismissal of an action when a plaintiff fails to prosecute, necessary as a means to the orderly expedition of justice and the court's control of its own docket?"

515	City of New Brighton v. 2000 Ford Excursion VIN No. 1FMNU43S2YEA74156, 622 N.W.2d 364, 368-69 (Minn. App. 2001)	9	To determine whether civil forfeiture constitutes "punishment" for double jeopardy purposes, court must first examine governing statute to determine whether the legislative body intended the forfeiture proceedings to be criminal/punitive or civil/remedial; next, the court must consider whether the party challenging the statute has shown by the clearest proof that the forfeiture is so punitive in fact that it may not legitimately be viewed as civil in nature. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; M.S.A. Const. Art. 1, S 7.	In Ursery, the Supreme Court articulated a two- step test for determining whether a civil forfeiture constitutes "punishment" for double jeopardy purposes. Under that test: First, a court must examine the governing statute to determine whether the legislative body intended the forfeiture *369 proceedings to be criminal/punitive or civil/remedial. Next, the court must consider whether the party challenging the statute has shown by the clearest proof that the forfeiture is so punitive in fact that it may not legitimately be viewed as civil in nature.	"To determine whether a civil forfeiture constitutes ""punishment"" for double jeopardy purposes, should a court first examine a governing statute to determine whether the legislative body intended the forfeiture proceedings to be criminal or punitive?"
516	State v. Stone, 400 P.3d 692, 696 (Mont., 2017)	13	The prohibition against double jeopardy is based on deeply ingrained constitutional policies designed to protect a defendant by ensuring finality of prosecution and the protection against the state's attempts to relitigate facts underlying a prior acquittal and from attempts to secure additional punishment after a prior conviction and sentence. U.S. Const. Amends. 5, 14; Mont. Const. art. 2, S 25.	Moreover, the prohibition against double jeopardy is based on deeply ingrained constitutional policies designed to protect a defendant by ensuring finality of prosecution and the protection against the State's attempts to relitigate facts underlying a prior acquittal and from attempts to secure additional punishment after a prior conviction and sentence. Brown v. Ohio, 432 U.S.	Is the prohibition against double jeopardy based on deeply ingrained constitutional policies designed to protect a defendant by ensuring finality of prosecution?
517	People v. McNally, 107 Cal. App. 3d 387, 390, 165 Cal. Rptr. 715, 717 (Ct. App. 1980)	1	A person is in legal jeopardy for an offense when placed on trial in court of competent jurisdiction, on valid accusatory pleading, before a jury duly impaneled and sworn, and discharge of that jury without a verdict is equivalent to acquittal and bars retrial unless defendant consented to discharge or legal necessity required it.	It is well settled that (1) a person is in legal jeopardy for an offense when placed on trial in a court of competent jurisdiction, on a valid accusatory pleading, before a jury duly impaneled and sworn, and that (2) discharge of that jury without a verdict is equivalent to acquittal and bars a retrial, unless the defendant consented to the discharge or legal necessity required it.	"Is a person in legal jeopardy for an offense when placed on trial in court of a competent jurisdiction, on a valid accusatory pleading?"
521	Scott v. City of New York, 591 F.Supp.2d 554, 557 (S.D.N.Y.,2008)	3	A court's ruling regarding a motion in limine is subject to change when the case unfolds; indeed even if nothing unexpected happens at trial, the district judge is free, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, to alter a previous in limine ruling.	5 Moreover, a court's ruling regarding a motion in limine " 'is subject to change when the case unfolds.... Indeed even if nothing unexpected happens at trial, the district judge is free, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, to alter a previous in limine ruling.' "	"Even if nothing unexpected happens at trial, is the district judge free, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, to alter a previous in limine ruling?"

522	United States v. Sum of $70,990,605, 991 F.Supp.2d 154, 167 (D.D.C., 2013)	25	The act of state doctrine applies when the relief sought or the defense interposed would require a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its boundaries.	The act of state doctrine "applies when the relief sought or the defense interposed would require a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its boundaries.	How does the act of state doctrine apply when the relief sought or the defense interposed would require a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its boundaries?
523	In re Liebl's Est., 201 Misc. 1102, 1106, 106 N.Y.S.2d 715, 719 (Sur. 1951)	8	Necessary intercourse between subjects of independent governments gives rise to sort of compact that their municipal institutions shall receive a degree of reciprocal efficacy and sanction within their respective dominions.	As was said in King v. Sarria, 69 N.Y. 24, 31: 'It is the necessary intercourse of the subjects of independent governments, which gives rise to a sort of compact, that their municipal institutions shall receive a degree of reciprocal efficacy and sanction within their respective dominions.	"Is it the necessary intercourse of the subjects of independent governments, which gives rise to a sort of compact, that their municipal institutions shall receive a degree of reciprocal efficacy and sanction within their respective dominions?"
526	Manning v. Pioneer Sav. Bank, 56 Misc. 3d 790, 796, 55 N.Y.S.3d 587, 592 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2016)	7	When considering a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action, the court must accept the facts as alleged in the complaint as true, accord plaintiff the benefit of every possible favorable inference, and determine only whether the facts as alleged fit within any cognizable legal theory. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	When considering a motion to dismiss pursuant to CPLR § 3211(a)(7) for failure to state a cause of action, the court must "accept the facts as alleged in the complaint as true, accord plaintiff the benefit of every possible favorable inference, and determine only whether the facts as alleged fit within any cognizable legal theory" (Nonnon v. City of New York, 9 N.Y.3d 825, 827, 842 N.Y.S.2d 756, 874 N.E.2d 720 [2007]).	"In determining a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a cause of action, is the court's role ordinarily limited to determining whether the complaint states a cause of action?"
527	Belleville v. Dir. of Revenue, State of Mo., 825 S.W.2d 623, 625 (Mo. 1992)	4	Dismissal for failure to prosecute is an abuse of discretion where a party timely files all required pleadings, responds to all discovery required, appears at the time and place scheduled for trial, and is ready and willing to present evidence.	A dismissal for failure to prosecute is an abuse of discretion where a party timely files all required pleadings, responds to all discovery required, appears at the time and place scheduled for trial and is ready and willing to present evidence.	"Is dismissal for failure to prosecute an abuse of discretion where a party timely files all required pleadings, responds to all discovery required, appears at the time and place scheduled for trial, and is ready and willing to present evidence? "
530	Pravin Banker Assocs. Ltd. v. Banco Popular Del Peru, 109 F.3d 850, 854 (C.A.2 (N.Y.), 1997)	2	Under principles of international comity, United States courts ordinarily refuse to review acts of foreign governments and defer to proceedings taking place in foreign countries, allowing those acts and proceedings to have extraterritorial effect in the United States.	Under the principles of international comity, United States courts ordinarily refuse to review acts of foreign governments and defer to proceedings taking place in foreign countries, allowing those acts and proceedings to have extraterritorial effect in the United States.	"Under principles of international comity, do United States courts ordinarily refuse to review acts of foreign governments and defer to proceedings taking place in foreign countries, instead allowing those acts and proceedings to have extraterritorial effect in the United States?"

533	Helmerich & Payne Int'l Drilling Co. v. Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, 971 F. Supp. 2d 49, 61-62 (D.D.C. 2013)	8	The act of state doctrine is to be interpreted and applied in accordance with the policy interests of international comity, respect for the sovereignty of other nations on their own territory, and the avoidance of embarrassment to the Executive Branch in its conduct of foreign relations.	The doctrine is to be interpreted and applied in accordance with the policy interests of "international comity, respect for the sovereignty of other nations *62 on their own territory, and the avoidance of embarrassment to the Executive Branch in its conduct of foreign relations."	"Is the act of state doctrine to be interpreted and applied in accordance with the policy interests of international comity, respect for the sovereignty of other nations on their own territory, and the avoidance of embarrassment to the Executive Branch in its conduct of foreign relations?"
534	State v. Johnston, 249 Ga. 413, 415 (1982)	4	Trial court has absolute right to refuse to decide admissibility of evidence, allegedly violative of some ordinary rule of evidence, prior to trial; if, however, trial court decides to rule on admissibility of evidence prior to trial, court's determination of admissibility is similar to a preliminary ruling on evidence at a pretrial conference and it controls the subsequent course of action unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice.	The trial court has an absolute right to refuse to decide the admissibility of evidence, allegedly violative of some ordinary rule of evidence, prior to trial. Cf. Wiggins v. State, supra; Coats v. State, 234 Ga. 659, 217 S.E.2d 260 (1975). If, however, the trial court decides to rule on the admissibility of evidence prior to trial, the court's determination of admissibility is similar "to a preliminary ruling on evidence at a pretrial conference" and it "controls the subsequent course of action, unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice."	"If the trial court decides to rule on the admissibility of evidence prior to trial, is the court's determination of admissibility similar to a preliminary ruling on evidence at a pretrial conference?"
539	Fields v. Walpole Tire Serv., 37 So.3d 549, 555 (La. App. 2010)	8	To maintain a successful products liability action under the Louisiana Products Liability Act (LPLA), a plaintiff must establish four elements: (1) that the defendant is a manufacturer of the product; (2) that the claimant's damage was proximately caused by a characteristic of the product; (3) that this characteristic made the product "unreasonably dangerous;" and (4) that the claimant's damage arose from a reasonably anticipated use of the product by the claimant or someone else. LSA-R.S. 9:2800.54(A).	To maintain a successful products liability action under the Louisiana Products Liability Act ("the LPLA"), a plaintiff must establish four elements: (1) that the defendant is a manufacturer of the product; (2) that the claimant's damage was proximately caused by a characteristic of the product; (3) that this characteristic made the product "unreasonably dangerous;" and (4) that the claimant's damage arose from a reasonably anticipated use of the product by the claimant or someone else. LSA-R.S. 9:2800.54(A).	What must a plaintiff establish to maintain a successful action under the Product Liability Act (PLA)?
540	Bernstein v. Virgin Am., 227 F. Supp. 3d 1049, 1076 (N.D. Cal. 2017)	39	Although the federal government has exclusive sovereignty over the United States airspace and aviation safety, Congress has not occupied the field of employment law in the aviation context, and the Federal Aviation Act (FAA) does not confer upon the agency the exclusive power to regulate all employment matters involving airmen.	Although the federal government has exclusive sovereignty over the United States airspace and aviation safety, "Congress has not occupied the field of employment law in the aviation context and ... the FAA does not confer upon the agency the exclusive power to regulate all employment matters involving airmen."	Does the Federal Aviation Act (FAA) confer upon the agency exclusive power to regulate all employment matters involving airmen?

543	In re Flamingo 55, 378 B.R. 893, 911 (D. Nev. 2007)	18	Under California's decisional law of equitable subrogation, one who claims to be equitably subrogated to the rights of a secured creditor must satisfy certain prerequisites: (1) payment must have been made by the subrogee to protect his own interest, (2) subrogee must not have acted as a volunteer, (3) the debt paid must be one for which the subrogee was not primarily liable, (4) the entire debt must have been paid, and (5) subrogation must not work any injustice to the rights of others.	Under California's decisional law of equitable subrogation, One who claims to be equitably subrogated to the rights of a secured creditor must satisfy certain prerequisites. These are: "(1) Payment must have been made by the subrogee to protect his own interest. (2) The subrogee must not have acted as a volunteer. (3) The debt paid must be one for which the subrogee was not primarily liable. (4) The entire debt must have been paid. (5) Subrogation must not work any injustice to the rights of others."	What prerequisites must one who claims to be equitably subrogated to the rights of a secured creditor satisfy?
545	St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co. v. Frontier Pac. Ins. Co., 111 Cal. App. 4th 1234, 1253 (2003)	32	In contrast to equitable contribution, the aim of equitable subrogation is to place the burden for a loss on the party ultimately liable or responsible for it and by whom it should have been discharged, and to relieve entirely the insurer or surety who indemnified the loss and who in equity was not primarily liable therefor.	In contrast to equitable contribution, the "aim of equitable subrogation is to place the burden for a loss on the party ultimately liable or responsible for it and by whom it should have been discharged, and to relieve entirely the insurer or surety who indemnified the loss and who in equity was not primarily liable therefor."	"Is the aim of equitable subrogation to place the burden for loss on the party ultimately responsible for it and by whom it should have been discharged, and to entirely relieve insurer or surety who indemnified loss and who in equity was not primarily liable for it?"
546	Cruickshank v. Clean Seas Co., 346 B.R. 571, 581 (D. Mass. 2006)	6	Equitable principle behind "subrogation," an old term rooted in equity which today is used to mean to stand in the shoes of, is that when one, pursuant to obligation, and so not a volunteer, fulfills the duties of another, he is entitled to assert the rights of that other against third persons.	"Subrogation is an old term, rooted in equity," which today is used to mean "stand in the shoes of." Nat'l Shawmut Bank of Boston v. New Amsterdam Cas. Co., Inc., 411 F.2d 843, 844 (1st Cir.1969). "The equitable principle is that when one, pursuant to obligation—not a volunteer, fulfills the duties of another, he is entitled to assert the rights of that other against third persons."	"Does the equitable principle behind ""subrogation"" is that when one, pursuant to obligation, and so not a volunteer, fulfills the duties of another, he is entitled to assert the rights of that other against third persons?"
547	Dawson v. Higgins, 197 A.D.2d 127, 135–36, 610 N.Y.S.2d 200, 207 (1994)	9	Property owner who challenges government action as regulatory taking bears heavy burden of overcoming presumption of constitutionality that attaches to regulation and of proving every element of his claim beyond a reasonable doubt. U.S.C.A. Const.Amends. 5, 14; McKinney's Const. Art. 1, SS 6, 7(a).	The property owner who challenges government action as a regulatory taking "bears *136 the heavy burden of overcoming the presumption of constitutionality that attaches to the regulation and of proving every element of his claim beyond a reasonable doubt."	Does a property owner asserting a takings claim bear the burden of overcoming the presumption of constitutionality that attaches to the regulation and of proving every element of his claim beyond a reasonable doubt?

548	State v. Grubb, 28 Ohio St. 3d 199, 201-202 (1986)	1	"Motion in limine," if granted, is tentative, interlocutory, precautionary ruling by trial court reflecting its anticipatory treatment of an evidentiary issue; in virtually all circumstances, finality does not attach when motion is granted, so that, should circumstances subsequently develop at trial, trial court is at liberty to consider admissibility of disputed evidence in its actual context.	Thus, a motion in limine, if granted, is a tentative, interlocutory, precautionary ruling by the trial court reflecting its anticipatory treatment *202 of the evidentiary issue. In virtually all circumstances finality does not attach when the motion is granted. Therefore, should circumstances subsequently develop at trial, the trial court is certainly at liberty " * * * to consider the admissibility of the disputed evidence in its actual context."	"Does a ruling on a motion in limine reflect the court's anticipated treatment of an evidentiary issue at trial, and is a tentative, interlocutory ruling which the trial court is at liberty to change at trial?"
549	Hawker v. State, 951 So. 2d 945, 950 (Fla. App. 2007)	2	Motion in limine rulings are subject to change during trial as the trial court develops an understanding of the facts and circumstances of the case; such a ruling may be based on an incomplete oral proffer or on the trial court's limited understanding of the issues in the case, not having heard the first bit of evidence. West's F.S.A. S 394.910 et seq.	It is well- settled that motion in limine rulings are subject to change during trial as the trial court develops an understanding of the facts and circumstances of the case. Such a ruling may be based on an incomplete oral proffer or on the trial court's limited understanding of the issues in the case, not having heard the first bit of evidence.	"Can a motion in limine be based on an incomplete oral proffer or on the trial court's limited understanding of the issues in the case, not having heard the first bit of evidence?"
552	Walter Fuller Aircraft Sales, Inc. v. Republic of Philippines, 965 F.2d 1375, 1387-88 (5th Cir. 1992)	12	When determining whether act of state doctrine limits adjudication in American courts, Court of Appeals looks not only to acts of named defendants, but to any governmental acts whose validity would be called into question by adjudication of suit.	When determining whether the act of state doctrine limits adjudication in American courts, we look not only to the acts of the named defendants, "but [to] any governmental acts whose validity would be called *1388 into question by adjudication of the suit."	"When determining whether act of state doctrine limits adjudication in American courts, does the Court of Appeals look not only to acts of named defendants, but to any governmental acts whose validity would be called into question by adjudication of the suit?"
554	In re Estate of Ferdinand E. Marcos Human Rights Litig., 978 F.2d 493, 502 (9th Cir. 1992)	14	In addition to resolving defendant's immunity, for court to determine whether plaintiff has claim for tort committed in violation of international law, it must decide whether there is applicable norm of international law, whether it is recognized by United States, what its status is and whether it was violated in particular case. U.S.C.A. Const. Art. 3, S 2, cl. 1; 28 U.S.C.A. S 1350.	Thus, in addition to resolving the defendant's immunity, for a court to determine whether a plaintiff has a claim for a tort committed in violation of international law, it must decide whether there is an applicable norm of international law, whether it is recognized by the United States, what its status is, and whether it was violated in the particular case.	"For a court to determine whether a plaintiff has claim for tort committed in violation of international law, under the Alien Tort Claims Act, should it first decide whether there is applicable norm of international law, and then whether it was violated in the particular case?"

555	Menorah Nursing Home, Inc. v. Zukov, 153 A.D.2d 13, 17, 548 N.Y.S.2d 702, 705 (1989)	1	Surety who answers for default of his principal pursuant to terms of performance bond, either by completing work required under principal's contract with owner obligee or by paying compensation to owner obligee, is entitled to be subrogated to rights of obligee whom he has paid, or on whose behalf he has completed contract; however, this right is not exclusive of all other equitable subrogation rights.	It is true that a surety who answers for the default of his principal pursuant to the terms of a performance bond, either by completing the work required under the principal's contract with the owner-obligee, or by paying compensation to the owner-obligee, is entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the obligee whom he has paid, or on whose behalf he has completed the contract (see generally, Pearlman v. Reliance Ins. Co., 371 U.S. 132, 83 S.Ct. 232, 9 L.Ed.2d 190; Scarsdale Nat. Bank & Trust Co. v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 264 N.Y. 159, 190 N.E. 330; Kolb v. National Surety Co., 176 N.Y. 233, 68 N.E. 247; Lewis v. Palmer, 28 N.Y. 271; State Bank of Albany v. Dan-Bar Contr. Co., Inc., 23 Misc.2d 487, 199 N.Y.S.2d 309, affd. 12 A.D.2d 416, 212 N.Y.S.2d 386; affd. 12 N.Y.2d 804, 235 N.Y.S.2d 835, 187 N.E.2d 19; American Surety Co. of N.Y. v. Town of Islip, 268 App.Div. 92, 48 N.Y.S.2d 749; 63 N.Y.Jur.2d, Guaranty and Suretyship, §§ 440, 585; Simpson, Suretyship § 47; McClintock, Equity § 123 [2d ed.]). However, the right of a surety under these circumstances to be subrogated to the rights of its obligee is not	"Is a surety who answers for the default of his principal pursuant to terms of performance bond entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the obligee whom he has paid, or on whose behalf he has completed contract?"
556	Skip Kirchorfer, Inc. v. United States, 26 Cl. Ct. 666, 673 (1992), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 6 F.3d 1573 (Fed. Cir. 1993)	2	United States may be held responsible for taking even where its action is not the final direct cause of the property loss or damage; test is whether government involvement in deprivation of private property is sufficiently direct and substantial to require compensation under Fifth Amendment. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	The United States may be held responsible for a taking even when its action is not the final direct cause of the property loss or damage. The test is whether the government involvement in the deprivation of private property is sufficiently direct and substantial to require compensation under the Fifth Amendment.	Can the United States be held responsible for a taking even when its action is not the final direct cause of the property loss or damage?

557	Washlefske v. Winston, 234 F.3d 179, 183–84 (4th Cir. 2000)	3	Even though fundamental principles of State property law may define property rights, the Takings Clause nevertheless limits a State's authority to redefine preexisting property rights, so that a State, by ipse dixit, may not transform private property into public property without compensation, nor can it sidestep the Takings Clause by disavowing traditional property interests long recognized under state law. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Even though fundamental principles of State property law may define property rights, the Takings Clause nevertheless limits a State's authority to redefine preexisting property rights. Thus, "a State, by ipse dixit, may not transform private property into public property without compensation," Webb's Fabulous Pharmacies, Inc. v. Beckwith, 449 U.S. 155, 164, 101 S.Ct. 446, 66 L.Ed.2d 358 (1980), nor can it "sidestep the Takings Clause by disavowing traditional property interests long recognized *184 under state law," Phillips, 524 U.S. at 167, 118 S.Ct. 1925.	"Can a State, by ipse dixit, transform private property into public property without compensation?"
558	Beanal v. Freeport-McMoRan, 969 F. Supp. 362, 370 (E.D. La. 1997)	14	For purposes of the Alien Tort Statute, an "international tort," i.e., one that violates the law of nations, should satisfy the following requirements: no state condones the act in question and there is a recognizable "universal" consensus of prohibition against it; there are sufficient criteria to determine whether a given action amounts to the prohibited act and thus violates the norm; and the prohibition against it is nonderogable and therefore binding at all times upon all actors. 28 U.S.C.A. S 1350.	In sum, an international tort, i.e. one that violates the law of nations, should satisfy the following requirements: (1) no state condones the act in question and there is a recognizable "universal" consensus of prohibition against it; (2) there are sufficient criteria to determine whether a given action amounts to the prohibited act and thus violates the norm; (3) the prohibition against it is nonderogable and therefore binding at all times upon all actors.	"For purposes of the Alien Tort Statute, an ""international tort,""" what are the requirements that should be satisfied?"
559	Kalamazoo Spice Extraction Co. v. Provisional Military Gov't of Socialist Ethiopia, 729 F.2d 422, 424 (6th Cir. 1984)	1	Act of state doctrine is exception to general rule that court of United States, where appropriate jurisdictional standards are met, will decide cases before it by choosing rules appropriate for decision from among various sources of law, including international law.	The act of state doctrine is an exception to the general rule that a court of the United States, where appropriate jurisdictional standards are met, will decide cases before it by choosing the rules appropriate for decision from among various sources of law, including international law.	Is the act of state doctrine an exception to the general rule that courts of the United States will decide cases before it by choosing rules appropriate for decision from among various sources of law?
560	Yeary v. Bell, 228 Ga. App. 522, 523–24, 492 S.E.2d 278, 280 (1997)	3	Preliminary hearing of defenses of lack of jurisdiction over person, improper service, and improper venue whether made in pleading or by motion may be heard and determined by court before trial on application of party, and at such hearing factual issues shall be determined by trial court.	Moreover, "[a] preliminary hearing of defenses of lack of jurisdiction over the person[, improper service,] and improper venue whether made in *524 a pleading or by motion may be heard and determined by the court before trial on the application of any party. [Cits.] At such hearing factual issues shall be determined by the trial court."	"Can a preliminary hearing of defenses of lack of jurisdiction over person, improper service, and improper venue whether made in pleading or by motion be heard and determined by court before trial on application of any party?"

563	Smith v. Loews Miami Beach Hotel Operating Co., 35 So. 3d 101, 102 (Fla.App. 3 Dist., 2010)	2	The party seeking affirmative relief has an almost absolute right to dismiss his entire action once without a court order by serving a notice of dismissal at any time before a hearing on a motion for summary judgment. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.420(a)(1).	In accordance with this rule, the "party seeking affirmative relief has an almost absolute right to dismiss his entire action once without a court order by serving a notice of dismissal at any time before a hearing on a motion for summary judgment."	Does the party seeking affirmative relief have a right to dismiss the entire action without a court order by serving a notice of dismissal at any time before a hearing on a motion for summary judgment?
565	Cty. of La Crosse v. Wisconsin Employment Relations Comm'n, 182 Wis. 2d 15, 29 (1994)	4	Workers' Compensation Act represents legislative compromise between interests of employers, employees and public in resolving compensation disputes regarding work-related physical or mental harms arising in industrial society. W.S.A. 102.01 et seq.	The Worker's Compensation Act (Act) represents the legislative compromise between the interests of employers, employees and the public in resolving compensation disputes regarding work-related physical or mental harms arising in our industrial society.	"Does the workers compensation act represent a legislative compromise between the interests of the employers, employees and the public in resolving compensation disputes regarding work related physical or mental harms arising in industrial society?"
566	Hurrell-Harring v. State, 112 A.D.3d 1213, 1215, 977 N.Y.S.2d 464, 466–67 (2013)	1	While the decision to grant an application to discontinue a proceeding is generally committed to the sound discretion of the trial court, a party cannot ordinarily be compelled to litigate and, absent special circumstances—such as prejudice to a substantial right of the defendant or other improper consequences—discontinuance should be granted. McKinney's CPLR 3217(b).	CPLR 3217(b) provides that an action or proceeding may be discontinued "upon order of the court and upon terms and *1215 conditions, as the court deems proper." While the decision to grant such an application is generally 467 committed to the sound discretion of the trial court (see Tucker v. Tucker, 55 N.Y.2d 378, 383, 449 N.Y.S.2d 683, 434 N.E.2d 1050 [1982]), a party cannot ordinarily be compelled to litigate and, absent special circumstances—such as prejudice to a substantial right of the defendant or other improper consequences—discontinuance should be granted (see id. at 383–384, 449 N.Y.S.2d 683, 434 N.E.2d 1050; Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. v. Chaplin, 107 A.D.3d 881, 883, 969 N.Y.S.2d 67 [2013]; Matter of Bianchi v. Breakell, 48 A.D.3d 1000, 1001–1002, 852 N.Y.S.2d 454 [2008]; Christenson v. Gutman, 249 A.D.2d 805, 806, 671 N.Y.S.2d 835 [1998]).	"While the determination to permit a plaintiff to voluntarily discontinue an action is generally within the sound discretion of the court, can a party ordinarily be compelled to litigate and, absent special circumstances, such as prejudice to adverse parties, discontinuance should be granted?"

567	Ballard v. Meyers, 275 Ga. 819, 822, 572 S.E.2d 572, 576 (2002)	10	The pretrial disclosure requirement does not extend to documentary evidence upon which a party may possibly rely defensively for impeachment purposes; those documents that a litigant intends to rely upon affirmatively to meet the burden of proving his or her case still must be disclosed in the pretrial order. Uniform Superior Court Rule 7.2(14).	Our holding is a narrow one, as it provides only that the pretrial disclosure requirement does not extend to documentary evidence upon which a party may possibly rely defensively for impeachment purposes. Those documents that a litigant intends to rely upon affirmatively to meet the burden of proving his or her case still must be disclosed in the pretrial order.	Must those documents that a litigant intends to rely on affirmatively to meet a burden of proving his or her case be disclosed in a pretrial order?
568	Patterson v. Liz Claiborne, Inc., 872 So.2d 181, 188 (Ala.Civ.App.,2003)	11	In order to be entitled to a continuance, the movant must establish: (1) that the expected evidence will be material and competent; (2) a probability that the testimony can be obtained at a future date to which the cause may be continued or postponed; (3) due diligence having been exercised by the movant to secure the absent witness or evidence; (4) the expected evidence must be credible and will probably affect the result; (5) the evidence must not be merely cumulative or impeaching; and (6) that the motion for continuance is not made merely for purposes of delay. (Per Thompson, J., with one Judge concurring and one Judge concurring in the result.)	In order to be entitled to a continuance, the movant must establish: "(1) that the expected evidence will be material and competent; (2) a probability that the testimony can be obtained at a future date to which the cause may be continued or postponed; (3) due diligence having been exercised by the movant to secure the absent witness or evidence; (4) the expected evidence must be credible and will probably affect the result; (5) the evidence must not be merely cumulative or impeaching; [and] (6) that the motion for continuance is not made merely for purposes of delay."	"In order to be entitled to a continuance, what must a movant establish?"
569	Walton v. New York State Dep't of Corr. Servs., 57 A.D.3d 1180, 1183, 869 N.Y.S.2d 661, 665 (2008), aff'd, 13 N.Y.3d 475, 921 N.E.2d 145 (2009)	6	Regardless of the label placed on a charge or an assessment, "taxes" are burdens of a pecuniary nature imposed for the purpose of defraying the costs of government services generally without relation to particular benefits derived by the taxpayer.	Regardless of the label placed on a charge or an assessment, "taxes are burdens of a pecuniary nature imposed for the purpose of defraying the costs of government services generally" without relation to particular benefits derived by the taxpayer (New York Tel. Co. v. City of Amsterdam, 200 A.D.2d 315, 318, 613 N.Y.S.2d 993 [1994]; see Watergate II Apts. v. Buffalo Sewer Auth., 46 N.Y.2d 52, 58, 412 N.Y.S.2d 821, 385 N.E.2d 560 [1978]; Albany Area Bldrs. Assn. v. Town of Guilderland, 141 A.D.2d 293, 298, 534 N.Y.S.2d 791 [1988], aff'd, 74 N.Y.2d 372, 547 N.Y.S.2d 627, 546 N.E.2d 920 [1989]; Matter of Joslin v. Regan, 63 A.D.2d 466, 470, 406 N.Y.S.2d 938 [1978], aff'd, 48 N.Y.2d 746, 422 N.Y.S.2d 662, 397 N.E.2d 1329 [1979]).	Are taxes a burden of a pecuniary nature imposed for the purpose of defraying the costs of government services generally without relation to particular benefits derived by the taxpayer?

571	Futrell v. Scott Truck & Tractor Co. of Louisiana, 629 So. 2d 449, 453 (La. App. 1993)	2	Inherent in theory of pretrial procedure are orderly disposition of each case and of entire docket and avoidance of surprise; these are sufficient reasons for allowing trial judge to require adherence to pretrial order in conduct of action. LSA-C.C.P. art. 1551.	Inherent in the theory of pre-trial procedure are the orderly disposition of each case and of the entire docket and the avoidance of surprise. These are sufficient reasons for allowing the trial judge to require adherence to the pre-trial order in the conduct of the action.	Is an orderly disposition of each case and avoidance of surprise inherent in theory of pretrial procedure and are they sufficient reasons for allowing trial judge to require adherence to pretrial order in conduct of action?
573	Frevele v. McAloon, 222 Kan. 295, 295 (1977)	1	A pretrial order, entered by the trial court pursuant to statute, controls subsequent course of an action unless such order is modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice; statute reposes in trial court large discretionary powers. Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 16, K.S.A. 60-216.	A pretrial order, entered by the trial court pursuant to K.S.A. 60-216, controls the subsequent course of an action unless such order is modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice. This proviso reposes in the trial court large discretionary powers.	"Does a pretrial order, entered by the trial court pursuant to statute, control subsequent course of an action unless such order is modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice; statute reposes in trial court large discretionary powers?"
574	Burry & Son Homebuilders v. Ford, 310 S.C. 529, 531 (1992)	1	Generally, plaintiff is entitled to voluntary nonsuit without prejudice as matter of right unless legal prejudice is shown by defendant or important issues of public policy are present; once legal prejudice is found, granting or denial is within discretion of trial court. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(a)(1).	Generally, the plaintiff is entitled to a voluntary non-suit without prejudice as a matter of right unless legal prejudice is shown by the defendant or important issues of public policy are present. Bowen & Smoot v. Plumlee, 301 S.C. 262, 391 S.E.2d 558 (1990). 1 Once legal prejudice is found, the granting or denial is within the discretion of the trial court.	Is a plaintiff entitled to a voluntary non-suit without prejudice as a matter of right unless the defendant shows legal prejudice or important issues of public policy are present?
575	Loman v. Freeman, 375 Ill. App. 3d 445, 458 (2006)	7	Contract or no contract, if one cuts, carves, lacerates, incises, or otherwise alters someone else's property except as authorized by that person, one commits a classic tort: either trespass to chattels or conversion, depending on the extent of the alteration. Restatement (Second) of Torts SS 278, 892A.	Contract or no contract, if one cuts, carves, lacerates, incises, or otherwise alters someone else's property except as authorized by that person, one commits a classic tort: either trespass to chattels or conversion, depending on the extent of the alteration.	"Does one commit trespass to chattels if they cut, carve, lacerate, incise, or otherwise alter someone else's property?"
576	Maybach v. Falstaff Brewing Corp., 359 Mo. 446, 456 (1949)	12	Where from nature of case, plaintiff in action for damages for negligence could not be expected to know exact cause of precise negligent acts which became cause of injury, and facts are peculiarly within knowledge of defendant, plaintiff is not required to allege the particular cause. V.A.M.S. S 509.300.	Where, from the nature of the case, the plaintiff in an action for damages for negligence could not be expected to know the exact cause of the precise negligent act which became the cause of an injury, and the facts were peculiarly within the knowledge of the defendant, the plaintiff is not required to allege the particular cause.'	"Will a plaintiff be required to allege a particular cause, where from nature of case, the plaintiff in action for damages for negligence could not be expected to know exact cause of precise negligent act?"

577	In re Gillies' Estate, 8 N.J. 88, 101 (1951)	6	A child adopted in a foreign country may take under local statutes of descent and distribution if such foreign country had jurisdiction to fix his status with respect to adopted parents, but this rule of international comity is subject to condition that the law, with regard to adoption, of state in which real and personal property is situated, does not differ essentially from law of state in which adoption was had, so that local public policy is not violated by recognizing and giving effect to the adoption proceeding of the foreign country.	The weight of authority in this country is that a child adopted in a foreign state or country may take under local statutes of descent and distribution, if such foreign state or country had jurisdiction to fix his status with respect to his adoptive parents, but this rule of international comity is subject to the condition that the law, with regard to adoption, of the state in which the real and personal property is situated, does not differ essentially from the laws of the state in which the adoption was had, so that local public policy is not violated by recognizing and giving effect to the adoption proceedings of the foreign state or country.	What conditions are a comity subject to?
579	Robinson v. Global Resources, Inc., 300 Ga.App. 139, 140 (Ga.App.,2009)	2	Party's failure to timely respond to requests for admission conclusively establishes as a matter of law each of the matters addressed in the requests, even if the requested admissions require opinions or conclusions of law, so long as the legal conclusions relate to the facts of the case. West's Ga.Code Ann. S 9-11-36(b).	It is well settled that a party's failure to timely respond to requests for admission conclusively establishes as a matter of law each of the matters addressed in the requests. "This is true even if the requested admissions require opinions or conclusions of law, so long as the legal conclusions relate to the 106 facts of the case."	"Does a party's failure to timely respond to requests for admission conclusively establish as a matter of law each of the matters addressed in the requests, even if the requested admissions require opinions or conclusions of law, so long as the legal conclusions relate to the facts of the case?"
580	Kelly v. Gaines, 181 S.W.3d 394, 405 (Tex. App. 2005), rev'd, 235 S.W.3d 179 (Tex. 2007)	2	When a motion for continuance is premised on the withdrawal of counsel, the movant must show that the failure to be represented at trial is not due to his own fault or negligence, and this principle likewise applies when new counsel is retained shortly before trial.	When a continuance request is premised on the withdrawal of counsel, the movant must show that the failure to be represented at trial is not due to his own fault or negligence. Villegas v. Carter, 711 S.W.2d 624, 626 (Tex.1986); In re Posadas USA, Inc., 100 S.W.3d 254, 258 (Tex.App.-San Antonio 2001, orig. proceeding); St. Gelais v. Jackson, 769 S.W.2d 249, 253 (Tex.App.-Houston [14th Dist.] 1988, no writ). This principle likewise applies when new counsel is retained shortly before trial. See St. Gelais, 769 S.W.2d at 254.	"When a motion for continuance is premised on the withdrawal of counsel, must the movant show that the failure to be represented at trial is not due to his own fault or negligence, and this principle likewise applies when new counsel is retained shortly before trial?"

581	Bray v. Miller, 397 S.W.2d 103, 106 (Tex. App. 1965)	7	Trial judge does not abuse his discretion in overruling motion for continuance based on absence of witness when allegations of motion are nothing more than mere conclusions of pleader and do not allege specific facts to which absent witness could testify. Rules of Civil Procedure, rules 251, 252.	It is well settled by the decisions of the courts of Texas that a trial judge does not abuse his discretion in overruling a motion for continuance based on the absence of a witness when the allegations of the motion are nothing more than mere conclusions of the pleader and do not allege the specific facts to which the absent witness would testify.	Does a trial judge abuse his discretion in overruling a motion for continuance based on absence of a witness when allegations of a motion are nothing more than mere conclusions of pleader and do not allege specific facts to which absent witness could testify?
583	Krirat v. State, 286 Ga. App. 650, 657 (2007)	11	In all cases wherein a continuance is sought upon the ground of the absence of a witness, the movant must make a showing that the witness is absent, he has been subpoenaed, he does not reside more than 100 miles from the place of trial, his testimony is material, the absence is not with permission of the applicant, his testimony can be procured by the next term of court, the facts expected to be proved, and that application is not made for the purpose of delay. West's Ga.Code Ann. S 17-8-25.	In all cases wherein a continuance is sought upon the ground of the absence of a witness, the movant must make a showing of the requirements set forth in OCGA 17-8-25, i.e., the witness is absent, he has been subpoenaed, he does not reside more than 100 miles from the place of trial, his testimony is material, the absence is not with permission of the applicant, his testimony can be procured by the next term of court, the facts expected to be proved, and that application is not made for the purpose of delay.	"In an application for a continuance on the ground of the absence of the witness, what are the requirements to be shown by the movant?"
584	West v. Milner Enterprises, Inc., 162 Ga. App. 667, 667, 292 S.E.2d 538, 539 (1982)	1	To avoid conclusive establishment of matters contained in a request for admissions, party who has failed to answer or object to the request within the statutory period must move the court for withdrawal or amendment of the admissions. Code, S 81A-136(b).	To avoid the conclusive establishment of the matters contained in a request for admissions, the party who has failed to answer or to object to a request for admissions within the statutory period must move the court for withdrawal or amendment of the admissions in accordance with Code Ann. § 81A-136(b).	"To avoid conclusive establishment of matters contained in a request for admissions, must the party who has failed to answer or object to the request within the statutory period move the court for withdrawal or amendment of the admissions?"
585	DiMauro v. Metro. Suburban Bus Auth., 105 A.D.2d 236, 241, 483 N.Y.S.2d 383, 389 (1984)	10	It is abuse of discretion to deny continuance where application complies with every requirement of law and is not made merely for delay, where evidence is material and where need for a continuance does not result from failure to exercise due diligence.	"It is an abuse of discretion to deny a continuance where the application complies with every requirement of the law and is not made merely for delay, where the evidence is material and where the need for a continuance does not result from the failure to exercise due diligence (cf. [17] CJS, Continuances, § 46; Ludlam v. Riverhead Bond & Mtge. Corp, 244 App Div 113 [278 N.Y.S. 487]).	"Is it an abuse of discretion to deny continuance where an application complies with every of law and is not made merely for delay, where evidence is material and where need for a continuance does not result from failure to exercise due diligence?"

586	Estate of Despain v. Avante Grp., 900 So. 2d 637, 641 (Fla. App. 2005)	6	Although the punitive damages pleading statute is procedural in nature, it also provides a substantive right to parties not to be subjected to a punitive damages claim and attendant discovery of financial worth until the requisite showing under the statute has been made to the trial court. F.S.1999, S 768.72.	Accordingly, although section 768.72(1) is procedural in nature, it also provides a substantive right to parties not to be subjected to a punitive damage claim and attendant discovery of financial worth until the requisite showing under the statute has been made to the trial court.	Do parties have a substantive right not to be subjected to a punitive damages claim and attendant discovery of financial worth until the requisite showing of a reasonable basis for recovery of such damages has been made to the trial court?
587	Com., Dep't of Highways v. Frank Fehr Brewing Co., 376 S.W.2d 541, 542 (Ky. App. 1964)	2	If witness, or better witness, is discovered on eve of trial, unless there is some reason why continuance or delay would be abuse to opposing party or court, the most that could fairly be required is that opposing party be given reasonable time in which to examine witness and make such additional preparation as may be required by information elicited from him.	If a witness (or a better witness) is discovered on the eve of trial, unless there is some reason why a continuance or delay would be an abuse to the opposing party (or, possibly, upon the court) the most that could fairly be required is that he be given a reasonable time in which to examine the witness and make such additional preparation as may be required by the information elicited from him.	Should an opposing party be given reasonable time to examine a witness and make additional preparations if a witness is discovered on eve of trial?
589	Perryman v. Crawford, 968 So. 2d 83, 85 (Fla.App. 4 Dist., 2007)	4	In the context of the interpretation and enforcement of pretrial orders mandating witness disclosure, broad discretion is vested in the trial court and reviewing courts should reverse the trial judge only where there is a clear showing of abuse prejudicial to the affected party.	In the context of the interpretation and enforcement of pretrial orders mandating witness disclosure, broad discretion is vested in the trial court and reviewing courts should reverse the trial judge only where there is "a clear showing of abuse prejudicial to the affected party."	Is broad discretion vested in a trial court in the context of interpretation and enforcement of pretrial orders mandating witness disclosure and should the reviewing court reverse only where there is a showing of abuse?
591	Railroad Commission v. Humble Oil & Refining Co., 193 S.W.2d 824, 828 (Tex.Civ.App. 1946)	3	The Railroad Commission's power to regulate oil production in the interest both of conservation and of protecting correlative rights is a continuing one, and its proration orders are subject to change, modification, or amendment at any time, upon due notice and hearing, either upon the commission's own motion or upon application of interested parties.	The Commission's power to regulate oil production in the interest both of conservation and of protecting correlative rights is a continuing one, and its proration orders are subject to change, modification or amendment at any time, upon due notice and hearing, either upon the Commission's own motion or upon application of an interested party.	Is the Commission's power to regulate oil production in the interest of both conservation and protecting correlative right a continuing one?
592	Stonebridge Life Ins. Co. v. Pitts, 236 S.W.3d 226, 235 (Tex.App.-Corpus Christi, 2006)	11	Due process requires that defendants be permitted, in a class action, to take appropriate discovery of absent class members and to present evidence at trial reasonably calculated to defeat the class members' claims; therefore, the discovery limitations imposed by the certification of class must be appropriate and reasonable. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 14; Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 42.	For example, due process requires that defendants be permitted to take appropriate discovery of absent class members and to present evidence at trial reasonably calculated to defeat the class members' claims. See Peltier, 51 S.W.3d at 625. Therefore, the discovery limitations imposed by the certification must be appropriate and reasonable.	"Does due process require that defendants be permitted, in a class action, to take appropriate discovery of absent class members and to present evidence at trial reasonably calculated to defeat the class members' claims?"

593	Com. v. Cent. Realty Co., 338 Pa. 172, 180-81 (1940)	2	State taxes are essential to very preservation of state itself, while local levies are authorized or permitted by state merely to maintain machinery of local government, and commonwealth's direct revenues must be so guarded that no lien for state taxes shall be disturbed except by payment, unless some constitutional or statutory rule dictates otherwise.	'State taxes stand on a different basis from local levies; the former are essential to the very 'preservation' of the state itself (Schoyer v. Comet O. & R. Co., 284 Pa. 189, 193, 130 A. 413), while the latter are authorized or permitted by the state, not for its actual preservation, but merely to maintain the machinery of local government. So far as general principles enter into the matter, the basic interest of the sovereign authority requires the direct revenues of the commonwealth *181 to be so guarded that no lien for state taxes shall be disturbed except by payment, unless some constitutional or statutory rule dictates otherwise.' See also Harper v.	"While local levies are authorized or permitted by state merely to maintain machinery of local government, are state taxes essential to very preservation of a state itself?"
595	Towne Properties v. City of Fairfield, 50 Ohio St. 2d 356, 359-360 (Ohio, 1977)	5	Although, in the exercise of their taxing powers, municipalities and the state are subject to the requirements of the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, that clause imposes no iron rule of equality, prohibiting the flexibility and variety that are appropriate to reasonable schemes of taxation. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 14.	Of course, the States, in the exercise of their taxing power, are subject to the requirements of the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. But that clause imposes no iron rule of equality, prohibiting the flexibility and variety that are appropriate to reasonable schemes of state taxation.	"Does the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment impose an iron rule of equality, prohibiting the flexibility and variety that are appropriate to reasonable schemes of taxation by the municipalities and the state?"
596	Terry v. Terry, 160 Ind. App. 653, 667, 313 N.E.2d 83, 91 (1974)	15	Though trial judge may sua sponte grant continuance because of party's illness, such action is within sound discretion of judge and will not be disturbed on appeal absent clear showing of abuse of discretion.	Further, while a trial judge may sua sponte grant a continuance because of a party's illness, such action is within the sound discretion of the judge, and will not be disturbed on appeal absent a clear showing of abuse of discretion.	"Though a trial judge may sua sponte grant continuance because of a party's illness, is such action within the sound discretion of a judge and will not be disturbed on appeal absent a clear showing of abuse of discretion?"
597	Cobb v. Fisher, 20 So. 3d 1253, 1257 (Ala. 2009)	5	The decision concerning the appropriate sanction for failure to comply with a pretrial order, including whether to exclude the testimony of the noncomplying witness, is within the trial court's discretion, and the Supreme Court reviews such decisions to determine whether the trial court exceeded its discretion.	We note that "[t]he decision concerning the appropriate sanction for failure to comply with a pretrial order, including whether to exclude the testimony of the noncomplying witness, is within the trial court's discretion," and we review such decisions to determine whether the trial court exceeded its discretion.	"Is the decision concerning the appropriate sanction for failure to comply with a pretrial order, including whether to exclude the testimony of the noncomplying witness, within the trial court's discretion?"

598	Copiah Cty. Sch. Dist. v. Buckner, 61 So. 3d 162, 166 (Miss. 2011)	4	The plaintiff bears the burden to demonstrate good cause for a failure to serve process in a timely manner; to establish good cause the plaintiff must demonstrate at least as much as would be required to show excusable neglect, as to which simple inadvertence or mistake of counsel or ignorance of the rules usually does not suffice, and the plaintiff must demonstrate that a diligent effort was made to effect timely service. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 4(h).	The plaintiff bears the burden to demonstrate good cause for a failure to serve process in a timely manner. Montgomery v. SmithKline Beecham Corp., 910 So.2d 541, 547 (Miss.2005) (citing Holmes v. Coast Transit Auth., 815 So.2d 1183, 1184 (Miss.2002)). "To establish 'good cause' the plaintiff must demonstrate at least as much as would be required to show excusable neglect, 'as to which simple inadvertence or mistake of counsel or ignorance of the rules usually does not suffice.'" Webster, 834 So.2d at 28 (citing Peters v. United States, 9 F.3d 344, 345 (5th Cir.1993)). To meet the burden of proof of good cause, the plaintiff must demonstrate that a diligent effort was made to effect timely service.	Does the plaintiff bear the burden to demonstrate good cause for a failure to serve process in a timely manner in order to avoid dismissal of action?
601	Holland v. Lefler, 80 Ark. App. 316, 321 (2003)	6	Service of process under civil procedure rule governing summons must be accomplished within 120 days after the filing of complaint unless plaintiff has filed a motion to extend time prior to the expiration of the deadline; if service is not obtained within that time and no timely motion to extend is made, dismissal of the action is mandatory. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 4(i).	Service of process under Rule 4(i) must be accomplished within 120 days after the filing of the complaint unless the plaintiff has filed a motion to extend time prior to the expiration of the deadline. Id. If service is not obtained within that time and no timely motion to extend is made, dismissal of the action is mandatory.	Should service of process under civil procedure rule governing summons be accomplished within 120 days after the filing of complaint unless a plaintiff has filed a motion to extend time prior to the expiration of the deadline?
603	Blinkoff v. O & G Indus., 89 Conn. App. 251, 257 (2005)	10	Although dismissal of an action is not an abuse of discretion where a party shows a deliberate, contumacious, or unwarranted disregard for the court's authority, the court should be reluctant to employ the sanction of dismissal except as a last resort; the sanction of dismissal should be imposed only as a last resort, and where it would be the only reasonable remedy available to vindicate the legitimate interests of the other party and the court.	Therefore, although dismissal of an action is not an abuse of discretion where a party shows a deliberate, contumacious or unwarranted disregard for the court's authority ... the court should be reluctant to employ the sanction of dismissal except as a last resort.... [T]he sanction *258 of dismissal should be imposed only as a last resort, and where it would be the only reasonable remedy available to vindicate the legitimate interests of the other party and the court."	"Is dismissal of an action not an abuse of discretion where a party shows a deliberate, contumacious, or unwarranted disregard for the court's authority?"

607	Trans Health Mgmt. Inc. v. Nunziata, 159 So. 3d 850, 861 (Fla.App. 2 Dist., 2014)	15	A "fraud on the court" occurs where it can be demonstrated, clearly and convincingly, that a party has sentiently set in motion some unconscionable scheme calculated to interfere with the judicial system's ability impartially to adjudicate a matter by improperly influencing the trier or unfairly hampering the presentation of the opposing party's claim or defense.	As this court has explained: "A 'fraud on the court' occurs where it can be demonstrated, clearly and convincingly, that a party has sentiently set in motion some unconscionable scheme calculated to interfere with the judicial system's ability impartially to adjudicate a matter by improperly influencing the trier or unfairly hampering the presentation of the opposing party's claim or defense.	"Does fraud arise when it can be demonstrated, clearly and convincingly, that a party has sentiently set in motion some unconscionable scheme?"
608	Reyes v. Int'l Metals Supply Co., 666 S.W.2d 622, 624 (Tex. App. 1984)	1	Generally, where party fails to answer a request for admissions within period set by trial court, facts stated therein will be taken as true, and courts will not allow evidence to refute or controvert those facts. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 169.	Generally, where a party fails to answer a request for admissions within the period set by the court, the facts stated therein will be taken as true, and the courts will not allow evidence to refute or controvert these facts.	"Generally, where a party fails to answer a request for admissions within the period set by a trial court, will the facts stated therein be taken as true, and courts will not allow evidence to refute or controvert those facts?"
609	Mueller v. Shacklett, 156 Neb. 881, 887 (1953)	9	Where a party properly serves request for admissions of relevant matters of fact or genuineness of relevant documents, and all objections thereto are heard and appropriately denied by court, and other party has been ordered to respond thereto, failure of such party to do so within time allotted constitutes admission of facts sought to be elicited. R.S.Supp.1951, S 25-1267.41.	In that connection, the applicable rule here is that where a party properly serves a request for admissions of relevant matters of fact or the genuineness of relevant documents, and all objections thereto are heard and appropriately denied by the court, and the other party has been ordered to respond thereto, his failure to do so within the time allotted constitutes an admission of the facts sought to be elicited.	Does a failure to appropriately respond within time allotted to a properly served request for admission of facts constitute an admission of facts sought to be elicited?
610	Cordts v. Chicago Tribune Co., 369 Ill. App. 3d 601, 606-07 (2006)	1	A motion to dismiss based upon certain defects or defenses admits the legal sufficiency of the complaint and raises defects, defenses, or other affirmative matters which appear on the face of the complaint or are established by external submissions which act to defeat the plaintiff's claim, thus enabling the court to dismiss the complaint after considering issues of law or easily proved issues of fact. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-619.	A section 2-619 motion to dismiss * * * admits the legal sufficiency *607 of the complaint and raises defects, defenses or other affirmative matters * * * which appear on the face of the complaint or are established by external submissions which act to defeat the plaintiff's claim, thus enabling the court to dismiss the complaint after considering issues of law or easily proved issues of fact.	Can a motion to dismiss base upon defects or defenses admit the legal sufficiency of the complaint?
611	Tenneco Resins v. Davy Int'l, AG, 770 F.2d 416, 421 (C.A.5 (Tex.), 1985)	6	When only a minimal amount of discovery has been conducted, which may also be useful for purpose of arbitration, court should not ordinarily infer waiver based upon prejudice to party opposing the motion to stay litigation pending arbitration.	However, when only a minimal amount of discovery has been conducted, which may also be useful for the purpose of arbitration, the court should not ordinarily infer waiver based upon prejudice to the party opposing the motion to stay litigation.	Can a court infer waiver based upon prejudice to the party opposing the motion to stay litigation pending arbitration when only a minimal amount of discovery has been conducted?

612	Patton v. Kera Tech., 946 So. 2d 983, 986 (Fla., 2006)	1	A two-step test is to be applied by trial courts considering whether a dismissal for failure to prosecute is proper: first, the defendant must show that there was no record activity for the year preceding the motion; second, if there was no record activity, the plaintiff has an opportunity to establish good cause why the action should not be dismissed. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.420(e).	This Court has identified a two-step test to be applied by trial courts considering whether a dismissal for failure to prosecute is proper under rule 1.420(e): "[F]irst, the defendant must show that there was no record activity for the year preceding the motion. Second, if there was no record activity, the plaintiff has an opportunity to establish good cause why the action should not be dismissed." Metropolitan Dade County v.	Is a two-step test to be applied by trial courts considering whether a dismissal for failure to prosecute is proper?
616	Jahn v. Burns, 593 P.2d 828, 831-32 (Wyo. 1979)	7	A negotiable instrument, or a commercial paper, involves the business of commerce insofar as activities delineated in Article III of the Uniform Commercial Code are concerned, i. e., transfer, rights of payor, payee, endorser, holder in due course, etc.; however, the use of such in connection with a noncommercial transaction does not ipso facto turn that transaction into a commercial transaction which is subject to other provisions of the Code. W.S.1977, SS 34-21-301 to 34-21-379.	A negotiable instrument, or a commercial paper, involves the business of commerce insofar as the activities delineated in Article 3 of the Code are concerned, i. e., transfer, rights of payor, payee, endorser, holder in due course, etc. However, the use of such in connection with a non-commercial transaction does not Ipso facto turn that transaction into a commercial transaction *832 which is subject to other provisions of the Code.	"Can use of negotiable instrument, or a commercial paper in connection with a non-commercial transaction turn that transaction into a commercial transaction?"
617	Morgan v. Am. Family Life Assur. Co. of Columbus, 559 F. Supp. 477, 480 (W.D. Va. 1983)	1	When ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, court must take all allegations in complaint as admitted, and pleading should not be dismissed unless it appears beyond doubt that plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of claim which would entitle him to relief.	When ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, the court must take all allegations in the complaint as admitted, and the pleading should not be dismissed "unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief."	"In ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, should the allegations of the complaint be viewed as admitted?"
618	Harvey v. Town of Tiverton, 764 A.2d 141, 143 (R.I. 2001)	6	In considering a motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute, the court is required to weigh conflicting interests: on the one hand is the court's need to manage its docket, the public interest in the expeditious resolution of litigation, and the risk of prejudice to the defendants from delay; on the other hand, there is the desire to dispose of cases on their merits. Superior Court Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b)(2).	In considering a motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute, the court is "required to weigh conflicting interests. On the one hand is the court's need to manage its docket, the public interest in the expeditious resolution of litigation, and the risk of prejudice to the defendants from delay. On the other hand, there is the desire to dispose of cases on their merits."	"Is a court required to weigh the risk of prejudice to the defendants from delay, in considering a motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute?"

619	Pursell v. First Am. Nat. Bank, 937 S.W.2d 838, 840 (Tenn., 1996)	1	Motion to dismiss for failure to state claim upon which relief can be granted tests sufficiency of complaint; basis for motion is that allegations contained in complaint, considered alone and taken as true, are insufficient to state claim as matter of law.	A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted tests the sufficiency of the complaint. The basis for the motion is that the allegations contained in the complaint, considered alone and taken as true, are insufficient to state a claim as a matter of law.	"Would the basis for a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is that the allegations in the complaint when considered alone and taken as true, are insufficient to state a claim as a matter of law?"
622	Rodriguez v. Brady, 79 N.E.3d 841, 845 (Ill.App. 3 Dist., 2017)	2	The critical inquiry in deciding a motion to dismiss with respect to the pleadings is whether the allegations of the complaint, considered in a light most favorable to the plaintiff, are sufficient to state a cause of action upon which relief can be granted. 735 Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann. 2-615.	"The critical inquiry in deciding a section 2-615 motion to dismiss is whether the allegations of the complaint, considered in a light most favorable to the plaintiff, are sufficient to state a cause of action upon which relief can be granted."	Is critical inquiry in deciding a section 2-615 motion to dismiss the allegations of the complaint those which are considered in a light most favorable to the plaintiff sufficient to state a cause of action upon which relief can be granted?
623	Randolph v. Hays, 665 P.2d 500, 503 (Wyo., 1983)	4	While no precise rule may be laid down as to what circumstances justify dismissal for lack of prosecution, circumstances surrounding each case must be examined, keeping in mind the conflict between need for the court to manage its docket for purpose of preventing undue delay on the one hand, and policy favoring disposition of cases on the merits on the other hand. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b)(2); District Court Rule 14.	While no precise rule may be laid down as to what circumstances justify a dismissal for lack of prosecution, the circumstances surrounding each case must be examined, keeping in mind the conflict between the need for the court to manage its docket for the purpose of preventing undue delay on the one hand, and the policy favoring disposition of cases on the merits on the other hand.	Is there a precise rule that may be laid down as to what circumstances justify dismissal for lack of prosecution?
624	Salabaschew v. TRW, 100 Ohio App. 3d 503, 507 (1995)	4	To successfully proceed with action, burden is on plaintiff to attend all pretrial and trial proceedings as well as to be available for depositions and other discovery; should plaintiff fail to fully prosecute action or comply with discovery, trial court could impose appropriate sanctions including involuntary dismissal of case.	In order to successfully proceed with this action, the burden is on appellant to attend all pretrial and trial proceedings as well as to be available for depositions and other discovery. Should appellant fail to fully prosecute the action or comply with discovery, the trial court could impose the appropriate sanctions including involuntary dismissal of the case.	Can court impose appropriate sanctions including involuntary dismissal of case if plaintiff fails to fully prosecute action or comply with discovery?
625	Cogswell v. Am. Transit Ins. Co., 282 Conn. 505, 516 (2007)	8	The motion to dismiss admits all facts which are well pleaded, invokes the existing record, and must be decided upon that alone; however, where the motion is accompanied by supporting affidavits containing undisputed facts, the court may look to their content for determination of a jurisdictional issue.	"The motion to dismiss ... admits all facts which are well pleaded, invokes the existing record and must be decided upon that alone.... Where, however, as here, the motion is accompanied by supporting affidavits containing undisputed facts, the court may look to their content for determination of the jurisdictional issue	"Does a motion to dismiss admit all facts that are well pleaded, invokes the existing record, and must be decided upon that alone?"

626	Wilson Tool & Die, Inc. v. TBDN-Tennessee Co., 237 S.W.3d 611, 615 (Mo. Ct. App. 2007)	3	When a motion to dismiss for lack of long-arm jurisdiction is based on facts not appearing on the record, the trial court may hear it on affidavits presented by the parties, or the court may direct that the matter be heard wholly or partly on oral testimony or deposition. V.A.M.S. § 506.500.	When a motion to dismiss for lack of long-arm jurisdiction "is based on facts not appearing on the record, the trial court may hear it on affidavits presented by the parties, or the court may direct that the matter be heard wholly or partly on oral testimony or deposition."	"When a motion to dismiss for lack of long-arm jurisdiction is based on facts not appearing on the record, can the trial court hear it on affidavits presented by the parties?"
627	Cogswell v. Am. Transit Ins. Co., 282 Conn. 505, 516 (2007)	8	The motion to dismiss admits all facts which are well pleaded, invokes the existing record, and must be decided upon that alone; however, where the motion is accompanied by supporting affidavits containing undisputed facts, the court may look to their content for determination of a jurisdictional issue.	"The motion to dismiss ... admits all facts which are well pleaded, invokes the existing record and must be decided upon that alone.... Where, however, as here, the motion is accompanied by supporting affidavits containing undisputed facts, the court may look to their content for determination of the jurisdictional issue	"Does the motion to dismiss admit all facts which are well pleaded, invokes the existing record, and must be decided upon that alone?"
629	Fisher & Co. v. Dep't of Treasury, 282 Mich. App. 207, 209-10 (2009)	3	A sales-use tax scheme is designed to make all tangible personal property, whether acquired in, or out of, the state subject to a uniform tax burden; sales and use taxes are mutually exclusive but complementary, and are designed to exact an equal tax based on a percentage of the purchase price of the property in question. M.C.L.A. §§ 205.51 et seq., 205.91 et seq.	"A sales-use tax scheme is designed to make all tangible personal property, whether acquired in, or out of, the state subject to a uniform tax burden. Sales and use taxes are mutually exclusive but complementary, and are designed to exact an equal tax based on a percentage of the purchase price of the property in question."	"Is a sales-use tax scheme designed to make all tangible personal property, whether acquired in, or out of, the state subject to a uniform tax burden?"
630	Pierson v. State, 398 S.W.3d 406, 412 (Tex. App. 2013)	5	Although a retrial is absolutely prohibited when a trial ends in an acquittal or a conviction, a retrial may not be automatically barred when a criminal proceeding is terminated without finally resolving the merits of the charges against the accused; under such circumstances, a retrial over the objection of a defendant is permitted only when the prosecutor demonstrates manifest necessity. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Although a retrial is absolutely prohibited when a trial ends in an acquittal or a conviction, a retrial may not be "automatically barred when a criminal proceeding is terminated without finally resolving the merits of the charges against the accused." Under such circumstances, a retrial over the objection of a defendant is permitted only when the prosecutor demonstrates "manifest necessity."	"Although a retrial is absolutely prohibited when a trial ends in an acquittal or a conviction, can a retrial not be automatically barred when a criminal proceeding is terminated without finally resolving the merits of the charges against the accused?"
631	City of Philadelphia v. Williams, 122 Pa. Cmwlth. 630, 632 (1989)	1	Before court may grant petition to open judgment non pros, petition must be timely filed, there must be reasonable explanation or excuse for default, and facts constituting grounds for cause of action must be alleged.	Before a court may grant a petition to open judgment there must be a coalescence of three factors: (1) the petition to open judgment must be timely filed, (2) there must be a reasonable explanation or excuse for the default, and (3) facts constituting grounds for a cause of action must be alleged.	"Before court can grant petition to open judgment non pros, should a petition be timely filed, there must be reasonable explanation or excuse for default, and facts constituting grounds for cause of action must be alleged?"

633	McPhail v. F & B Assocs., 160 A.D.2d 398, 554 N.Y.S.2d 25, 25 (1990)	1	While party which has had its action stricken from trial calendar and not restored for one year must move to vacate automatic dismissal of complaint, court may properly treat motion to restore case as one to vacate dismissal. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	In that regard, while a party which has had its action stricken from the trial calendar and not restored for one year must move to vacate the automatic dismissal of the complaint, the court may properly treat a motion to restore the case as one to vacate the dismissal (Merrill v. Robinson, 99 A.D.2d 578, 470 N.Y.S.2d 960).	"While a party which has had its action stricken from the trial calendar and not restored for one year must move to vacate automatic dismissal of complaint, can a court properly treat a motion to restore case as one to vacate dismissal?"
634	Greater Franklin Developers Ass'n v. Town of Franklin, 49 Mass. App. Ct. 500, 502 (2000)	2	"Fees" share common traits that distinguish them from "taxes": (1) they are charged in exchange for particular governmental service which benefits party paying the fee in manner not shared by other members of society, (2) they are paid by choice, in that party paying the fee has option of not utilizing the governmental service and thereby avoiding the charge, and (3) the charges are collected not to raise revenues but to compensate governmental entity providing the services for its expenses. M.G.L.A. Const. Amend. Art. 89, S 7; M.G.L.A. c. 40, S 22F.	Fees "share common traits that distinguish them from taxes: [1] they are charged in exchange for a particular governmental service which benefits the party paying the fee in a manner 'not shared by other members of society'; [2] they are paid by choice, in that the party paying the fee has the option of not utilizing the governmental service and thereby avoiding the charge; and [3] the charges are collected not to raise revenues but to compensate the governmental entity providing the services for its expenses."	"In distinguishing fees with taxes, do fees benefit the party in a manner not shared by other members of society?"
635	Merch. v. State, 201 So. 3d 146, 151 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2016)	3	In cases where a mistrial is declared over the objection of the defendant, the double jeopardy clause does not guarantee that the defendant cannot be retried; right to have a trial concluded by a particular tribunal must give way to the public interest in allowing the State one full and fair opportunity to present evidence to an impartial jury. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; West's F.S.A. Const. Art. 1, S 9.	Even in cases where a mistrial is declared over the objection of the defendant, the double jeopardy clause does not guarantee that a defendant cannot be retried. The right to have a trial concluded by a particular tribunal sometimes must give way to the public interest in allowing the State one "full and fair opportunity" to present evidence to an impartial jury.	"Where mistrial is declared over objection of a defendant, does a double jeopardy clause not guarantee that a defendant cannot be retried?"
638	State v. Gradison, 758 N.E.2d 1008, 1013–14 (Ind. Ct. App. 2001)	11	A trial court's judgment that the evidence is legally insufficient to support a guilty verdict, even though erroneous, acts as an acquittal for double jeopardy purposes, and any retrial would violate defendant's rights under the Double Jeopardy Clause. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	A trial court's judgment that the evidence is legally insufficient to support a guilty verdict, even though erroneous, acts as an acquittal for double jeopardy purposes, *1014 and any retrial would violate Gradison's rights under the Double Jeopardy Clause.	"Does a trial court's judgment that the evidence legally insufficient to support a guilty verdict, even though erroneous, act as an acquittal for double jeopardy purposes?"

639	Campanelli v. AT&T Wireless Serv., 85 Ohio St. 3d 103, 106 (1999)	4	Although no one factor is controlling in determining whether an entity conducts its operation in such a manner as to be a matter of public concern, Supreme Court weighs several, including lack of competition in the local marketplace, the good or service provided, and the existence of regulation by government authority, to determine if an entity, alleged to be a public utility, conducts its business in such a way as to become a matter of public concern.	Although no one factor is controlling in determining whether an entity conducts its operation in such a manner as to be a matter of public concern, we must weigh several, including lack of competition in the local marketplace, the good or service provided, and the existence of regulation by government authority, in order to determine whether an entity conducts its business in such a way as to become a matter of public concern.	Are any factors controlling in determining whether an entity conducts in the matter of public concern?
640	Wolf v. Scott Wetzel Servs., Inc., 113 Wash. 2d 665, 668–69, 782 P.2d 203, 205 (1989)	2	Under the Industrial Insurance Act, employer pays some claims for which it would not be liable under the common law in exchange for limited liability, whereas the employee gives up common-law actions and remedies in exchange for sure and certain relief. West's RCWA 51.04.010, 51.32.010.	Under the IIA, the employer pays some claims for which it would not be liable under the common law in exchange for limited *669 liability. ³ The employee, on the other hand, gives up common law actions and remedies in exchange for sure and certain relief.	"Under the Industrial Insurance Act, does an employer pay some claims for which it would not be liable under the common law in exchange for limited liability, whereas the employee gives up common-law actions and remedies in exchange for sure and certain relief?"
644	Wasko v. Manella, 269 Conn. 527, 532–33, 849 A.2d 777, 781 (2004)	4	The object of legal or equitable subrogation is the prevention of injustice; it is designed to promote and to accomplish justice, and is the mode which equity adopts to compel the ultimate payment of a debt by one who, in justice, equity, and good conscience, should pay it.	The object of [legal or equitable] subrogation is the prevention of injustice. It is designed to promote and to accomplish justice, and is the mode which equity adopts to compel the ultimate payment of a debt by one who, in justice, equity, and good conscience, should pay it....	"Is legal or equitable subrogation designed to promote and to accomplish justice, and is the mode that equity adopts to compel the ultimate payment of a debt by one who, in justice, equity and good conscience should pay it?"
645	Salomon S.A. v. Scott USA Ltd. Partnership, 117 F.R.D. 320, 321 (D.Mass.,1987)	1	District court may, in its discretion, defer or abate proceedings where another suit involving identical issues is pending in either federal or state court and it would be duplicative, uneconomical, and vexatious to proceed otherwise, and court has broad discretion in questions of severance. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 21, 28 U.S.C.A.	A district court may, in its discretion, defer or abate proceedings where another suit, involving identical issues, is pending in either a federal or state court, and where it would be duplicative, uneconomical, and vexatious to proceed otherwise, Blinder, Robinson & Co., Inc. v. U.S.S.E.C., 692 F.2d 102, 106 (10th Cir.1982). Moreover, the court has broad discretion on such questions of severance,	"Can a court in its discretion defer or abate proceedings, where another suit involving identical issues is pending either in federal or state court?"

646	Brown v. Wood, 451 So. 2d 569, 572-73 (La. App. 1984)	2	Under general codal provisions on acquisitive prescription, possessor lacking good faith or just title may acquire prescriptive title to land by corporeally possessing tract for 30 years with intent to possess as owner, but only when possession is continuous, uninterrupted, peaceable, public and unequivocal, and only as to such immovable property as is actually possessed; alternatively, titleholder may acquire more land than his title calls for by possessing property beyond his title for 30 years without interruption and within visible bounds, and may attain 30 years possessory period, which is necessary to perfect prescriptive title in absence of good faith and just title, by tacking on possession of his ancestor in title. LSA-C.C. arts. 794, 3424, 3441, 3442, 3476, 3486, 3487, 3488.	Under the general codal provisions on acquisitive prescription, a possessor lacking good faith and/or just title may acquire prescriptive title to land by corporeally possessing a tract for 30 years with the intent to possess as owner. Such possession confers prescriptive title upon the possessor only when it is continuous, uninterrupted, peaceable, public and unequivocal, and confers title only to such immovable property as is actually possessed. LSA-C.C. Arts. 3424, 3476, 3486, 3487, 3488. Alternatively, under Civil Code Art. 794, a title holder may acquire more land than his title calls for by possessing property beyond his title for 30 years without interruption and within visible bounds. Such a title holder may attain the thirty *573 year possessory period-which is necessary to perfect prescriptive title in the absence of good faith and just title-by "tacking" on the possession of his ancestor in title.	Can the ownership of immovable property under record title be eclipsed and superseded by ownership acquired under prescriptive title?
649	Kent Cty. Rd. Comm'n v. Hunting, 170 Mich. App. 222, 233 (1988)	5	Under Michigan Environmental Protection Act, trial court must conduct dual inquiry to determine if prima facie showing of pollution, impairment, or destruction of natural resource has been made by assessing whether natural resource is involved and whether impact of activity on environment rises to level of impairment to justify trial court's intervention. M.C.L.A. S 691.1201 et seq.	The trial court must conduct a dual inquiry to determine if a prima facie showing of pollution, impairment, or destruction of a natural resource has been made: (1) whether a natural resource is involved, and (2) whether the impact of the activity on the environment rises to the level of impairment to justify the trial court's intervention.	"How does the trial court determine if a prima facie showing of pollution, impairment, or destruction of a natural resource has been made?"
651	Guilford Cty. ex rel. Holt v. Puckett, 191 N.C. App. 693, 696 (2008)	3	The doctrine of subrogation is one of equity and benevolence, and, like contribution and other similar equitable rights, was adopted from the civil law, and its basis is the doing of complete, essential, and perfect justice between all the parties without regard to form, and its object is the prevention of injustice.	"The doctrine [of subrogation] is one of equity and benevolence, and, like contribution and other similar equitable rights, was adopted from the civil law, and its basis is the doing of complete, essential and perfect justice between all the parties without regard to form, and its object is the prevention of injustice."	"Is the basis of subrogation the doing of complete, essential, and perfect justice between all the parties without regard to form, and its object is the prevention of injustice?"

653	Air Pegasus of D.C. v. United States, 424 F.3d 1206, 1213 (2005)	5	The Constitution does not itself create or define the scope of property interests protected by the Fifth Amendment; instead, existing rules and understandings and background principles derived from an independent source, such as state, federal, or common law, define the dimensions of the requisite property rights for purposes of establishing a cognizable taking. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	However, the Constitution does not itself create or define the scope of "property" interests protected by the Fifth Amendment. "Instead, 'existing rules and understandings' and 'background principles' derived from an independent source, such as state, federal, or common law, define the dimensions of the requisite property rights for purposes of establishing a cognizable taking."	What defines the dimensions of the requisite property rights for purposes of establishing a cognizable taking?
656	Ramirez & Feraud Chili Co. v. Las Palmas Food Co., 146 F. Supp. 594, 600 (S.D.Cal., 1956)	7	The power to impose, even upon foreigners owing no allegiance, liability for acts done abroad which proximately cause damage within territorial limits of sovereign is inherent in national sovereignty.	Also inherent in national sovereignty is the power to impose, even upon foreigners owing no allegiance, liability for acts done abroad which proximately cause damage within the territorial limits of the sovereign.	Is there inherent power national sovereignty to impose liability on foreigners for acts done abroad which proximately cause damage within the territorial limits of the sovereign?
659	Schweitzer v. Westminster Investments, 157 Cal. App. 4th 1195, 1213-1214 (2007)	24	A motion in limine, which is a commonly used tool at the beginning of trial when evidentiary issues are anticipated by the parties, is designed to preclude the presentation of evidence deemed inadmissible and prejudicial by the moving party.	A motion in limine, which is a commonly used tool brought at the beginning of trial when evidentiary issues are anticipated by the parties, is designed to preclude the presentation of evidence deemed inadmissible and prejudicial by the moving party.	"Is a motion in limine, which is a commonly used tool at the beginning of trial when evidentiary issues are anticipated by the parties, designed to preclude the presentation of evidence deemed inadmissible and prejudicial by the moving party?"
660	Allied Bank Int'l v. Banco Credito Agricola de Cartago, 757 F.2d 516, 520-21 (2d Cir. 1985)	4	Applicability of "act of state" doctrine depends on likely impact on international relations that would result from judicial consideration of the foreign sovereign's act; if adjudication would embarrass or hinder the executive in realm of foreign relations, court should refrain from inquiring into validity of the foreign state's act.	Therefore, the applicability of the doctrine depends on the likely impact on international relations that *521 would result from judicial consideration of the foreign sovereign's act. 2 If adjudication would embarrass or hinder the executive in the realm of foreign relations, the court should refrain from inquiring into the validity of the foreign state's act.	"In determining applicability of ""act of state"" doctrine, is the likely impact on international relations that would result from judicial consideration of foreign sovereign's act relevant?"
661	Roe v. Unocal Corp., 70 F. Supp. 2d 1073, 1079 (C.D.Cal., 1999)	4	Act of state doctrine embodies purely prudential concern that judicial inquiry into the validity of foreign nation's sovereign acts may interfere with executive and congressional foreign policy efforts.	In other words, the act of state doctrine embodies the purely prudential concern that judicial inquiry into the validity of a foreign nation's sovereign acts may interfere with Executive and Congressional foreign policy efforts.	Does the act of state doctrine embody purely prudential concern that judicial inquiry into the validity of a foreign nation's sovereign acts may interfere with executive and congressional foreign policy efforts?

662	Nat'l Coal. Gov't of Union of Burma v. Unocal, 176 F.R.D. 329, 349-50 (C.D.Cal., 1997)	26	Act of state doctrine embodies purely prudential concern that judicial inquiry into validity of foreign nation's sovereign acts may interfere with Executive and Congressional foreign policy efforts.	In other words, the act of state doctrine embodies the purely prudential concern that judicial inquiry into the validity of a foreign nation's sovereign acts may interfere with Executive and Congressional foreign policy *350 efforts.	Does the act of state doctrine embody purely prudential concern that judicial inquiry into validity of a foreign nation's sovereign acts may interfere with the Executive and Congressional foreign policy efforts?
663	Tachiona ex rel. Tachiona v. Mugabe, 186 F. Supp. 2d 383, 390 (S.D.N.Y., 2002)	3	Precise contours of protection from assertions of foreign territorial jurisdiction over heads of state are not specifically spelled out in any treaty or universally accepted instrument reflecting customary international law.	Leaving the Vienna Convention aside for the moment, the precise contours of the protection from assertions of foreign territorial jurisdiction over heads of state are not specifically spelled out in any other treaty or universally accepted instrument reflecting customary international law.	Are the precise contours of protection from assertions of foreign territorial jurisdiction over heads of state specifically spelled out in any treaty or universally accepted instrument reflecting customary international law?
666	Teegarden v. United States, 42 Fed. Cl. 252, 257 (Fed.Cl., 1998)	5	In the context of a claim for inverse condemnation, damages resulting from a random event induced more by an extraordinary natural phenomenon than by government interference cannot rise to the level of a compensable taking, even if there is permanent damage to property partially attributable to government activity. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	In the context of a claim for inverse condemnation, damages resulting from " 'a random event induced more by an extraordinary natural phenomenon than by Government interference' " cannot rise to the level of a compensable taking, "even if there is permanent damage to property partially attributable to Government activity."	"Can damages resulting from a random event induced more by an extraordinary natural phenomenon than by Government interference, rise to the level of a compensable taking?"
667	Florida Power & Light Co. v. Sys. Council U-4 of Int'l Bhd. of Elec. Workers, AFL-CIO, 307 So.2d 189, 192 (Fla. App. 1975)	2	In absence of a proper supplemental bill filed after permission duly granted, right of complainant to relief prayed must be determined upon facts existing at time original bill was filed. 30 West's F.S.A. Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 1.190(a, d).	In the absence of proper supplemental bill filed after permission duly granted, the right of complainant to the relief prayed must be determined upon the facts existing at the time the original bill was filed.	"In absence of a proper supplemental bill filed after permission duly granted, must the right of the complainant to the relief prayed be determined upon facts existing at the time the original bill was filed?"
668	First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n of Hamilton v. Haley, 377 So. 2d 1082, 1084 (Ala. App. 1979)	3	Venue statute, which relates to equitable proceedings against individuals when the subject matter of the action is real estate, has no limitation upon the general statewide jurisdiction of a circuit court. Code of Ala.1975, S 6-3-2; Const.1901, Amend. 328, S 6.04.	That statute is a venue statute relating to equitable proceedings against individuals when the subject matter of the action is real estate. It has no limitation upon the general state- wide jurisdiction of a circuit court. Ala.Const. amend. 328, s 6.04 (1973).	"Does a venue statute, which relates to equitable proceedings against individuals when the subject matter of the action is real estate, have any limitation upon the general statewide jurisdiction of a circuit court?"
669	Felmler v. Falcon Cable TV, 36 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1038, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 158, 161 (1995), as modified (July 28, 1995)	6	Workers' compensation scheme operates regardless of fault and achieves identical purposes that underlie recovery under peculiar risk doctrine by ensuring swift, sure compensation for workplace injuries.	That is because the workers' compensation scheme operates regardless of fault and achieves the identical purposes that underlie recovery under the peculiar risk doctrine by ensuring swift, sure compensation for workplace injuries.	"Does the workers compensation scheme operate regardless of fault and achieve identical purposes that underlie recovery under the peculiar risk doctrine by ensuring swift, sure compensation for workplace injuries?"

670	Dome Labs. v. Farrell, 599 P.2d 152, 155 (Alaska 1979)	1	Method of dismissal, under rule allowing plaintiff to file notice of dismissal at any time before service by adverse party of answer or of motion for summary judgment, whichever first occurs, is matter of right running to plaintiff and may not be extinguished or circumscribed by adversary or court. Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 41(a)(1)(a).	Civil Rule 41(a)(1) (a) allows the plaintiff to file a notice of dismissal "at any time before service by the adverse party of an answer or of a motion for summary judgment, whichever first occurs" 2 This method of dismissal is a " 'matter of right running to the plaintiff and may not be extinguished or circumscribed by adversary or court.' "	Is voluntary dismissal by notice a matter of right running to the plaintiff and may not be extinguished or circumscribed by adversary or court?
673	Kwaiser v. Peters, 6 Mich. App. 153, 158 (1967)	1	Statement in Supreme Court decision that there is no reason why plaintiff may not secure, on oath prior to trial, such information as will fairly disclose whether any prospective juror is interested, along with an insurer, in the result of the case at hand cannot be interpreted as authorizing use of a new procedural device entitled a "demand."	(T)here is no reason why the questing plaintiff may not secure, on oath prior to trial, such information as will fairly disclose whether any prospective juror is interested, along with an insurer, in the result of the case at hand.' These words of advice, however, cannot be interpreted as authorizing the use of a new procedural device, entitled a 'demand.'	"Is there a reason why questing plaintiff may not secure, on oath prior to trial, such information as will fairly disclose whether any prospective juror is interested, along with an insurer, in the result of the case at hand?"
676	321 Henderson Receivables Origination LLC v. Ramos, 172 Cal. App. 4th 305321 Henderson Receivables Origination LLC v. Ramos, 172 Cal. App. 4th 305, 313 (2009)	1	Voluntary dismissal of an entire action deprives the court of both subject matter and personal jurisdiction in that case, except for the limited purpose of awarding costs and statutory attorney fees. West's Ann.Cal.C.C.P. S 581.	"Alternatively stated, voluntary dismissal of an entire action deprives the court of both subject matter and personal jurisdiction in that case, except for the limited purpose of awarding costs and statutory attorney fees.	"Does a voluntary dismissal of an entire action deprive the court of both subject matter and personal jurisdiction in that case, except for the limited purpose of awarding costs and statutory attorney fees?"
678	State ex rel. Cummings v. Witthaus, 358 Mo. 1088, 1093 (1949)	4	Discovery statutes are intended to assist in the administration of justice, are remedial in nature, and are to be liberally construed but they cannot be liberally construed in contravention of inhibitions respecting unreasonable searches and seizures or the invasion of the right of privacy. V.A.M.S. S 510.030; V.A.M.S.Const.1945, art. 1, S 15.	Discovery statutes are intended to assist in the administration of justice, are remedial in nature and are liberally construed. But they cannot be liberally construed in contravention of inhibitions respecting unreasonable searches and seizures or the invasion of the right of privacy.	"Are discovery statutes intended to assist in the administration of justice, are remedial in nature, and are to be liberally construed but they cannot be liberally construed in contravention of inhibitions respecting unreasonable searches and seizures or the invasion of the right of privacy?"
679	Jabri v. U Save Motors, 971 So. 2d 912, 913 (Fla. App. 2007)	2	The right to dismiss one's own lawsuit during the course of a trial is guaranteed by rule, endowing a plaintiff with unilateral authority to block action favorable to a defendant which the trial judge might be disposed to approve; the effect is to remove completely from the court's consideration the power to enter an order, equivalent in all respects to a deprivation of jurisdiction. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.420(a).	As the Court stated in Vasta: The right to dismiss one's own lawsuit during the course of a trial is guaranteed by Rule 1.420(a), endowing a plaintiff with unilateral authority to block action favorable to a defendant which the trial judge might be disposed to approve. The effect is to remove completely from the court's consideration the power to enter an order, equivalent in all respects to a deprivation of "jurisdiction."	Is a plaintiff endowed with unilateral authority to block action favourable to a defendant which a trial judge might be disposed to approve thereby completely removing it from the courts consideration?

681	TBF Fin. v. Stone, 213 S.W.3d 231, 233 (Mo.App. S.D., 2007)	2	A party who fails to respond to requests for admissions admits those matters, and no further sanction is necessary or available to the proponent, who instead can use the admissions in dispositive motions or at trial, and a court must consider such admissions in deciding a motion for a directed verdict. V.A.M.R. 59.01.	A party who fails to respond to requests for admissions admits those matters. No further sanction is necessary or available to the proponent, who instead can use the admissions in dispositive motions or at trial, and a court must consider such admissions in deciding a motion for a directed verdict.	"Does a party who fails to respond to requests for admissions admit those matters, and no further sanction is necessary or available to the proponent, who instead can use the admissions in dispositive motions or at trial?"
682	Lawyers' Ass'n of St. Louis v. City of St. Louis, 294 S.W.2d 676, 682 (Mo. App. 1956)	8	The name, purpose, designation or character given by legislative body to particular tax in statute or ordinance imposing it is not conclusive on court in determining nature or purpose of exaction, though entitled to due weight and consideration; determination of purpose, nature and effect of tax being for court in final analysis, regardless of its apparent legislative designation.	We recognize that the name, purpose, designation or character given by the legislative body to a particular tax in the statute or ordinance imposing it is not conclusive upon the Court in determining the nature or purpose of the exaction. Yet it is entitled to due weight and consideration. In the final analysis it is for the Court to determine the purpose, nature and effect of a particular tax, regardless of its apparent legislative designation.	"Is the name, purpose, designation or character given by legislative body to particular tax in statute or ordinance imposing it, conclusive upon court in determining nature or purpose of exaction?"
684	Harms v. Simkin, 322 S.W.2d 930, 933 (Mo. App. 1959)	4	Mere fact that an attorney withdraws from a case does not give a party an absolute right to a continuance and decision whether to grant or deny continuance on that ground rests largely in discretion of trial court, and, although that discretion is judicial in nature and reviewable on appeal, every intendment is in favor of court's ruling.	The mere fact that an attorney withdraws from a case does not give a party an absolute right to a continuance. The decision whether to grant or deny a continuance on this ground rests largely in the discretion of the trial court, and although that discretion is judicial in nature and reviewable on appeal, every intendment is in favor of the court's ruling.	Does the fact that an attorney withdraws from a case give a party an absolute right to a continuance?
685	Gendebien v. Gendebien, 668 S.W.2d 905, 907-908 (Tex. App. 1984)	1	Absence of counsel will not be a good cause for a continuance of the cause when called for trial except in discretion of trial court upon cause shown or upon matters within the knowledge or information of the judge to be stated in the record. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 253.	Absence of counsel will not be a good cause for a continuance of the cause when called for trial, except in the discretion of the trial court, upon cause shown or upon matters within the knowledge or information of the judge to be stated in the record. TEX.R.CIV.P. 253.	Will absence of counsel not be a good cause for a continuance of the cause when called for trial except in discretion of trial court upon cause shown or upon matters within the knowledge or information of the judge to be stated in the record?
686	Ramirez v. Noble Energy, 521 S.W.3d 851, 857 (Tex. App. 2017)	8	To substantiate a summary judgment based solely on merits-preclusive deemed admissions, the party relying upon the deemed admissions must demonstrate flagrant bad faith or callous disregard for the rules. Tex. R. Civ. P. 198.3.	Thus, to substantiate a summary judgment based solely on merits-preclusive deemed admissions, the party relying upon the deemed admissions must demonstrate "flagrant bad faith or callous disregard for the rules."	"To substantiate a summary judgment based solely on merits-preclusive deemed admissions, must the party relying upon the deemed admissions demonstrate flagrant bad faith or callous disregard for the rules?"

687	In re Marriage of Dishon, 277 Mont. 501, 505 (1996)	10	Although failure to file answer brief within ten days is deemed an admission that motion is well taken, district court is not required to grant unanswered motion. Uniform District Court Rule 2(b).	Although Rule 2(b) of the Uniform District Court Rules provides that a failure to file an answer brief within ten days shall be deemed an admission that the motion is well taken, it does not require the district court to grant the unanswered motion.	"Although failure to file answer brief within ten days is deemed an admission that motion is well taken, is a district court not required to grant the unanswered motion?"
688	Travis v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., 569 So. 2d 115, 118 (La. Ct. App. 1990)	4	Generally, when obligation is based on writing, prima facie proof of obligation requires introducing that writing; jurisprudential exception is that when plaintiff requests admissions of contractual coverage or production of policy, defendant's failure to comply may be construed as supplying missing proof.	Generally, when an obligation is based on a writing, prima facie proof of the obligation requires introducing that writing. Ascension Builders, Inc. v. Jumonville, 263 So.2d at 878; Sudds v. Protective Casualty Insurance Company, 554 So.2d at 151. A jurisprudential exception is that when the plaintiff requests admissions of contractual coverage or production of the policy, the defendant's failure to comply may be construed as supplying the missing proof.	Is the jurisprudential exception to rule that prima facie proof of contractual obligation requires introduction of the writing that when a plaintiff in a case involving an insurance contract requests admissions of contractual coverage?
690	Hill v. Caparino, 370 S.W.2d 760, 761-62 (Tex. App. 1963)	3	In absence of a motion to permit a late filing of an answer to a request for admissions, there can be no complaint of action of trial court in entering order decreeing that request for admissions of relevant facts be deemed answered affirmatively. Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 169.	In the absence of a motion to permit a late filing of the answer, there can be no complaint of the action of the trial court in entering his order decreeing that the Request for Admissions of Relevant Facts be deemed answered affirmatively.	"In absence of a motion to permit a late filing of an answer to a request for admissions, can there be a complaint of the action of the trial court in entering its order decreeing that the request for admissions of relevant facts be deemed answered affirmatively?"
693	Law Offices of Nye & Assocs., Ltd. v. Boado, 2012 IL App (2d) 110804, ¶ 19 (2012)	10	The voluntary dismissal of an action is typically without prejudice to the bringing of a second action; however, the use of without prejudice language is not sufficient to protect a plaintiff against the bar of res judicata when another part of plaintiff's case has gone to final judgment in a previous action. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-1009(a).	Indeed, "[the] voluntary dismissal of an action is typically without prejudice to the bringing of a second action." (Emphasis in original.) Id. However, "the use of 'without prejudice' language is not sufficient to protect a plaintiff against the bar of res judicata when another part of plaintiff's case has gone to final judgment in a previous action:...	Is the use of without prejudice language sufficient to protect a plaintiff against the bar of res judicata when another part of plaintiff's case has gone to final judgment in a previous action?
694	Graefe & Graefe v. Beaver Mesa Expl. Co., 635 P.2d 900, 902 (Colo. App. 1981)	2	Where evidence is admitted for limited purpose other than that for which it is later sought to be used, and where proposed amendment to conform to evidence seeks to introduce issue outside of pretrial order and not consented to by adverse parties, trial court does not err in refusing to allow amendment. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 15(b).	Where the evidence is admitted for a limited purpose other than that for which it is later sought to be used, and where as here, the proposed amendment seeks to introduce an issue outside of the pretrial order and not consented to by the adverse parties, the trial court does not err in refusing to allow the amendment.	Does a court err in refusing to allow amendment where proposed amendment seeks to introduce an issue outside of pretrial order not consented to by the adverse parties?

695	U.S. v. Nagin, 810 F.3d 348, 351 (C.A.5 (La.), 2016)	4	An official may be convicted of bribery if he has corruptly entered into a quid pro quo, knowing the purpose behind the payment he has agreed to receive is to induce or influence him in an official act, even if he has no intention of actually fulfilling his end of the bargain. 18 U.S.C.A. S 201(b)(2).	Valle, we held that an official may be convicted of bribery under 201(b)(2) "if he has corruptly entered into a quid pro quo, knowing that the purpose behind the payment that he has ... agreed to receive [] is to induce or influence him in an official act, even if he has no intention of actually fulfilling his end of the bargain.	"If an official knows the purpose behind the payment he has agreed to receive is to induce or influence him in an official act, is he guilty of bribery even if he has no intention of performing the action?"
696	Lewis v. Clarke, 320 Conn. 706, 711 (2016)	5	Depending on the record before it, a trial court ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction may decide that motion on the basis of: (1) the complaint alone, (2) the complaint supplemented by undisputed facts evidenced in the record, or (3) the complaint supplemented by undisputed facts plus the court's resolution of disputed facts; different rules and procedures will apply, depending on the state of the record at the time the motion is filed. Practice Book 1998, S 10-31(a)(1).	Depending on the record before it, a trial court ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to Practice Book 10-31(a)(1) may decide that motion on the basis of: "(1) the complaint alone; (2) the complaint supplemented by undisputed facts evidenced in the record; or (3) the complaint supplemented 681 by undisputed facts plus the court's resolution of disputed facts.... Different rules and procedures will apply, depending on the state of the record at the time the motion is filed."	"Depending on the record before it, can a trial court ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction decide that motion on the basis of what?"
697	Elliff v. Texon Drilling Co., 146 Tex. 575, 582 (1948)	5	A landowner is privileged to sink as many wells as he desires on his land and extract therefrom and appropriate all oil and gas that he may produce, so long as he operates within the spirit and purpose of conservation statutes and orders of the Railroad Commission.	The landowner is privileged to sink as many wells as he desires upon his tract of land and extract therefrom and appropriate all the oil and gas that he may produce, so long as he operates within the spirit and purpose of conservation statutes and orders of the Railroad Commission.	Is a landowner privileged to sink as many wells as he desires upon his tract of land and extract therefrom and appropriate all the oil and gas that he may produce?
703	All. for Metro. Stability v. Metro. Council, 671 N.W.2d 905, 919 (Minn. App. 2003)	30	In deciding whether a continuance of a summary judgment motion to conduct further discovery should be granted, the district court must address two issues: (1) whether the plaintiff has been diligent in obtaining or seeking discovery prior to its motion, and (2) whether the plaintiff is seeking further discovery in the good faith belief that material facts will be uncovered or merely engaging in a fishing expedition. 48 M.S.A., Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 56.06.	In deciding whether such a continuance should be granted, the district court must address two issues: (1) whether the plaintiff has been diligent in obtaining or seeking discovery prior to its rule 56.06 motion, and (2) whether the plaintiff is seeking further discovery in the good faith belief that material facts will be uncovered or merely engaging in a fishing expedition.	Should a court deciding a continuance be granted to allow more time for discovery consider whether the party seeking more time is acting from a good faith?

705	Billerbeck v. Caterpillar Tractor Co., 292 Ill. App. 3d 350, 352 (1997)	1	Plaintiff must act with reasonable diligence in effecting service of process on defendant; if plaintiff fails to act with reasonable diligence after statute of limitations expires, cause of action shall be dismissed with prejudice. Sup.Ct.Rules, Rule 103(b).	Rule 103(b) requires a plaintiff to act with reasonable diligence in effecting service of process on a defendant. If the plaintiff fails to act with reasonable diligence after the statute of limitations expires, the cause of action shall be dismissed with prejudice.	Does Rule 103(b) requires a plaintiff to act with reasonable diligence in effecting service of process on a defendant and if the plaintiff fails to act with reasonable diligence after the statute of limitations expires shall the cause of action be dismissed with prejudice?
706	United States v. Dixon, 536 F.2d 1388, 1400 (C.A.2 (N.Y.), 1976)	14	Doctrine of deprivation of honest and faithful services has developed to fit the situation in which a public official avails himself of his public position to enhance his private advantage, often by taking bribes; although such actions may not deplete the fisc and, in fact, may enrich it, they are nonetheless frauds since the public official has been paid to act in breach of his duties.	This doctrine of the deprivation of honest and faithful services has developed to fit the situation in which a public official avails himself of his public position to enhance his private advantage, often by taking bribes. Such actions may not deplete the fisc; indeed, as in Isaacs, they may have enriched it, but they are nonetheless frauds since the public official has been paid to act in breach of his duties.	What bribery situations has the doctrine of the deprivation of honest and faithful services been developed to it?
707	Constantine v. Stella Maris Ins. Co., 97 A.D.3d 1129, 1130, 948 N.Y.S.2d 802, 805 (2012)	1	While the ultimate burden of proof rests with the party asserting jurisdiction, in opposition to motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, plaintiff need only make a prima facie showing that defendant was subject to trial court's personal jurisdiction. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(8).	"While the ultimate burden of proof rests with the party asserting jurisdiction, ... in opposition to a motion to dismiss pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(8), [plaintiff] need only make a prima facie showing that the defendant[, here, SMI,] was subject to the personal jurisdiction of the Supreme Court" (Cornely v. Dynamic HVAC Supply, LLC, 44 A.D.3d 986, 986, 845 N.Y.S.2d 797).	"While the ultimate burden of proof rests with the party asserting jurisdiction, is the plaintiff required only to make a prima facie showing that the defendant was subject to the personal jurisdiction of the court?"
708	Halas v. Dick's Sporting Goods, 105 A.D.3d 1411, 1412, 964 N.Y.S.2d 808, 810 (2013)	2	Although the ultimate burden of proof rests with the party asserting jurisdiction, in opposition to a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, plaintiff need only make a prima facie showing that the defendant was subject to the personal jurisdiction of the court. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(8).	Although " 'the ultimate burden of proof rests with the party asserting jurisdiction, ... in opposition to a motion to dismiss pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(8), [plaintiff] need only make a prima facie showing that the defendant ... was subject to the personal jurisdiction of ... Supreme Court' " (Constantine v. Stella Maris Ins. Co., Ltd., 97 A.D.3d 1129, 1130, 948 N.Y.S.2d 802).	"In opposition to a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, need a plaintiff only make a prima facie showing that the defendant was subject to the personal jurisdiction of the court?"
709	Old Home Enterprise v. Fleming, 20 Neb. App. 705, 705 (2013)	8	When a lawsuit is dismissed by operation of law for lack of service of process within 6 months of filing, the trial court has no jurisdiction to make orders thereafter, except to formalize the dismissal, and if made, they are a nullity, as are subsequent pleadings. West's Neb.Rev.St. S 25-217.	When a lawsuit is dismissed by operation of law for lack of service of process within 6 months of filing, the trial court has no jurisdiction to make orders thereafter, except to formalize the dismissal, and if made, they are a nullity, as are subsequent pleadings.	"When a lawsuit is dismissed by operation of law for lack of service of process within 6 months of filing, does the trial court have no jurisdiction to make orders thereafter?"

710	Splinters, Inc. v. Greenfield, 63 A.D.3d 717, 719, 880 N.Y.S.2d 328, 331 (2009)	5	In order to avoid dismissal for failure to timely serve a complaint after a demand for the complaint has been made, a plaintiff must demonstrate both a reasonable excuse for the delay in serving the complaint and a meritorious cause of action. McKinney's CPLR 3012(b).	In order "[t]o avoid dismissal for failure to timely serve a complaint after a demand for the complaint has been made pursuant to CPLR 3012(b), a plaintiff must demonstrate both a reasonable excuse for the delay in serving the complaint and a meritorious cause of action" (Balgley v. Cammarata, 299 A.D.2d 432, 749 N.Y.S.2d 732; see Pristavec v. Galligan, 32 A.D.3d 834, 820 N.Y.S.2d 529; Maldonado v. Suffolk County, 23 A.D.3d 353, 803 N.Y.S.2d 439; Giordano v. Vanchieri & Perrier, 16 A.D.3d 621, 792 N.Y.S.2d 180; Tutora v. Schirripa, 1 A.D.3d 349, 766 N.Y.S.2d 574).	"In order to avoid dismissal for failure to timely serve a complaint after a demand for the complaint has been made, must a plaintiff demonstrate both a reasonable excuse for the delay in serving the complaint and a meritorious cause of action?"
712	Oldham v. Keaton, 597 S.W.2d 938, 941 (Tex. Civ. App. 1980)	1	Where plaintiff by amended petition abandons cause of action on which venue was based and relies on causes of action not properly triable in county in which suit has been filed, right to then file a plea of privilege enures to the defendant.	Where a plaintiff by amended petition abandons the cause of action on which venue is based and relies only upon causes of action not properly triable in the county where the suit is filed, the right to then file a plea of privilege enures to the defendant.	"If a plaintiff by amended petition abandons the cause of action on which venue is based and relies only upon causes of action not properly triable in the county where the suit is filed, does the right to then file a plea of privilege enure to the defendant?"
713	In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 147 (1978)	12	Whenever during course of litigation it develops that relief sought has been granted or that questions originally in controversy between parties are no longer in issue, case should be dismissed, for courts will not entertain or proceed with a cause merely to determine abstract propositions of law.	Whenever, during the course of litigation it develops that the relief sought has been granted or that the questions originally in controversy between the parties are no longer at issue, the case should be dismissed, for courts will not entertain or proceed with a cause merely to determine abstract propositions of law.	"Should case be dismissed as moot when, in course of litigation, it develops that relief sought has been granted or that questions originally in controversy between parties are no longer at issue?"
714	Avery v. New Hampshire Dep't of Educ., 162 N.H. 604, 606 (2011)	2	When the motion to dismiss does not challenge the sufficiency of petitioners' legal claim but, instead, raises certain defenses, trial court must look beyond petitioners' unsubstantiated allegations and determine, based on the facts, whether petitioners have sufficiently demonstrated their right to claim relief.	"When the motion to dismiss does not challenge the sufficiency of the [petitioners'] legal claim but, instead, raises certain defenses, the trial court must look beyond the [petitioners'] unsubstantiated allegations and determine, based on the facts, whether the [petitioners] ha[ve] sufficiently demonstrated [their] right to claim relief."	Can the court look beyond petitioners' unsubstantiated allegations and determine whether petitioners have sufficiently demonstrated their right to claim relief?

715	Utset v. Campos, 548 So. 2d 834, 836 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1989)	3	The filing within the requisite one-year period of a notice of taking deposition, or the issuance of a summons on a complaint, constitutes sufficient record activity to preclude the dismissal of an action for failure to prosecute. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.420(e).	Moreover, it is settled that the filing within the requisite one-year period of a notice of taking deposition or the issuance of a summons on a complaint, as here, constitutes sufficient record activity to preclude the dismissal of an action for failure to prosecute under Fla.R.Civ.P. 1.420(e).	Does the filing within the requisite one-year period of a notice of taking a deposition constitute sufficient record activity to preclude the dismissal of an action for failure to prosecute?
717	Dollar Sys. v. O'Connor & Meyers, P.A., 883 So. 2d 295, 297 (Fla. App. 2004)	3	Record activity sufficient to avoid dismissal for failure to prosecute is more than a mere passive effort to keep the suit on the court docket; it is any act reflected in the court file designed to move the case forward toward a conclusion on the merits or to hasten the suit to judgment. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.420(e).	Record activity sufficient to avoid dismissal is more than "a mere passive effort" to keep the suit on the court docket. It is "any act reflected in the court file ... designed to move the case forward toward a conclusion on the merits or to hasten the suit to judgment."	"For purposes of rule providing for dismissal of a cause of action for failure to prosecute, is a ""record activity"" defined as any act reflected in the court file that was designed to move the case forward?"
718	Dollar Sys. v. O'Connor & Meyers, P.A., 883 So. 2d 295, 297 (Fla. App. 2004)	3	Record activity sufficient to avoid dismissal for failure to prosecute is more than a mere passive effort to keep the suit on the court docket; it is any act reflected in the court file designed to move the case forward toward a conclusion on the merits or to hasten the suit to judgment. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.420(e).	Record activity sufficient to avoid dismissal is more than "a mere passive effort" to keep the suit on the court docket. It is "any act reflected in the court file ... designed to move the case forward toward a conclusion on the merits or to hasten the suit to judgment."	Is record activity sufficient to avoid dismissal for failure to prosecute more than a mere passive effort to keep the suit on the court docket?
720	Perry v. Perkins, 73 Idaho 4, 7 (1952)	1	A court has inherent authority, in absence of statute or rule, in exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss an action for failure to comply with an order of court relating to pleadings filed or to be filed by plaintiff, including an order requiring amendment of his pleadings generally or with reference to making them more definite and certain.	It is universally recognized that a court has the inherent power and authority, in the absence of statute or rule, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss an action for failure to comply with an order of the court relating to pleadings filed or to be filed by the plaintiff, including an order requiring the amendment of his pleadings generally or with reference to making them more definite and certain.	Does a court have inherent authority to dismiss an action for failure to comply with an order of court relating to pleadings filed?
721	Campanella v. Takaoka, 160 Cal. App. 3d 504, 510, 206 Cal. Rptr. 745, 748 (Ct. App. 1984), disapproved of by Salas v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 42 Cal. 3d 342, 721 P.2d 590 (1986)	2	In exercising reasonable diligence, plaintiff has affirmative duty to make every reasonable effort to bring his or her case to trial within five years, even during last month of its statutory life. West's Ann.Cal.C.C.P. S 583(b).	In exercising reasonable diligence, a plaintiff has an affirmative duty to make every reasonable effort to bring his or her case to trial within five years, even during the last month of its statutory life.	"Does a plaintiff have affirmative duty to make every reasonable effort to bring a case to trial within five years, even during last month of its statutory life?"

723	Jain v. Green Clinic, 830 So. 2d 836, 838 (Fla. App. 2002)	1	Rule of Civil Procedure governing motions to dismiss for lack of prosecution requires the trial court to engage in a two-step process in deciding whether to dismiss a case for lack of prosecution, namely first, the defendant must show that there was no record activity for the year preceding the motion, and second, if there was no record activity, the plaintiff has an opportunity to establish good cause why the action should not be dismissed. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.420(e).	Rule 1.420(e) requires the trial court to engage in a two- step process in deciding whether to dismiss a case for lack of prosecution. "[F]irst, the defendant must show that there was no record activity for the year preceding the motion. Second, if there was no record activity, the plaintiff has an opportunity to establish good cause why the action should not be dismissed."	What process should the court engage in to decide whether to dismiss a case for lack of prosecution?
725	Malloy v. Preslar, 228 N.C. App. 183, 187 (2013)	6	Despite liberal nature of concept of notice pleading, complaint must nonetheless state enough to give substantive elements of at least some legally recognized claim, or it is subject to dismissal under rule for failure to state a claim. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(6), West's N.C.G.S.A. S 1A-1.	"[D]espite the liberal nature of the concept of notice pleading, a complaint must nonetheless state enough to give the substantive elements of at least some legally recognized claim or it is subject to dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6)."	"Despite liberal nature of concept of notice pleading, should a complaint nonetheless state enough to give substantive elements of at least some legally recognized claim?"
726	Skinner v. Reynolds, 237 N.C. App. 150, 152, 764 S.E.2d 652, 655 (2014)	3	Despite the liberal nature of the concept of notice pleading, a complaint must nonetheless state enough to give the substantive elements of at least some legally recognized claim or it is subject to dismissal for failure to state claim upon which relief can be granted. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(6), West's N.C.G.S.A. S 1A-1.	'[D]espite the liberal nature of the concept of notice pleading, a complaint must nonetheless state enough to give the substantive elements of at least some legally recognized claim or it is subject to dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6).'	"Despite liberal nature of concept of notice pleading, should a complaint nonetheless state enough to give substantive elements of at least some legally recognized claim?"
727	Deloatch v. Becker, 698 A.2d 94, 96 (Pa. 1997)	2	Judgment of "non pros" is founded upon equitable principle of laches and may properly be entered when party to a proceeding has shown a want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude, and there is no compelling reason for delay, and delay has caused some prejudice to adverse party.	Further, we note that the non pros doctrine is founded upon the equitable principle of laches and may properly be entered "when a party to a proceeding has shown a want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude, and there is no compelling reason for the delay, and the delay has caused some prejudice to the adverse party."	"Can judgment of ""non pros"" properly be entered when party to a proceeding has shown a want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude?"
728	Wright v. Texas Dep't of Crim. Just.-Institutional Div., 137 S.W.3d 693, 696 (Tex. App. 2004)	7	A trial court can dismiss for want of prosecution under the following three situations: (1) when a party seeking affirmative relief fails to appear for any hearing or trial of which the party had notice, (2) when the case is not disposed of within the time standards of the supreme court, or (3) when the trial court finds that the case has not been prosecuted with due diligence. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a.	A trial court can dismiss for want of prosecution under the following three situations: (1) when a party seeking affirmative relief fails to appear for any hearing or trial of which the party had notice, (2) when the case is not disposed of within the time standards of the supreme court, or (3) when the trial court finds that the case has not been prosecuted with due diligence.	Can a court dismiss for want of prosecution when a party seeking affirmative relief fails to appear for any hearing or trial of which the party had notice?

729	Guggenheimer v. Ginzburg, 372 N.E.2d 17, 20-21 (1977)	6	When evidentiary material is considered in connection with motion to dismiss, criterion is whether proponent of pleading has cause of action, not whether he has stated one, and, unless it has been shown that material facts as claimed by pleader to be one is not fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it, dismissal should not eventuate. CPLR 3211(a), par. 7, (c).	When evidentiary material is considered, the criterion is whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action, not whether he has stated one, and, unless it has been 21 shown that a material fact as claimed by the pleader to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it, again dismissal should not eventuate.	"Unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the plaintiff to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it, should a dismissal not eventuate?"
730	Lowrey v. Horvath, 689 S.W.2d 625, 626 (Mo. 1985)	1	In reviewing trial court's dismissal of plaintiffs' petition for failure to state claim upon which relief can be granted, sole issue to be decided is whether, after allowing the pleading its broadest intendment, treating all facts alleged as true and construing all allegations favorably to plaintiffs, the averments invoke principles of substantive law entitling plaintiffs to relief.	In reviewing the trial court's dismissal of plaintiffs' petition for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, the sole issue to be decided is whether, after allowing the pleading its broadest intendment, treating all facts alleged as true and construing all allegations favorably to plaintiffs, the averments invoke principles of substantive law entitling plaintiffs to relief.	"In reviewing the dismissal of a petition, what is the sole issue to be decided?"
731	James Bros. Lumber Co. v. Union Banking & Tr. Co. of Du Bois, Pa., 432 Pa. 129, 132 (1968)	1	Court may enter judgment of non pros. when party has shown want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude and there has been no compelling reason for delay, and delay has caused some prejudice to adverse party, such as death of or unexplained absence of material witness.	A Court may properly enter a judgment of non pros. when a party to the proceeding has shown a want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude, and there has been no compelling reason for the delay, and the delay has caused some prejudice to the adverse party, such as the death of or unexplained absence of material witnesses.	Is judgment of non pros properly entered when a party to the proceeding has shown a want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude?
736	James Bros. Lumber Co. v. Union Banking & Tr. Co. of Du Bois, Pa., 432 Pa. 129, 132 (1968)	1	Court may enter judgment of non pros. when party has shown want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude and there has been no compelling reason for delay, and delay has caused some prejudice to adverse party, such as death of or unexplained absence of material witness.	A Court may properly enter a judgment of non pros. when a party to the proceeding has shown a want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude, and there has been no compelling reason for the delay, and the delay has caused some prejudice to the adverse party, such as the death of or unexplained absence of material witnesses.	Can court enter judgment non pros where a party has shown lack of due diligence by failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude?
737	Brazell v. Windsor, 376 S.C. 83, 87 (2007)	1	A decision to grant a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action must be based solely upon the allegations set forth in the complaint. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(6).	In considering a motion to dismiss a complaint based on a failure to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, the trial court must base its ruling solely on allegations set forth in the complaint.	Should a decision to grant a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action be based solely upon the allegations set forth in the complaint?

739	Conboy v. State, 292 Conn. 642, 651 (2009)	12	When a trial court decides a jurisdictional question, raised by a pretrial motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, on the basis of the complaint alone, it must consider the allegations of the complaint in their most favorable light, and in this regard, the trial court must take the facts to be those alleged in the complaint, including those facts necessarily implied from the allegations, construing them in a manner most favorable to the pleader. Practice Book 1998, § 10-31(a)(1).	When a trial court decides a jurisdictional question raised by a pretrial motion to dismiss on the basis of the complaint alone, "it must consider the allegations of the complaint in their most favorable light.... In this regard, a court must take the facts to be those alleged in the complaint, including those facts necessarily implied from the allegations, construing them in a manner most favorable to the pleader.	"When a court decides a question raised by a pretrial motion to dismiss, should it consider the allegations of the complaint in their most favorable light?"
740	GMAC Mortg. v. Ford, 144 Conn. App. 165, 173 (2013)	6	If a complaint is supplemented by undisputed facts established by affidavits submitted in support of a motion to dismiss, other types of undisputed evidence, and/or public records of which judicial notice may be taken, the trial court, in determining a jurisdictional issue, may consider these supplementary undisputed facts and need not conclusively presume the validity of the allegations of the complaint.	"In contrast, if the complaint is supplemented by undisputed facts established by affidavits submitted in support of the motion to dismiss ... other types of undisputed evidence ... and/or public records of which judicial notice may be taken ... the trial court, in determining the jurisdictional issue, may consider these supplementary undisputed facts and need not conclusively presume the validity of the allegations of the complaint.	"Can the trial court, in determining a jurisdictional issue, consider supplementary undisputed facts?"
741	Afr. Diaspora Mar. Corp. v. Golden Gate Yacht Club, 109 A.D.3d 204, 211, 968 N.Y.S.2d 459, 464 (2013)	1	Sole criterion for deciding a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a cause of action is whether the pleading states a cause of action, and, if from its four corners, factual allegations are discerned which, taken together, manifest any cause of action cognizable at law a motion for dismissal will fail. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	The sole criterion for deciding a motion to dismiss a complaint pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7), "is whether the pleading states a cause of action, and if from its four corners factual allegations are discerned which taken together manifest any cause of action cognizable at law a motion for dismissal will fail" (Guggenheimer v. Ginzburg, 43 N.Y.2d 268, 275, 401 N.Y.S.2d 182, 372 N.E.2d 17 [1977]).	"Is the sole criterion for deciding a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a cause of action pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7), whether the pleading states a cause of action?"

742	Belsky v. Lowell, 117 A.D.2d 575, 576, 497 N.Y.S.2d 945, 947 (1986)	1	Drastic penalty of dismissal for failure to prosecute requires balanced consideration of all relevant factors before imposition, including merit or lack of merit of action, extent of delay, prejudice or lack of prejudice to defendants and intent or lack of intent to deliberately default or abandon action, as well as strong public policy favoring disposition on the merits.	"Before the drastic penalty of dismissal for failure to prosecute is imposed upon a plaintiff, a balanced consideration of all relevant factors is required" (Carron v. DeGranpre, 55 A.D.2d 712, 713, 388 N.Y.S.2d 727). To be considered are the merit or lack of merit of the action, extent of the delay, prejudice or lack of prejudice to the defendants and intent or lack of intent to deliberately default or abandon the action, as well as the strong public policy favoring disposition on the merits (see, Moran v. Rynar, 39 A.D.2d 718, 719, 332 N.Y.S.2d 138).	Does drastic penalty of dismissal for failure to prosecute require balanced consideration of all relevant factors before imposition?
745	Thompson v. Cohen, 160 A.D.2d 1157, 1158, 554 N.Y.S.2d 746, 747 (1990)	1	In order to avoid dismissal of action as abandoned where default has occurred and plaintiff has failed to seek judgment within one year after default, plaintiff must demonstrate reasonable excuse for delay and that cause of action has merit. McKinney's CPLR 3215(c).	In order to avoid dismissal of an action as abandoned where a default has occurred and the plaintiff has failed to seek a judgment within one year after the default, the plaintiff must demonstrate a reasonable excuse for the delay and that the cause of action has merit (Manago v. Giorlando, 143 A.D.2d 646, 647, 533 N.Y.S.2d 106; Woodward v. City of New York, 119 A.D.2d 749, 750, 501 N.Y.S.2d 159).	Should the plaintiff demonstrate a reasonable excuse for the delay in order to avoid dismissal of an action as abandoned after a default and where the plaintiff has failed to seek a judgment within one year after the default?
746	Simmons v. McSimmons, Inc., 261 A.D.2d 547, 548, 690 N.Y.S.2d 643, 644 (1999)	1	In order to defeat a motion to dismiss a pleading for failure to prosecute, party upon whom a demand to file a note of issue is served must demonstrate a justifiable excuse for the failure to comply with the demand, and a meritorious claim. McKinney's CPLR 3216(e).	It is well established that in order to defeat a motion to dismiss a pleading for failure to prosecute, the party upon whom a demand to file a note of issue is served must demonstrate a justifiable excuse for the failure to comply with the demand and a meritorious claim (see, CPLR 3216 [e]; Dick v. Samaritan Hosp., 115 A.D.2d 917, 496 N.Y.S.2d 814).	"In order to defeat a motion to dismiss a pleading for failure to prosecute, should a party upon whom a demand to file a note of issue is served demonstrate a justifiable excuse?"
747	City of Fort Wayne v. Sw. Allen Cty. Fire Prot. Dist., 82 N.E.3d 299, 303 (2017)	4	In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the trial court may consider not only the complaint and motion but also any affidavits or evidence submitted in support; in addition, the trial court may weigh the evidence to determine the existence of the requisite jurisdictional facts. Ind. R. Trial P. 12(B)(1).	In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the trial court may consider not only the complaint and motion but also any affidavits or evidence submitted in support. GKN Co. v. Magness, 744 N.E.2d 397, 400 (Ind. Ct. App. 2001). In addition, the trial court may weigh the evidence to determine the existence of the requisite jurisdictional facts.	"In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, can the trial court consider any affidavits or evidence submitted in support of the motion?"

751	Randolph v. Hays, 665 P.2d 500, 503 (Wyo., 1983)	4	While no precise rule may be laid down as to what circumstances justify dismissal for lack of prosecution, circumstances surrounding each case must be examined, keeping in mind the conflict between need for the court to manage its docket for purpose of preventing undue delay on the one hand, and policy favoring disposition of cases on the merits on the other hand. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b)(2); District Court Rule 14.	While no precise rule may be laid down as to what circumstances justify a dismissal for lack of prosecution, the circumstances surrounding each case must be examined, keeping in mind the conflict between the need for the court to manage its docket for the purpose of preventing undue delay on the one hand, and the policy favoring disposition of cases on the merits on the other hand.	Can a precise rule be laid down as to what circumstances justify a dismissal for lack of prosecution?
752	Summers v. Vill. of Durand, 267 Ill. App. 3d 767, 771 (1994)	9	Where defense of laches is not apparent from face of complaint, motion to dismiss is properly made pursuant to statute, providing for dismissal when challenged claim is barred by affirmative matter avoiding the legal effect of or defeating the claim, and must be supported by affidavit. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(9).	However, where the defense of laches is not apparent from the face of the complaint, the motion is properly made pursuant to section 2-619(a)(9) (735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(9) (West 1992) (which provides as a ground for dismissal that a challenged claim is barred by affirmative matter avoiding the 276 325 legal effect of or defeating the claim)) and must be supported by affidavit.	Can a dismissal be provided to support an affidavit when challenged claim is barred by affirmative matter avoiding the legal effect of or defeating the claim?
753	Bd. of Ed. of Grant Cmty. High Sch. Dist. No. 121, Lake Cty. v. Bd. of Ed. of Richmond-Burton Cmty. High Sch. Dist. No. 157, McHenry Cty., 301 Ill. App. 228, 229 (Ill.App. 2 Dist. 1939)	2	Where a motion to dismiss a complaint, which is in the nature of a demurrer, is sustained, for such ruling to become "final," and appealable, a "judgment" should be entered for the defendant to the effect that the plaintiff take nothing by virtue of such action and that defendant go hence without day, of words or similar import and meaning.	Where a motion to dismiss a complaint, which is in the nature of a demurrer, is sustained, for such ruling to become final, a judgment should be entered for the defendant to the effect that the plaintiff take nothing by virtue of such action and that the defendant go hence without day, or words of similar import and meaning.	"For a dismissal ruling to become final a judgment, should it be entered for a defendant to the effect that a plaintiff take nothing by virtue of such action?"
754	Atwater v. Town of Plainfield, 160 N.H. 503, 507 (N.H., 2010)	2	In ruling upon a motion to dismiss, a trial court normally accepts all facts pleaded by the plaintiff as true and view those facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiff; however, when the motion to dismiss does not challenge the sufficiency of the plaintiff's legal claim but, instead, raises certain defenses, such as that the trial court lacks jurisdiction to hear the claim due to the plaintiff's failure to exhaust its administrative remedies, the trial court must look beyond the plaintiff's unsubstantiated allegations and determine, based on the facts, whether the plaintiff has sufficiently demonstrated his right to claim relief.	In making this determination, the court would normally accept all facts pleaded by the plaintiff as true and view those facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. Id. at 853, 711 A.2d 251. However, when "the motion to dismiss does not challenge the sufficiency of the plaintiff's legal claim but, instead, raises certain defenses, the trial court must look beyond the plaintiff's unsubstantiated allegations and determine, based on the facts, whether the plaintiff has sufficiently demonstrated his right to claim relief."	How does the court determine whether plaintiff has sufficiently demonstrated his right to claim relief?

758	Humphreys v. Meadows, 938 S.W.2d 750, 753 (Tex. App. 1996)	8	If plaintiff makes good faith attempt to amend his petition in response to trial court's sustaining of defendant's special exceptions, trial court may not dismiss plaintiff's amended petition unless defendant files special exceptions to revised pleadings, court sustains new special exceptions, and court gives plaintiff opportunity to amend revised pleadings.	Moreover, if a plaintiff makes a good faith attempt to amend his petition in response to the trial court's sustaining of a defendant's special exceptions, the trial court may not dismiss the plaintiff's amended petition unless the defendant files special exceptions to the revised pleadings, the court sustains the new special exceptions, and the court gives the plaintiff the opportunity to amend the revised pleadings.	"If a plaintiff makes a good faith attempt to amend his petition in response to a trial court's sustaining of a defendant's special exceptions, can a trial court not dismiss a plaintiff's amended petition?"
759	Sutherland v. Illinois Bell, 254 Ill. App. 3d 983, 988 (1993)	8	Generally, if trial court dismisses with prejudice a plaintiff's complaint, failure to request leave to file new complaint before appealing constitutes an election to stand on the dismissed complaint, and cause of action must stand or fall on facts alleged therein.	The general rule in this State is that where the trial court dismisses with prejudice a plaintiff's complaint, a failure to request leave to file a new complaint before appealing constitutes an election to stand on the dismissed complaint, and the cause of action must stand or fall on the facts alleged therein.	"If a trial court dismisses with prejudice a plaintiff's complaint, does failure to request leave to file new complaint before appealing constitute an election to stand on the dismissed complaint?"
760	Sisters of the Holy Child Jesus at Old Westbury, Inc. v. Corwin, 51 Misc. 3d 44, 47–48, 29 N.Y.S.3d 736, 738–39 (N.Y. App. Term. 2016)	4	Parents' allegation that private school's personnel were unqualified to address special needs of their daughter constituted claim for educational malpractice, which was not cognizable as cause of action or defense, under New York law, providing that quality and qualifications of teachers employed by private schools were concerns not for courts, but rather for New York State Education Department and its Commissioner. McKinney's Education Law § 5003.	The quality and qualifications of teachers employed by *48 private schools "are concerns not for the courts, but rather for the State Education Department and its commissioner" (Paladino v. Adelphi Univ., 89 A.D.2d at 93, 454 N.Y.S.2d 868, citing Education Law § 5003). The gist of defendants' claim, asserted both as a defense and as a counterclaim, that plaintiff's personnel were unqualified to address the special needs of defendants' daughter, is educational malpractice, which is not cognizable as a cause of action in New York State (see e.g. 739 Hoffman v. Board of Educ. of City of N.Y., 49 N.Y.2d 121, 125, 424 N.Y.S.2d 376, 400 N.E.2d 317 [1979]; Introna v. Huntington Learning Ctrs., Inc., 78 A.D.3d 896, 899, 911 N.Y.S.2d 442 [2010]), and likewise cannot serve as a defense.	Can a plaintiff bring an educational malpractice cause of action against a school in court?

761	Ramon v. Zangari, 116 A.D.3d 753, 754, 984 N.Y.S.2d 83, 84 (2014)	3	Court retains some residual discretion to deny motion to dismiss for want of prosecution, even when plaintiff fails to comply with 90-day requirement and additionally fails to proffer adequate excuse for delay or potentially meritorious cause of action. McKinney's CPLR 3216.	Under the plain language of CPLR 3216, a court retains some "residual discretion" to deny a motion to dismiss, even when a plaintiff fails to comply with the 90-day requirement and additionally fails to proffer an adequate excuse for the delay or a potentially meritorious cause of action (Baczowski v. Collins Constr. Co., 89 N.Y.2d at 504, 655 N.Y.S.2d 848, 678 N.E.2d 460).	"Can a Court retain some residual discretion to deny motion to dismiss for want of prosecution, even when plaintiff fails to comply with 90-day requirement?"
762	First Justice of Bristol Div. of Juvenile Court Dep't v. Clerk-Magistrate of Bristol Div. of Juvenile Court Dep't, 438 Mass. 387, 401 (2003)	9	Judges' authority to control and supervise judicial personnel includes inherent authority, independent of statute, to ensure that clerks, assistant clerks, and probation officers serving in their courts are qualified and possess the skills and competence to enable them to perform their duties in a professional manner and in conformity with governing statutes, rules, orders, and standards of accountability.	Second, judges' authority to control and supervise judicial personnel includes inherent authority, independent of 919 statute, to ensure that clerks, assistant clerks, and probation officers serving in their courts are qualified and possess the skills and competence to enable them to perform their duties in a professional manner and in conformity with governing statutes, rules, orders, and standards of accountability.	What does a judges' authority to control and supervise judicial personnel entail?
766	U.S. v. Quintero, 165 F.3d 831, 835 (C.A.11 (Fla.),1999)	5	When determining whether collateral estoppel applies in the context of a retrial, courts must engage in a two-part inquiry: court first must decide whether it can ascertain the basis of the acquittal at the first trial, and then must determine whether the elements of the crime upon which the prior acquittal was based are also essential elements of the crime for which the defendant is to be retried.	When determining whether collateral estoppel applies in the context of a retrial, courts must engage in a two-part inquiry. See Shenberg, 89 F.3d at 1479. "First, the Court must decide whether it can ascertain the basis of the acquittal at the first trial." United States v. Garcia, 78 F.3d 1517, 1521 (11th Cir.1996). Second, the court must determine whether the elements of the crime upon which the prior acquittal was based are also essential elements of the crime for which the defendant is to be retried.	"In deciding whether collateral estoppel, pursuant to the Double Jeopardy Clause, bars a retrial, should courts examine whether it is possible to ascertain the basis of the acquittal at the first trial?"
767	Phenix City v. Alabama Power Co., 239 Ala. 547, 552 (1940)	5	Municipal corporations, in passing ordinances in the exercise of their police power, or their power of taxation and of eminent domain, are performing a function of government which may be delegated to them by the state to prescribe local regulations of self-government, and in so doing the state legislature is not regarded as transferring legislative power committed by the Constitution to it.	It is well understood that municipal corporations in passing ordinances in the exercise of their police power, of taxation and of eminent domain, are performing a function of government which may be delegated to them by the state to prescribe local regulations of self government, and in so doing the state legislature is not regarded as transferring legislative power committed by the constitution to it.	"Are the Municipal corporations, in passing ordinances in the exercise of their police power, are performing a function of government which may be delegated to them by the state?"

770	K.H. v. Jefferson Cty. Dep't of Human Res., 106 So. 3d 420, 422 (Ala. Civ. App. 2012)	4	The constitutional right to counsel in a civil matter is not without limitation, and a trial court's refusal to grant a continuance when counsel fails to appear will not be deemed reversible error in every case. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 6.	Southeast General Contractors, Inc., 982 So.2d 1099, 1103 (Ala.Civ.App.2007) (quoting Ex parte McCain, 804 So.2d 186, 189 (Ala.2001) (See, J., concurring specially)), " '[the] constitutional right [to counsel in a civil matter], however, is not without limitation, and a trial court's refusal to grant a continuance when counsel fails to appear will not be deemed reversible error in every case.' "	" Is the constitutional right to counsel in a civil matter not without limitation, and a trial court's refusal to grant a continuance when counsel fails to appear will not be deemed reversible error in every case?"
772	Fort Worth Hotel Ltd. P'ship v. Enserch Corp., 977 S.W.2d 746, 757 (Tex. App. 1998)	15	Motion in limine is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, before trial, certain evidentiary rulings that the court may be asked to make; its purpose is to prevent the other party from asking prejudicial questions and introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first asking the court's permission.	A motion in limine is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, before trial, certain evidentiary rulings that the court may be asked to make. The purpose of a motion in limine is to prevent the other party from asking prejudicial questions and introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first asking the court's permission.	"Is a motion in limine a procedural device that identifies, prior to trial, evidentiary rulings that a court may be asked to make?"
775	State Farm Gen. Ins. Co. v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 143 Cal. App. 4th 1098, 1105 (2006)	3	"Subrogation" is defined as the substitution of another person in place of the creditor or claimant to whose rights he or she succeeds in relation to the debt or claim; it provides a method of compelling the ultimate payment by one who in justice and good conscience ought to make it, putting the charge where it justly belongs.	"Subrogation is defined as the substitution of another person in place of the creditor or claimant to whose rights he or she succeeds in relation to the debt or claim." (Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Maryland Casualty Co. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 1279, 1291, 77 Cal.Rptr.2d 296) It provides a " ' "method of compelling the ultimate payment by one who in justice and good conscience ought to make it-of putting the charge where it justly belongs."	Can subrogation be defined as the substitution of one person in the place of another with reference to a lawful claim or right?

777	Jones v. Halliburton Co., 583 F.3d 228, 233–34 (5th Cir. 2009)	2	A two-step analysis is employed to determine whether a party may be compelled to arbitrate, under which, first, whether the party has agreed to arbitrate the dispute is examined, and this question itself is further subdivided, such that a court, to determine whether the party has agreed to arbitrate a dispute, must ask: (1) is there a valid agreement to arbitrate the claims, and (2) does the dispute in question fall within the scope of that arbitration agreement; if both questions are answered in the affirmative, the court then asks whether any federal statute or policy renders the claims nonarbitrable.	A two-step analysis is employed to determine whether a party may be compelled to arbitrate. Id. First, whether *234 the party has agreed to arbitrate the dispute is examined. This question itself is further subdivided; to determine whether the party has agreed to arbitrate a dispute, our court must ask: "(1) is there a valid agreement to arbitrate the claims and (2) does the dispute in question fall within the scope of that arbitration agreement". Id. (citing JP Morgan Chase & Co. v. Conegie ex rel. Lee, 492 F.3d 596, 598 (5th Cir.2007)). If both questions are answered in the affirmative, our court then asks whether "any federal statute or policy renders the claims nonarbitrable".	How do courts determine whether a party is compelled to arbitrate?
778	State v. Frasher, 164 W. Va. 572, 572 (1980)	1	In order to constitute the crime of embezzlement, it is necessary that there be a trust relationship imposed on the person charged and that he fall within the class of persons named by statute, that the property or thing claimed to have been embezzled or converted be property embraced by the statute, that it be the property of another person, that it come into the possession or be placed in the care of the defendant by virtue of his office, place, or employment, that his manner of dealing with the disposing of the property constitutes a fraudulent conversion and an appropriation to his own use, and that the conversion of the property to his own use be with the intent to deprive the owner thereof. Code, 61-3-20.	(I)n order to constitute the crime of embezzlement, it is necessary to show, (1) the trust relation of the person charged, and that he falls within that class of persons named; (2) that the property or thing claimed to have been embezzled or converted is such property as is embraced in the statute; (3) that it is the property of another person; (4) that it came into the possession, or was placed in the care, of the accused, under and by virtue of his office, place or employment; (5) that his manner of dealing with or disposing of the property, constituted a fraudulent conversion and an appropriation of the same to his own use, and (6) that the conversion of the property to his own use was with the intent to deprive the owner thereof."	What is embezzlement?

779	Am. Min. Cong. v. U.S. E.P.A., 907 F.2d 1179, 1187 (D.C. Cir. 1990)	3	It is not court's role to second-guess scientific judgments of Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and administrator may apply his expertise to draw conclusions from suspected, but not completely substantiated, relationships between facts, from trends among facts, from theoretical projections from imperfect data, from probative preliminary data not yet certifiable as fact, and the like.	It is not the court's role to "second-guess the scientific judgments of the EPA," New York v. EPA, 852 F.2d 574, 580 (D.C.Cir.1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1065, 109 S.Ct. 1338, 103 L.Ed.2d 809(1989), and "[t]he Administrator may apply his expertise to draw conclusions from suspected, but not completely substantiated, relationships between facts, from trends among facts, from theoretical projections from imperfect data, from probative preliminary data not yet certifiable as 'fact,' and the like."	Is it the role of the court to second-guess the scientific judgments of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA)?
780	Williamson v. City of Hays, 275 Kan. 300, 307–08, 64 P.3d 364, 370 (2003)	10	In order to support an action in trespass, it must be established that the defendant intends to have foreign matter intrude upon another's land, or the defendant's act is done with knowledge that it will to a substantial certainty result in the entry of foreign matter.	In order to support an action in trespass, it must be established that the " 'defendant intends to have the foreign matter intrude upon the land, or where the defendant's" act is done with knowledge *308 that it will to a substantial certainty result in the entry of foreign matter.	"To constitute a trespass is it necessary that the defendant intends to have foreign matter intrude upon another's land, or that the defendant's act is done with the knowledge that it will to a substantial certainty will result in the entry of foreign matter to constitute a trespass action?"
781	Comber v. United States, 584 A.2d 26, 41 (D.C. App. 1990)	15	Unlike circumstances of justification or excuse, legally recognized mitigating factors do not constitute total defense to murder charge but they may serve to reduce the degree of criminality of a homicide which was otherwise committed with an intent to kill, an intent to injure, or in conscious and wanton disregard of life.	Unlike circumstances of justification or excuse, legally recognized factors do not constitute a total defense to a murder charge. Such circumstances may, however, serve to "reduc[e] the degree of criminality" of a homicide otherwise committed with an intent to kill, an intent to injure, or in conscious and wanton disregard of life.	Do legally recognized mitigating factors constitute a total defense to a murder charge?
782	Poindexter v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co., 914 F. Supp. 454, 457 (D. Kan. 1996)	7	RLA establishes mandatory arbitral mechanism for prompt and orderly settlement of two classes of disputes, which are "major disputes" concerning rates of pay, rules or working conditions, and "minor disputes" growing out of grievances or out of interpretation or application of collective bargaining agreements (CBA) covering rates of pay, rules, or working conditions. Railway Labor Act, S 2, 45 U.S.C.A. S 151a.	The RLA "establishes a mandatory arbitral mechanism for 'the prompt and orderly settlement' of two classes of disputes." Hawaiian Airlines, Inc., 512 U.S. at ———, 114 S.Ct. at 2243–44 (quoting 45 U.S.C. § 151a). The first class, "major" disputes, concerns "rates of pay, rules or working conditions"; the second class, "minor" disputes, "grow[s] out of grievances or out of the interpretation or application of [collective bargaining] agreements covering rates of pay, rules, or working conditions."	What are the two mandatory arbitral mechanisms established by the Railway Labor Act (RLA)?

783	Grega v. Pettengill, 123 F. Supp. 3d 517, 543 (Vt. 2015)	28	Under Vermont law, mere fact that a criminal tribunal found probable cause normally provides a presumption that probable cause existed in the context of a subsequent malicious prosecution claim; that presumption may be rebutted only by evidence that the probable cause finding was procured by fraud, perjury, the suppression of evidence, or other police conduct undertaken in bad faith.	"The mere fact that a criminal tribunal found probable cause normally provides a presumption that probable cause existed in the context of a subsequent wrongful prosecution claim." "That presumption may be rebutted only by evidence that the [probable cause finding] was procured by fraud, perjury, the suppression of evidence or other police conduct undertaken in bad faith."	How can the presumption of probable cause in a subsequent malicious prosecution claim be rebutted?
784	Sheffield v. Cantwell, 101 F.2d 351, 352 (7th Cir. 1938)	1	Under Illinois law, conviction is prima facie evidence of existence of probable cause for prosecution, and complete defense to suit for malicious prosecution unless such prima facie showing is overcome by evidence that conviction was obtained by false testimony, fraud, corrupt practices or unlawful or unjustifiable means on part of one procuring the conviction.	Yet, under the established law of Illinois, that conviction is prima facie evidence of existence of probable cause for the prosecution and complete defense to a suit for malicious prosecution, unless it is overcome by evidence that it was obtained by false testimony, fraud, corrupt practices or unlawful or unjustifiable means on the part of the one procuring the conviction.	When can one rebut that the conviction is prima facie evidence of probable cause in a malicious prosecution?
786	State v. Doucette, 147 Conn. 95, 99 (1959)	3	Although confession is evidence tending to prove both fact that crime charged was committed by someone, that is, the corpus delicti, and defendant's agency therein, it is not sufficient of itself to prove former, and without evidence aliunde of facts also tending to prove corpus delicti it is not enough to warrant conviction, and there must be extrinsic corroborative evidence as will when taken in connection with confession establish corpus delicti in mind of trier beyond a reasonable doubt.	The Connecticut rule, which we reaffirm, is 'that, although the confession is evidence tending to prove both the fact that the crime [charged] was committed [by someone, that is, the corpus delicti] and the defendant's agency therein, it is not sufficient of itself to prove the former, and, without evidence aliunde of facts also tending to prove the corpus delicti, it is not enough to warrant a conviction; and that there must be such extrinsic corroborative evidence as will, when taken in connection with the confession, establish the corpus delicti in the mind of the trier beyond a reasonable doubt.'	"In a prosecution, is the state required to prove defendant's agency?"
787	Dodge v. Kistler, 140 Fla. 209, 211 (1939)	1	"Legal subrogation" is the substitution of one person in the place of another with reference to a lawful claim or right, and it arises by operation of law where one having a liability or a right or a fiduciary relation in the premises pays a debt due by another under such circumstances that he is in equity entitled to the security or obligation held by the creditor whom he has paid.	Subrogation is the substitution of one person in the place of another with reference to a lawful claim or right. Subrogation arises by operation of law, where one having a liability or a right or a fiduciary relation in the premises pays a debt due by another under such circumstances that he is, in equity, entitled to the security or obligation held by the creditor whom he has paid.	Is subrogation the substitution of one person in place of another with reference to a lawful claim or right?

788	In re Bill Heard Enterprises, 423 B.R. 771, 780-81 (N.D. Ala. 2010)	12	Under Alabama law, the elements of equitable subrogation are expressed as follows: (1) the money is advanced at the instance of the debtor in order to extinguish a prior encumbrance, (2) the money is used for that purpose with the just expectation on the part of the lender for obtaining security of equal dignity with the prior encumbrance, (3) the whole debt must be paid before subrogation can be enforced, (4) the lender must be ignorant of intervening lien(s), and (5) the intervening lienor(s) must not be burdened or embarrassed.	Under Alabama law, the elements of equitable subrogation are expressed as follows: "(1) the money is advanced at the instance of the debtor in order to extinguish a prior [e]ncumbrance; (2) the money is used for that purpose with *781 the just expectation on the part of the lender for obtaining security of equal dignity with the prior [e]ncumbrance; (3) the whole debt must be paid before subrogation can be enforced; (4) the lender must be ignorant of ... intervening lien[s]; and (5) the intervening lienor[s] must not be burdened or embarrassed."	What are the elements of equitable subrogation?
789	Bankers Tr. Co. v. Hardy, 281 Ga. 561, 562 (2007)	1	Subrogation is the substitution of another person in the place of the creditor, so that the person in whose favor it is exercised succeeds to all the rights of the creditor; it is of equitable origin, being founded upon the dictates of refined justice, and its basis is the doing of complete, essential, and perfect justice between the parties, and its object is the prevention of injustice.	Subrogation is the substitution of another person in the place of the creditor, so that the person in whose favor it is exercised succeeds to all the rights of the creditor. It is of equitable origin, being founded upon the dictates of refined justice, and its basis is the doing of complete, essential, and perfect justice between the parties, and its object is the prevention of injustice.	"Is subrogation the substitution of another person in the place of the creditor, so that the person in whose favor it is exercised succeeds to all the rights of the creditor?"
791	Sikhs for Justice v. Nath, 893 F. Supp. 2d 598, 614 (S.D.N.Y., 2012)	17	Under the act of state doctrine, the courts of one state will not question the validity of public acts, acts jure imperii, performed by other sovereigns within their own borders, even when such courts have jurisdiction over a controversy in which one of the litigants has standing to challenge those acts.	Under the act of state doctrine, "the courts of one state will not question the validity of public acts (acts jure imperii) performed by other sovereigns within their own borders, even when such courts have jurisdiction over a controversy in which one of the litigants has standing to challenge those acts."	"Under the act of state doctrine, will the courts of one state question the validity of public acts, performed by other sovereigns within their own borders, even when such courts have jurisdiction over a controversy in which one of the litigants has standing?"
792	United States v. Sum of $70,990,605, 991 F.Supp.2d 154, 168 (D.D.C., 2013)	29	Even if the domestic court's factual findings must necessarily cast doubt upon the validity of the foreign sovereign's acts, the act of state doctrine is inapplicable if the foreign act of state does not need to be invalidated.	Even if this court's factual findings must necessarily "cast doubt upon the validity of the foreign sovereign's acts," the act of state doctrine is inapplicable if the foreign act of state does not need to be invalidated.	"Even if the domestic court's factual findings must necessarily cast doubt upon the validity of the foreign sovereign's acts, is the act of state doctrine inapplicable if the foreign act of state does not need to be invalidated?"

793	Du Daobin v. Cisco Sys., 2 F. Supp. 3d 717, 725 (D.Md. 2014)	8	The act of state doctrine is premised on the principle that every sovereign state is bound to respect the independence of every other sovereign state, and the courts of one country will not sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another, done within its own territory.	The act of state doctrine is premised on the principle that "[e]very sovereign state is bound to respect the independence of every other sovereign state, and the courts of one country will not sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another, done within its own territory."	"Is every sovereign state bound to respect the independence of every other sovereign state, and the courts of one country will not sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another, done within its own territory?"
794	Jovic v. L-3 Servs., 69 F. Supp. 3d 750, 765–66 (N.D. Ill. 2014)	31	Courts typically consider three factors in determining whether the act of state doctrine applies: (1) the degree of international consensus regarding the acts of the foreign government challenged by the suit; (2) the implications of the suit for United States foreign relations; and (3) whether the government accused of perpetrating the alleged wrongful acts remains in existence.	Courts typically consider three factors in determining whether the doctrine applies: (1) the degree of international consensus regarding the acts of the foreign government challenged by the suit; (2) the implications of the suit for United States foreign relations; and (3) whether the government accused of perpetrating the alleged wrongful acts remains in existence.	What factors do courts consider in determining whether the act of state doctrine applies?
796	Kaplan v. Cent. Bank of Islamic Republic of Iran, 961 F. Supp. 2d 185, 196–97 (D.D.C. 2013)	10	Act of state issues only arise when a court must decide, that is, when the outcome of the case turns upon, the effect of official action by a foreign sovereign; when it applies, the doctrine serves as a rule of decision for the courts of the United States, which requires courts to deem valid the acts of foreign sovereigns taken within their own jurisdictions.	"Act of state issues only arise when a court must decide- that is, when the outcome of the case turns upon-the effect of official action by a foreign sovereign." Id. at 406, 110 S.Ct. 701. "When it applies, the doctrine serves as a 'rule of decision for the courts of this country,' which requires courts to deem valid the acts of foreign sovereigns taken within their own jurisdictions." *197 McKesson Corp., 672 F.3d at 1066 (quoting Kirkpatrick, 493 U.S.	Does an act of state issue only arise when a court must decide the effect of official action by a foreign sovereign?
797	Faysound Ltd. v. Walter Fuller Aircraft Sales, 748 F. Supp. 1365, 1373 (E.D. Ark. 1990)	3	To qualify as act of state, it is necessary to prove that act occurred as result of considered policy determination by government to give effect to its political and public interest, matters that would have significant impact on American foreign relations.	To qualify as an act of state, it is necessary to prove that the act "occurred as a result of a considered policy determination by a government to give effect to its political and public interest-matters that would have significant impact on American foreign relations."	"To qualify as an act of state, is it necessary to prove that the act occurred as a result of a considered policy determination by a government to give effect to its political and public interest?"

799	In re Estate of Cullen, 118 Ohio App. 3d 256, 261 (1997)	3	Motion in limine, if granted, is interlocutory ruling by the trial court reflecting its anticipatory treatment of evidentiary issue; accordingly, party who has been temporarily restricted from introducing evidence must seek to introduce it at trial in order to enable court to make final determination as to its admissibility and to preserve any objection on record.	A motion in limine, if granted, is an interlocutory ruling by the trial court reflecting its anticipatory treatment of an evidentiary issue. Accordingly, the party who has been temporarily restricted from introducing evidence must seek to introduce it at trial in order to enable the court to make a final determination as to its admissibility and to preserve any objection on the record.	Must a party who has been temporarily restricted from introducing evidence must seek to introduce it at trial in order to enable court to make final determination as to its admissibility and to preserve any objection on record?
801	MMA Consultants 1 v. Republic of Peru, 245 F. Supp. 3d 486, 519–20 (S.D.N.Y. 2017)	42	The act of state doctrine confers presumptive validity on certain acts of foreign sovereigns by rendering non-justiciable claims that challenge such acts; its applicability depends, in part, on whether judicial examination of the sovereign's act would embarrass or hinder the executive in the realm of foreign relations.	The act of state doctrine "confer[s] presumptive validity on certain acts of foreign sovereigns by rendering non-justiciable claims that challenge such acts." *520 Allied Bank Int'l v. Banco Credito Agricola de Cartago, 757 F.2d 516, 520 (2d Cir. 1985). Its applicability depends, in part, on whether judicial examination of the sovereign's act "would embarrass or hinder the executive in the realm of foreign relations."	Does the act of state doctrine operate to confer presumptive validity on certain acts of foreign sovereigns by rendering no justiciable claims that challenge such acts?
802	Jovic v. L-3 Servs., 69 F. Supp. 3d 750, 765–66 (N.D. Ill. 2014)	31	Courts typically consider three factors in determining whether the act of state doctrine applies: (1) the degree of international consensus regarding the acts of the foreign government challenged by the suit; (2) the implications of the suit for United States foreign relations; and (3) whether the government accused of perpetrating the alleged wrongful acts remains in existence.	Courts typically consider three factors in determining whether the doctrine applies: (1) the degree of international consensus regarding the acts of the foreign government challenged by the suit; (2) the implications of the suit for United States foreign relations; and (3) whether the government accused of perpetrating the alleged wrongful acts remains in existence.	What are the factors to consider in determining whether the acts of state doctrine bars suit against foreign state?
804	Chisholm & Co. v. Bank of Jamaica, 643 F. Supp. 1393, 1403 (S.D. Fla. 1986)	18	Act of state doctrine requires that court, after exercising jurisdiction, nevertheless decline to decide merits of case if in doing so it would be required to judge validity of public acts of sovereign state performed within its own territory.	The act of state doctrine requires that a court, after exercising jurisdiction, nevertheless decline to decide the merits of a case if in doing so it would need to judge the validity of the public acts of a sovereign state performed within its own territory.	Does the act of state doctrine require that a court declines to decide the merits of a case if in doing so it would be required to judge validity of public acts of sovereign state performed within its own territory?
805	Rossman v. Morasco, 115 Conn. App. 234, 254 (2009)	21	The motion in limine has generally been used in Connecticut courts to invoke a trial judge's inherent discretionary powers to control proceedings, exclude evidence, and prevent occurrences that might unnecessarily prejudice the right of any party to a fair trial.	"[T]he motion in limine ... has generally been used in Connecticut courts to invoke a trial judge's inherent discretionary powers to control proceedings, exclude evidence, and prevent occurrences that might unnecessarily prejudice the right of any party to a fair trial.	Has the motion in limine generally been used in courts to invoke a trial judge's inherent discretionary powers to exclude evidence at trial?

806	Vaughan v. Greater Huntington Park & Recreation Dist., 223 W. Va. 583, 588, 678 S.E.2d 316, 321 (2009)	4	A motion in limine is a procedure which enables the trial court to become acquainted with a potentially troublesome evidentiary issue in advance of the offer of the evidence in order to prevent the jury from being exposed to inadmissible evidence.	"A motion in limine is a procedure which enables the trial court to become acquainted with a potentially troublesome evidentiary issue in advance of the offer of the evidence ... in order to prevent the jury from being exposed to inadmissible evidence."	Is a motion in limine a procedure which enables the trial court to become acquainted with a potentially troublesome evidentiary issues evidence to prevent the jury from being exposed to inadmissible evidence?
807	Riverside Methodist Hosp. Ass'n of Ohio v. Guthrie, 3 Ohio App.3d 308, 310 (Ohio App.,1982)	4	Motion in limine may be used as equivalent of motion to suppress evidence, which is either not competent or improper because of some unusual circumstances, and as means of raising objection to area of inquiry to prevent prejudicial questions and statements until admissibility of questionable evidence can be determined during course of trial.	A motion in limine may be used in two different ways: (1) as the equivalent of a motion to suppress evidence, which is either not competent or improper because of some unusual circumstance; and (2) as a means of raising objection to an area of inquiry to prevent prejudicial questions and statements until the admissibility of the questionable evidence can be determined during the course of the trial.	Is a motion in limine a means of preventing prejudicial questions and statements until the admissibility of the questionable evidence can be determined during the course of the trial?
808	Chase v. Ameriquest Mortg. Co., 155 N.H. 19, 26 (N.H. 2007)	15	The purpose behind subrogation is to place the responsibility where it ultimately should rest by compelling payment by the one who in good conscience ought to pay it; it also prevents individuals from recouping a windfall.	The purpose behind subrogation is to place the responsibility where it ultimately should rest by compelling payment by the one who in good conscience ought to pay it. It also prevents [individuals] from recouping a windfall.	Is the purpose behind subrogation to place the responsibility where it ultimately should rest by compelling payment by the one who in good conscience ought to pay it and to prevent individuals from recouping a windfall?
809	Jorge v. Travelers Indem. Co., 947 F. Supp. 150, 155 (D.N.J. 1996)	7	Generally, subrogation applies where party, not acting voluntarily but under some compulsion, pays debt or discharges obligation for which another is primarily liable and which in equity and good conscience ought to be discharged by the latter.	Generally, subrogation applies where a party, "not acting voluntarily, but under some compulsion" pays a debt or discharges an obligation for which another is primarily liable and which "in equity and good conscience ought to be discharged by the latter." See, e.g., First Nat'l City Bank v.	"Does subrogation apply where a party not acting voluntarily, but under some compulsion, pays a debt or discharges an obligation for which another is primarily liable and which in equity and good conscience ought to be discharged by the latter?"

810	Dep't of Navy v. Egan, 484 U.S. 518, 527 (1988)	3	Authority of the President to classify and control access to information bearing on national security, and to determine whether an individual is sufficiently trustworthy to occupy a position in the executive branch that will give him access to that type of information, flows primarily from the constitutional investment of power in the President to serve as Commander in Chief and exists apart from any explicit congressional grant. U.S.C.A. Const. Art. 2, S 2, cl. 1.	The President, after all, is the "Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States." U.S. Const., Art. II, 2. His authority to classify and control access to information bearing on national security and to determine whether an individual is sufficiently trustworthy to occupy a position in the Executive Branch that will give that person access to such information flows primarily from this constitutional investment of power in the President and exists quite apart from any explicit congressional grant.	What is the constitutional premise for the President's oversight of national security information?
812	Est. of Underwood v. Nat'l Credit Union Admin., 665 A.2d 621, 630 (D.C. 1995)	5	Workers' Compensation Act makes employer liable without fault if employee's occupational injury or death falls within scope of Act, but as quid pro quo for automatic liability, Act provides employee's exclusive remedy against employer for injuries within its reach. D.C.Code 1981, S 36-304(a).	It makes the employer liable without fault if the employee's occupational injury or death falls within the scope of the Act, see D.C.Code 36-303; Grillo v. National Bank of Washington, 540 A.2d 743, 748 (D.C.1988), but as a quid pro quo for such automatic liability the Act provides the employee's exclusive remedy-an administrative remedy- against the employer for injuries within its reach.	Does the workers compensation act make employers liable without fault if an employees occupational injury or death falls within the scope of the act?
814	White v. S. Cal. Edison Co., 25 Cal. App. 4th 442, 448, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 431, 435-36 (1994)	8	Exception to general duty rule applicable to public utility exists in case of interruption of service or failure to provide service; in absence of contract between utility and consumer expressly providing for furnishing of service for specific purpose, public utility owes no duty to person injured as result of interruption of service or failure to provide service. West's Ann.Cal.Civ.Code S 1714.	An exception to the general duty rule applicable to a public utility exists, however, in the case of an interruption of service or a failure to provide service. In the absence of a contract between the utility and the consumer expressly providing for the furnishing of a service for a specific purpose, a public utility owes no duty to a person 436 injured as a result of an interruption of service or a failure to provide service.	Does a public utility owe a duty to a person injured as a result of an interruption of service or a failure to provide service in the absence of contract?
815	Wilson v. McNeely, 302 Ga. App. 213, 214, 690 S.E.2d 512, 513 (2010)	2	The trial court must have the power to impose appropriate sanctions to make effective its pre-trial orders; contempt may at times be proper, whereas, in an extreme case, the plaintiff's action may be dismissed or the defendant precluded from introducing evidence relating to his defense, although these remedies are too drastic if less harsh sanctions are appropriate.	After recognizing that the trial court must have the power "to impose appropriate sanctions to make effective its pre-trial orders," the Supreme Court noted that " '[c]ontempt may at times be proper; and in an extreme case the plaintiff's action may be dismissed or the defendant precluded from introducing evidence relating to his defense, but these remedies are too drastic if less harsh sanctions are appropriate.' "	Is it within the power of the court to impose appropriate sanctions to make effective its pretrial orders?

817	Shulas v. Estabrook, 385 N.J. Super 91, 99 (2006)	3	A motion based on rule regarding voluntary dismissal of a complaint involves three sequential inquiries: (1) whether the matter should be dismissed without prejudice; (2) if so, whether terms should be imposed; and (3) if so, what terms will alleviate any prejudice to the defendant and prevent injury to the efficient administration of justice generated by the ensuing delay and duplication of effort. R. 4:37-1(b).	A motion based on R. 4:37-1(b) involves three sequential inquiries: (a) whether the matter should be dismissed without prejudice, (b) if so, whether terms should be imposed, and (c) if so, what terms will alleviate any prejudice to the defendant and prevent injury to the efficient administration of justice generated by the ensuing delay and duplication of effort.	Does a motion based on rule regarding voluntary dismissal of a complaint involve three sequential inquiries?
818	Gogri v. Jack In The Box Inc., 166 Cal. App. 4th 255, 261 (2008)	1	Voluntary dismissal of an entire action deprives the court of both subject matter and personal jurisdiction in that case, except for the limited purpose of awarding costs and statutory attorney fees. West's Ann.Cal.C.C.P. S 581.	Alternatively stated, voluntary dismissal of an entire action deprives the court of both subject matter and personal jurisdiction in that case, except for the limited purpose of awarding costs and statutory attorney fees.	"Does a voluntary dismissal of an entire action deprive the court of both subject matter and personal jurisdiction in that case, except for the limited purpose of awarding costs and attorney fees?"
820	Alaska Airlines v. Sweat, 568 P.2d 916, 932 (Alaska 1977)	26	Whether a rebuttal witness should be included on a pretrial witness list in the absence of specific provision in the pretrial order should be dependent on whether the testimony sought to be rebutted could reasonably have been anticipated prior to trial.	Whether a rebuttal witness should be included on a pre-trial witness list in the absence of specific provision in the pre-trial order, 23 should be dependent on whether the testimony sought to be rebutted could reasonably have been anticipated prior to trial.	Should the question of whether a rebuttal witness should be included on a pretrial witness list in the absence of specific provision in the pretrial order be dependent on whether the testimony sought to be rebutted could reasonably have been anticipated prior to trial?
821	In re Sewell, 472 S.W.3d 449, 456 (Tex. App. 2015)	16	Although a party moving to withdraw admissions ordinarily must prove the requirements of rule allowing for withdrawal when the deemed admissions are merit-preclusive, good cause for withdrawal exists absent bad faith or callous disregard of the rules by the party seeking the withdrawal. Tex. R. Civ. P. 198.3.	Thus, although a party moving to withdraw admissions ordinarily must prove the requirements of Rule 198.3, when the deemed admissions are merit-preclusive, good cause exists absent bad faith or callous disregard of the rules by the party seeking the withdrawal.	"When the deemed admissions are merit-preclusive, does good cause for withdrawal exist absent bad faith or callous disregard of the rules by the party seeking the withdrawal?"
822	Sampson v. Hunt, 233 Kan. 572, 578 (1983)	6	When pretrial order is entered by trial court pursuant to rule, it has full force and effect of other orders of court and controls subsequent course of trial unless modified to prevent manifest injustice. Rules Civ.Proc., K.S.A. 60-216.	When a pretrial order is entered by the trial court pursuant to K.S.A. 60-216, it has the full force and effect of other orders of the court and controls the subsequent course of trial unless modified to prevent manifest injustice.	"When pretrial order is entered by trial court pursuant to rule, does it have the full force and effect of other orders of court and controls subsequent course of trial unless modified to prevent manifest injustice?"

825	Tobkin v. State, 777 So. 2d 1160, 1163 (Fla.App. 4 Dist., 2001)	3	A voluntary dismissal does not divest the court of jurisdiction to conclude ancillary matters involved in the case such as outstanding and unresolved motions for attorney's fees and costs, and similar issues such as unresolved contempt of court matters.	Of course, a voluntary dismissal does not divest the court of jurisdiction to conclude ancillary matters involved in the case such as outstanding and unresolved motions for attorney's fees and costs, and similar issues. These ancillary matters would include unresolved contempt of court matters.	"Does a voluntary dismissal divest the court of jurisdiction to conclude ancillary matters involved in the case such as outstanding and unresolved motions for attorney's fees and costs, and similar issues such as unresolved contempt of court matters?"
827	Graco Robotics v. Oaklawn Bank, 914 S.W.2d 633, 642 (Tex. App. 1995)	23	Court may permit withdrawal of deemed admissions on showing of good cause if it finds that party relying on deemed admissions will not be unduly prejudiced and that presentation of merits of action will be subserved thereby. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 169, subd. 1.	The court may permit withdrawal of deemed admissions on a showing of good cause if it finds that the party relying on the deemed admissions will not be unduly prejudiced and that presentation of the merits of the action will be subserved thereby.	Can a court permit withdrawal of deemed admissions on showing of good cause if it finds that party relying on deemed admissions will not be unduly prejudiced and that presentation of merits of action will be subserved thereby?
834	Brochtrup v. Intep, 190 Cal. App. 3d 323, 328, 235 Cal. Rptr. 390, 392 (Ct. App. 1987)	1	Where party served with request for admissions fails to respond within 30 days, propounding party may serve nonresponsive party with notice that genuineness of documents or truth of facts alleged is deemed admitted; nonresponsive party then has 30 days to move for relief from default. West's Ann.Cal.C.C.P. SS 473, 2033.	Where the party served with a request for admissions fails to respond within 30 days, the propounding party may serve the nonresponsive party with notice that the genuineness of the documents or the truth of the facts alleged is deemed admitted. The nonresponsive party then has 30 days to move for relief from default under section 473.	"Where a party served with request for admissions fails to respond within 30 days, can the propounding party serve the nonresponsive party with a notice that genuineness of documents or truth of facts alleged is deemed admitted?"
835	State ex rel. State Corp. Comm'n v. Old Abe Co., 1939-NMSC-046, ¶ 13, 43 N.M. 367, 94 P.2d 105, 108	5	A mere declaration contained in a statute that it shall be regarded as a tax of a particular character does not make it such if it is apparent that it cannot be so designated consistently with meaning and effect of act, but declaration of lawmaking power is entitled to much weight.	"While the mere declaration contained in a statute that it shall be regarded as a tax of a particular character does not make it such if it is apparent that it cannot be so designated consistently with the meaning and effect of the act, nevertheless the declaration of the law-making power is entitled to much weight, and in this statute the intention is expressly declared to impose a special excise tax with respect to the carrying on or doing business by such corporation, joint stock company or association, or insurance company.	Does a mere declaration contained in a statute that it shall be regarded as a tax of a particular character make it such if it is apparent that it cannot be so designated consistently with the meaning and effect of the act?

836	Friedman v. Knecht, 248 Cal. App. 2d 455, 460–61, 56 Cal. Rptr. 540, 544 (Ct. App. 1967)	3	Although penal code requires motions for continuance to be made upon affirmative proof in open court and code of civil procedure specifies that such motions, when based on absence of evidence, be made on affidavits, they are quite commonly heard on oral representations by counsel, and matters germane to court's ruling range all the way from the health of witnesses to the true significance of religious holidays. West's Ann.Pen.Code, S 1050; West's Ann.Code Civ.Proc. S 595.4.	Although the Penal Code requires motions for continuance to be made 'upon affirmative proof in open court' (Pen.Code, s 1050) and the Code of Civil *461 Procedure specifies that such motions, when based on the absence of evidence, be made on affidavits (Code Civ.Proc. s 595.4), they are quite commonly heard on oral representations by counsel. The matters germane to the court's ruling range all the way from the health of witnesses to the true significance of religious holidays.	Does law require motions for continuance to be made upon affirmative proof in open court?
837	People v. Alvino, 71 N.Y.2d 233, 244, 519 N.E.2d 808, 814 (1987)	8	Before a public servant may be convicted of bribe receiving in the second degree, there must be proof of a corrupt agreement, and State must establish that defendant solicited, accepted or agreed to accept a benefit upon an agreement or understanding that his conduct would be influenced by that benefit. McKinney's Penal Law S 200.10 (now S 200.11).	Before a public servant may be convicted of bribe receiving, second degree, there must be proof of a corrupt agreement. The People must establish that defendant solicited, accepted or agreed to accept a benefit "upon an agreement or understanding" that his conduct would be influenced by the benefit (Penal Law former § 200.10; see also, People v. Charles, 61 N.Y.2d 321, 473 N.Y.S.2d 941, 462 N.E.2d 118).	What must be proved in order to establish that a public servant was involved in a corrupt agreement for purposes of a conviction of bribe receiving in the second degree?
841	City of Ashland v. Ashland Salvage, 271 Neb. 362, 371 (2006)	15	A party's failure to make a timely and appropriate response to a request for admission constitutes an admission of the subject matter of the request, which matter is conclusively established unless, on motion, the court permits withdrawal of the admission. Discovery Rule 36.	We have held that a party's failure to make a timely and appropriate response to a request for admission constitutes an admission of the subject matter of the request, which matter is conclusively established unless, on motion, the court permits withdrawal of the admission.	"Does a party's failure to make a timely and appropriate response to a request for admission constitute an admission of the subject matter of the request, which matter is conclusively established unless, on motion, the court permits withdrawal of the admission?"
843	Wagner v. Carex Investigations & Sec. Inc., 93 Nev. 627, 630, 572 P.2d 921, 923 (1977)	1	Matters deemed admitted as result of failure to serve timely answers or objections to requests for admissions may properly serve as basis for summary judgment against party who has failed to serve timely response and relief from motion to vacate summary judgment is discretionary with district court. NRCP 36(a, b).	The sanction for failure to serve timely answers or objections to requests for admissions is that all matters in the request are deemed admitted. N.R.C.P. 36(a)N.R.C.P. 36(a), supra, f. 2. It is settled in this jurisdiction that such admissions may properly serve as the basis for summary judgment against the party who has failed to serve a timely response. Graham v. Carson-Tahoe Hosp., 91 Nev. 609, 540 P.2d 105 (1975).Relief is discretionary with the district court.	Can the matters deemed admitted as a result of failure to serve timely answers or objections to requests for admissions properly serve as a basis for a summary judgment against a party who has failed to serve timely response and relief?

844	Ferraro v. Zurcher, 12 N.J. Super. 231, 239 (1951)	8	The compensation act provides social insurance in common interest as well as interest of workmen, and does not sanction punishment of exaggeration or misrepresentations by denial of proper compensations for disability otherwise sustained by proofs.	The Compensation Act, however, 'provides social insurance in The common interest as well as the interest of the workman,' Nagy v. Ford Motor Co., supra, and does not sanction punishment of exaggeration or indeed misrepresentation by denial of proper compensation for a disability otherwise sustained by the proofs.	"Does the compensation act provide social insurance in common interest as well as the interest of workmen, and does it sanction punishment of exaggeration or misrepresentations by denial of proper compensations for disability otherwise sustained by proofs?"
845	Trachtenberg v. Failedmessiah.com, 43 F. Supp. 3d 198, 205 (E.D.N.Y., 2014)	12	If a plaintiff makes a sufficient start toward meeting her jurisdictional burden, a court has discretion to grant her limited jurisdictional discovery to prove other contacts and activities of the defendant in New York as might confer jurisdiction. N.Y.McKinney's CPLR 3211(d).	If a plaintiff makes a "sufficient start" toward meeting her jurisdictional burden, a district court has discretion to grant her limited jurisdictional discovery "to prove other contacts and activities of the defendant in New York as might confer jurisdiction."	"If a plaintiff makes a sufficient start toward meeting her jurisdictional burden, does a court have discretion to grant her limited jurisdictional discovery to prove other contacts?"
847	Randall Elec., Inc. v. State, 150 A.D.2d 875, 876, 540 N.Y.S.2d 901, 902 (1989)	1	Actions taken and observations made for stated purpose of arriving at settlement agreement, and expressly not for litigation, which actions would not have been accomplished except in mutual attempt to reach settlement, should generally be protected from discovery by public policy encouraging attempts at settlement.	Actions taken and observations made for the stated purpose of arriving at a settlement agreement, and expressly not for litigation, which actions would not have been accomplished except in a mutual attempt to reach a settlement, should likewise generally be protected by the same public policy of encouraging attempts at settlement.	Are actions taken in observations made for stated purpose of arriving at a settlement agreement subject to discovery when actions would not have been accomplished except in a neutral attempt to reach a settlement?
848	Kaynar Mfg. Co. v. Superior Ct. In & For Los Angeles Cnty., 141 Cal. App. 2d 547, 550, 297 P.2d 502, 504 (1956)	1	In order that a party to an action may, pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure section, have right to inspect books of account or documents, he must (1) show that person against whom the order is sought has the writings to be inspected in his possession or under his control; (2) identify writings desired; and (3) clearly show that they contain competent and admissible evidence which is material to the issues to be tried. West's Ann.Code Civ.Proc. S 1000.	In order that a party to an action may, pursuant to section 1000, Code of Civil Procedure, have the right to inspect books of account or documents, he must (1) show that the person against whom the order is sought has the writings to be inspected in his possession or under his control; (2) identify the writings desired; and (3) clearly show that they contain competent an admissible evidence which is material to the issues to be tried.	"In order to be entitled for an inspection of documents, should it be shown that they are in the possession of the adverse party?"

849	Moseley v. Behringer, 184 S.W.3d 829, 832 (Tex. App. 2006)	1	The granting of a nonsuit is a ministerial act; plaintiff's right thereto exists from the moment a written motion is filed or an oral motion is made in open court unless defendant has, prior to that time, filed pleadings seeking affirmative relief, and, thus, trial court has no discretion but to grant the nonsuit unless defendant has previously sought affirmative relief. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 162.	The granting of a nonsuit is a ministerial act. Greenberg v. Brookshire, 640 S.W.2d 870, 872 (Tex.1982) (orig.proceeding) (interpreting rule 164, rule 162's predecessor, and granting mandamus relief). "A plaintiff's right thereto exists from the moment a written motion is filed or an oral motion is made in open court unless the defendant has, prior to that time, filed pleadings seeking affirmative relief." Id. A trial court therefore has no discretion but to grant the nonsuit unless the defendant has previously sought affirmative relief.	Does a plaintiff's right to dismiss the suit exist from the moment a written motion is filed or an oral motion is made in open court?
852	Grudt v. City of Los Angeles, 2 Cal. 3d 575, 585–86, 468 P.2d 825, 829–30 (1970)	4	When filed, pretrial conference order becomes part of the record in the case and, even though inconsistent with the pleadings, controls subsequent course of the case, unless modified at or before trial to prevent manifest injustice. Cal.Rules of Court, rule 216.	When filed, the pretrial conference order becomes a part of the record in the case and, even though inconsistent with the pleadings, controls the subsequent course of the case unless modified at or before trial to prevent manifest injustice. (Cal. Rules of Court, rule 216;	"Does pretrial conference order become a part of a case, even though inconsistent with the pleadings, and control a subsequent course of the case, unless modified at or before trial?"
853	Koken v. One Beacon Ins. Co., 911 A.2d 1021, 1031 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 2006)	16	To obtain discovery in support of a claim of selective prosecution by an agency, evidence tending to show the existence of the essential elements of the defense, "discriminatory effect" and "discriminatory intent," must be produced.	To obtain discovery in support of a claim of selective prosecution, evidence tending to show the existence of the essential elements of the defense, "discriminatory effect and discriminatory intent," must be produced.	"To obtain discovery in support of a claim of selective prosecution by an agency, must evidence tending to show the existence of the essential elements of the defense, discriminatory effect and discriminatory intent, be produced?"
854	Whitcraft v. Runyon, 123 A.D.3d 811, 812, 999 N.Y.S.2d 124, 126 (2014)	2	Although the ultimate burden of proof regarding personal jurisdiction rests with the plaintiff, to defeat a motion to dismiss a complaint, the plaintiff need only make a prima facie showing that the defendant is subject to the personal jurisdiction of the court. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(8).	Although the ultimate burden of proof regarding personal jurisdiction rests with the plaintiff, to defeat a CPLR 3211(a)(8) motion to dismiss a complaint, the plaintiff need only make a prima facie showing that the defendant is subject to the personal jurisdiction of the court (see Weitz v. Weitz, 85 A.D.3d 1153, 926 N.Y.S.2d 305; Cornely v. Dynamic HVAC Supply, LLC, 44 A.D.3d 986, 845 N.Y.S.2d 797).	"To defeat a motion to dismiss a complaint, should a plaintiff make a prima facie showing that the defendant is subject to personal jurisdiction of a court?"

856	Waites v. Sondock, 561 S.W.2d 772, 776 (Tex. 1977)	3	Legislative continuance is mandatory except in those cases in which party opposing continuance alleges that substantial existing right will be defeated or abridged by delay; in cases of this type, trial court has duty to conduct hearing on such allegations, and if allegations are shown to be meritorious court should deny continuance. Vernon's Ann.Civ.St. art. 2168a.	At the same time we reiterate the limited nature of our holding: a legislative continuance is mandatory except in those cases in which the party opposing the continuance alleges that a substantial existing right will be defeated or abridged by delay. In cases of this type the trial court has a duty to conduct a hearing on the allegations. If the allegations are shown to be meritorious the court should deny the continuance.	Is legislative continuance mandatory except in those cases in which a party opposing continuance alleges that a substantial existing right will be defeated or abridged by delay?
857	Randall Elec., Inc. v. State, 150 A.D.2d 875, 876, 540 N.Y.S.2d 901, 902 (1989)	1	Actions taken and observations made for stated purpose of arriving at settlement agreement, and expressly not for litigation, which actions would not have been accomplished except in mutual attempt to reach settlement, should generally be protected from discovery by public policy encouraging attempts at settlement.	Actions taken and observations made for the stated purpose of arriving at a settlement agreement, and expressly not for litigation, which actions would not have been accomplished except in a mutual attempt to reach a settlement, should likewise generally be protected by the same public policy of encouraging attempts at settlement.	Should actions taken and observations made for stated purpose of arriving at settlement agreement be protected from discovery by public policy encouraging attempts at settlement?
860	Estate of Rose, 465 Pa. 53, 62 (1975)	3	Federal and state governments may generally tax same subject matter at same time and neither the United States nor the state, in determining amount of tax due it, is under constitutional obligation to make any allowance on account of tax of the other.	The federal and state governments may generally tax the same subject matter at the same time and neither the United States nor the state, in determining the amount of tax due to it, is under constitutional obligation to make any allowance on account of the tax of the other.	"Can federal and state governments generally tax same subject matter at same time and neither the United States nor the state, in determining amount of tax due it, is under constitutional obligation to make any allowance on account of tax of the other?"
863	Nichols v. Muskingum Coll., 318 F.3d 674, 677 (C.A.6 (Ohio), 2003)	4	In reviewing a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the court may consider evidence outside the pleadings to resolve factual disputes concerning jurisdiction, and both parties are free to supplement the record by affidavit; however, where a defendant argues that the plaintiff has not alleged sufficient facts in her complaint to create subject matter jurisdiction, the trial court takes the allegations in the complaint as true. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 12(b)(1), 28 U.S.C.A.	In reviewing a 12(b)(1) motion, the court may consider evidence outside the pleadings to resolve factual disputes concerning jurisdiction, and both parties are free to supplement the record by affidavits. Rogers v. Stratton Industries, 798 F.2d 913, 916 (6th Cir.1986). However, where a defendant argues that the plaintiff has not alleged sufficient facts in her complaint to create subject matter jurisdiction, the trial court takes the allegations in the complaint as true.	May a court consider evidence outside the pleadings in resolving a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction?

865	Old Home Enterprise v. Fleming, 20 Neb.App. 705, 708 (Neb.App., 2013)	8	When a lawsuit is dismissed by operation of law for lack of service of process within 6 months of filing, the trial court has no jurisdiction to make orders thereafter, except to formalize the dismissal, and if made, they are a nullity, as are subsequent pleadings. West's Neb.Rev.St. S 25-217.	When a lawsuit is dismissed by operation of law for lack of service of process within 6 months of filing, the trial court has no jurisdiction to make orders thereafter, except to formalize the dismissal, and if made, they are a nullity, as are subsequent pleadings.	"Does a trial court have jurisdiction to make orders, when a lawsuit is dismissed by operation of law for lack of service of process within 6 months of filing?"
866	Hanna v. City of Chicago, 382 Ill. App. 3d 672, 677 (2008)	4	A mooted action should be dismissed out of concern that parties to a resolved dispute lack a sufficient personal stake in the outcome to assure that there is an adversarial relationship that sharpens the presentation of issues upon which the courts largely depend for illumination of difficult questions.	A mooted action should be dismissed out of "concern that parties to a resolved dispute lack a sufficient personal stake in the outcome to assure that there is an adversarial relationship that sharpens the presentation of issues upon which the courts largely depend for illumination of difficult questions."	Should a mooted action be dismissed out of concern that parties to a resolved dispute lack a sufficient personal stake in the outcome?
867	Price v. Roy O. Martin Lumber Co., 915 So. 2d 816, 826 (La.App. 1 Cir., 2005)	15	When a plaintiff does not have sufficient knowledge to ascertain the correct venue or acts upon incorrect knowledge and erroneously files suit in the wrong venue, the case should be transferred to a court of proper venue, though when the plaintiff knowingly files suit in the wrong venue, dismissal is proper. LSA-C.C.P. art. 121.	The jurisprudential rule has developed that, "when the plaintiff does not have sufficient knowledge to ascertain the correct venue or acts upon incorrect knowledge and erroneously files suit in the wrong venue, the case should be transferred to a court of proper venue pursuant to LSA-C.C.P. Art. 121. However, when the plaintiff knowingly files suit in the wrong venue, dismissal is proper."	"When a plaintiff does not have sufficient knowledge to ascertain the correct venue or acts upon incorrect knowledge and erroneously files suit in the wrong venue, should the case be transferred to a court of proper venue?"
868	Gautreaux v. Maya, 112 So. 3d 146, 149-50 (Fla. App. 2013)	10	When seeking dismissal of a lawsuit for fraud on the court, a mere testimonial discrepancy is ordinarily not enough; rather, to warrant dismissal, the party's conduct must show a scheme calculated to evade or stymie discovery of facts central to the case.	In other words, when seeking dismissal of a lawsuit for fraud on the court, "[a] mere testimonial discrepancy is ordinarily not enough." Rather, to warrant dismissal, the party's conduct must show "a scheme calculated to evade or stymie discovery of facts central *150 to the case."	"To warrant dismissal, should the party's conduct show a scheme calculated to evade or stymie discovery of facts central to the case?"
869	Anderson v. Sills, 143 N.J. Super. 432, 437-38 (1976)	3	Since a contest engendered by genuinely conflicting self-interests of the parties is best suited to developing all relevant material before the court, where there is a change in circumstances so that a doubt is created concerning the immediacy of the controversy, courts will ordinarily dismiss the case as moot, regardless of the stage to which the litigation has progressed.	Second, it is a premise of the Anglo-American judicial system that a contest engendered by genuinely conflicting self-interests of the parties is 384 best suited to developing all relevant material before the court. Therefore, where there is a change in circumstances so that a doubt is created concerning the immediacy of the controversy, courts will ordinarily dismiss cases as moot, regardless of the stage to which the litigation has progressed.	Will courts dismiss cases as moot when circumstances out of which controversy arises change so as to raise doubt concerning adversity of parties interests?

871	Ohio Civ. Serv. Emp. Assn., AFSCME, Local 11, AFL-CIO v. Ohio Dep't of Transp., 104 Ohio App. 3d 340, 343 (Ohio App. 10 Dist., 1995)	2	Where, prior to rendition of final decision, an event occurs, without fault of either party, which renders it impossible for court to grant effectual relief in case, case should be dismissed as moot.	Where, prior to the rendition of a final decision, an event occurs, without the fault of either 4-19 party, which renders it impossible for the court to grant effectual relief in a case, the case should be dismissed.	"Should case be dismissed as moot where, prior to rendition of final decision, an event occurs, without fault of either party, which renders it impossible for court to grant effectual relief in case?"
872	Shaw v. Universal Life & Acc. Ins. Co., 123 S.W.2d 738, 739-40 (Tex. Civ. App. 1938)	5	Where an order has been properly granted to make a pleading more definite or more specific, failure to comply therewith is an act of contempt and action may be dismissed without prejudice, at least in absence of proper excuse.	"Where an order has been properly granted to make a pleading more definite and certain or more specific, failure or refusal to comply therewith is an act of contempt, and the action may, and, according to some authorities, must, be dismissed, without prejudice, at least in the absence of reasonable and proper excuse * * *".	"Where an order has been properly granted to make a pleading more definite or more specific, is failure to comply therewith, can an act of contempt and action be dismissed without prejudice?"
874	Stacy v. Johnson, 25 So. 3d 365, 368 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009)	3	Cases are dismissed with prejudice for failure to prosecute if the record shows that a plaintiff has been guilty of dilatory or contumacious conduct, or has repeatedly disregarded the procedural directives of the court, and where lesser sanctions would not serve the best interests of justice. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	Such cases are dismissed with prejudice "if the record shows that a plaintiff has been guilty of dilatory or contumacious conduct, or has repeatedly disregarded the procedural directives of the court ... and where lesser sanctions would not serve the best interests of justice."	"Are cases dismissed with prejudice for failure to prosecute, if the record shows that a plaintiff has repeatedly disregarded the procedural directives of the court?"
875	Am. Truck Driving Acad. v. Smith, 998 So. 2d 1067, 1069 (Ala. App. 2008)	2	An appellate court carefully scrutinizes any order terminating an action for want of prosecution, and it does not hesitate to set one aside when an abuse of discretion is found, since dismissal is such a drastic sanction, and is to be used only in extreme situations. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	thus, an appellate court 'carefully scrutinizes any order terminating an action for want of prosecution, and it does not hesitate to set one aside when an abuse of discretion is found.'	"Does a court carefully scrutinize any order terminating an action for want of prosecution, and does it hesitate to set one aside when an abuse of discretion is found?"
877	Harvey v. Town of Tiverton, 764 A.2d 141, 143 (R.I. 2001)	6	In considering a motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute, the court is required to weigh conflicting interests: on the one hand is the court's need to manage its docket, the public interest in the expeditious resolution of litigation, and the risk of prejudice to the defendants from delay; on the other hand, there is the desire to dispose of cases on their merits. Superior Court Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b)(2).	In considering a motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute, the court is "required to weigh conflicting interests. On the one hand is the court's need to manage its docket, the public interest in the expeditious resolution of litigation, and the risk of prejudice to the defendants from delay. On the other hand, there is the desire to dispose of cases on their merits." E4893	Is the court is required to weigh conflicting interests in considering a motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute?

879	O'Dell v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 173 Ind.App. 106, 108 (Ind.App. 1977)	2	Method of affording compensation to an employee based upon a reallocation of risks arises from a need to curb harsh results rendered under common law with its defenses of contributory negligence, assumption of risk, and fellow servant rule. IC 22-3-2-5 (1976 Ed.).	This method of compensation based upon a real-location of risks arose from a need to curb the harsh results rendered under the common-law with its defenses of contributory negligence, assumption of risk and fellow servant rule.	"Is the method of compensation under the workmens compensation based on a real-location of risks arose from a need to curb the harsh results rendered under the common-law with its defenses of contributory negligence, assumption of risk and fellow servant rule?"
880	McDonald v. Hanahan, 328 Mass. 539, 541 (1952)	6	To constitute a good promissory note, there should be deducible from its face a written promise to pay money, yet that promise need not be expressed in any particular form of words, and it would be enough if from language used a written undertaking to pay may be fairly inferred.	To constitute a good promissory note there should be deducible from its face a written promise to pay the money, yet that promise need not be expressed in any particular form of words, and it will be enough if from the language used a written undertaking to pay may be fairly inferred.	"Should a written promise to pay money be deducible from the face of a promissory note, yet that promise need not be expressed in any particular form of words?"
881	Chanko v. Am. Broad. Companies Inc., 27 N.Y.3d 46, 52, 49 N.E.3d 1171, 1175 (2016)	1	When considering a pre-answer motion to dismiss the complaint for failure to state a cause of action, the court must give the pleadings a liberal construction, accept the allegations as true, and accord the plaintiffs every possible favorable inference. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	When considering these pre-answer motions to dismiss the complaint for failure to state a cause of action, we must give the pleadings a liberal construction, accept the allegations as true and accord the plaintiffs every possible favorable inference (see Goshen v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of N.Y., 98 N.Y.2d 314, 326, 746 N.Y.S.2d 858, 774 N.E.2d 1190 [2002]).	"In considering a pre-answer motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a cause of action, should a court give the pleadings a liberal construction?"
882	Ament v. Reassure Am. Life Ins. Co., 180 Ohio App. 3d 440, 456 (2009)	22	In construing the complaint when considering a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, a court must presume all factual allegations contained in the complaint to be true and make all reasonable inferences in favor of the nonmoving party. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(B)(6).	In construing a complaint upon a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the court must presume all factual allegations of the complaint are true and make all reasonable inferences in favor of the nonmoving party.	Are factual allegations contained in the complaint presumed true and all reasonable inferences are drawn in favor of the nonmoving party on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim?
883	Atha v. Allen P. Van Overbeke, D.M.D., P.A., 213 So. 3d 1073, 1074 (Fl. App. 2017)	1	In ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to plead a facially sufficient claim, the trial court is limited to a consideration of the allegations within the four corners of the complaint and is required to accept those allegations as true. Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.110(b).	In ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to plead a facially sufficient claim, the trial court is limited to a consideration of the allegations within the four corners of the complaint and is required to accept those allegations as true.	"In ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to plead a facially sufficient claim, is the trial court limited to a consideration of the allegations within the four corners of the complaint?"

884	Hoffman v. Boonsiri, 290 Mich. App. 34, 39 (2010)	2	On motion for summary disposition alleging claims are barred by statute of limitations, the trial court must accept the nonmoving party's well-pleaded allegations as true and construe the allegations in the nonmovant's favor to determine whether any factual development could provide a basis for recovery. MCR 2.116(C)(7).	When reviewing a motion for summary disposition under MCR 2.116(C)(7), the trial court must accept the nonmoving party's well-pleaded allegations as true and construe the allegations in the nonmovant's favor to determine whether any factual development could provide a basis for recovery.	"On a motion seeking summary disposition on grounds that claim is barred by immunity, should the trial court accept the nonmoving party's well-pleaded allegations as true?"
886	In re Marriage of Buster, 115 S.W.3d 141, 143-44 (Tex. App. 2003)	1	A trial court has the inherent power to dismiss a case for want of prosecution, and express authority to do so is also given by the rules of civil procedure in cases where a party plaintiff fails to appear for any scheduled hearing, or when the case is not disposed of within the time standards set by the Texas Supreme Court. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a.	A trial court has the inherent power to dismiss a case for want of prosecution, but express authority to do so is also given by Rule 165a in cases where a *144 party plaintiff fails to appear for any scheduled hearing, or when the case is not disposed of within the time standards set by the Texas Supreme Court. TEX.R. CIV. P. 165a;	Can the court dismiss a case for want of prosecution when case has not been disposed of within Supreme Court's time standard?
887	Foy v. Hunter, 106 N.C. App. 614, 618, 418 S.E.2d 299, 302 (1992)	1	Under civil procedure rule, trial court may enter sanctions for failure to prosecute only where plaintiff or his attorney manifests an intention to thwart progress of the action to its conclusion or fails to progress the action toward its conclusion by engaging in some delaying tactic; whether plaintiff or his attorney have manifested such an intent or has engaged in some delaying tactic may be inferred from facts surrounding delay in prosecution of the case. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b), G.S. S 1A-1.	Under Rule 41(b), a trial court may enter sanctions for failure to prosecute only where the plaintiff or his attorney "manifests an intention to thwart the progress of the action to its conclusion" or "fails to progress the action towards its conclusion" by engaging in some delaying tactic. Green v. Eure, 18 N.C.App. 671, 672, 197 S.E.2d 599, 601 (1973); Jones v. Stone, 52 N.C.App. 502, 505, 279 S.E.2d 13, 15, disc. rev. denied, 304 N.C. 195, 285 S.E.2d 99 (1981); see also Smith v. Quinn, 324 N.C. 316, 318-19, 378 S.E.2d 28, 30-31 (1989) (trial court did not err in dismissing plaintiff's action where plaintiff's attorney violated Rule of Civil Procedure for purposes of delay and gaining unfair advantage). Whether a plaintiff or his attorney has manifested an intent to thwart the progress of an action or has engaged in some delaying tactic may be inferred from the facts surrounding the delay in the prosecution of the case.	Can the court enter sanctions for failure to prosecute when the plaintiff or his attorney manifests an intention to thwart progress of the action to its conclusion by engaging in some delaying tactic?

889	Wilson v. Illinois Benedictine Coll., 112 Ill. App. 3d 932, 937, 445 N.E.2d 901, 906 (1983)	8	A college student may have a remedy when it is alleged that an adverse decision concerning the student, supposedly for academic deficiencies, was made arbitrarily and capriciously and in bad faith; a university may not act maliciously or in bad faith by arbitrarily and capriciously refusing to award a degree to a student who fulfills its degree requirements.	A student may have a remedy when it is alleged that an adverse decision concerning the student, supposedly for academic deficiencies, was made arbitrarily and capriciously and in bad faith (40 Ill.App.3d 474, 480, 352 N.E.2d 356) thus a university may not act maliciously or in bad faith by arbitrarily and capriciously refusing to award a degree to a student who fulfills its degree requirements.	"Do students have a remedy for breach of contract when it is alleged that an adverse decision concerning the student, supposedly for academic deficiencies, was made arbitrarily, capriciously, and in bad faith?"
890	Roman Cath. Diocese of Brooklyn v. Christ the King Reg'l High Sch., 149 A.D.3d 994, 995–96, 53 N.Y.S.3d 85, 88 (2017)	1	A motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action may be granted when exhibits attached to the complaint conclusively establish that a material fact as claimed by the pleader to be one is not a fact at all and that no significant dispute exists regarding it. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	"A motion to dismiss under CPLR 3211(a)(7) may be granted when exhibits attached to the complaint conclusively establish that a material fact as claimed by the pleader to be one is not a fact at all and that no significant dispute exists regarding it" (McMahan v. McMahan, 131 A.D.3d 593, 594, 15 N.Y.S.3d 190 [internal quotation marks and brackets omitted]; see *996 Guggenheimer v. Ginzburg, 43 N.Y.2d 268, 275, 401 N.Y.S.2d 182, 372 N.E.2d 17).	Can a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action be granted when exhibits attached to the complaint conclusively establish that a material fact as claimed by the pleader to be one is not a fact at all?
893	W. Branch Conservation Ass'n, Inc. v. Cnty. of Rockland, 227 A.D.2d 547, 547, 642 N.Y.S.2d 966, 967 (1996)	1	Although, upon motion to dismiss for failure to state cause of action, court generally must accept facts alleged in complaint as true, court need not accept legal conclusions or factual claims which are either inherently incredible or flatly contradicted by documentary evidence. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a), par. 7.	Although, upon a motion pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7), a court must accept the facts alleged in the complaint as true, this does not apply to legal conclusions or to factual claims which are either inherently incredible or flatly contradicted by documentary evidence (see, Quail Ridge Assocs. v. Chemical Bank, 162 A.D.2d 917, 918, 558 N.Y.S.2d 655; SRW Assocs. v. Bellport Beach Prop. Owners, 129 A.D.2d 328, 331, 517 N.Y.S.2d 741).	Does a court need to accept legal conclusions or factual claims which are either inherently incredible or flatly contradicted by documentary evidence?
896	Zellner v. Odyll, LLC, 117 A.D.3d 1040, 1040, 986 N.Y.S.2d 592, 592–93 (2014)	1	In determining a motion to dismiss complaint for failure to state a claim, the sole criterion is whether the pleading states a cause of action, and if from its four corners factual allegations are discerned which taken together manifest any cause of action cognizable at law, the motion for dismissal will fail. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	In determining a motion to dismiss the complaint pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7), "the sole criterion is whether 593 the pleading states a cause of action, and if from its four corners factual allegations are discerned which taken together manifest any cause of action cognizable at law [, the] motion for dismissal will fail" (Guggenheimer v. Ginzburg, 43 N.Y.2d 268, 275, 401 N.Y.S.2d 182, 372 N.E.2d 17; see Wilner v. Allstate Ins. Co., 71 A.D.3d 155, 159, 893 N.Y.S.2d 208).	"In determining a motion to dismiss complaint for failure to state a claim, is the sole criterion whether the pleading states a cause of action?"

897	Shaya B. Pac., LLC v. Wilson, Elser, Moskowitz, Edelman & Dicker, LLP, 38 A.D.3d 34, 38, 827 N.Y.S.2d 231, 234 (2006)	3	Whether the complaint will later survive a motion for summary judgment, or whether the plaintiff will ultimately be able to prove its claims, of course, plays no part in the determination of a pre-discovery motion to dismiss. McKinney's CPLR 3211.	Whether the complaint will later survive a motion for summary judgment, or whether the plaintiff will ultimately be able to prove its claims, of course, plays no part in the determination of a pre-discovery CPLR 3211 motion to dismiss (see EBC I, Inc. v. Goldman, Sachs & Co., 5 N.Y.3d 11, 19, 799 N.Y.S.2d 170, 832 N.E.2d 26).	"Does, whether a complaint will later survive a motion for summary judgment or whether plaintiffs will ultimately be able to prove their claims, play a part in the determination of a pre-discovery motion to dismiss?"
898	State v. Colon, 117 Conn. App. 150, 158 (2009)	15	To prove the defendant guilty of breach of the peace in the second degree, state is required to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that: (1) the defendant engaged in fighting or in violent, tumultuous or threatening behavior; (2) that this conduct occurred in a public place; and (3) that the defendant acted with the intent to cause inconvenience, annoyance or alarm, or that he recklessly created a risk thereof. C.G.S.A. S 53a-181(a)(1).	To prove the defendant guilty of breach of the peace in the second degree in violation of 53a-181(a)(1), the state was required to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that "(1) the defendant engaged in fighting or in violent, tumultuous or threatening behavior, (2) that this conduct occurred in a public place and (3) that the defendant acted with the intent to cause inconvenience, annoyance or alarm, or that he recklessly created a risk thereof."	When is a person guilty of breach of the peace in the second degree?
899	Mancinelli v. Davis, 217 So. 3d 1034, 1038 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2017)	12	Where a party may be able to allege additional facts to support its cause of action or even to support another cause of action based on a different legal theory, dismissal with prejudice is an abuse of discretion.	"It is well-settled that where a party may be able to allege additional facts to support its cause of action or even to support another cause of action based on a different legal theory, dismissal with prejudice is an abuse of discretion."	"Where a party can be able to allege additional facts to support its cause of action or even to support another cause of action based on a different legal theory, is dismissal with prejudice an abuse of discretion?"
900	McDuffie v. Mitchell, 155 N.C. App. 587, 589 (2002)	2	In ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the trial court must take all of the allegations of the complaint as true; however, the trial court must also draw its own legal conclusions from the facts, which may differ from those advocated by plaintiff. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(6), West's N.C.G.S.A. S 1A-1.	[2] In ruling on a motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6), the trial court must take all of the allegations of the complaint as true. However, the trial court must also draw its own legal conclusions from the facts, which may differ from those advocated by plaintiff.	"Although the trial court is obligated to take all of the allegations of the complaint as true when ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, should the trial court draw its own legal conclusions from those facts?"
901	Jones v. Sullivan, 34 Ill. App. 3d 786, 789-90 (1976)	2	When case is reached for trial regularly on call and plaintiff fails to appear and defendant is present insisting upon disposition of case, court may properly dismiss case for want of prosecution.	When a case is reached for trial *790 regularly on the call and the plaintiff fails to appear and the defendant is present insisting upon a disposition of the case, the court may properly dismiss the case for want of prosecution.	Can court properly dismiss case for want of prosecution when case is reached for trial regularly on call and plaintiff fails to appear and defendant is present insisting upon disposition of case?

902	GEPMC 2006-C1 Carrington Oaks v. Weiss, 233 N.C. App. 633, 637 (2014)	6	If the trial court chooses to decide a motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction over the person based on affidavits, the trial judge must determine the weight and sufficiency of the evidence presented in the affidavits much as a juror. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(2).	"If the trial court chooses to decide the motion based on affidavits, [t]he trial judge must determine the weight and sufficiency of the evidence [presented in the affidavits] much as a juror."	"If the trial court chooses to decide a motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction over the person based on affidavits, should the trial judge determine the weight and sufficiency of the evidence presented in the affidavits much as a juror?"
905	Smith v. Cent. Illinois Reg'l Airport, 207 Ill. 2d 578, 584-85 (2003)	2	There exists in Illinois a policy that favors an adequate and appropriate hearing of a litigant's claim on the merits, and a cause of action should not be dismissed with prejudice unless it is clear that no set of facts can be proved under the pleading which would entitle the plaintiff to relief.	That is so because there exists in this state a policy, long adhered to by our courts, that favors an adequate and appropriate hearing of a litigant's claim on the merits, and it is well established that a cause of action should not be dismissed with prejudice unless it is clear that no set of facts can be proved under the pleading *585 which would entitle the plaintiff to relief.	Should a cause of action not be dismissed with prejudice unless it is clear that no set of facts can be proved under the pleading which would entitle the plaintiff to relief?
907	Bond v. Messerman, 391 Md. 706, 718 (2006)	2	If additional facts are necessary to decide a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, the court may consider affidavits or other evidence adduced during an evidentiary hearing, without transforming the motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment. Md.Rule 322(a).	If additional facts are necessary to decide the motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, the court may consider affidavits or other 998 evidence adduced during an evidentiary hearing, without transforming the motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment.	"If additional facts are necessary to decide a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, can the court consider affidavits or other evidence adduced during an evidentiary hearing?"
908	Kraus v. Metro. Two Illinois Ctr., 146 Ill. App. 3d 210, 212 (1986)	1	Involuntary dismissal not falling under any of the exceptions of Rule 273 would bar plaintiff from filing subsequent suit involving the same parties and claims pursuant to principles of res judicata. S.H.A. ch. 110A, P 273.	An involuntary dismissal not falling under any of the exceptions of Rule 273 thus would bar a plaintiff from filing a subsequent suit involving the same parties and claims pursuant to principles of res judicata.	Will involuntary dismissal not falling under any of the exceptions of Rule 273 bar a plaintiff from filing a subsequent suit involving the same parties and claims pursuant to principles of res judicata?
911	Fisher & Co. v. Dep't of Treasury, 282 Mich. App. 207, 209-10 (2009)	3	A sales-use tax scheme is designed to make all tangible personal property, whether acquired in, or out of, the state subject to a uniform tax burden; sales and use taxes are mutually exclusive but complementary, and are designed to exact an equal tax based on a percentage of the purchase price of the property in question. M.C.L.A. SS 205.51 et seq., 205.91 et seq.	"A sales-use tax scheme is designed to make all tangible personal property, whether acquired in, or out of, the state subject to a uniform tax burden. Sales and use taxes are mutually exclusive but complementary, and are designed to exact an equal tax based on a percentage of the purchase price of the property in question."	Are sales and use taxes designed to exact an equal tax based on a percentage of the purchase price of the property in question?

912	Kaufman v. Bauer, 36 A.D.3d 481, 482, 830 N.Y.S.2d 23, 25 (2007)	1	Courts have discretion to grant motion to restore action to calendar, brought more than one year after case is stricken from calendar, provided movant demonstrates (a) merits of his/her claim; (b) lack of prejudice to opposing party or parties; (c) lack of intent to abandon action; and (d) reasonable excuse for the delay. McKinney's CPLR 3404; N.Y.Ct.Rules, S 208.14(c).	Notwithstanding this time limitation, courts have discretion to grant a restoration motion brought more than one year after the case is stricken from the calendar provided the movant demonstrates (a) the merits of his/her claim; (b) a lack of prejudice to the opposing party or parties; (c) a lack of intent to abandon the action; and (d) a reasonable excuse for the delay (see Williams v. A & S Dept. Store, 5 Misc.3d 140(A), 2004 WL 2964000 [App. Term 2004] [citing CPLR 3404]; Mester v. Cattani, 4 Misc.3d 132(A), 2004 WL 1517405 [App. Term 2004]).	Can an action which has been automatically dismissed one year after being stricken from calendar be restored in a trial court's discretion?
913	Almanzar v. Rye Ridge Realty Co., 249 A.D.2d 128, 129, 671 N.Y.S.2d 481, 483 (1998)	1	Once a case is dismissed for failure to prosecute, a party seeking to restore it to the trial calendar must show a meritorious cause of action, a reasonable excuse for the delay, a lack of intent to abandon the matter and a lack of prejudice to the nonmoving party. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	Once a case is dismissed pursuant to CPLR 3404 for failure to prosecute, a party seeking to restore it to the trial calendar must show four things: a meritorious cause of action, a reasonable excuse for the delay, a lack of intent to abandon the matter and a lack of prejudice to the non-moving party (Ware v. Porter, 227 A.D.2d 214, 215, 642 N.Y.S.2d 278).	"Once a case is dismissed for failure to prosecute, should a party seeking to restore it to the trial calendar show a meritorious cause of action?"
914	White v. Bayless, 32 S.W.3d 271, 274 (Tex. App. 2000)	3	Generally, before a court may grant a no cause of action summary judgment, it must give the plaintiff an adequate opportunity to plead a viable cause of action, but if the plaintiff's petition affirmatively demonstrates that no cause of action exists or that the plaintiff's recovery is barred, no opportunity to amend is necessary, and summary judgment or dismissal is proper.	Generally, before a court may grant a "no cause of action" summary judgment, it must give the plaintiff an adequate opportunity to plead a viable cause of action. See Friesenhahn, 960 S.W.2d at 658; Massey v. Armco Steel Co., 652 S.W.2d 932, 934 (Tex.1983). However, if the plaintiff's petition affirmatively demonstrates that no cause of action exists or that the plaintiff's recovery is barred, no opportunity to amend is necessary, and summary judgment or dismissal is proper.	"If plaintiff's petition affirmatively demonstrates that no cause of action exists or that plaintiff's recovery is barred, is no opportunity to amend necessary?"

917	Shea v. Boston Edison Co., 431 Mass. 251, 258-259 (2000)	3	Regulatory fees share common traits that distinguish them from taxes; they are charged in exchange for a particular governmental service which benefits the party paying the fee in a manner not shared by other members of society, they are paid by choice, in that the party paying the fee has the option of not utilizing the governmental service and thereby avoiding the charge, and the charges are collected not to raise revenues but to compensate the governmental entity providing the services for its expenses.	Regulatory fees "share common traits that distinguish them from taxes: they are charged in exchange for a particular governmental service which benefits the party paying the fee in a manner 'not shared by other members of society,' ... they are paid by choice, in that the party paying the fee has the option of not utilizing the governmental service and thereby avoiding the charge ... and the charges are collected not to raise revenues but to compensate the governmental entity providing *259 the services for its expenses"	Do fees share common traits that distinguish them from taxes?
919	Ex parte Ariza, 913 S.W.2d 215, 218-19 (Tex. App. 1995)	5	If forfeiture seeks to approximate state's costs attributable to investigating and prosecuting offense giving rise to forfeiture, thereby serving only purpose of compensating state for such costs, then it is remedial in nature and does not constitute "punishment" for double jeopardy purposes; however, if forfeiture serves at least in part to punish owner of forfeited property, then it serves as punishment for purposes of double jeopardy clause. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	If forfeiture under our statute seeks to approximate the State's *219 costs attributable to investigating and prosecuting the offense giving rise to the forfeiture, thereby serving only the purpose of compensating the State for these costs, then it is remedial in nature and does not constitute punishment. Halper, 490 U.S. at 448, 109 S.Ct. at 1901. On the other hand, if forfeiture serves at least in part to punish the owner of the forfeited property, then it serves as punishment for the purpose of the Double Jeopardy Clause.	"If forfeiture seeks to approximate a state's costs attributable to investigating and prosecuting offense giving rise to forfeiture, is it remedial in nature and does not constitute ""punishment"" for double jeopardy purposes?"
920	U.S. v. McCallum, 721 F.3d 706, 710, 406 U.S.App.D.C. 74, 78 (C.A.D.C.,2013)	5	A defendant's motion for a mistrial constitutes a deliberate election on his part to forgo his valued right to have his guilt or innocence determined before the first trier of fact; only where the governmental conduct in question is intended to goad the defendant into moving for a mistrial may a defendant raise the bar of double jeopardy to a second trial after having succeeded in aborting the first on his own motion. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	A defendant's motion for a mistrial constitutes "a deliberate election on his part to forgo his valued right to have his guilt or innocence determined before the first trier of fact." United States v. Scott, 437 U.S. 82, 93 [98 S.Ct. 2187, 57 L.Ed.2d 65] (1978).... Only where the governmental conduct in question is intended to "goad " the defendant into moving for a mistrial may a defendant raise the bar of double jeopardy to a second trial after having succeeded in aborting the first on his own motion.	"Only where the governmental conduct in question is intended to goad the defendant into moving for a mistrial, can a defendant raise the bar of double jeopardy to a second trial after having succeeded in aborting the first on his own motion?"

921	State v. Davenport, 147 So.3d 137, 142, 2013-1859 La. 5/7/14, 8 (La.,2014)	2	A mistrial declared by the trial court without the consent of the defendant will ordinarily bar further prosecution of him for the same criminal conduct; however, this rule is subject to limited exceptions, where the court-ordered mistrial is regarded as justified in the interests of the accused or as required by physical or legal necessity. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; LSA-Const. Art. 1, S 15; LSA-C.Cr.P. arts. 591, 775.	We have held "a mistrial declared by the trial court without the consent of the defendant will ordinarily bar further prosecution of him for the same criminal conduct." State v. Lawson, 338 So.2d 627, 629 (La.1976). However, [t]his rule is subject to limited exceptions, where the court-ordered mistrial is regarded as justified in the interests of the accused or as required by physical or legal necessity.	Will a mistrial declared by a trial court without consent of a defendant bar further prosecution of him for the same criminal conduct?
922	Narducci v. Mason's Disc. Store, 518 Pa. 94, 98 (Pa., 1988)	1	Request to open judgment of non pros is in nature of appeal to equitable powers of court and, in order for judgment of non pros to be opened, three elements must coalesce: petition to open must be promptly filed; default or delay must be reasonably explained or excused; and facts must be shown to exist which support cause of action.	A request to open a judgment of non pros, like the opening of a default judgment, is in the nature of an appeal to the equitable powers of the court and, in order for the judgment of non pros to be opened, a three- pronged test must be satisfied: 1) the petition to open must be promptly filed; 2) the default or delay must be reasonably explained or excused; and 3) facts must be shown to exist that support a cause of action.	"In order for a judgment of non pros to be opened, what are the three elements that should coalesce?"
923	Thomas v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Court in & for Cty. of Clark, 402 P.3d 619, 629 (Nev., 2017)	29	The protections of the Double Jeopardy Clause arise from the fact that multiple prosecutions seriously disrupt a defendant's personal life during trial, create a potential for governmental harassment of the defendant, and enhance the likelihood that an innocent defendant may be convicted. U.S. Const. Amend. 5; Nev. Const. art. 1, S 8.	As established by the United States Supreme Court, the protections of the Double Jeopardy Clause arise from the fact that multiple prosecutions seriously disrupt a defendant's personal life during trial, create a potential for governmental harassment of the defendant, and enhance the likelihood that an innocent defendant may be convicted.	Does the protection of the Double Jeopardy Clause arise from the fact that multiple prosecutions seriously disrupt a defendant's personal life during trial?
924	State v. Paquin, 140 N.H. 525, 528 (1995)	2	In order to preserve right to have empaneled jury decide case, trial court may declare mistrial over defendant's objection, without jeopardizing retrial, only if there is manifest necessity for the act, or ends of justice would otherwise be defeated. Const. Pt. 1, Art. 16.	In order to preserve the right to have an empaneled jury decide a case, a trial court may declare a mistrial over the defendant's objection, without jeopardizing retrial, "only if there is a manifest necessity for the act, or the ends of public justice would otherwise be defeated."	"Can a trial court declare a mistrial over the defendant's objections, without jeopardizing retrial, only if there is a manifest necessity for the act?"

925	U.S. v. Sammaripa, 55 F.3d 433, 434 (C.A.9 (Wash.),1995)	2	Double jeopardy clause of Fifth Amendment of Constitution protects defendant's valued right to have particular tribunal give complete consideration to his case; this right is sometimes subordinate to public's interest in affording prosecutor one full and fair opportunity to present his evidence to impartial jury. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	The double jeopardy clause of the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution protects a defendant's "valued right" to have a particular tribunal give complete consideration to his case. Arizona v. Washington, 434 U.S. 497, 503, 98 S.Ct. 824, 829, 54 L.Ed.2d 717 (1978). This right "is sometimes subordinate to the public's interest in affording the prosecutor one full and fair opportunity to present his evidence to an impartial jury.	Will consideration be given to the defendant's valued right to have his trial completed by the particular tribunal?
926	Ex parte Peterson, 117 S.W.3d 804, 810 (Tex. App. 2003)	2	Double jeopardy principles do not forbid multiple trials of a single criminal charge if the first trial resulted in a mistrial that: (1) was justified under the manifest necessity doctrine, or (2) was requested or consented to by the defense, absent prosecutorial misconduct which forced the mistrial. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; Vernon's Ann.Texas Const. Art. 1, S 14.	Thus, double jeopardy principles do not *811 forbid multiple trials of a single criminal charge if the first trial resulted in a mistrial that: (1) was justified under the manifest necessity doctrine; 12 or (2) was requested or consented to by the defense, absent prosecutorial misconduct which forced the mistrial.	Do double jeopardy principles not forbid multiple trials of a single criminal charge if the first trial resulted in a mistrial that was justified or requested?
929	St. Paul Ins. Co. v. Hayes, 2001 ME 71, ¶ 8, 770 A.2d 611, 614	4	In determining whether a dismissal was an appropriate sanction for discovery violations, the trial court should consider the following factors: (1) the specific purpose of the discovery rules, (2) the party's conduct throughout the proceedings, (3) the party's bona fides in its failure to comply with the discovery rules, (4) prejudice to the other parties, and (5) the need for the orderly administration of justice. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 37(b).	In determining whether a dismissal was an appropriate sanction, the trial court should consider the following factors: (1) the specific purpose of the discovery rules; (2) the party's conduct throughout the proceedings; (3) the party's bona fides in its failure to comply with the discovery rules; (4) prejudice to the other parties; and (5) the need for the orderly administration of justice.	"In determining the appropriate sanction to be imposed upon a party for failure to comply with the rules of civil procedure, should the court take into account the purpose of the specific rule at issue?"
931	Rowe v. HCA Health Services of Oklahoma, Inc., 130 P.3d 761, 762–63 (Okla.Civ.App. Div. 4, 2005)	1	When District Court grants motion to dismiss for failure to state claim, it must grant plaintiff leave to file amended petition if defect can be remedied, and District Court has duty to specify time within which plaintiff must file amended petition; if District Court does not prescribe time, defendant who obtained dismissal has responsibility to move court to set time. 12 Okl.St.Ann. S 2012(G).	When a district court grants a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, it must grant the plaintiff leave to file an amended petition if the defect can be remedied. Kelly v. Abbott, 1989 OK 124, 6, 781 P.2d 1188, 1190. The district court has a duty to specify the time within which the plaintiff must file the amended petition. Id. at 10, 781 P.2d at 1191. If the district court does not prescribe a time, the defendant who obtained the dismissal has the responsibility to move the court to set a time. Id.	"When a District Court grants a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, can a District Court refuse to allow a plaintiff leave to amend only if it appears that a plaintiff cannot state a claim?"

932	In re Dudley, 502 B.R. 259, 282 (Bankr. W.D. Va. 2013)	40	Under Massachusetts law, a five-factor test is used in determining whether equitable subrogation applies, though the doctrine may still apply absent one of the five factors, pursuant to which subrogation will apply if: (1) the subrogee made the payment to protect his or her own interest, (2) the subrogee did not act as a volunteer, (3) the subrogee was not primarily liable for the debt paid, (4) the subrogee paid off the entire encumbrance, and (5) subrogation would not work any injustice to the rights of the junior lienholder.	In determining whether subrogation applies, Massachusetts has fashioned a five factor test; although, the doctrine may still apply absent one of the five factors. East Boston Savings Bank v. Ogan, 428 Mass. 327, 701 N.E.2d 331, 334 (1998). Equitable subrogation will apply if: (1) the subrogee made the payment to protect his or her own interest; (2) the subrogee did not act as a volunteer; (3) the subrogee was not primarily liable for the debt paid; (4) the subrogee paid off the entire encumbrance; and (5) subrogation would not work any injustice to the rights of the junior lienholder.	What are the factors necessary for equitable subrogation to apply?
933	Admiral Ins. Co. v. Arrowood Indem. Co., 471 B.R. 687, 689 (N.D. Tex. 2012)	7	There are two types of subrogation under Texas law: "contractual subrogation," i.e., "conventional subrogation," that is created by agreement or contract that grants right to pursue reimbursement from third party in exchange for payment of loss, and "equitable subrogation," i.e., "legal subrogation," that does not depend on contract but arises in every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, has paid debt for which another was primarily liable, and which in equity should have been paid by the latter.	The Texas Supreme Court later clarified that there are two types of subrogation. Mid-Continent Ins. Co. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 236 S.W.3d 765, 774 (Tex.2007). Contractual (or conventional) subrogation is created by an agreement or contract that grants the right to pursue reimbursement from a third party in exchange for payment of a loss, while equitable (or legal) subrogation does not depend on contract but arises in every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, has paid a debt for which another was primarily liable and which in equity should have been paid by the latter.	What are the types of subrogation?
934	Upstate Shredding, LLC v. Carloss Well Supply Co., 84 F.Supp.2d 357, 362 (N.D.N.Y.,2000)	6	A court asked to stay proceedings pending arbitration must resolve four issues: first, it must determine whether the parties agreed to arbitrate; second, it must determine the scope of that agreement; third, if federal statutory claims are asserted, it must consider whether Congress intended those claims to be nonarbitrable; and fourth, if the court concludes that some, but not all, of the claims in the case are arbitrable, it must then decide whether to stay the balance of the proceedings pending arbitration. 9 U.S.C.A. § 1 et seq.	A court asked to stay proceedings pending arbitration must resolve four issues: first, it must determine whether the parties agreed to arbitrate; second, it must determine the scope of that agreement; third, if federal statutory claims are asserted, it must consider whether Congress intended those claims to be nonarbitrable; and fourth, if the court concludes that some, but not all, of the claims in the case are arbitrable, it must then decide whether to stay the balance of the proceedings pending arbitration.	What aspects are considered by courts to determine arbitrability of a particular dispute?

935	Hess Collection Winery v. California Agr. Labor Relations Bd., 140 Cal. App. 4th 1584, 1596-97 (2006)	4	Resolution of disputed contract issues through a binding process is commonly referred to as "interest arbitration" in labor law; unlike grievance arbitration, it focuses on what the terms of a new agreement should be, rather than the meaning of the terms of the old agreement, and the arbitrator is not acting as a judicial officer, construing the terms of an existing agreement and applying them to a particular set of facts, but rather, he is acting as a legislator, fashioning new contractual obligations.	Resolution of disputed contract issues through a binding process is commonly referred to as "interest arbitration" in labor law. "Interest arbitration, unlike grievance arbitration, focuses on what the terms *1597 of a new agreement should be, rather than the meaning of the terms of the old agreement. Thus, the arbitrator is not acting as a judicial officer, construing the terms of an existing agreement and applying them to a particular set of facts. Rather, he is acting as a legislator, fashioning new contractual obligations."	What is interest arbitration?
937	Ross v. Lowitz, 222 N.J. 494, 510 (N.J., 2015)	5	Strict liability without fault should not be imposed, whether that activity be classified as a nuisance or a trespass, absent intentional or hazardous activity requiring a higher standard of care or, as a result of some compelling policy reason.	In short, "[strict] liability without fault should not be imposed, whether that activity be classified as a nuisance or a trespass, absent intentional or hazardous activity requiring a higher standard of care or, as a result of some compelling policy reason."	Can strict liability without fault be imposed in nuisance or trespass actions when an intentional or hazardous activity requiring a higher standard of care or is absent?
941	Beadall v Moore, (N.Y.A.D. 1 Dept., Jan. 13, 1922)	7	Place of performance of a bill of exchange or a promissory note is the place of payment, and when a bill or note is executed in one state or country and payable in another, the general rule is that it is governed as to the nature, validity, interpretation, and effect by the laws of the state where made payable, without regard to the place where it is written, signed, or dated; it being presumed that the parties contracted with reference to the laws of that place, especially where the note would be void in the place where made and valid where payable.	The place of performance of a bill of exchange or a promissory note is the place of payment. When a bill or note is executed in one state or country and payable in another, the general rule is that it is governed, as to its nature, validity, interpretation, and effect, by the laws of the state where made payable, without regard to the place where it is written, signed, or dated; it being presumed that the parties contracted with reference to the laws of that place (8 C. J. 92), especially where the note would be void in the place where made and valid where it was payable.	What is the general rule that governs the interpretation of a promissory note?
942	Texaco v. Short, 454 U.S. 516, 536 (U.S.Ind., 1982)	20	Due process clause does not require defendant to notify a potential plaintiff that statute of limitations is about to run, although it certainly would preclude him from obtaining declaratory judgment that his adversary's claim is barred without giving notice of that proceeding. U.S.C.A.Const.Amends. 5, 14.	The Due Process Clause does not require a defendant to notify a potential plaintiff that a statute of limitations is about to run, although it certainly would preclude him from obtaining a declaratory judgment that his adversary's claim is barred without giving notice of that proceeding.	Does the Due Process Clause require a defendant to notify a potential plaintiff that a statute of limitations is about to run?

943	American Intern. Industries, Inc. v. Plumbers Woodwork Co., 151 S.E.2d 822, 823, 114 Ga.App. 490, 491 (Ga.App. 1966)	2	A plea of total failure of consideration includes a partial failure, and no abatement in amount sued for can be had unless amount thereof be shown by evidence, but it does not follow that where there is no valid plea of total failure of consideration, the plea of partial failure of consideration must allege the monetary extent of such partial failure as against a general demurrer or motion to strike where it sufficiently alleges the nature of the defect of the merchandise which was subject matter of contract.	While a plea of total failure of consideration includes a partial failure, and no abatement in the amount sued for can be had unless the amount thereof be shown by the evidence (Grier v. Enterprise Stone Company, 126 Ga. 17(1), 54 S.E. 806; Crouch & Son v. Spooner, 9 Ga.App. 695(2), 72 S.E. 61), it does not follow that where there is no valid plea of total failure of consideration, the plea of partial failure of consideration must allege the monetary extent of such partial failure as against a general demurrer or motion to strike where it sufficiently alleges the nature of the defect of the merchandise which was the subject matter of the contract.	Does a plea of total failure of consideration include a partial failure of consideration?
944	Roth v. Roth, 176 S.W.3d 735, 738-39 (Mo.App. E.D., 2005)	6	While motion in limine is normally used to exclude evidence in jury trial that would be unfairly prejudicial or inflammatory, it should not be employed to choke off party's entire claim or defense.	While a motion in limine is normally used to exclude evidence in a jury trial that would be unfairly prejudicial or inflammatory, it should not be employed to choke off a *739 party's entire claim or defense.	"While motion in limine is normally used to exclude evidence in jury trial that would be unfairly prejudicial or inflammatory, should it be employed to choke off party's entire claim or defense?"
945	Dep't of Transp. v. Wallace Enterprises, 234 Ga. App. 1, 4 (1998)	9	"Motion in limine" is pretrial method of determining admissibility of evidence, as party may secure pretrial ruling on admissibility of evidence until its admissibility can be assessed in context of trial as it unfolds.	"A motion in limine is a pretrial method of determining the admissibility of evidence, as a party may secure a pretrial ruling on the admissibility of evidence or a ruling prohibiting any reference to certain evidence until its admissibility can be assessed in the context of the trial as it unfolds.	"Is a motion in limine pretrial method of determining admissibility of evidence, as party may secure pretrial ruling on admissibility of evidence or ruling prohibiting any reference to certain evidence until its admissibility can be assessed in context of trial as it unfolds?"
946	Jakobsen v. Colonial Pipeline Co., 237 Ga. App. 441, 446 (1999)	13	"Motion in limine" is a pretrial method of determining the admissibility of evidence, as a party may secure a pretrial ruling on the admissibility of evidence or a ruling prohibiting any reference to certain evidence until its admissibility can be assessed in the context of the trial as it unfolds.	A motion in limine is a pretrial method of determining the admissibility of evidence, as a party may secure a pretrial ruling on the admissibility of evidence or a ruling prohibiting any reference to certain evidence until its admissibility can be assessed in the context of the trial as it unfolds.	"Is a motion in limine pretrial method of determining admissibility of evidence, as party may secure pretrial ruling on admissibility of evidence or ruling prohibiting any reference to certain evidence until its admissibility can be assessed in context of trial as it unfolds?"

947	State v. Winston, 71 Ohio App. 3d 154, 158 (1991)	1	"Motion in limine" is request that court limit or exclude use of evidence which movant believes to be improper, and is made in advance of actual presentation of evidence to trier of fact, usually before trial.	A motion in limine is a request that the court limit or exclude use of evidence which the movant believes to be improper, and is made in advance of the actual presentation of the evidence to the trier of fact, usually prior to trial.	"Is a motion in limine a request that the court limits or excludes the use of evidence which the movant believes to be improper, and is made in advance of the actual presentation of the evidence to the trier of fact?"
948	In re Flamingo 55, 378 B.R. 893, 893 (D. Nev. 2007)	1	"Subrogation" is the substitution of one party in place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand, or right, by which the party paying the loss or claim, that is, the "subrogee," is placed in the shoes of the person who suffered the loss, the "subrogor."	In general terms, subrogation is the substitution of one party in place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand or right. Subrogation places the party paying the loss or claim (the "subrogee") in the shoes of the person who suffered the loss ("the subrogor").	"Is subrogation the substitution of one party in place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand, or right, by which the party paying the loss or claim, that is, the ""subrogee,"" is placed in the shoes of the person who suffered the loss, the ""subrogor""?"
949	In re Travelers Prop. Cas. Co. of Am., 485 S.W.3d 921, 926 (Tex. App. 2016)	10	As a general rule, a cause of action accrues when facts come into existence that authorize a party to seek a judicial remedy; in most cases, this occurs when a wrongful act causes a legal injury, regardless of when the plaintiff learns of that injury or if all resulting damages have yet to occur.	"As a general rule, a cause of action accrues ... when facts come into existence that authorize a party to seek a judicial remedy." Provident Life & Acc. Ins. Co. v. Knott, 128 S.W.3d 211, 221 (Tex.2003). In most cases, this is "when a wrongful act causes a legal injury, regardless of when the plaintiff learns of that injury or if all resulting damages have yet to occur."	Does a cause of action accrue when facts come into existence that authorize a party to seek a judicial remedy?
950	Genter v. Blair Cty. Convention & Sports Facilities Auth., 805 A.2d 51, 55 (Pa. 2002)	4	"De facto taking" occurs when entity clothed with power of eminent domain has, by even a non-appropriative act or activity, substantially deprived owner of beneficial use and enjoyment of his property. 26 P.S. S 1-502(e).	A "de facto taking" occurs when an entity clothed with the power of eminent domain has, by even a non-appropriative act or activity, substantially deprives an owner of the beneficial use and enjoyment of his property.	"What kind of taking occurs when an entity clothed with the power of eminent domain by even a non-appropriative act or activity, deprives an owner of the beneficial use and enjoyment of his property?"
952	Hourani v. Mirtchev, 796 F.3d 1, 16 (D.C. Cir. 2015)	21	The function of the act of state doctrine is to promote international comity, respect for the sovereignty of foreign nations on their own territory, and the avoidance of embarrassment to the executive branch in its conduct of foreign relations.	The function of the Act of State doctrine is to promote "international comity, respect for the sovereignty of foreign nations on their own territory, and the avoidance of embarrassment to the Executive Branch in its conduct of foreign relations."	"Is the function of the act of state doctrine to promote international comity, respect for the sovereignty of foreign nations on their own territory, and the avoidance of embarrassment to the executive branch in its conduct of foreign relations?"

953	U.S. v. Keller, 451 F.Supp. 631, 635 (D.C.Puerto Rico,1978)	3	Law of nations permits exercise of criminal jurisdiction by nation under five general principles: territorial, wherein jurisdiction is based on place where offense is committed; national, wherein jurisdiction is based on nationality or national character of offender; protective, wherein jurisdiction is based on whether national interest is injured; universal, which amounts to physical custody of offender; and passive personal, wherein jurisdiction is based on nationality or national character of victim.	The law of nations permits the exercise of criminal jurisdiction by a nation under five general principles: territorial, wherein jurisdiction is based on the place where the offense is committed; national, wherein jurisdiction is based on the nationality or national character of the offender; 6 protective, wherein jurisdiction is based on whether the national interest is injured; universal, which amounts to physical custody of the offender; and passive personal, wherein jurisdiction is based on the nationality or national character of the victim.	What are the general principles under which the law of nations permits exercise of criminal jurisdiction?
955	Pravin Banker Assocs. Ltd. v. Banco Popular Del Peru, 109 F.3d 850, 854 (C.A.2 (N.Y.), 1997)	2	Under principles of international comity, United States courts ordinarily refuse to review acts of foreign governments and defer to proceedings taking place in foreign countries, allowing those acts and proceedings to have extraterritorial effect in the United States.	Under the principles of international comity, United States courts ordinarily refuse to review acts of foreign governments and defer to proceedings taking place in foreign countries, allowing those acts and proceedings to have extraterritorial effect in the United States.	"Under principle of comity, do United States courts ordinarily refuse to review acts of foreign governments and defer to proceedings taking place in foreign countries?"
956	Beagle v Motor Vehicle Acc. Indemnification Corp., 254 N.Y.S.2d 763, 765 (Sup Ct, Dec. 14, 1964)	2	In a geographical sense, a "state" is the territory over which a particular body politic exercises sovereignty, and land over which state has neither title nor jurisdiction is not part of it, even though it may lie within its exterior boundaries.	In a geographical sense, a state is that territory over which the particular body politic exercises sovereignty (Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 74 U.S. 700, 19 L.Ed. 227). Land over which the state has neither title nor jurisdiction is not a part of it even though it may lie within its exterior boundaries.	"What does state in a geographical sense mean and does land over which a state has neither title nor jurisdiction, even though it may lie within its exterior boundaries, form a part of it?"
958	Bryan v. Brown Childs Realty Co., 252 Ga. App. 502, 506 (2001)	8	Admission or exclusion of evidence is within the sound discretion of the trial court and will not be disturbed on appeal absent an abuse of discretion, but the grant of a motion in limine excluding evidence is a judicial power which must be exercised with great care.	"The admission or exclusion of evidence is within the sound discretion of the trial court and will not be disturbed on appeal absent an abuse of discretion. However, the grant of a motion in limine excluding evidence is a judicial power which must be exercised with great care."	Is admission or exclusion of evidence within the sound discretion of the trial court and how should the court exercise its power while granting of a motion in limine excluding evidence?
959	Rufo v. Simpson, 103 Cal.Rptr.2d 492, 516, 86 Cal.App.4th 573, 608 (Cal.App. 2 Dist.,2001)	17	Ordinarily the opponent of evidence need not object until the evidence is introduced, and a pretrial motion in limine is merely an additional protective device for the opponent of the evidence, to prevent the proponent from even mentioning potentially prejudicial evidence to the jury.	Ordinarily the opponent of evidence need not object until the evidence is introduced. A pretrial motion in limine is merely an additional protective device for the opponent of the evidence, to prevent the proponent from even mentioning potentially prejudicial evidence to the jury.	Is a pretrial motion in limine merely an additional protective device for the opponent of the evidence to prevent the proponent from even mentioning potentially prejudicial evidence to the jury?

960	Jakobsen v. Colonial Pipeline Co., 237 Ga. App. 441, 446 (1999)	13	"Motion in limine" is a pretrial method of determining the admissibility of evidence, as a party may secure a pretrial ruling on the admissibility of evidence or a ruling prohibiting any reference to certain evidence until its admissibility can be assessed in the context of the trial as it unfolds.	A motion in limine is a pretrial method of determining the admissibility of evidence, as a party may secure a pretrial ruling on the admissibility of evidence or a ruling prohibiting any reference to certain evidence until its admissibility can be assessed in the context of the trial as it unfolds.	"Is a motion in limine a pretrial method of determining the admissibility of evidence, as a party may secure a pretrial ruling on the admissibility of evidence or a ruling prohibiting any reference to certain evidence until its admissibility can be assessed in the context of the trial as it unfolds?"
961	Philippine Export & Foreign Loan Guarantee Corp. v. Chuidian, 267 Cal.Rptr. 457, 479, 218 Cal.App.3d 1058, 1097 (Cal.App. 6 Dist.,1990)	22	"Act of state doctrine" is judicially created doctrine treating as nonjusticiable claims that challenge certain acts of foreign sovereigns, where judicial resolution of such claims may embarrass United States foreign policy or otherwise intrude upon legitimate domain of executive branch of government.	The act of state doctrine is a judicially created doctrine treating as non-justiciable claims that challenge certain acts of foreign sovereigns, where judicial resolution of such claims may embarrass United States foreign policy or otherwise intrude upon the legitimate domain of the executive branch of government.	Is the act of state doctrine a judicially created doctrine treating as nonjusticiable claims that challenge certain acts of foreign sovereigns?
963	Duff & Phelps v. Vitro S.A.B. de C.V., 18 F. Supp. 3d 375, 383 (S.D.N.Y. 2014)	4	District court generally will afford comity to a foreign bankruptcy proceeding, so long as that proceeding abides by fundamental standards of procedural fairness and does not violate the laws or public policy of the United States.	In general, this Court will afford comity to a foreign bankruptcy proceeding, so long as that proceeding "abides by fundamental standards of procedural fairness" and does not "violate the laws or public policy of the United States."	"Will an American court afford comity to foreign bankruptcies only if those proceedings do not violate the laws or public policy of the United States, and if the foreign court abides by fundamental standards of procedural fairness?"
964	Nat'l Coal. Gov't of Union of Burma v. Unocal, 176 F.R.D. 329, 350 (C.D.Cal., 1997)	28	Rather than formalistically applying act of state doctrine whenever it is technically available, a sort of balancing approach can be used to determine whether policies underlying doctrine justify its application.	Rather than formalistically applying the doctrine whenever it is technically available, "a sort of balancing approach" can be used to determine whether the policies underlying the doctrine justify its application.	"Rather than formalistically applying the act of state doctrine whenever it is technically available, can a sort of balancing approach be used to determine whether the policies underlying doctrine justify its application?"
965	Bank Tejarat v. Varsho-Saz, 723 F. Supp. 516, 517 (C.D. Cal. 1989)	1	"Act of state doctrine" provides that United States court will not adjudicate politically sensitive dispute which would require court to judge legality of acts of foreign state completed within that state's territory.	Act of State Doctrine [1] [2] The act of state doctrine provides that a United States court will not adjudicate a politically sensitive dispute which would require the court to judge the legality of acts of a foreign state completed within that state's territory.	Does the act of state doctrine provide that a United States court will not adjudicate a politically sensitive dispute which would require the court to judge the legality of acts of foreign state completed within that state's territory?

968	Drexel Burnham Lambert Grp. Inc. v. Galadari, 610 F. Supp. 114, 117-18 (S.D.N.Y. 1985)	5	As a general matter, act of state doctrine only applies to acts occurring within state's territorial boundaries, because it is usually only when state has actual power to complete action at issue within its own borders that state can be said to have a reasonable expectation of dominion over the matter; it is, in turn, only when state has such an expectation that judicial interference with its acts tends to vex relationship of United States with foreign government.	As a general matter, however, the act of state doctrine only applies to acts occurring within the state's territorial boundaries, Allied Bank, 757 F.2d at 521, because it is usually only when the state has the actual power to complete the action at issue within its own borders that the state can be said to have a reasonable expectation of dominion over the matter. Libra Bank, 570 F.Supp. at 883-84. It is, in turn, only when the state has such an expectation that judicial interference with *118 its acts tends to vex our relationship with the foreign government.	Does the act of state doctrine only apply to acts occurring within state's territorial boundaries?
969	Durdin v. Taylor, 159 Ga. App. 675, 675 (1981)	1	Preliminary hearing of defenses of lack of jurisdiction over person and improper venue, whether made in pleading or by motion, may be heard and determined by trial court before trial on application of any party, and factual issues shall be determined by trial court at such hearing. Code, S 81A-112(d).	A preliminary hearing over defenses of lack of jurisdiction over the person or subject matter and improper venue whether made in a pleading or by motion may be heard and determined before trial on the application of any party. At such hearing factual issues shall be determined by the trial court.	"When may a preliminary hearing of defenses of lack of jurisdiction over a person and improper venue, whether made in pleading or by motion, be heard and determined by trial court?"
970	Carlson Heating v. Onchuck, 104 Wis. 2d 175, 180-81 (1981)	5	Every court has inherent power, exercisable in its sound discretion, consistent within Constitution and statutes, to control disposition of causes on its dockets with economy of time and effort.	Every court has inherent power, exercisable in its sound discretion, consistent within the constitution and statutes, to control disposition of causes on its dockets with economy of time and effort.	"Does every court have an inherent power, exercisable in its sound discretion, consistent within Constitution and statutes, to control disposition of causes on its dockets with economy of time and effort?"
971	Fergus v. Songer, 150 Cal. App. 4th 552, 569-70 (2007)	14	Where the granting of a motion in limine disposes of one or more causes of action, it is the functional equivalent of the granting of a nonsuit as to those causes of action, and in such circumstances, the appellate court must view the evidence most favorably to appellants, resolving all presumptions, inferences, and doubts in their favor, and must uphold the judgment for appellee on the applicable causes of action only if it was required as a matter of law.	Where, as here, the granting of a motion in limine disposes of one or more causes of action, it is the functional equivalent of the granting of a nonsuit as *570 to those causes of action. In such circumstances, "we must view the evidence most favorably to appellants, resolving all presumptions, inferences and doubts in their 288 favor, and uphold the judgment for respondent[] [on the applicable causes of action] only if it was required as a matter of law.	Is the granting of a motion in limine the functional equivalent of the granting of a nonsuit as to those causes of action as a matter of law?

972	Raymond City Coal & Transp. Corp. v. New York Cent. R. Co., 103 F.2d 56, 57 (C.C.A.6 (Ohio), 1939)	1	Tariff schedules are to be construed as a whole, including footnotes, according to their sense and meaning as collected in the first place from the terms used which are to be understood in their plain, ordinary and popular sense unless by the known usage of trade they have acquired a peculiar meaning distinct from the popular one or unless the context points out they must be understood in some special and peculiar sense.	[1] [2] Tariff schedules are to be construed as a whole including footnotes according to their sense and meaning as collected in the first place from the terms used which are to be understood in their plain, ordinary and popular sense unless, by the known usage of trade, they have acquired a peculiar meaning distinct from the popular one or unless the context points out they must be understood in some special and peculiar sense.	"Should tariff schedules be construed as a whole, including footnotes?"
973	American Ins. Co. v. Ohio Bur. of Workers Comp., 577 N.E.2d 756, 759, 62 Ohio App.3d 921, 925 (Ohio App.,1991)	4	When equitable, surety is subrogated not only to rights of obligee but also to rights and remedies of principal against third parties, where those rights arise from or are closely related to debt that surety is called to pay under suretyship agreement.	We think the proper rule is that, when equitable, a surety is subrogated not only to the rights of the obligee, but also to the rights and remedies of the principal against third parties, where those rights arise from or are closely related to the debt the surety is called to pay under the suretyship agreement.	"When equitable, is a surety subrogated not only to the rights of an obligee but also to the rights and remedies of the principal against third parties, where those rights arise from or are closely related to a debt that the surety is called to pay under the suretyship agreement?"
975	Unity Real Estate Co. v. Hudson, 977 F.Supp. 717, 724 (W.D.Pa.,1997)	4	Even when regulation results in claimant's loss of property in its entirety, if government does not appropriate the property for its own use, but instead acts to ensure stability of private fund, then no unconstitutional taking can be found. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	. I am persuaded, however, that even when a regulation results in a claimant's loss of property in its entirety, if the government does not appropriate the property for its own use, but instead acts to ensure the stability of a private fund, then no unconstitutional taking can be found.	"Can a taking be found when a regulation results in a claimant's loss of property in its entirety, if the government does not appropriate the property for its own use, but instead acts to ensure the stability of a private fund?"
976	Mercer Cas. Co. v. Lewis, 108 P.2d 65, 67, 41 Cal.App.2d 918, 922-23 (Cal.App. 1 Dist. 1940)	7	A court of equity having jurisdiction of the parties and of the subject matter will make a final disposition of the litigation governed by the circumstances as they are shown to exist at the time the decree is made rather than at the inception of the litigation.	It is a settled rule that a court of equity having jurisdiction of the parties and of the subject matter will make a final disposition of the litigation governed by the circumstances as they are shown to exist at the time the decree is made rather than at the inception of the litigation.	Will a court of equity having jurisdiction of the parties and of the subject matter make a final disposition of the litigation governed by the circumstances as they are shown to exist at the time the decree is made?
977	Broyles v. Com., 309 Ky. 837, 840 (1949)	8	An amended or supplemental petition in any action is permissible where it sets up facts material to the case as presented or serves to explain or perfect or cover proof of the cause of action originally stated, except where it sets up lien notes which have become due pendente lite, but a new or additional cause of action cannot be thus begun and made retroactive, and in such a case the amendment takes effect only from time of filing. Civ.Code Prac. SS 134, 135.	An amended or supplemental petition in any action is permissible where it sets up facts material to the case as presented or serves to explain or perfect or cover proof of the cause of action originally stated except where it sets up lien notes which have become due pendente lite. A new or additional cause of action cannot be thus begun and made retroactive. In such a case the amendment only takes effect from the time of filing it.	Is an amended or supplemental petition in any action permissible?

978	Farley v. Dep't of Human Servs., 621 A.2d 404, 407 (Me. 1993)	4	Concept of taking does not apply to overpayment of money to state by citizen, whether in form of welfare reimbursement, tax payment or fine under statute later declared unconstitutional.	"The concept of a taking does not apply to an overpayment of money to the state by a citizen, whether in the form of a welfare reimbursement[,] tax payment, or a fine under a statute later declared unconstitutional."	"Does the concept of a taking apply to an overpayment of money to the state by a citizen, whether in the form of a welfare reimbursement tax payment, or a fine under a statute later declared unconstitutional?"
981	Sourbier v. State, 498 N.W.2d 720, 723 (Iowa, 1993)	4	Under workers' compensation law, employer provides, secures, or pays compensation for any and all personal injuries sustained by employee arising out of and in course of employment, and in such case, employer is relieved from other liability for recovery of damages or other compensation for such personal injury. I.C.A. S 85.3.	Under workers' compensation law, an employer provides, secures, or pays compensation for any and all personal injuries sustained by an employee arising out of and in the course of the employment, and in such case, the employer is relieved from other liability for recovery of damages or other compensation for such personal injury. Iowa Code 85.3.	"Under workers compensation law, does an employer provide, secure, or pay compensation for any and all personal injuries sustained by an employee arising out of and in the course of employment, and in such case, the employer is relieved from other liability for recovery of damages or other compensation for such personal injury?"
982	Matter of Pulte Homes of New York, LLC v Planning Bd. of Town of Carmel, No. 2014-10660, 2471/13, 24 N.Y.S.3d 409, 410, 2016 N.Y. Slip Op. 00664, 2016 WL 400103 (N.Y.A.D. 2 Dept., Feb. 03, 2016)	1	Where a movant seeks to change an order or judgment in a substantive manner, rather than correcting a mere clerical error, a motion to amend a judgment is not the proper procedural mechanism to be employed, and relief should be sought through a direct appeal or by motion to vacate. McKinney's CPLR 5015(a), 5019(a).	Where a movant seeks to change an order or judgment in a substantive manner, rather than correcting a mere clerical error, CPLR 5019(a) is not the proper procedural mechanism to be employed, and relief should be sought through a direct appeal or by motion to vacate pursuant to CPLR 5015(a)	When a movant seeks to change an order or judgment in a substantive manner should relief be sought through a direct appeal?
983	Levin & Sons v. Mathys, 409 N.E.2d 1195, 1198 (Ind. Ct. App. 1980)	3	In determining whether to grant a voluntary dismissal, court should follow traditional principle that dismissal should be allowed unless defendant will suffer some plain legal prejudice other than the mere prospect of a second lawsuit. Rule TR. 41(A).	In determining whether to grant a voluntary dismissal "the court should follow the traditional principle that dismissals should be allowed unless the defendant will suffer some plain legal prejudice, other than the mere prospect of a second lawsuit."	"In determining whether to grant a voluntary dismissal, should a court follow the traditional principle that dismissal should be allowed unless the defendant will suffer some plain legal prejudice?"
984	Edenfield v. Crisp, 186 So. 2d 545, 549 (Fla. App. 1966)	8	Under his authority at pretrial conference, circuit court judge may narrow or clarify issues between parties, specify issues to be tried, specify any amendments to be made to pleadings, recognize admissions of fact and of documents, limit number of expert witnesses, make preliminary rulings on matters of law relating to case, and adjudge competency and admissibility of evidence. 30 F.S.A. Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 1.16.	Under his aforesaid authority at pre-trial conference, the Judge may narrow or clarify the issues between the parties and specify the issues to be tried, the amendments if any to be made to the pleadings, recognize admissions of fact and of documents, limit the number of expert witnesses, make preliminary rulings on matters of law relating to the case, and adjudge the competency and admissibility of evidence,	What will a circuit court judge under his authority at pre-trial conference do?

986	Hartford Acc. & Indem. Co. v. Duvall, 113 N.H. 28, 31 (1973)	4	Workmen's compensation is remedial in character, designed to provide, in substitution for unsatisfactory common-law remedies in tort, a liability without fault for limited compensation, capable of ready and early determination.	It has long been established that workmen's compensation is remedial in character, designed to provide, in substitution for unsatisfactory common-law remedies in tort, a liability without fault for limited compensation, capable of ready and early determination.	"Is workmens compensation remedial in character which is designed to provide, in substitution for unsatisfactory common-law remedies in tort, a liability without fault for limited compensation, capable of ready and early determination?"
987	Lakes v. Marriott Corp., 264 Ga. 475, 476 (1994)	1	Intent of legislature in enacting statute regarding dismissal of actions was to give plaintiff opportunity to escape from untenable position and relitigate case, and thus there is no bad-faith exception to right to dismiss and later relitigate, despite inconvenience and irritation to defendant. O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a).	The intent of the legislature in enacting OCGA § 9-11-41(a) was to give a plaintiff an opportunity to escape from an "untenable position" and relitigate the case, and thus there is no "bad-faith exception" to the right to dismiss and later relitigate, despite inconvenience and irritation to the defendant. C & S Indus.	Is the intent of the legislature in enacting a statute regarding dismissal of actions to give a plaintiff opportunity to escape from an untenable position and relitigate the case?
988	Cotton v. Ostroski, 250 Neb. 911, 917 (1996)	8	Purpose of pretrial conference is to simplify issues, to amend pleadings when necessary, and to avoid unnecessary proof of facts at trial; to that end, litigants must adhere to spirit of procedure and are bound by pretrial order to which no exception has been taken.	The purpose of a pretrial conference is to simplify the issues, to amend pleadings when necessary, and to avoid unnecessary proof of facts at trial. To that end, litigants must adhere to the spirit of the procedure and are bound by the pretrial order to which no exception has been taken.	"Is the purpose of pretrial conference to simplify issues, to amend pleadings when necessary, and to avoid unnecessary proof of facts at trial?"
989	Church of Peace v. City of Rock Island, 357 Ill. App. 3d 471, 475 (Ill. App. Ct. 2005)	1	Taxes are an enforced proportional contribution levied by the state by virtue of its sovereignty for support of the government; in contrast, a service charge or fees are contractual in nature, either express or implied, and are compensation for the use of another's property, or of an improvement made by another, and their amount is determined by the cost of the property or improvement and the consideration of the return which such an expenditure should yield.	Taxes are "an enforced proportional contribution levied by the state by virtue of its sovereignty for support of the government. In contrast, a service charge or fees are "contractual in nature, either express or implied, and are compensation for the use of another's property, or of an improvement made by another, and their amount is determined by the cost of the property or improvement and the consideration of the return which such an expenditure should yield.	What is the contrast between a tax and a service charge?
991	Neff v. Rose, 546 So. 2d 480, 483 (La.App. 4 Cir., 1989)	3	Although pretrial orders assist the trial court in the orderly management of its cases, severe limitation of a party's rights for the technical, though justifiable, violation of a pretrial order is not authorized. LSA-C.C.P. art. 1551.	While pre-trial orders assist the trial court in the orderly management of its cases, La.C.C.P. Art. 1551 does not authorize severe limitation of a party's rights for the technical, though justifiable, violation of a pre-trial order.	"Although pretrial orders assist the trial court in the orderly management of its cases, severe limitation of a party's rights for the technical, though justifiable, is violation of a pretrial order authorized?"

992	Reynolds v. Murphy, 266 S.W.3d 141, 145 (Tex. App. 2008)	4	Although a nonsuit may have the effect of vitiating a trial court's earlier interlocutory orders, a nonsuit does not vitiate a trial court's previously-made decisions on the merits, such as a summary judgment, or even a partial summary judgment, which becomes final upon disposition of the other issues in the case. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 162.	Although a nonsuit may have the effect of vitiating a trial court's earlier interlocutory orders, a nonsuit does not vitiate a trial court's previously-made decisions on the merits, such as a summary judgment, or even a partial summary judgment, which becomes final upon disposition of the other issues in the case.	"Although a nonsuit may have the effect of vitiating a trial court's earlier interlocutory orders, does a nonsuit vitiate a trial court's previously-made decisions on the merits?"
993	Valladares v Valladares, No. 971 E, 80 A.D.2d 244, 258, 438 N.Y.S.2d 810, 819 (N.Y.A.D. 2 Dept., May 04, 1981)	15	Generally, leave to discontinue action without prejudice should not be granted to enable plaintiff to circumvent effect of court order in defendant's favor, since prejudice would inure to defendant. CPLR 3217(b).	However, generally, leave to discontinue an action without prejudice should not be granted to enable plaintiff to circumvent the effect of a court order in defendant's favor, since prejudice would inure to defendant	"Should leave to discontinue an action without prejudice generally not be granted to enable a plaintiff to circumvent an effect of a court order in a defendant's favor, since prejudice would inure to a defendant?"
994	In re Sewell, 472 S.W.3d 449, 456 (Tex. App. 2015)	15	Where a party moves to withdraw deemed admissions that are merit-preclusive, due process requires the party opposing withdrawal to prove that the moving party's failure to answer the admissions resulted from flagrant bad faith or callous disregard of the rules. U.S. Const. Amend. 14.	Accordingly, where a party moves to withdraw deemed admissions that are merit-preclusive, due- process requires the party opposing withdrawal to prove that the moving party's failure to answer the admissions resulted from " 'flagrant bad faith or callous disregard of the rules.' " Time Warner, Inc.	"Does due process require the party opposing withdrawal of deemed admissions that are merit preclusive, to prove that the moving party's failure to answer the admissions resulted from flagrant bad faith or callous disregard of the rules?"
995	University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston v. Estate of Blackmon ex rel. Shultz, 195 S.W.3d 98, 101 (Tex.,2006)	8	A trial court has discretion to defer signing an order of dismissal so that it can allow a reasonable amount of time for holding hearings on these matters which are collateral to the merits of the underlying case; although the civil procedure rule governing nonsuits permits motions for costs, attorney fees, and sanctions to remain viable in the trial court, it does not forestall the nonsuit's effect of rendering the merits of the case moot. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 162.	Thus, the trial court has discretion to defer signing an order of dismissal so that it can "allow a reasonable amount of time" for holding hearings on these matters which are "collateral to the merits of the underlying case." Id. at 38–39. Although the Rule permits motions for costs, attorney's fees, and sanctions to remain viable in the trial court, it does not forestall the nonsuit's effect of rendering the merits of the case moot.	Does the trial court have discretion to defer signing an order of dismissal so that it can allow a reasonable amount of time for holding hearings on matters which are collateral to the merits of the underlying case?

996	Boyd v. Boyd, 83 So. 3d 409, 416 (Miss. App. 2011)	6	Matters will be deemed admitted if no response to request for admission is submitted after 30 days, unless the court allows for either a shorter or longer period of time in which to answer; however, the trial court, on motion, has the discretion to permit withdrawal or amendment of a matter admitted when the presentation of the merits of the action will be subverted thereby and the party who obtained the admission fails to satisfy the court that withdrawal or amendment will prejudice him in maintaining his action or defense on the merits. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 36(a, b).	Matters will be deemed admitted after this time period, unless the court allows for either a shorter or longer period of time in which to answer. Id. However, the trial court, on motion, has the discretion to "permit withdrawal or amendment [of a matter admitted] when the presentation of the merits of the action will be subverted thereby and the party who obtained the admission fails to satisfy the court that withdrawal or amendment will prejudice him in maintaining his action or defense on the merits."	"Will matters be deemed admitted if no response to request for admission is submitted after thirty days, unless the court allows for either a shorter or longer period of time in which to answer?"
997	Lacombe v. Carter, 975 So. 2d 687, 688–89 (2008)	2	In an action for trespass, it is incumbent upon plaintiff to show damages based on the result or the consequences of an injury flowing from the act of trespass; the damages must be proved by a preponderance of the evidence, and this burden of proof may be met by either direct or circumstantial evidence.	Additionally, In an action for trespass, it is incumbent upon the plaintiff to show damages based on the result or the consequences of an injury flowing from the act of trespass. The damages must be proved by a preponderance of the evidence, and this burden of proof may be met by either direct or circumstantial evidence.	Is it incumbent upon the plaintiff to show damages based on the result or the consequences of an injury flowing from the act of trespass?
999	Williams v. National Mortg. Co., 903 S.W.2d 398, 403 (Tex.App. Dallas,1995)	15	Although nonsuit of party's claims does not end adverse party's right to be heard on its pending claims for affirmative relief, claim for affirmative relief filed after notice of lawsuit is usually ineffective to prevent termination of lawsuit. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 162.	Although a nonsuit of a party's claims does not end an adverse party's right to be heard on its pending claims for affirmative relief, a claim for affirmative relief filed after a notice of nonsuit is usually ineffective to prevent termination of the lawsuit.	"Although nonsuit of party's claims does not end adverse party's right to be heard on its pending claims for affirmative relief, is a claim for affirmative relief filed after notice of nonsuit is usually ineffective to prevent termination of lawsuit?"
1000	Urbonowicz v Yarinsky, No. 90344, 290 A.D.2d 922, 923, 737 N.Y.S.2d 398, 400, 2002 N.Y. Slip Op. 00680, 2002 WL 122632 (N.Y.A.D. 3 Dept., Jan. 31, 2002)	4	Unlike a motion for change of venue which involves the affirmative selection of another forum, a court in granting discontinuance merely makes it possible for the action to be brought elsewhere.	Unlike a motion for change of venue which involves the affirmative selection of another forum (see, Koschak v. Gates Constr. Corp., 225 A.D.2d 315, 316, 639 N.Y.S.2d 10), a court in granting discontinuance merely makes it possible for the action to be brought elsewhere.	"Unlike a motion for change of venue, which involves the affirmative selection of another forum, does a court in granting discontinuance merely make it possible for the action to be brought elsewhere?"

1001	Weaver v. Prince George's Cnty., 379 A.2d 399, 403, 281 Md. 349, 356 (Md. 1977)	5	Though nature of any tax should be determined by reference to its actual operation and practical effect, rather than by any particular descriptive language which may have been employed by legislative body, declaration of the Legislature as to character of a levy is entitled to considerable weight in Court of Appeals' own independent determination.	Although the nature of any tax should be determined by reference to its actual operation and practical effect, rather than by any particular descriptive language which may have been employed by the legislative body, Herman v. M. & C.C. of Baltimore, 189 Md. 191, 198, 55 A.2d 491, 173 A.L.R. 1310 (1947), we are nevertheless cognizant of the rule that the declaration of the Legislature as to the character of a levy is entitled to considerable weight in our own independent determination.	Should the nature of a tax be determined by reference to its actual operation and practical effect rather than by any particular descriptive language?
1003	Fantony v. Fantony, 21 N.J. 525, 533 (1956)	2	Comity, in legal sense, is neither a matter of absolute obligation on one hand nor of mere courtesy and good will upon the other, but is the recognition which one nation allows within its territory to legislative, executive or judicial acts of another nation, having due regard both to international duty and convenience and to rights of its own citizens or of other persons who are under the protection of its laws.	Comity, in a legal sense, is neither a matter of absolute obligation on the one hand nor of mere courtesy and good will upon the other. But it is the recognition which one nation allows within its territory to the legislative, executive or judicial acts of another nation, having due regard both to international duty and convenience and to the rights of its own citizens or of other persons who are under the protection of its laws.	"What is comity, in a legal sense?"
1004	City of Ashland v. Ashland Salvage, 271 Neb. 362, 371 (2006)	15	A party's failure to make a timely and appropriate response to a request for admission constitutes an admission of the subject matter of the request, which matter is conclusively established unless, on motion, the court permits withdrawal of the admission. Discovery Rule 36.	We have held that a party's failure to make a timely and appropriate response to a request for admission constitutes an admission of the subject matter of the request, which matter is conclusively established unless, on motion, the court permits withdrawal of the admission.	"Does a party's failure to make a timely and appropriate response to a request for admission constitutes an admission of the subject matter of the request, which matter is conclusively established unless, on motion, the court permit withdrawal of the admission?"
1005	Ziegler v. Klein, 590 So.2d 1066, 1067 (Fla.App. 4 Dist.,1991)	1	When undisputed facts reveal that physical condition of either counsel or client prevents fair and adequate presentation of case, failure to grant continuance is reversible error.	However, when undisputed facts reveal that the physical condition of either counsel or client prevents fair and adequate presentation of a case, failure to grant a continuance is reversible error.	"When undisputed facts reveal that physical condition of either counsel or client prevents fair and adequate presentation of a case, is failure to grant a continuance reversible error?"

1006	Fid.-Phenix Fire Ins. Co. v. Oliver, 25 Tenn. App. 1142, 152 S.W.2d 254, 258 (Tenn. App. 1941)	8	Where it is shown that defendant's attorney has withdrawn from case, it is court's duty to continue case sufficient length of time to permit defendant to employ other counsel and enable such counsel to investigate case and make defense.	Where it is shown that defendant's attorney had withdrawn from the case, it is the duty of the court to continue the case a sufficient length of time to permit defendant to employ other counsel and to enable the new counsel to investigate the case and make defense.	"Where it is shown that defendant's attorney has withdrawn from case, is it a court's duty to continue case a sufficient length of time to permit defendant to employ other counsel and enable such counsel to investigate the case and make defense?"
1007	Bezou v. Bezou, 2015-1879 (La. App. 1 Cir. 9/16/16), 203 So. 3d 488, 500 (La. App. 2016)	15	The trial court has wide discretion in determining whether to award attorney's fees based on a party's failure to admit the truth of any matter that is later proved to be genuine. La. Code Civ. Proc. Ann. art. 1472.	The trial court has wide discretion in determining whether to award attorney's fees based on a party's failure to admit the truth of any matter that is later proved to be genuine.	Does the trial court has wide discretion in determining whether to award attorney's fees based on a party's failure to admit the truth of any matter that is later proved to be genuine?
1009	Thor Industries v. Indiana Dept. of State Revenue, 60 N.E.3d 308, 313 (Ind.Tax, 2016)	10	Rule governing deemed admissions is not intended to provide a windfall to litigants, nor is it to be used as a "gotcha" device or as a trap to prevent the presentation of the truth in a full hearing; instead, it is to be used as a tool for the fair disposition of litigation with a minimum of delay. Trial Procedure Rule 36(B).	Indeed, Trial Rule 36(B) "is not intended to provide a windfall to litigants [,]" nor is it to be used as a "gotcha" device" or "as a trap to prevent the presentation of the truth in a full hearing[;]" instead, it is to be used "as a tool for the fair disposition of litigation with a minimum of delay."	"Is the rule governing deemed admissions intended to provide a windfall to litigants, or is it to be used as a trap to prevent the presentation of the truth in a full hearing?"
1010	Schindler v. AG Aero Distributors, 502 S.W.2d 581, 584 (Tex. App. 1973)	1	The trial court has considerable discretion in refusing or granting motion to deem admitted the matters inquired about in a request for admission where there is neither answer nor denial within the time specified in the request. Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 169.	The trial court, under Rule 169, Texas Rules of Civil Procedure, has considerable discretion in refusing or granting a motion to deem admitted the matters inquired about in a request for admissions where there is neither answer nor denial within the time specified in the request.	Does the trial court under the rule governing requests for admissions have considerable discretion in refusing or granting a motion to deem answers admitted?
1011	Empress Casino Joliet Corp. v. Balmoral Racing Club, 651 F.3d 722, 729 (7th Cir. 2011)	9	The mere use of the word "tax" in an act primarily designed to define and suppress crime is not enough to show that within the true intendment of the term a tax was laid, within meaning of the Tax Injunction Act; when by its very nature the imposition is a penalty, it must be so regarded. 28 U.S.C.A. § 1341.	"The mere use of the word 'tax' in an act primarily designed to define and suppress crime is not enough to show that within the true intendment of the term a tax was laid. When by its very nature the imposition is a penalty, it must be so regarded."	"Is the mere use of word ""tax"" enough to show that within true intendment of the term, a tax was laid, for when by its very nature the imposition is a penalty?"
1013	Harms v. Simkin, 322 S.W.2d 930, 933 (Mo. App. 1959)	5	Whether there has been an abuse of discretion on part of court in directing that a trial proceed in absence of an attorney for party depends upon particular facts and circumstances in a given case.	Whether there has been an abuse of discretion on the part of the court in directing that a trial proceed in the absence of an attorney for a party depends upon the particular facts and circumstances in the given case.	Does the question of whether there has been an abuse of discretion on part of court in directing that a trial proceed in absence of an attorney for party depend upon particular facts and circumstances in a given case?

1014	First Interstate Bank of Texas, N.A. v. Burns, 951 S.W.2d 237, 238-39 (Tex. App. 1997)	3	Tribunal must grant legislative continuance unless party employed legislator-attorney within ten days of trial on the merits or unless continuance would interfere with any party's due process rights; under those circumstances, tribunal has discretion to deny continuance. V.T.C.A., Civil Practice & Remedies Code S 30.003(b, c).	The tribunal must grant the continuance unless the party employed the legislator within ten days of trial on the merits or unless a continuance would interfere with a party's due process rights. 30.003(b), (c). Waites v. Sondock, 561 S.W.2d 772, 776 (Tex.1977). Under those circumstances, the tribunal has the discretion to deny a continuance. 30.003(b), (c).	Should a tribunal grant legislative continuance unless party employed legislator-attorney within ten days of trial on the merits or unless continuance would interfere with any party's due process rights?
1017	Matter of Safriet, 112 N.C. App. 747, 751 (1993)	2	Before ruling on motion for continuance, judge should hear the evidence, pro and con, consider it judicially, along with whether moving party has acted with diligence and in good faith, and then rule with view to promoting substantial justice.	Before ruling on a motion for a continuance, the judge should hear the evidence, pro and con, consider it judicially, along with whether the moving party has acted with diligence and in good faith and then rule with a view to promoting substantial justice.	"Before ruling on a motion to continue, should a judge hear the evidence pro and con, consider it judicially with a view to promoting substantial justice?"
1018	Trummel v. Mitchell, 156 Wash. 2d 653, 671 (Wash., 2006)	8	In exercising its discretion whether to grant a continuance, a court may properly consider the necessity of reasonably prompt disposition of the litigation, the needs of the moving party, the possible prejudice to the adverse party, the prior history of the litigation, including prior continuances granted the moving party, any conditions imposed in the continuances previously granted, and any other matters that have a material bearing upon the exercise of the discretion.	In exercising its discretion, a court may properly consider the necessity of reasonably prompt disposition of the litigation; the needs of the moving party; 315 the possible prejudice to the adverse party; the prior history of the litigation, including prior continuances granted the moving party; any conditions imposed in the continuances previously granted; and any other matters that have a material bearing upon the exercise of the discretion vested in the *671 court.	What should a court consider in exercising its discretion whether to grant a continuance?
1019	Friedman v. Heart Inst. of Port St. Lucie, Inc., 863 So. 2d 189, 194 (Fla. 2003)	8	While the general rule is that personal financial information is ordinarily discoverable only in aid of execution after judgment has been entered, where materials sought by a party would appear to be relevant to the subject matter of the pending action, the information is fully discoverable.	While the general rule in Florida is that personal financial information is ordinarily discoverable only in aid of execution after judgment has been entered, see Gruman v. Bankers Trust Co., 379 So.2d 658, 659 (Fla. 3d DCA 1980); Cooper v. Fulton, 117 So.2d 33, 35-36 (Fla. 3d DCA 1960), where materials sought by a party "would appear to be relevant to the subject matter of the pending action," the information is fully discoverable.	"Where financial materials sought by a party would appear to be relevant to the subject matter of the pending action, is the information fully discoverable?"

1021	Desselles v. Mossy Motors, 442 F. Supp. 897, 903 (E.D. La. 1978)	9	Under Louisiana law, when creditor settles with advance remission as to one of two solidary obligors, creditors thereafter can claim only one-half debt from obligor who has not been released whether obligation be one arising in contract or tort. LSA-C.C. art. 2203.	Louisiana law is that when a creditor (plaintiff) settles with and grants a remission as to one of two solidary obligors (defendants) the creditor thereafter can claim only one-half the debt from the obligor who has not been released whether the obligation be one arising in contract or tort.	"When a creditor settles with and grants a remission as to one of two solidary obligors, can the creditor thereafter claim one-half the debt from the obligor who has not been released whether the obligation be one arising in contract or tort?"
1023	U.S. v. Holmes, 618 F.Supp.2d 529, 542–43 (E.D.Va.,2009)	11	A federal district court is not precluded from jurisdiction over a criminal prosecution simply because the Uniform Code of Military Justice gives jurisdiction to punish a member of the armed forces for crimes committed on military installations.	A federal district court is not precluded from jurisdiction simply because the Uniform Code of Military Justice gives jurisdiction to punish a member of the armed forces for crimes committed on military installations.	Is a federal district court precluded from jurisdiction simply because the Uniform Code of Military Justice gives jurisdiction to punish a member of the armed forces for crimes committed on military installations?
1027	W.S. Butterfield Theatres, Inc. v. Department of Revenue, 91 N.W.2d 269, 273, 353 Mich. 345, 353 (Mich. 1958)	6	Restriction that power of taxation shall not be so exercised as to deny to any the equal protection of the laws does not compel adoption of an iron rule of equal taxation, nor prevent variety or differences in taxation, or discretion in selection of subject, or classification for taxation of property, businesses, trades, callings, or occupations.	The power of taxation is fundamental to the very existence of the government of the states. The restriction that it shall not be so exercised as to deny to any the equal protection of the laws does not compel the adoption of an iron rule of equal taxation, nor prevent variety or differences in taxation, or discretion in the selection of subjects, or the classification for taxation of properties, businesses, trades, callings, or occupations.	Does the restriction that the power of taxation shall not be so exercised as to deny to any the equal protection of the laws prevent differences in taxation?
1031	Poteat v. St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co., 277 Mont. 117, 119 (1996)	1	When deciding motion to dismiss based on lack of subject matter jurisdiction, district court must determine whether complaint states facts that, if true, would vest district court with subject matter jurisdiction.	When deciding a motion to dismiss based on lack of subject matter jurisdiction, a district court must determine whether the complaint states facts that, if true, would vest the district court with subject matter jurisdiction.	"When deciding a motion to dismiss based on lack of subject matter jurisdiction, must a trial court determine whether the complaint states facts that would vest the court with subject matter jurisdiction?"

1034	Cuozzo v. Town of Orange, 315 Conn. 606, 615-16 (2015)	9	If affidavits and/or other evidence submitted in support of a defendant's motion to dismiss conclusively establish that jurisdiction is lacking, and the plaintiff fails to undermine this conclusion with counteraffidavits or other evidence, the trial court may dismiss the action without further proceedings; if, however, the defendant submits either no proof to rebut the plaintiff's jurisdictional allegations, or only evidence that fails to call those allegations into question, the plaintiff need not supply counteraffidavits or other evidence to support the complaint, but may rest on the jurisdictional allegations therein. Practice Book 1998, § 10-30.	If affidavits and/or other evidence submitted in support of a defendant's motion to dismiss conclusively establish that jurisdiction is lacking, and the plaintiff fails to undermine this conclusion with counteraffidavits ... or other evidence, the trial court may dismiss the action without further proceedings.... *616 If, however, the defendant submits either no proof to rebut the plaintiff's jurisdictional allegations ... or only evidence that fails to call those allegations into question ... the plaintiff need not supply counteraffidavits or other evidence to support the complaint, but may rest on the jurisdictional allegations therein....	"If affidavits and/or other evidence conclusively establish that jurisdiction is lacking, may the trial court dismiss the action without further proceedings?"
1037	Admiral Mortg. v. Cooper, 357 Md. 533, 545 (2000)	5	Appropriate sanction for discovery or scheduling order violation is largely discretionary with the trial court, and the more draconian sanctions, of dismissing claim or precluding evidence necessary to support a claim, are normally reserved for persistent and deliberate violations that actually cause some prejudice, either to party or to court.	What it overlooks, however, is the governing principle that the appropriate sanction for a discovery or scheduling order violation is largely discretionary with the trial court, and that the more draconian sanctions, of dismissing a claim or precluding the evidence necessary to support a claim, are normally reserved for persistent and deliberate violations that actually cause some prejudice, either to a party or to the court.	Is the appropriate sanction for a discovery or scheduling order violation largely discretionary with the trial court?
1044	Herrick v. Monkey Farm Cafe, 163 Conn. App. 45, 51 (2016)	5	Although dismissal of an action is not an abuse of discretion where a party shows a deliberate, contumacious or unwarranted disregard for the court's authority, the court should be reluctant to employ the sanction of dismissal except as a last resort.	Therefore, although dismissal of an action is not an abuse of discretion where a party shows a deliberate, contumacious or unwarranted disregard for the court's authority ... the court should be reluctant to employ the sanction of dismissal except as a last resort	"Although dismissal of an action is not an abuse of discretion where a party shows a deliberate disregard for the court's authority, should the court be reluctant to employ the sanction of dismissal except as a last resort?"
1045	In re Gen. Motors Corp., 296 S.W.3d 813, 826-27 (Tex. App. 2009)	17	Even when the trial court lacks subject-matter jurisdiction to adjudicate certain claims that are within the administrative agency's exclusive jurisdiction, the court still has the power to either abate or dismiss those claims.	Accordingly, even when the trial court lacks subject-matter jurisdiction to adjudicate certain claims that are within the administrative agency's exclusive jurisdiction, *827 the court still has the power to either abate or dismiss those claims.	"Even when the trial court lacks subject-matter jurisdiction to adjudicate certain claims that are within the administrative agency's exclusive jurisdiction, does the court still have the power to either abate or dismiss those claims?"

1049	Simeon v. Hardin, 339 N.C. 358, 370 (1994)	8	Whenever during the course of litigation it develops that relief sought has been granted or that the questions originally in controversy between the parties are no longer at issue, case should be dismissed, for courts will not entertain action merely to determine abstract propositions of law; if the issues before court become moot at any time during course of the proceedings, the usual response is to dismiss the action.	Whenever during the course of litigation it develops that the relief sought has been granted or that the questions originally in controversy between the parties are no longer at issue, the case should be dismissed, for courts will not entertain an action merely to determine abstract propositions of law. Peoples, 296 N.C. at 147, 250 S.E.2d at 912. If the issues before the court become moot at any time during the course of the proceedings, the usual response is to dismiss the action.	Should a case be dismissed if during litigation it develops that the relief sought has been granted or that the questions originally in controversy between the parties are no longer at issue?
1052	Sommer v. Maharaj, 451 Mass. 615, 621 (2008)	5	Among the pertinent considerations in determining whether a party's conduct warrants dismissal of a lawsuit are the severity of the violation, the legitimacy of the party's excuse, repetition of violations, the deliberateness vel non of the misconduct, mitigating excuses, prejudice to the other side and to the operations of the court, and the adequacy of lesser sanctions.	Among the pertinent considerations in determining whether conduct warrants dismissal are "the severity of the violation, the legitimacy of the party's excuse, repetition of violations, the deliberateness vel non of the misconduct, mitigating excuses, prejudice to the other side and to the operations of the court, and the adequacy of lesser sanctions."	What are among the pertinent considerations in determining whether a party's conduct warrants dismissal of a lawsuit?
1056	Baer v. New Hampshire Dep't of Educ., 160 N.H. 727, 729 (2010)	2	When the motion to dismiss does not challenge the sufficiency of the plaintiff's legal claim but, instead, raises certain defenses, the trial court must look beyond the plaintiff's unsubstantiated allegations and determine, based on the facts, whether the plaintiff has sufficiently demonstrated his right to claim relief.	"[W]hen the motion to dismiss does not challenge the sufficiency of the plaintiff's legal claim but, instead, raises certain defenses, the trial court must look beyond the plaintiff's unsubstantiated allegations and determine, based on the facts, whether the plaintiff has sufficiently demonstrated his right to claim relief."	Can the court look beyond petitioners' unsubstantiated allegations and determine whether petitioners have sufficiently demonstrated their right to claim relief?
1057	Billups v. Jade, 240 Neb. 494, 498 (1992)	6	In absence of showing of good cause, litigant's failure to prosecute civil action, resulting in noncompliance with Nebraska Supreme Court's Case Progression Standards for civil actions in district courts, is basis to dismiss action on account of lack of diligent prosecution.	Thus, in the absence of a showing of good cause, a litigant's failure to prosecute a civil action, resulting in noncompliance with the Nebraska Supreme Court's Case Progression Standards for civil actions in district courts, is a basis to dismiss an action on account of a lack of diligent prosecution.	"Is a litigant's failure to prosecute a civil action, resulting in noncompliance with the court, a basis to dismiss an action on account of a lack of diligent prosecution?"

1059	In re Cty. Collector, 2016 IL App (3d) 150712, 70 N.E.3d 647, 653 (Ill. App. 2016)	3	The purpose of the statute authorizing involuntary dismissal of a complaint based upon certain defects or defenses is to provide litigants with a method for disposing of issues of law and easily proven issues of fact early in a case, often before discovery has been conducted. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-619.	Section 2-619 of the Code allows a litigant to obtain an involuntary dismissal of an action or claim based upon certain defects or defenses. The statute's purpose is to provide litigants with a method for disposing of issues of law and easily proven issues of fact early in a case, often before discovery has been conducted.	What would be the purpose of the statute authorizing involuntary dismissal of a complaint based upon certain defects or defenses?
1060	People v Charles, 61 N.Y.2d 321, 326, 462 N.E.2d 118, 120, 473 N.Y.S.2d 941, 943 (N.Y., Mar. 27, 1984)	3	"Colorable" authority exists when bribe is offered to public official to act corruptly in matter to which he bears some official relation, though act itself may be technically beyond his official powers or duties. McKinney's Penal Law S 200.10.	The decisions hold that "colorable" authority exists when a bribe is offered to a public official "to act corruptly in a matter to which he bears some official relation, though the act itself may be technically beyond his official powers or duties"	Does colorable authority exist when a bribe is offered to a public official to act corruptly in a matter to which he bears some official relation though the act itself may be technically beyond his official powers or duties?
1061	U.S. v. Terry, 707 F.3d 607, 613 (C.A.6 (Ohio), 2013)	7	Motives and consequences, not formalities, are the keys for determining whether a public official entered an agreement to accept a bribe, and the trier of fact is quite capable of deciding the intent with which words were spoken or actions taken as well as the reasonable construction given to them by the official and the payor. 18 U.S.C.A. S 201(b)(2).	"[M]otives and consequences, not formalities," are the keys for determining whether a public official entered an agreement to accept a bribe, and the trier of fact is "quite capable of deciding the intent with which words were spoken or actions taken as well as the reasonable construction given to them by the official and the payor."	Is formality the key for determining whether a public official entered an agreement to accept a bribe?
1062	Holly v. Harrah's Tunica Corp., 962 So. 2d 136, 140 (Miss. App. 2007)	5	Dismissal for failure to comply with an order of the court is appropriate only where there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct and lesser sanctions would not serve the best interests of justice. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	"Moreover, dismissal for failure to comply with an order of the [court] is appropriate only where there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct and lesser sanctions would not serve the best interests of justice."	Is dismissal for failure to comply with an order of the court appropriate only where there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct and lesser sanctions would not serve the best interests of justice?
1063	Novak v. Orca Oil Co., 875 P.2d 756, 759 (Alaska, 1994)	2	Before ordering dismissal for want of prosecution, court must initially inquire whether party facing dismissal has engaged in any proceedings within the previous one-year period and, if not, must inquire as to whether good cause existed for the delay. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(e).	Before ordering dismissal pursuant to Rule 41(e), the trial court must undertake a two-step inquiry: it must initially inquire whether the party facing dismissal has engaged in any proceedings within the previous one-year period; if not, then it must next inquire whether good cause exists for the delay.	"Before ordering dismissal for want of prosecution, should a court initially inquire whether the party facing dismissal has engaged in any proceedings within the previous one-year period?"

1064	Stacy v. Johnson, 25 So. 3d 365, 368 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009)	3	Cases are dismissed with prejudice for failure to prosecute if the record shows that a plaintiff has been guilty of dilatory or contumacious conduct, or has repeatedly disregarded the procedural directives of the court, and where lesser sanctions would not serve the best interests of justice. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	Such cases are dismissed with prejudice "if the record shows that a plaintiff has been guilty of dilatory or contumacious conduct, or has repeatedly disregarded the procedural directives of the court ... and where lesser sanctions would not serve the best interests of justice."	"Are cases dismissed with prejudice for failure to prosecute, if the record shows that a plaintiff has been guilty of dilatory or contumacious conduct?"
1065	Lake Meredith Reservoir Co. v. Amity Mut. Irr. Co., 698 P.2d 1340, 1344 (Colo. 1985)	7	When evaluating motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute, trial court must bear in mind that courts exist primarily to afford forum to settle litigable matters between disputing parties. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b)(1, 2).	When evaluating a motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute, a trial court must bear in mind that courts "exist primarily to afford a forum to settle litigable matters between disputing parties."	"Should a court bear in mind that courts exist primarily to afford a forum to settle litigable matters between disputing parties, when evaluating a motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute?"
1066	Holt v. Pitts, 619 F.2d 558, 562 (6th Cir. 1980)	5	A dismissal for failure to prosecute is a harsh sanction that runs counter to policy of law favoring disposition of cases on their merits and, accordingly, such dismissal should be used only in extreme situations where a plaintiff has engaged in a clear pattern of delay or contumacious conduct.	A dismissal for failure to prosecute is a harsh sanction that runs counter to the policy of the law favoring the disposition of cases on their merits. Accordingly, such dismissal should be used only in extreme situations where a plaintiff has engaged in "a clear pattern of delay or contumacious conduct."	Is a dismissal for failure to prosecute a harsh sanction that turns counter to the policy of the law favoring the disposition of cases on their merits?
1068	In re Marriage of Buster, 115 S.W.3d 141, 143-44 (Tex. App. 2003)	1	A trial court has the inherent power to dismiss a case for want of prosecution, and express authority to do so is also given by the rules of civil procedure in cases where a party plaintiff fails to appear for any scheduled hearing, or when the case is not disposed of within the time standards set by the Texas Supreme Court. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a.	A trial court has the inherent power to dismiss a case for want of prosecution, but express authority to do so is also given by Rule 165a in cases where a *144 party plaintiff fails to appear for any scheduled hearing, or when the case is not disposed of within the time standards set by the Texas Supreme Court. TEX.R. CIV. P. 165a;	Can a court dismiss a case pursuant to either its inherent power or in accordance with rule for want of prosecution?
1072	Leone v Bates Plan-A-Home of Sidney, No. 56666, 144 A.D.2d 759, 760, 534 N.Y.S.2d 751, 752, 1988 WL 116189 (N.Y.A.D. 3 Dept., Nov. 03, 1988)	1	Case stricken from trial calendar, and not restored within one year, is automatically deemed abandoned; Supreme Court retains discretion to restore case to calendar where plaintiff demonstrates viable excuse, meritorious claim, lack of prejudice, and absence of intent to abandon case. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	A case stricken from a trial calendar, and not restored within one year, is automatically deemed abandoned pursuant to CPLR 3404 (see, Curtin v. Grand Union Co., 124 A.D.2d 918, 508 N.Y.S.2d 333; Merrill v. Robinson, supra). Supreme Court retains discretion to restore the case to the calendar where a plaintiff demonstrates a viable excuse, a meritorious claim, the lack of prejudice and an absence of intent to abandon the case (id.).	Is action which is stricken from trial calendar and not restored within one year thereafter deemed abandoned and dismissed pursuant to statute?

1074	PNC Multifamily Capital Institutional Fund XXVI Ltd. P'ship v. Bluff City Cmty. Dev. Corp., 387 S.W.3d 525, 537 (Tenn.Ct.App., 2012)	7	The basis for a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is that the allegations in the complaint, when considered alone and taken as true, are insufficient to state a claim as a matter of law. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12.02(6).	When considering a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, we are limited to an examination of the complaint alone. The basis for the motion is that the allegations in the complaint, when considered alone and taken as true, are insufficient to state a claim as a matter of law.	"Would the basis for a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is that the allegations in the complaint when considered alone and taken as true, are insufficient to state a claim as a matter of law?"
1075	Village of West Dundee v. First United Methodist Church of West Dundee, 74 N.E.3d 144, 150, 411 Ill.Dec. 835, 841, 2017 IL App (2d) 150278, ¶ 16 (Ill.App. 2 Dist., 2017)	5	All that is required to survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim is that the plaintiff allege facts that, taken as true, are sufficient to bring a claim within a recognized cause of action; in other words, a complaint should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless no set of facts would warrant relief. 735 Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann. S 2-615.	All that is required to survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim is that the plaintiff allege facts that, taken as true, are sufficient to bring a claim within a recognized cause of action. Kanerva v. Weems, 2014 IL 115811, ¶ 33, 383 Ill.Dec. 107, 13 N.E.3d 1228. In other words, a complaint should not be dismissed on section 2-615 grounds unless no set of facts would warrant relief.	"Is it that the plaintiff allege facts taken as true are sufficient to bring a claim within a recognized cause of action, all that is required to survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim?"
1076	Mathews v. Diaz, 426 U.S. 67, 78–79 (1976)	7	The fact that all persons, aliens and citizens alike, are protected by the due process clause does not lead to the further conclusion that all aliens are entitled to enjoy all of the advantages of citizenship or, indeed, to the conclusion that all aliens must be placed in a single homogeneous legal classification. U.S.C.A.Const. Amendments. 5, 14.	The fact that all persons, aliens and citizens alike, are protected by the Due Process Clause does not lead to the further conclusion that all aliens are entitled to enjoy all the advantages of citizenship or, indeed, to the conclusion that all aliens must be placed in a single homogeneous legal classification.	Does the fact that aliens are protected by the Due Process Clause lead to a conclusion that all aliens must be placed in a single homogeneous legal classification?
1079	Schwarz v Consolidated Edison, No. 151686/2015, 49 Misc. 3d 832, 840, 13 N.Y.S.3d 884, 891, 2015 N.Y. Slip Op. 25258, 2015 WL 4612347 (Sup Ct, Aug. 03, 2015)	1	A court may consider evidentiary material in evaluating a motion to dismiss; when such material is considered, the criterion is whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action, not whether he has stated one, and, unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the pleader to be one is not a fact at all, and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it, dismissal should not eventuate. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	Nevertheless, the court may consider evidentiary material in evaluating a motion made under CPLR 3211(a)(7); when such material is considered, "the criterion is whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action, not whether he has stated one, and, unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the pleader to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it, again dismissal should not eventuate"	Can a court consider evidentiary material in evaluating a motion to dismiss?

1081	Lynch v. Town of Pelham, 104 A.3d 1047, 1052 (2014)	3	When a motion to dismiss does not challenge the sufficiency of a plaintiff's legal claim but, instead, raises certain defenses, the trial court must look beyond the plaintiff's unsubstantiated allegations and determine, based on the facts, whether the plaintiff has sufficiently demonstrated his right to claim relief.	"When the motion to dismiss does not challenge the sufficiency of the [plaintiff's] legal claim but, instead, raises certain defenses, the trial court must look beyond the [plaintiff's] unsubstantiated allegations and determine, based on the facts, whether the [plaintiff] ha[s] sufficiently demonstrated [his] right to claim relief.	Is a jurisdictional challenge raised in a motion to dismiss a defense for which the trial court will look beyond the plaintiff's allegations in the complaint?
1082	Lake Meredith Reservoir Co. v. Amity Mut. Irr. Co., 698 P.2d 1340, 1344 (Colo. 1985)	7	When evaluating motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute, trial court must bear in mind that courts exist primarily to afford forum to settle litigable matters between disputing parties. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b)(1, 2).	When evaluating a motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute, a trial court must bear in mind that courts "exist primarily to afford a forum to settle litigable matters between disputing parties."	Should courts bear in mind that courts exist primarily to afford a forum to settle litigable matters between disputing parties when evaluating motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute?
1083	Sheldon v. Kettering Health Network, 2015-Ohio-3268, ¶ 5, 40 N.E.3d 661, 665	3	A court considering a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted must construe the complaint in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, presume all of the factual allegations to be true, and make all reasonable inferences in the plaintiff's favor. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(B)(6).	A motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, pursuant to Civ.R.12(B)(6), tests the sufficiency of a complaint. For a defendant to prevail, it must appear beyond doubt from the complaint that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts entitling him to relief. O'Brien v. University Community Tenants Union, Inc., 42 Ohio St.2d 242, 245, 327 N.E.2d 753 (1975). A court must construe the complaint in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, presume all of the factual allegations to be true, and make all reasonable inferences in the plaintiff's favor.	"In construing a complaint upon a motion for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, should a court presume that all factual allegations in the complaint are true?"

1084	H & R Block Bank v. Perry, 205 So. 3d 776, 779-80 (Fla. App. 2016)	4	Among other things, the extreme sanction of dismissal with prejudice is reserved for circumstances in which the trial court makes findings supported by the record that the conduct involved was willful, persistent, or otherwise aggravated and that no lesser sanction would be just under the circumstances. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.420(b).	A dismissal with prejudice is an extreme sanction, and a trial court has discretion to impose it only in extreme cases. ("Because a dismissal with prejudice is the ultimate sanction in the civil justice system, it is reserved for the most aggravating circumstances."); ("As this court has observed, dismissal with prejudice is the most severe of sanctions and should be reserved for the most egregious conduct."). Among other things, this sanction is reserved for circumstances in which the trial court makes findings supported by the record that the conduct involved was willful, persistent, or otherwise aggravated and that no lesser sanction would be just under the circumstances.	"Among other things, is the extreme sanction of dismissal with prejudice reserved for circumstances in which the trial court makes findings supported by the record that the conduct involved was willful?"
1085	Joyce v. Town of Weare, 156 N.H. 526, 529 (2007)	4	When a party's motion to dismiss challenges the plaintiff's standing to sue, the trial court must look beyond the plaintiff's unsubstantiated allegations and determine, based on the facts, whether the plaintiff has sufficiently demonstrated his right to claim relief. RSA 677:15(1).	Ultimately, when a party's motion to dismiss "challenges the plaintiff's standing to sue, the trial court must look beyond the plaintiff's unsubstantiated allegations and determine, based on the facts, whether the plaintiff has sufficiently demonstrated his right to claim relief." 923 Ossipee Auto Parts v.	"When a party's motion to dismiss challenges the plaintiff's standing to sue, should the trial court look beyond the plaintiff's unsubstantiated allegations?"
1086	Ho v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 926 F. Supp. 964, 969 (D. Haw. 1996)	14	"Equitable estoppel" requires proof that one person willfully caused another to erroneously believe certain state of things, and that person reasonably relied on this erroneous belief to his or her detriment.	Equitable estoppel requires proof that one person willfully caused another to erroneously believe a certain state of things, and that person reasonably relied on this erroneous belief to his or her detriment.	"Does equitable estoppel require proof that one person willfully caused another person to erroneously believe a certain state of things, and that person reasonably relied on this erroneous belief to his or her detriment?"
1089	Woodard v. Westvaco Corp., 433 S.E.2d 890, 892, 315 S.C. 329, 332 (S.C.App., 1993)	4	When allegations of complaint are factually sufficient but do not affirmatively show subject matter jurisdiction, motion to dismiss may be supported by, and court may consider, affidavits or other evidence proving lack of jurisdiction. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 8(a)(1).	When the allegations of the complaint are factually sufficient under Rule 8(a)(1), SCRCP, but do not affirmatively show subject matter jurisdiction, the motion to dismiss may be supported by, and the court may consider, affidavits or other evidence proving lack of jurisdiction.	"When the allegations of a complaint are factually sufficient, but do not affirmatively show subject matter jurisdiction, should a motion to dismiss be supported by affidavits or other evidence to prove lack of jurisdiction?"

1093	Borgman v. State Farm Ins. Co., 713 N.E.2d 851, 854 (Ind. App. 1999)	3	In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the court has considerable latitude in devising procedures to ferret out the facts pertinent to jurisdiction, and in doing so, it may consider not only the complaint and motion but any affidavits or other evidence submitted.	In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the court may resolve factual disputes. Id. Additionally, the court has considerable latitude in devising procedures to ferret out the facts pertinent to jurisdiction, and it is well established that in doing so it may consider not only the complaint and motion but any affidavits or other evidence submitted.	"In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, does the court have considerable latitude in devising procedures to ferret out the facts pertinent to jurisdiction?"
1094	Parmley v. Pringle, 976 So. 2d 422, 425 (Miss.App., 2008)	6	While failure to serve process within 120 days of filing of complaint, absent proof of good cause, warrants dismissal upon court's initiative or upon motion, such dismissal should be made without prejudice, not with prejudice. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 4(h).	Failure to serve process within 120 days of the filing of a complaint, absent proof of "good cause," shall warrant dismissal upon the court's initiative or upon motion. M.R.C.P. 4(h); Heard v. Remy, 937 So.2d 939, 941 (8) (Miss.2006). However, Rule 4(h) dismissals should be made without prejudice, not with prejudice as the trial court did here.	"Does failure to serve process within 120 days of filing of complaint, absent proof of good cause, warrant dismissal upon a court initiative or upon motion?"
1098	Binner v. Limestone Cty., 129 S.W.3d 710, 713 (Tex. App. 2004)	6	Motion to reinstate essentially provides an opportunity for the dismissed plaintiff to explain the failure to appear at any hearing, if applicable, the failure to prosecute the case with due diligence, and to request the court to reconsider its decision to dismiss, in much the same manner as a motion for a new trial. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a.	The motion to reinstate is the failsafe to prevent cases that fall into any of the three categories from being improperly dismissed. It essentially provides an opportunity for the dismissed plaintiff to explain the failure to appear at any hearing, if applicable, the failure to prosecute the case with due diligence, and to request the court to reconsider its decision to dismiss, in much the same manner as a motion for a new trial.	"Does a motion to reinstate essentially provide an opportunity for the dismissed plaintiff to explain the failure to appear at any hearing, if applicable?"
1099	In re Bokeloh, 21 S.W.3d 784, 787 (Tex. App. 2000)	5	A timely and proper motion to reinstate extends the trial court's plenary power until thirty days after the motion is overruled either by a written signed order or by operation of law. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a(3).	A timely and proper motion to reinstate extends the trial court's plenary power until thirty days after the motion is overruled either by a written signed order or by operation of law.	Is a timely and proper motion to reinstate extends the trial court's plenary power until thirty days after the motion overruled either by a written signed order or by operation of law?
1100	Stamp v. Touche Ross & Co., 263 Ill. App. 3d 1010, 1019 (1993)	12	General rule is that where trial court dismisses complaint and plaintiff does not ask for leave to amend, cause of action must stand or fall on sufficiency of stricken pleading.	The general rule is that where the trial court dismisses a complaint and plaintiff does not ask for leave to amend, the cause of action must stand or fall on the sufficiency of the stricken pleading.	"Is the general rule that where a trial court dismisses a complaint and a plaintiff does not ask for leave to amend, a cause of action must stand or fall on sufficiency of a stricken pleading?"

1101	Mlade v. Finley, 112 Ill. App. 3d 914, 917 (1983)	2	When trial court strikes complaint and plaintiff does not ask for leave to amend, this is considered election to stand by his complaint, and, if lawsuit is dismissed, cause of action must stand or fall upon contents of stricken pleading.	However, when the trial court strikes a complaint and the plaintiff does not ask for leave to amend, this is considered an election "to stand by his complaint" (Doner v. Phoenix Land Bank (1942), 381 Ill. 106, 109, 45 N.E.2d 20), and if the lawsuit is dismissed the cause of action "must stand or fall upon [the] contents" of the stricken pleading.	"Is the general rule that where a trial court dismisses a complaint and a plaintiff does not ask for leave to amend, a cause of action must stand or fall on sufficiency of a stricken pleading?"
1103	Matter of In re Mario S., No. D-26972-09/10A, 954 N.Y.S.2d 843, 848, 38 Misc. 3d 444, 449, 2012 N.Y. Slip Op. 22336, 2012 WL 5898049 (N.Y.Fam.Ct., Nov. 21, 2012)	6	Creation of the special immigrant juvenile (SIJ) status shows a congressional intent to assist a limited group of abused children to remain safely in the country with a means to apply for lawful permanent resident status. Immigration and Nationality Act, S 101(a)(27)(I), 8 U.S.C.A. S 1101(a)(27)(I).	The creation of the special immigrant juvenile classification "show [s] a congressional intent to assist a limited group of abused children to remain safely in the country with a means to apply for [lawful permanent resident] status"	Did Congress intend to assist a limited group of abused children to remain safely in the country with a means to apply for Lawful Permanent Residence (LPR) status?
1104	Fonseca v. Fong, 167 Cal. App. 4th 922, 935 (2008)	13	A state statute impermissibly invades the exclusive power of the federal government to regulate immigration if it essentially requires state or local officials to make a determination of who should or should not be admitted into the country, and defines the conditions under which a legal entrant may remain. U.S.C.A. Const. Art. 6, cl. 2.	instructs that a state statute impermissibly invades the exclusive power of the federal government to regulate immigration if it essentially requires state or local officials to make "a determination of who should or should not be admitted into the country, and [defines] the conditions under which a legal entrant may remain."	Does a state statute that requires its officials to make determinations of who should or should not be admitted into the country impermissibly invade the exclusive power of the federal government?
1105	State v. Colon, 117 Conn. App. 150, 158 (2009)	15	To prove the defendant guilty of breach of the peace in the second degree, state is required to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that: (1) the defendant engaged in fighting or in violent, tumultuous or threatening behavior; (2) that this conduct occurred in a public place; and (3) that the defendant acted with the intent to cause inconvenience, annoyance or alarm, or that he recklessly created a risk thereof. C.G.S.A. S 53a-181(a)(1).	To prove the defendant guilty of breach of the peace in the second degree in violation of 53a-181(a)(1), the state was required to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that "(1) the defendant engaged in fighting or in violent, tumultuous or threatening behavior, (2) that this conduct occurred in a public place and (3) that the defendant acted with the intent to cause inconvenience, annoyance or alarm, or that he recklessly created a risk thereof."	When is a defendant guilty of breach of the peace?
1107	Enax v New York Telephone Co., No. 2364, 280 A.D.2d 294, 295, 720 N.Y.S.2d 126, 127, 2001 N.Y. Slip Op. 00956, 2001 WL 103599 (N.Y.A.D. 1 Dept., Feb. 06, 2001)	1	In order to vacate a dismissal of case that has been deemed abandoned, a plaintiff must demonstrate (1) a meritorious cause of action, (2) a reasonable excuse for the delay, (3) the absence of prejudice to the opposing party, (4) and a lack of intent to abandon the action. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	It is well settled that in order to vacate a dismissal pursuant to CPLR 3404, a plaintiff must demonstrate (1) a meritorious cause of action, (2) a reasonable excuse for the delay, (3) the absence of prejudice to the opposing party, (4) and a lack of intent to abandon the action	"Should a party seeking to have a case restored to the trial calendar demonstrate a meritorious cause of action, a reasonable excuse for the delay, a lack of intent to abandon the action, and the absence of prejudice to the opposing party?"

1108	Cotton v. Fruge, 8 Neb. App. 484, 485 (1999)	7	When a lawsuit is dismissed by operation of law for lack of service of process within six months of filing, the trial court has no jurisdiction to make orders thereafter and if made, they are a nullity, as are subsequent pleadings. Neb.Rev.St. S 25-217.	When a lawsuit is dismissed by operation of law for lack of service of process within 6 months of filing, the trial court has no jurisdiction to make orders thereafter and if made, they are a nullity, as are subsequent pleadings.	"When a lawsuit is dismissed by operation of law for lack of service of process within six months of filing, does the trial court have no jurisdiction to make orders thereafter?"
1109	Panepinto v. Dummy's Delightful Saloonery, 304 Pa. Super. 256, 258 (Pa. Super., 1982)	2	A motion to set aside a judgment of nonsuit should first be made to the lower court en banc so as to give the court an opportunity to reconsider the evidence and correct any errors before an appeal is taken. Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 218, 1512, 42 Pa.C.S.A.	A motion to set aside the judgment of nonsuit should first be made to the lower court en banc so as to give the court an opportunity to reconsider the evidence and to correct any errors before an appeal is taken.	Should a motion to set aside a judgment of nonsuit first be made to the lower court en banc so as to give the court an opportunity to reconsider the evidence and correct any errors before an appeal is taken?
1110	Thompson v. McQuagge, 464 So. 2d 105, 106 (Ala.Civ.App., 1985)	1	Dismissal of a civil action for want of prosecution because of plaintiff's failure to appear at trial falls within judicial discretion of trial court and will not be reversed upon appeal except for abusive use of that discretionary power. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	The dismissal of a civil action for want of prosecution because of the plaintiff's failure to appear at a trial falls within the judicial discretion of the trial court and will not be reversed upon an appeal except for an abusive use of that discretionary power.	Does the dismissal of a civil action for want of prosecution because of plaintiff's failure to appear at trial fall within the judicial discretion of the trial court?
1111	Armour v. State, 265 Ga. App. 569, 571 (2004)	2	Crime of making terroristic threats focuses solely on conduct of accused and is completed when threat is communicated to victim with intent to terrorize; that message was not directly communicated to victim would not alone preclude conviction where threat is submitted in such a way as to support inference that speaker intended or expected it to be conveyed to victim. West's Ga.Code Ann. S 16-11-37(a).	The crime of making terroristic threats focuses solely on the conduct of the accused and is completed when the threat is communicated to the victim with the intent to terrorize. 5 That the message was not directly communicated to the victim would not alone preclude a conviction where the threat is submitted in such a way as to support the inference that the speaker intended or expected it to be conveyed to the victim.	Does failure to directly communicate a terroristic threat to a victim preclude conviction of the defendant for the crime of making terroristic threats?
1117	Com. v. Young, 35 A.3d 54, 59 (Pa. 2011)	5	A failure of the lower court to consider less drastic alternatives before declaring a mistrial creates doubt about the exercise of the court's discretion and may bar re-prosecution because of double jeopardy. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; Const. Art. 1, S 10; Rules Crim.Proc., Rule 605, 42 Pa.C.S.A.	A failure of the lower court to consider less drastic alternatives before declaring a mistrial creates doubt about the exercise of the court's discretion and may bar re-prosecution because of double jeopardy.	Does a failure of the lower court to consider less drastic alternatives before declaring a mistrial create doubt about the exercise of the court's discretion and may bar re-prosecution because of double jeopardy?
1118	United States v. Andrews, 895 F.2d 406, 409 (C.A.7 (Ill.), 1990)	2	Consistent with double jeopardy provisions of Fifth Amendment, court may not declare mistrial over defendant's objection, even for defendant's own benefit, unless there is manifest necessity for such act or ends of public justice would otherwise be defeated. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Consequently, consistent with the double jeopardy provisions of the fifth amendment, a judge may not declare a mistrial over the defendant's own objections, even for the defendant's own benefit, unless there is a "manifest necessity for the act, or the ends of public justice would otherwise be defeated.	"Consistent with double jeopardy provisions of Fifth Amendment, can a court not declare mistrial over a defendant's objection, even for a defendant's own benefit?"

1119	People v. Baptiste, 530 N.E.2d 377, 379 (N.Y., 1988)	2	Because jeopardy attaches as soon as jury has been sworn, constitutional provisions also embrace a defendant's right to be free from reprosecution if first trial has not continued to conclusion. McKinney's Const. Art. 1, S 6; U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; McKinney's CPL S 40.30, subd. 1(b).	Because jeopardy attaches as soon as a jury has been sworn (CPL 40.30[1][b]), our constitutional provisions also embrace the defendant's right to be free from reprosecution if the first trial has not continued to conclusion.	"Because jeopardy attaches as soon as jury has been sworn, do constitutional provisions also embrace a defendant's right to be free from reprosecution if a first trial has not continued to conclusion?"
1120	Sturgess v Zelman, No. 13670/04, 833 N.Y.S.2d 863, 866, 15 Misc. 3d 487, 489, 2007 N.Y. Slip Op. 27070, 2007 WL 543393 (Sup Ct, Feb. 22, 2007)	1	To restore a matter to the trial calendar, after a year has passed from it being marked off, a plaintiff must demonstrate: (1) a reasonable excuse for the failure to timely restore; (2) a meritorious cause of action; (3) a lack of intent to abandon; and (4) lack or prejudice to the opposing party. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	To restore a matter to the trial calendar pursuant to CPLR § 3404, after a year has passed from it being marked off, a plaintiff must demonstrate (1) a reasonable excuse for the failure to timely restore; (2) a meritorious cause of action; (3) a lack of intent to abandon; and (4) lack or prejudice to the opposing party.	What should a plaintiff demonstrate to restore a matter to the trial calendar pursuant to CPLR 3404 after a year has passed from it being marked off?
1124	State v. Abshire, 363 N.C. 322, 331 (2009)	14	"Domicile" is a legal term of art that denotes one's permanent, established home, whereas a person's "residence" may be only a temporary, although actual, place of abode.	Domicile is a legal term of art that "denotes one's permanent, established home," whereas a person's residence may be only a "temporary, although actual," "place of abode." Id.	"Is ""domicile"" a legal term of art that denotes one's permanent, established home, whereas a person's ""residence"" may be only a temporary, although actual, place of abode?"
1127	Smith v. McKee, 145 S.W.3d 299, 302 (Tex. App. 2004)	2	The common law vests the trial court with the inherent power to dismiss independently of the rules of civil procedure when a plaintiff fails to prosecute his or her case with due diligence. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a.	In addition, the common law vests the trial court with the inherent power to dismiss independently of the rules of procedure when a plaintiff fails to prosecute his or her case with due diligence.	Does common law vest the trial court with the inherent power to dismiss independently of the rules of procedure when a plaintiff fails to prosecute her case with due diligence?
1128	People v. Szalma, 487 Mich. 708, 726 (2010)	8	An acquittal retains its finality for double jeopardy purposes even when the trial court is factually wrong with respect to whether a particular factor is an element of the charged offense. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; M.C.L.A. Const. Art. 1, S 15.	This Court held in People v. Nix that an acquittal retains its finality for double jeopardy purposes even when "the trial court is factually wrong with respect to whether a particular factor is an element of the charged offense."	Does an acquittal retain its finality for double jeopardy purposes even when the trial court is factually wrong with respect to whether a particular factor is an element of the charged offense?
1130	U.S. v. Marcello, 531 F.Supp. 1113, 1116 (C.D.Cal., 1982)	3	The application of the principle of collateral estoppel to criminal proceedings is embodied in the Fifth Amendment guarantee against double jeopardy and is generally applied to prevent the government from prosecuting a defendant on the basis of facts resolved in favor of a defendant in prior acquittal. U.S.C.A.Const.Amend. 5.	The application of the principle of collateral estoppel to criminal proceedings is embodied in the Fifth Amendment guarantee against double jeopardy, id. at 445, 90 S.Ct. at 1195, and hence is generally applied to prevent the government from prosecuting a defendant on the basis of facts resolved in favor of a defendant in a prior acquittal.	Is the application of the principle of collateral estoppel to criminal proceedings embodied in the Fifth Amendment guarantee against double jeopardy?

1131	Bullard v. Estelle, 665 F.2d 1347, 1355 (5th Cir. 1982)	2	Trial verdict or appellate ruling on insufficiency of evidence implicates interest of defendant in maintaining integrity of acquittal and calls for utmost protection of double jeopardy clause. U.S.C.A.Const.Amend. 5.	Thus a trial verdict or an appellate ruling 17 on insufficiency of the evidence implicates the interest of the defendant in maintaining the integrity of the acquittal and calls for the utmost protection of the double jeopardy clause.	Does a trial verdict or appellate ruling on insufficiency of evidence implicate an interest of a defendant in maintaining integrity of acquittal and calls for utmost protection of double jeopardy clause?
1132	State v. Muhannad, 837 N.W.2d 792, 800 (Neb., 2013)	3	The constitutional protection against double jeopardy does not mean that every time a defendant is put to trial before a competent tribunal, the defendant is entitled to go free if the trial fails to end in a final judgment. U.S. Const. Amend. 5	The constitutional protection against double jeopardy does not mean that every time a defendant is put to trial before a competent tribunal, the defendant is entitled to go free if the trial fails to end in a final judgment.	"Does the constitutional protection against double jeopardy mean that every time a defendant is put to trial before a competent tribunal, the defendant is entitled to go free if the trial fails to end in a final judgment?"
1134	Wade v. Hunter, 69 S.Ct. 834, 837, 336 U.S. 684, 688 (U.S. 1949)	2	"Double-jeopardy" provision of Fifth Amendment does not mean that every time a defendant is put to trial before a competent tribunal he is entitled to go free if trial fails to end in a final judgment. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 5.	The double-jeopardy provision of the Fifth Amendment, however, does not mean that every time a defendant is put to trial before a competent tribunal he is entitled to go free if the trial fails to end in a final judgment.	"Does the ""double-jeopardy"" provision of the Fifth Amendment not mean that every time a defendant is put to trial before a competent tribunal he is entitled to go free if trial fails to end in a final judgment?"
1136	Raymond v. Raymond, 109 R.I. 265, 269-270 (R.I., 1971)	2	Although a clerk of court may, with respect to judicial proceedings, perform acts of ministerial and nondiscretionary character, he has no judicial powers in absence of some specific statutory and constitutional authority, and in such instances where judicial power is expressly given to him his power is to be strictly construed within language of provisions authorizing its exercise.	In considering the action taken by the probate clerk, we are guided by the rule which holds that although a clerk of court may, with respect to judicial proceedings, perform acts of ministerial and nondiscretionary character, *270 he has no judicial powers in the absence of some specific statutory and constitutional authority, and in those instances where judicial power is expressly given to the clerk, his power is to be strictly construed within the language of the provisions authorizing its exercise.	Are judicial powers granted to a clerk of the court strictly construed within the language of the provisions authorizing its exercise?
1137	Miller v. Am. Greetings Corp., 161 Cal. App. 4th 1055, 1066 (2008)	9	Awarding costs of proof is improper if the party who denied the request for admission held a reasonably entertained good faith belief it would prevail on the issue at trial. West's Ann.Cal.C.C.P. S 2033(o) (Repealed).	Awarding costs of proof is improper if the party who denied the request for admission "held a reasonably entertained good faith belief [it] would prevail on the issue at trial."	Is awarding costs of proof improper if the party who denied the request for admission held a reasonably entertained good faith belief it would prevail on the issue at trial ?

1139	Fed. Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Webb, 464 F. Supp. 520, 524 (E.D. Tenn. 1978)	1	Negotiability of a note is not destroyed by recitation of the security given, statement that on default the holder may realize against the collateral, promise or power to maintain or protect collateral or give additional collateral, term authorizing confession of judgment if debt is not paid when due, or acceleration clause. T.C.A. SS 47-3-104(1), 47-3-105(1)(e), 47-3-105 comment, 47-3-109(1)(c), 47-3-109 comment, 47-3-112(1)(b-d).	Negotiability is not destroyed by: (1) a recitation of the security given, T.C.A. s 47-3-105(e) and Comment 4, (2) a statement that upon default the holder may realize against the collateral, T.C.A. s 47-3-112(b), (3) a promise or power to maintain or protect collateral or give additional collateral, T.C.A. s 47-3-112(c), (4) a term authorizing confession of judgment if the debt is not paid when due, T.C.A. s 47-3-112(d); nor is negotiability destroyed by an acceleration clause, T.C.A. s 47-3-109(c) and Comment 4.	Can negotiability be destroyed by recitation of security given?
1141	State v. Nunez, 2000-NMSC-013, ¶ 94, 129 N.M. 63, 87, 2 P.3d 264, 288	39	The remedial objectives of forfeitures under the Controlled Substances Act are incidental, and the purposes of the sanction are decidedly punitive for double-jeopardy purposes given the punitive nature of in rem jurisdiction, the deterrent function of the sanction, the lack of correlation between the penalty and the crime, the fact that the sanction is tied to a crime, the exclusion of innocent owners from the sanction, and the fact that a fundamental right is affected. Const. Art. 2, S 15; NMSA 1978, S 30-31-34.	{94} Because of the strength of New Mexico precedent, the punitive nature of in rem jurisdiction, the deterrent function of the sanction, the lack of correlation between the penalty and the crime, the fact that the sanction is tied to a crime, the exclusion of innocent owners from the sanction, and the fact that a fundamental right is affected, we conclude that the remedial objectives of forfeitures under the Controlled Substances Act are incidental, and that the purposes of the sanction are decidedly punitive for double-jeopardy purposes.	Are the remedial objectives of forfeitures under the Controlled Substances Act incidental?
1142	McMath v. Katholi, 304 Ill. App. 3d 369, 375 (1999)	7	Trial courts have broad discretion to deny motions in limine and choose instead to consider the evidentiary issues raised in such motions only after the contested evidence is offered in the normal course of the trial.	In fact, trial courts have broad discretion to deny motions in limine and choose instead to consider the evidentiary issues raised in such motions only after the contested evidence is offered in the normal course of the trial.	Do trial courts have broad discretion to deny motions in limine and choose instead to consider the evidentiary issues raised in such motions only after the contested evidence is offered in the normal course of the trial?
1144	Argonaut Ins. Co. v. Allstate Ins. Co., 869 S.W.2d 537, 541-42 (Tex. App. 1993)	8	Doctrine of subrogation is given liberal application and is broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, has paid a debt for which another was primarily liable and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter.	However, the doctrine of subrogation is given a liberal application and is broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, has paid a debt for which another was primarily liable and which in *542 equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter.	"Is subrogation broad enough to include every instance where one person, not acting voluntarily, pays another's debt?"

1145	Bennett Truck Transp. v. Williams Bros. Const., 256 S.W.3d 730, 733 (Tex. App. 2008)	6	"Equitable subrogation" is a legal fiction whereby an obligation that is extinguished by a third party is treated as still existing to allow the creditor to seek recovery from the primarily liable party.	Equitable subrogation is a "legal fiction" whereby an obligation that is extinguished by a third party is treated as still existing to allow the creditor to seek recovery from the primarily liable party.	Is equitable subrogation a legal fiction whereby an obligation that is extinguished by a third party is treated as still existing to allow the creditor to seek recovery from the primarily liable party?
1147	Cassidy v. Murray, 34 F. Supp. 3d 579, 581 (Md. 2014)	5	The exclusive admiralty jurisdiction of the federal courts only applies to those maritime causes of action begun and carried on as proceedings in rem, that is, where a vessel or thing is itself treated as the offender and made the defendant by name or description in order to enforce a lien. 28 U.S.C.A. § 1333.	Therefore, the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal courts only applies "to those maritime causes of action begun and carried on as proceedings in rem, that is, where a vessel or thing is itself treated as the offender and made the defendant by name or description in order to enforce a lien."	Is a Federal courts admiralty jurisdiction exclusive to those maritime causes of action begun and carried on as proceedings in rem?
1149	Pennsylvania Indep. Oil & Gas Ass'n v. Com., Dep't of Env't Prot., 135 A.3d 1118, 1129 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 2015)	12	Although the Environmental Hearing Board (EHB) has some authority in certain cases to consider constitutional questions concerning regulations within its jurisdiction, it does not have the power to grant declaratory judgment and injunctive relief pursuant to the Declaratory Judgment Act, as only courts of record of the Commonwealth have that jurisdiction; the EHB only has jurisdiction to review post-enforcement matters and may not decide a pre-enforcement challenge. 42 Pa.C.S.A. § 7531 et seq.	[12] First, as our Supreme Court recognized in Empire Sanitary Landfill, Inc., although the EHB has some authority in certain cases to consider constitutional questions concerning regulations within its jurisdiction, "[i]t does not ... have the power to grant declaratory judgment and injunctive relief pursuant to the Declaratory Judgment[s] Act, ... because only courts of record of the Commonwealth have that jurisdiction." Empire Sanitary Landfill, Inc., 684 A.2d at 1055. Moreover, the EHB only has jurisdiction to review post-enforcement matters and may not decide a pre-enforcement challenge.	Does the Environmental Hearing Board (EHB) have the authority to review constitutional questions concerning regulations within its jurisdiction?
1151	All. of Descendants of Texas Land Grants v. United States, 37 F.3d 1478, 1481 (1994)	2	Claimant under Fifth Amendment must show that United States, by some specific action, took private property interest for public use without just compensation; therefore, claim under Fifth Amendment accrues when that taking action occurs. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	A claimant under the Fifth Amendment must show that the United States, by some specific action, took a private property interest for a public use without just compensation. Hodel v. Virginia Surface Mining & Reclamation Ass'n, 452 U.S. 264, 294, 101 S.Ct. 2352, 2369-70, 69 L.Ed.2d 1 (1981). Therefore, a claim under the Fifth Amendment accrues when that taking action occurs.	Does a successful claim for taking under the Fifth Amendment requires a showing that that the government took a private property interest for public use without paying just compensation?

1154	Hill v. Tennessee Valley Auth., 842 F. Supp. 1413, 1417 (N.D. Ala. 1993)	7	The Federal Employees Liability Reform and Tort Compensation Act creates statutory mechanism which immunizes federal employees from personal liability for common-law torts committed within scope of their employment by transforming cases against individual employees into actions against federal government which becomes subject to limitations of Federal Tort Claims Act (FTCA). Federal Employees Liability Reform and Tort Compensation Act of 1988, S 1 et seq., 102 Stat. 4563; 28 U.S.C.A. SS 1346(b), 2671-2680.	FELRTCA creates a statutory mechanism which immunizes federal employees from personal liability for common law torts committed within the scope of their employment by transforming cases against individual employees into actions against the federal government which become subject to the limitations of the Federal Tort Claims Act ("FTCA"), 28 U.S.C. 1346(b), 2671-80.	Are federal employees immune from liability for torts they commit when acting within the scope of their federal employment?
1155	Morrison v. Morrison, 284 Ga. 112, 116 (2008)	13	A cause of action, for res judicata purposes, is the entire set of facts which give rise to an enforceable claim; where some of the operative facts necessary to the causes of action are different in the two cases, the later suit is not upon the same cause as the former, although the subject matter may be the same, and even though the causes arose out of the same transaction.	"A cause of action has been defined as being 'the entire set of facts which give rise to an enforceable claim.' Where[, as here,] some of the operative facts necessary to the causes of action are different in the two cases, the later suit is not upon the same cause as the former (cits.), although the subject matter may be the same (cits.), and even though the causes arose out of the same transaction.	"Is a ""cause of action deemed to be an entire set of facts that give rise to an enforceable claim?"
1156	United Services Auto. Ass'n v. Alaska Ins. Co., 114 Cal.Rptr.2d 449, 454, 94 Cal.App.4th 638, 645 (Cal.App. 4 Dist.,2001)	8	"Equitable subrogation" permits a party who has been required to satisfy a loss created by a third party's wrongful act to step into the shoes of the loser and pursue recovery from the responsible wrongdoer.	"Equitable subrogation permits a party who has been required to satisfy a loss created by a third party's wrongful act to 'step into the shoes' of the loser and pursue recovery from the responsible wrongdoer.	Is subrogation a right which is purely derivative and it permits a party who has been required to satisfy a loss created by a third party's wrongful act to step into the shoes of the loser and pursue recovery from the responsible wrongdoer?
1158	Zurich American Insurance Company v. Southern-Owners Insurance Company, 248 F.Supp.3d 1268, 1287 (M.D.Fla., 2017)	29	Equitable subrogation under Florida law generally is appropriate where: (1) the subrogee made the payment to protect his or her own interest, (2) the subrogee did not act as a volunteer, (3) the subrogee was not primarily liable for the debt, (4) the subrogee paid off the entire debt, and (5) subrogation would not work any injustice to the rights of a third party.	"Equitable subrogation is generally appropriate where: (1) the subrogee made the payment to protect his or her own interest, (2) the subrogee did not act as a volunteer, (3) the subrogee was not primarily liable for the debt, (4) the subrogee paid off the entire debt, and (5) subrogation would not work any injustice to the rights of a third party."	"Is equitable subrogation appropriate where one party non-voluntarily pays the entire debt of another on which the paying party is not primarily liable in order to protect its own interests, as long as subrogation would not harm the rights of a third party?"

1160	Poteet v. Sauter, 136 Md. App. 383, 400-401 (2001)	2	Subrogation is founded upon the equitable powers of the court, is intended to provide relief against loss and damage to a meritorious creditor who has paid the debt of another, and is a legal fiction whereby an obligation extinguished by a payment made by a third person is treated as still subsisting for the benefit of this third person.	Writing on *401 behalf of the Court of Appeals, Judge Cathell recently explained subrogation, stating: "Subrogation is founded upon the equitable powers of the court. It is intended to provide relief against loss and damage to a meritorious creditor who has paid the debt of another. The doctrine is a legal fiction whereby an obligation extinguished by a payment made by a third person is treated as still subsisting for the benefit of this third person."	Is subrogation founded upon the equitable powers of the court?
1161	Frymire Eng'g Co., ex rel. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Jomar Int'l, Ltd., 194 S.W.3d 713, 716 (Tex. App. 2006)	7	The doctrine of equitable subrogation may be invoked to prevent unjust enrichment when one person confers upon another a benefit that is not required by legal duty or contract.	The doctrine of equitable subrogation "may be invoked to prevent unjust enrichment when one person confers upon another a benefit that is not required by legal duty or contract."	Can the doctrine of equitable subrogation be invoked to prevent unjust enrichment when one person confers upon another a benefit that is not required by legal duty or contract?
1162	Universal Forest Products Eastern Div., Inc. v. Morris Forest Products, LLC, 558 F.Supp.2d 893, 901 (E.D.Wis.,2008)	2	Under Wisconsin law, "equitable subrogation" rests upon the equitable principle that one, other than a volunteer, who pays for the wrong of another should be permitted to look to the wrongdoer to the extent he has paid and be subject to the defenses of the wrongdoer.	Equitable subrogation "rests upon the equitable principle that one, other than a volunteer, who pays for the wrong of another should be permitted to look to the wrongdoer to the extent he has paid and be subject to the defenses of the wrongdoer." "	"Does the doctrine of subrogation rest upon the equitable principle that one, other than a volunteer, who pays for the wrong of another should be permitted to look to the wrongdoer to the extent he has paid and be subject to the defenses of the wrongdoer?"
1164	Fordham v. Eason, 351 N.C. 151, 155 (1999)	4	A successful action for trespass to chattel requires the party bringing the action to demonstrate that she had either actual or constructive possession of the personalty or goods in question at the time of the trespass, and that there was an unauthorized, unlawful interference or dispossession of the property.	A successful action for trespass to chattel requires the party bringing the action to demonstrate that she had either actual or constructive possession of the personalty or goods in question at the time of the trespass, see White v. Morris, 8 N.C. 301, 303 (1821); Carson v. Noblet, 4 N.C. 136 (1814), and that there was an unauthorized, unlawful interference or dispossession of the property.	Should the party bringing the action of trespass to chattel demonstrate that they had either actual or constructive possession of the personalty or goods in question at the time of the trespass?

1165	Georgia Power Co. v. Harrison, 253 Ga. 212, 214-15 (1984)	2	Although trial court has discretion pursuant to statute to hear jurisdictional issues in advance of trial, it is a legal discretion which must balance factors favoring pretrial determination of a defense against other circumstances favoring delay, and which generally should not be exercised to consider questions of jurisdiction which are largely coextensive with merits of claim. O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(d).	However, although OCGA § 9-11-12(d) clothes the court with discretion to hear jurisdictional issues in advance of trial, it is a legal *215 discretion which must balance the factors favoring pretrial determination of a defense against other circumstances favoring delay, and which generally should not be exercised to consider questions of jurisdiction which are largely co-extensive with the merits of a claim.	Does the trial court have discretion pursuant to statute to hear jurisdictional issues in advance of trial?
1166	Kaufman v. Comm'n for Lawyer Discipline, 197 S.W.3d 867, 873 (Tex. App. 2006)	10	The purpose of a motion in limine is to prevent opposing parties from asking prejudicial questions and introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first seeking leave of court.	The purpose of such a motion is to prevent opposing parties from asking prejudicial questions and introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first seeking leave of court.	Is the purpose of a motion in limine to prevent opposing parties from asking prejudicial questions and introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first seeking leave of court?
1169	Zidell v. Bird, 692 S.W.2d 550, 554 (Tex.App. 3 Dist.,1985)	7	Word "accrual," for purposes of statute of limitations, signifies date when one having right of action first becomes legally entitled to apply to court for relief by proceeding commenced therein; it signifies date when plaintiff first becomes entitled to sue defendant based upon legal wrong attributed to the latter.	The word "accrual" signifies the date when one having a right of action first becomes legally entitled to apply to a court for relief by a proceeding commenced therein; that is to say, it signifies the date when the plaintiff first becomes entitled to sue the defendant based upon a legal wrong attributed to the latter.	"Does a cause of action ""accrue"" when a plaintiff first becomes entitled to file a lawsuit based on a legal wrong attributed to a defendant?"
1170	Austin v. Abney Mills, 824 So. 2d 1137, 1154 (La. 2002)	14	To establish when the tort cause of action accrued in a long-latency occupational disease case, wherein the plaintiff suffers from the disease, the plaintiff must present evidence that the exposures were significant and such exposures later resulted in the manifestation of damages.	Therefore, in order to establish when the tort cause of action accrued in a long-latency occupational disease case, wherein the plaintiff suffers from the disease, the plaintiff must present evidence that the exposures were "significant and such exposures later result[ed] in the manifestation of damages"	Does the plaintiff's cause of action in a long-latency occupational disease case accrue when exposures are significant and such exposures later result in the manifestation of damages?
1173	Hourani v. Mirtchev, 796 F.3d 1, 16 (D.C. Cir. 2015)	21	The function of the act of state doctrine is to promote international comity, respect for the sovereignty of foreign nations on their own territory, and the avoidance of embarrassment to the executive branch in its conduct of foreign relations.	The function of the Act of State doctrine is to promote "international comity, respect for the sovereignty of foreign nations on their own territory, and the avoidance of embarrassment to the Executive Branch in its conduct of foreign relations."	"Does the act of state doctrine promote international comity, respect for the sovereignty of foreign nations on their own territory, and the avoidance of embarrassment to the Executive Branch in its conduct of foreign relations?"

1175	In re Vitamin C Antitrust Litig., 584 F. Supp. 2d 546, 550 (E.D.N.Y. 2008)	1	The act of state doctrine, which derives from both separation of powers and respect for the sovereignty of other nations, holds that the courts of one nation may not sit in judgment of the public acts of another sovereign within its own borders.	The act of state doctrine derives from both separation of powers and respect for the sovereignty of other nations. It holds that the courts of one nation may not sit in judgment of the public acts of another sovereign within its own borders.	Does the act of state doctrine hold that the courts of one nation may not sit in judgment of the public acts of another sovereign within its own borders?
1176	Brentson v. Chappell, 66 Ohio App. 3d 83, 87, 583 N.E.2d 434, 436 (1990)	1	"Motion in limine" seeks anticipatory ruling that evidence will probably be inadmissible, so it should be excluded until opponent demonstrates its propriety; ability of trial court to entertain such motions lies in inherent power and discretion of trial judge to control proceedings.	A motion in limine seeks an anticipatory ruling that evidence will probably be inadmissible, so it should be excluded until the opponent demonstrates its propriety. State v. Maurer (1984), 15 Ohio St.3d 239, 259, 15 OBR 379, 396, 473 N.E.2d 768, 787; Rich v. Quinn (1983), 13 Ohio App.3d 102, 105, 13 OBR 119, 122, 468 N.E.2d 365, 369. The ability of a trial court to entertain such motions lies in the inherent power and discretion of the trial judge to control the proceedings.	Does the ability of trial court to entertain motions in limine lie within a court's inherent power and discretion to control proceedings before it?
1177	Sculler v. Sculler, 348 N.J. Super. 374, 376 (2001)	1	As a general rule, in limine motions are inappropriate if they require the court to engage in an analysis of credibility or evidence yet to be presented, and in such cases, the motions should ordinarily be denied until a sufficient predicate is established.	As a general rule, in limine motions are inappropriate if they require the court to engage in an analysis of credibility or evidence yet to be presented. In such cases, the motions should ordinarily be denied until a sufficient predicate is established.	"Are in limine motions inappropriate if they require the court to engage in an analysis of credibility or evidence yet to be presented, and should the motions ordinarily be denied until a sufficient predicate is established?"
1178	Nelson v. Cyprus Bagdad Copper Corp., 119 F.3d 756, 762 (C.A.9 (Ariz.), 1997)	9	Unilateral promulgation by employer of arbitration provisions in employee handbook does not constitute knowing agreement on part of employee to waive statutory remedy provided by civil rights law.	We conclude that, in line with Lai, the unilateral promulgation by an employer of arbitration provisions in an Employee Handbook does not constitute a "knowing agreement" on the part of an employee to waive a statutory remedy provided by a civil rights law.	Does an employer's promulgation of arbitration provisions in an employee handbook constitute a knowing agreement on the part of an employee to waive a statutory remedy provided by a civil rights law?
1180	O.N.E. Shipping Ltd. v. Flota Mercante Grancolombiana, S.A., 830 F.2d 449, 453 (C.A.2 (N.Y.), 1987)	2	When causal chain between defendant's alleged conduct and plaintiff's injury cannot be determined without an inquiry into the motives of the foreign government, claims made under the antitrust laws must be dismissed.	[2] [3] When the causal chain between a defendant's alleged conduct and plaintiff's injury cannot be determined without an inquiry into the motives of the foreign government, claims made under the antitrust laws are dismissed.	"When causal chain between defendant's alleged conduct and plaintiff's injury cannot be determined without an inquiry into the motives of the foreign government, must claims made under the antitrust laws be dismissed?"

1182	World Wide Minerals, Ltd. v. Republic of Kazakhstan, 296 F.3d 1154, 1165, 353 U.S.App.D.C. 147, 158 (C.A.D.C.,2002)	8	When it applies, the act of state doctrine serves as a rule of decision for the courts of the United States, which requires that, in the process of deciding a case, the acts of foreign sovereigns taken within their own jurisdictions shall be deemed valid.	When it does apply, the doctrine serves as "a rule of decision for the courts of this country," id. at 405, 110 S.Ct. at 704 (quoting Ricaud v. American Metal Co., 246 U.S. 304, 310, 38 S.Ct. 312, 314, 62 L.Ed. 733 (1918)), which requires that, "in the process of deciding [a case], the acts of foreign sovereigns taken within their own jurisdictions shall be deemed valid," id. at 409, 110 S.Ct. at 707.	"Does the act of state doctrine serve as a rule of decision for the courts of the United States, which requires courts to deem valid the acts of foreign sovereigns taken within their own jurisdictions?"
1183	Dominicus Americana Bohio v. Gulf & W. Indus., 473 F. Supp. 680, 689 (S.D.N.Y. 1979)	10	To trigger application of the act of state doctrine, the government act concerned must be a public one such as a legislative enactment, regulatory decree, or executive use of the police powers.	In order to trigger application of the act of state doctrine, the government act concerned must be a public one such as a legislative enactment, regulatory decree, or executive use of the police powers.	"To trigger application of the act of state doctrine, should the government act concerned be a public one such as a legislative enactment, regulatory decree, or executive use of the police powers?"
1184	Hand v. Pettitt, 258 Ga. App. 170, 172 (2002)	6	A trial court has an absolute right to refuse to decide the admissibility of evidence, allegedly violative of some ordinary rule of evidence, prior to trial; if, however, the trial court decides to rule on the admissibility of evidence prior to trial, the court's determination of the admissibility is similar to a preliminary ruling on evidence at a pretrial conference, and it controls the subsequent course of action, unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice.	The trial court has an absolute right to refuse to decide the admissibility of evidence, allegedly violative of some ordinary rule of evidence, prior to trial. If, however, the trial court decides to rule on the admissibility of evidence prior to trial, the court's determination of [the] admissibility is similar "to a preliminary ruling on evidence at a pretrial conference" and it "controls the subsequent course of action, unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice."	Is a ruling on the admissibility of evidence prior to trial similar to a preliminary ruling?
1185	Matagorda Cty. v. Texas Ass'n of Ctys. Cty. Gov't Risk Mgmt. Pool, 975 S.W.2d 782, 785 (Tex. App. 1998)	7	Doctrine of "equitable subrogation" is given a liberal application and is broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, has paid a debt for which another was primarily liable and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter.	The doctrine of equitable subrogation is given a liberal application and is broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, has paid a debt for which another was primarily liable and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter.	Is equitable subrogation broadly applied to include instances in which one person pays a debt for which another is primarily liable?

1186	Drago v Tishman Const. Corp. of New York, No. 118390/00, 777 N.Y.S.2d 889, 894, 4 Misc. 3d 354, 360–61, 2004 N.Y. Slip Op. 24173, 2004 WL 1218957 (Sup Ct, May 28, 2004)	10	Absent a specific pre-trial motion in limine, in the general course, arguments concerning adherence to accepted procedures for collection, storage or analysis of scientific evidence relate to trial issues of foundation and weight of the evidence; if it is determined the evidence is admissible, the weight of the evidence is a question for the trier of fact.	Absent a specific pre-trial motion in limine, in the general course, "arguments concerning ... adherence to accepted procedures for collection, storage or analysis of such evidence 'relate[] to trial issues of foundation and weight of the evidence' " (People v. Kelly, 288 A.D.2d 695, 696, 732 N.Y.S.2d 484 [3rd Dept.2001], internal quotation marks and brackets omitted). If it is determined the evidence is admissible, the weight of the evidence is a question for the trier of fact	"Absent a specific pre-trial motion in limine, is the weight of the evidence a question for the trier of fact?"
1187	Aultman v. United Bank of Crawford, 259 Ga. 237, 237 (1989)	3	Rule that surety who has paid debt of principal is entitled to be substituted in place of creditor as to all securities held by him for payment of debt applies whether security is real or personal property. O.C.G.A. S 10-7-57.	OCGA 10-7-57 provides: "[a] surety who has paid the debt of his principal shall also be entitled to be substituted in place of the creditor as to all securities held by him for the payment of the debt." This provision is consistent with the rule adopted by most states 3 and applies whether the security is real or personal property.	Is the rule that a surety who has paid the debt of a principal is entitled to be substituted in place of creditor as to all securities held by him for payment of debt applies whether security is real or personal property?
1188	Dible v. City of Lafayette, 713 N.E.2d 269, 274 (Ind. 1999)	15	Although injunctive relief may be necessary to remedy governmental interference with landowner rights for a private purpose, equitable relief is generally unavailable as a matter of law to remedy an alleged taking for a public purpose if an action for compensation can be brought subsequent to the taking. U.S.C.A. Const.Amends. 5, 14.	Although injunctive relief may be necessary to remedy interference with landowner rights for a private purpose, 8 where an alleged taking occurs for what is clearly a public purpose, equitable relief is generally unavailable as a matter of law where an action for compensation can be brought subsequent to the taking.	"Is equitable relief available where an alleged taking occurs for what is clearly a public purpose, as a matter of law where an action for compensation can be brought subsequent to the taking?"
1189	U.S. v. Rezaq, 134 F.3d 1121, 1133, 328 U.S.App.D.C. 297, 309 (C.A.D.C.,1998)	9	International law imposes limits on state's ability to render its law applicable to persons or activities outside its borders; states may only exercise jurisdiction to prescribe under limited number of theories. Restatement (Third) of Foreign Relations Law S 401.	International law imposes limits on a state's "jurisdiction to prescribe," that is, its ability to render its law applicable to persons or activities outside its borders; states may only exercise jurisdiction to prescribe under a limited number of theories. See RESTATEMENT (THIRD) OF FOREIGN RELATIONS LAW 401 (1987).	Does international law impose limits on a state's ability to render its law applicable to persons or activities outside its borders?

1190	In re Stroud Oil Properties, 110 S.W.3d 18, 26 (Tex. App. 2002)	14	A cause of action to quiet title accrues when: (1) any instrument not void on its face that purports to convey any interest in or make any charge upon the land of a true owner, the invalidity of which would require proof is executed, or (2) when a person acquires title to real property which appears to be subject to a previously-executed instrument of this type.	Accordingly, a cause of action to quiet title accrues when: (1) any "instrument not void on its face that purports to convey any interest in or make any charge upon the land of a true owner, the invalidity of which would require proof" is executed; 6 or (2) when a person acquires title to real property which appears to be subject to a previously-executed instrument of this type.	When does a cause of action to quiet title accrue?
1194	Byers v. Labor & Indus. Review Comm'n, 208 Wis. 2d 388, 395 (1997)	5	Workers' Compensation Act (WCA) provides alternative to tort liability, making employers strictly liable for injuries encompassed within Act, but limiting liability to compensation established by statute. W.S.A. 102.03(2).	The WCA provides an alternative to tort liability, making employers strictly liable for injuries encompassed within the Act, but limiting the liability to compensation established by statute.	"Does the Workers Compensation Act (WCA) provide an alternative to tort liability, making employers strictly liable for injuries encompassed within the Act, but limiting liability to compensation established by statute?"
1195	U.S. v. Hawaii Cnty., 473 F.Supp. 261, 264–65 (D.C.Hawaii, 1979)	2	Generally, a court is to apply a law in effect at the time it renders its decision unless doing so would result in manifest injustice or there is statutory direction or legislative history to the contrary.	A court should apply the law in effect at the time it renders its decision, unless doing so would result in manifest injustice or there is statutory direction or legislative history to the contrary.	Should a court apply the law in effect at the time it renders its decision unless doing so would result in manifest injustice or there is statutory direction or legislative history to the contrary?
1196	Lampert Lumber Co. v. Joyce, 405 N.W.2d 423, 426 (Minn. 1987)	8	Whether dismissal without prejudice will be granted and on what terms is matter to be presented on motion to trial court, which then must weigh reasons given for requested nonsuit against any prejudice to other litigants. 48 M.S.A., Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41.01(2).	Whether a dismissal without prejudice will be granted and on what terms, is a matter to be presented on motion to the trial court, which then must weigh the reasons given for the requested nonsuit against any prejudice to the other litigants.	"Is the question of whether dismissal without prejudice will be granted and on what terms a matter to be presented on motion to a trial court, which then must weigh reasons given for requested nonsuit?"
1197	Jones v. Multi-Color Corp., 108 Ohio App. 3d 388, 394 (1995)	4	Workers' Compensation Act operates as a balance of mutual compromise between interests of employers and employees whereby employees relinquish their common-law remedy and accept lower benefit levels coupled with the greater assurance of recovery and employers give up their common-law defenses and are protected from unlimited liability. R.C. S 4123.01 et seq.	The Act [R.C. Chapter 4123] operates as a balance of mutual compromise between the interests of the employer and the employee whereby employees relinquish their common law remedy and accept lower benefit levels coupled with the greater assurance of recovery and employers give up their common law defenses and are protected from unlimited liability.	Does the Workers Compensation Act operate as a balance of mutual compromise between the interests of employers and employees?
1199	Ewan v. Hardison Law Firm, 465 S.W.3d 124, 129-30 (2014)	1	A plaintiff's right to voluntary dismissal without prejudice is subject to the exceptions expressly stated in the rule of civil procedure governing voluntary dismissal as well as to an implied exception which prohibits nonsuit when it would deprive the defendant of some vested right. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41.01(1).	Consequently, "[a] plaintiff's right to voluntary dismissal without prejudice is subject to the exceptions expressly stated in Rule 41.01(1) as well as to an implied exception which prohibits nonsuit when it would deprive the defendant of some vested right."	Is a plaintiff's right to voluntary dismissal without prejudice subject to an implied exception which prohibits nonsuit when it would deprive the defendant of some vested right?

1202	Burry & Son Homebuilders v. Ford, 310 S.C. 529, 531 (1992)	1	Generally, plaintiff is entitled to voluntary nonsuit without prejudice as matter of right unless legal prejudice is shown by defendant or important issues of public policy are present; once legal prejudice is found, granting or denial is within discretion of trial court. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(a)(1).	Generally, the plaintiff is entitled to a voluntary non-suit without prejudice as a matter of right unless legal prejudice is shown by the defendant or important issues of public policy are present. Bowen & Smoot v. Plumlee, 301 S.C. 262, 391 S.E.2d 558 (1990). 1 Once legal prejudice is found, the granting or denial is within the discretion of the trial court.	Is a plaintiff entitled to a voluntary nonsuit without prejudice as a matter of right unless there is a showing of legal prejudice to a defendant?
1203	Allstate Ins. Co. v. Eagle-Picher Indus., 410 N.W.2d 324, 328 (Minn. 1987)	6	Liability of employer to pay compensation benefits does not depend on whether employee does or does not have cause of action against third party, but exists in any event where injury, including occupational disease, arose out of and in course of employment, regardless of anyone's negligence. M.S.A. S 176.021, subd. 1.	The liability of the employer to pay compensation benefits clearly does not depend on whether the employee does or does not have a cause of action against a third party. The employer's liability exists in any event where the injury, including occupational disease, arose out of and in the course of employment, regardless of anyone's negligence.	Does the liability of employer to pay workers' compensation benefits depend on whether the employee has a cause of action against a third party?
1204	Cont'l Cas. Co. v. Am. Nat'l Bank & Tr. Co. of Chicago, 329 Ill. App. 3d 686, 693 (2002)	7	When a drawer who owes no debt to the bank writes a check payable to the bank's order, the drawer places that check in the bank's custody with the expectation that the bank will negotiate the check according to the drawer's wishes; therefore, a bank may not treat the check as bearer paper and blindly disburse the proceeds according to the instructions of any individual who happens to present the check to the bank.	In essence, when a drawer who owes no debt to the bank writes a check payable to the bank's order, the drawer places that check in the bank's custody with the expectation that the bank will negotiate the check according to the drawer's wishes. Therefore, a bank may not treat the check as bearer paper and blindly disburse the proceeds according to the instructions of any individual who happens to present the check to the bank.	Should a check made payable to a bank be treated according to the wishes of the drawer or be treated as bearer paper?
1205	Madison Acquisition Group, LLC v 7614 Fourth Real Estate Development, LLC, No. 19944/10, 2014-02792, 20 N.Y.S.3d 418, 420, 2015 N.Y. Slip Op. 08813, 2015 WL 7740407 (N.Y.A.D. 2 Dept., Dec. 02, 2015)	3	In general, absent a showing of special circumstances, a motion for a voluntary discontinuance should be granted without prejudice, but where the matter has been submitted to the court, the court may not order an action discontinued except upon the stipulation of all parties appearing in the action. McKinney's CPLR 3217(b).	In general, absent a showing of special circumstances ... a motion for a voluntary discontinuance should be granted without prejudice" (American Tr. Ins. Co. v. Roberson, 114 A.D.3d 821, 821, 980 N.Y.S.2d 778). However, where, as here, the matter has been submitted to the court, "the court may not order an action discontinued except upon the stipulation of all parties appearing in the action" (CPLR 3217[b]).	"When the matter has been submitted to the court, will the court order an action discontinued except upon the stipulation of all parties appearing in the action?"

1206	Terry v. Howard, 546 S.W.2d 66, 69 (Tex.Civ.App.-Dallas, 1976)	5	It is the absolute right of a party, subject only to the Rules of Civil Procedure, to take a nonsuit in a judicial proceeding when no affirmative relief is sought by defendant, and a timely motion for nonsuit cannot be denied by trial court.	We recognize that it is the absolute right of a party, subject only to the Rules of Civil Procedure, to take a nonsuit in a judicial proceeding when no affirmative relief is sought by the defendant, and that a timely motion for nonsuit cannot be denied by the trial court.	"Is it the absolute right of a party, subject only to the Rules of Civil Procedure, to take a nonsuit in a judicial proceeding when no affirmative relief is sought by a defendant?"
1211	Bounds v. Caudle, 549 S.W.2d 438, 444 (Tex. Civ. App.), writ granted (July 27, 1977), rev'd, 560 S.W.2d 925 (Tex. 1977)	9	Purpose of rule of civil procedure governing discovery is to permit inspection and copying of tangible things within opposing party's custody upon a showing of good cause; although courts are required to give such rule a liberal construction, it was never intended to allow fishing excursions and was not intended to allow invasion of opposing party's thinking processes or that of his expert witnesses. Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 167.	*444 [9] The purpose of Rule 167 is to permit inspection and copying of "tangible things" within the opposing party's custody upon a showing of good cause. Although we are required to give this rule a liberal construction, it was never intended to allow fishing excursions. Texhoma Stores, Inc. v. American Central Insurance Company, 424 S.W.2d 466 (Tex.Civ.App. Dallas 1968, writ ref'd n. r. e.). Rule 167 was not intended to allow invasion of the opposing party's thinking processes or that of his expert witnesses.	Is the purpose of a rule of civil procedure governing discovery to permit inspection and copying of tangible things within an opposing party's custody upon a showing of good cause?
1212	Church of Peace v. City of Rock Island, 357 Ill. App. 3d 471, 475 (Ill. App. Ct. 2005)	1	Taxes are an enforced proportional contribution levied by the state by virtue of its sovereignty for support of the government; in contrast, a service charge or fees are contractual in nature, either express or implied, and are compensation for the use of another's property, or of an improvement made by another, and their amount is determined by the cost of the property or improvement and the consideration of the return which such an expenditure should yield.	Taxes are "an enforced proportional contribution levied by the state by virtue of its sovereignty for support of the government." People ex rel. County of DuPage v. Smith, 21 Ill.2d 572, 583, 173 N.E.2d 485 (1961). In contrast, a service charge or fees are "contractual in nature, either express or implied, and are compensation for the use of another's property, or of an improvement made by another, and their amount is determined by the cost of the property or improvement and the consideration of the return which such an expenditure should yield.	What is the contrast between a tax and a fee?
1213	McCain Foods USA, Inc. v. Cent. Processors, Inc., 275 Kan. 1, 2, 61 P.3d 68, 70 (2002)	15	The pretrial order controls the course of the action unless modified to prevent manifest injustice; an issue or claim for relief that is not contained in the pretrial order should not be entertained by the trial court. Rules Civ.Proc., K.S.A. 60-216(e).	The pretrial order under K.S.A.2001 Supp. 60-216(e) controls the course of the action unless modified to prevent manifest injustice. An issue or claim for relief that is not contained in the pretrial order should not be entertained by the trial court.	"Unless modified to prevent manifest injustice, will the pretrial order control the course of action, and an issue or claim for relief that is not contained in pretrial order and should it be entertained by the trial court?"

1214	Highlands Ins. Co. v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 532 So. 2d 317, 323 (La. App. 1988)	9	Pretrial order controls subject and course of action unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice and much discretion is left to trial judge in determining whether to modify pretrial order.	The pre-trial order controls the subject and course of an action unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice. Much discretion is left to the trial judge in determining whether to modify the pre-trial order.	Does a pretrial order control the subject and course of action unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice and much discretion is left to trial judge in determining whether to modify a pretrial order?
1215	2nd Roc-Jersey Assocs. v. Town of Morristown, 158 N.J. 581, 597 (1999)	6	Core of definition of special assessment that makes imposition special assessment rather than general tax is not that benefit necessarily or primarily consists of physical improvements that are permanent in nature and are local in that they are adherent to or identified with specific individual properties that are directly and tangibly benefitted thereby, rather special assessment is used to provide combination of services and improvements that are intended and designed to benefit particular properties and demonstrably enhance the value and/or use or function of properties that are subject to special assessment.	We conclude that the core of the definition of a special assessment that makes the imposition a special assessment rather than a general tax is not that the benefit necessarily or primarily consists of physical improvements that are permanent in nature and are local in that they are adherent to or identified with specific individual properties that are directly and tangibly benefitted thereby. Rather, the special assessment is used to provide a combination of services and improvements that are intended and designed to benefit particular properties and demonstrably enhance *596 the value and/or the use or function of the properties that are subject to the special assessment.	What is the core of definition of special assessment that makes imposition a special assessment rather than general tax?
1216	Silicon Valley Taxpayers Ass'n v. Santa Clara Cty. Open Space Auth., 44 Cal. 4th 431, 442 (2008)	1	A "special assessment" is a compulsory charge placed by the state upon real property within a pre-determined district, made under express legislative authority for defraying in whole or in part the expense of a permanent public improvement therein, and levied against real property particularly and directly benefitted by a local improvement in order to pay the cost of that improvement.	A 45 special assessment is a " ' ' ' ' ' compulsory charge placed by the state upon real property within a pre-determined district, made under express legislative authority for defraying in whole or in part the expense of a permanent public improvement therein.... ' ' ' [Citation.] ' [Citation.] In this regard, a special assessment is 'levied against real property particularly and directly benefitted by a local improvement in order to pay the cost of that improvement.'	"Is ""special assessment"" a compulsory charge placed by the state upon real property within a predetermined district?"
1219	In re Det. of J.R., 80 Wash. App. 947, 947 (1996)	2	Plaintiff, after resting his case, may move for voluntary dismissal, without prejudice, upon showing of good cause and upon such terms and conditions as court deems proper. CR 41(a)(2).	A plaintiff, after resting his case, may move for a voluntary dismissal, without prejudice, upon showing of good cause and upon such terms and conditions as the court deems proper. CR 41(a)(2).	"Can a plaintiff, after resting his case, move for voluntary dismissal, without prejudice, upon showing of good cause and upon such terms and conditions as the court deems proper?"

1224	U.S. v. Terry, 707 F.3d 607, 613 (C.A.6 (Ohio), 2013)	7	Motives and consequences, not formalities, are the keys for determining whether a public official entered an agreement to accept a bribe, and the trier of fact is quite capable of deciding the intent with which words were spoken or actions taken as well as the reasonable construction given to them by the official and the payor. 18 U.S.C.A. S 201(b)(2).	"[M]otives and consequences, not formalities," are the keys for determining whether a public official entered an agreement to accept a bribe, and the trier of fact is "quite capable of deciding the intent with which words were spoken or actions taken as well as the reasonable construction given to them by the official and the payor.	What are the keys for determining whether a public official entered into an agreement to accept a bribe?
1227	Massey v. Haupt, 632 P.2d 824, 826 (Utah 1981)	3	Trial court may permit withdrawal or amendment of admissions when the presentation of the merits of the action shall be subverted thereby and the party who obtained the admissions fails to satisfy the court that withdrawal or amendment would prejudice him in maintaining his action or defense on the merits. Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 36(b).	In addition, pursuant to Rule 36(b), U.R.C.P., the court may permit withdrawal or amendment of the admissions when the presentation of the merits of the action will be subverted thereby and the party who obtained the admissions fails to satisfy the court that withdrawal or amendment of the admissions would prejudice him in maintaining his action or defense on the merits.	Does a trial court have discretion to permit withdrawal or amendment of admissions when presentation of merits of action will be subverted and party obtaining admissions fails to satisfy court that he will be prejudiced in maintaining his action?
1228	Hess v. Hess, 679 N.E.2d 153, 154 (Ind. App. 1997)	5	Unexpected and untimely withdrawal of counsel does not necessarily entitle a party to a continuance, but denial of continuance based on withdrawal of counsel may be error when the moving party is free from fault and his rights are likely to be prejudiced by the denial. Trial Procedure Rule 53.5.	The unexpected and untimely withdrawal of counsel does not necessarily entitle a party to a continuance. However, the denial of a continuance based on the withdrawal of counsel may be error when the moving party is free from fault and his rights are likely to be prejudiced by the denial.	"Does the unexpected and untimely withdrawal of counsel necessarily entitle a party to a continuance, and is the denial of continuance based on withdrawal of counsel error if the moving party is free from fault and his rights are likely to be prejudiced by the denial?"
1229	Baron v. Baron, 941 So. 2d 1233, 1236 (Fla. App. 2006)	4	It is generally reversible error to refuse to grant a motion for continuance when a party or his counsel is unavailable for physical or mental reasons, which unavailability prevents fair and adequate presentation of the party's case.	In addition, it is generally reversible error to refuse to grant a motion for continuance when a party or his counsel is unavailable for physical or mental reasons, which unavailability prevents fair and adequate presentation of the party's case.	Is it reversible error to refuse to grant a motion for continuance where a party or his counsel is unavailable for physical or mental reasons which prevent a fair and adequate presentation of the party's case?
1230	Progressive Life Ins. Co. v. Haygood, 53 Ga. App. 231, 232 (Ga.App. 1936)	12	Postponement of trial on account of absence of counsel who is engaged in trial of case in court of different circuit, without leave, lies in discretion of court, and postponement for such cause is not favored. Code 1933, S 81-1413.	"The postponement of the trial of a case on account of the absence of counsel therein, who is, without leave, engaged in the trial of a case in a court of a different circuit, is in the discretion of the court, and a postponement for such cause is not favored."	"Does postponement of trial on account of absence of counsel who is engaged in trial of case in court of different circuit, without leave, lie in discretion of a court, and is postponement for such cause not favored?"

1231	Wm. T. Thompson Co. v. General Nutrition Corp., Inc., 593 F.Supp. 1443, 1455 (D.C.Cal.,1984)	3	While litigant is under no duty to keep or retain every document in its possession once complaint is filed, it is under duty to preserve what it knows, or reasonably should know, is relevant in action, is reasonably calculated to lead to discovery of admissible evidence, is reasonably likely to be requested during discovery, and/or is subject of pending discovery request.	While a litigant is under no duty to keep or retain every document in its possession once a complaint is filed, it is under a duty to preserve what it knows, or reasonably should know, is relevant in the action, is reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence, is reasonably likely to be requested during discovery, and/or is the subject of a pending discovery request.	Does the law impose upon litigants a duty to preserve evidence which they know or should know is relevant in the action or is reasonably likely to be requested during discovery?
1232	Kessinger Hunter Mgmt. Co. v. Davis, 782 S.W.2d 426, 428 (Mo. Ct. App. 1989)	2	When attorney legislator is attending session of general assembly and he has filed motion for legislative continuance, trial court may determine whether his presence is necessary to fair and proper trial; if it is, continuance will be granted. V.A.M.R. 65.06.	When an attorney-legislator is attending a session of the general assembly and he has filed a motion for a Rule 65.06 continuance, the trial court may determine whether his presence is necessary to a fair and proper trial. Kyger, 207 S.W.2d at 49; Todd, 215 S.W.2d at 466. If it is, the continuance will be granted.	"When attorney legislator is attending session of general assembly and he files a motion for continuance, can the trial court determine whether his presence is necessary to a fair and proper trial?"
1233	Wibbels v. Unick, 426 N.W.2d 244, 248, 229 Neb. 184, 189 (Neb., 1988)	5	Party's failure to make timely and appropriate response to request for admission constitutes admission of subject matter of request, which is conclusively established, unless, on motion, court permits withdrawal of admission. Sup.Ct.Rules, Discovery Rule 36.	This court has recognized and adopted the rule that a party's failure to make a timely and appropriate response to a request for admission constitutes an admission of the subject matter of the request, which matter is conclusively established unless, on motion, the court permits withdrawal of the admission.	"Does a party's failure to make a timely and appropriate response to a request for admission constitute an admission of the subject matter of the request, unless, on motion, the court permits withdrawal of the admission?"
1235	Jackson v. Nemdegelt, 302 Ga. App. 767, 771 (2010)	7	Matters deemed admitted, as a result of a party's failure to respond to requests for admission, become solemn admissions in judicio and are conclusive as a matter of law on the matters stated and cannot be contradicted by other evidence unless the admissions are withdrawn or amended on formal motion. West's Ga.Code Ann. S 9-11-36.	And matters deemed admitted 657 pursuant to OCGA § 9–11–36 “become solemn admissions in judicio and are conclusive as a matter of law on the matters stated and cannot be contradicted by other evidence unless the admissions are withdrawn or amended on formal motion.”	Does matters deemed admitted become solemn admissions in judicio and are conclusive as a matter of law on the matters stated and cannot be contradicted by other evidence unless the admissions are withdrawn or amended on formal motion?
1237	Bezou v. Bezou, 2015-1879 (La. App. 1 Cir. 9/16/16), 203 So. 3d 488, 500 (La. App. 2016)	15	The trial court has wide discretion in determining whether to award attorney's fees based on a party's failure to admit the truth of any matter that is later proved to be genuine. La. Code Civ. Proc. Ann. art. 1472.	The trial court has wide discretion in determining whether to award attorney's fees based on a party's failure to admit the truth of any matter that is later proved to be genuine.	Does the court have wide discretion in determining whether to award attorney's fees based on a party's failure to admit the truth of any matter that is later proved to be genuine?

1242	Romano v Steelcase Inc., No. 2006-2233, 907 N.Y.S.2d 650, 652, 30 Misc. 3d 426, 428, 2010 N.Y. Slip Op. 20388, 2010 WL 3703242 (Sup Ct, Sep. 21, 2010)	6	In an action seeking damages for personal injuries, discovery is generally permitted with respect to materials that may be relevant both to the issue of damages and the extent of a plaintiff's injury including a plaintiff's claim for loss of enjoyment of life. McKinney's CPLR 3101.	Accordingly, in an action seeking damages for personal injuries, discovery is generally permitted with respect to materials that may be relevant both to the issue of damages and the extent of a plaintiff's injury (see: Walker v. City of New York, 205 A.D.2d 755, 614 N.Y.S.2d 31 [2 Dept. 1994]). including a plaintiff's claim for loss of enjoyment of life	Is discovery generally permitted with respect to materials that can be relevant both to the issue of damages and the extent of a plaintiff's injury including a plaintiff's claim for loss of enjoyment of life?
1244	Dresser Industries, Inc. v. Solito, 668 S.W.2d 893, 895 (Tex.App. 14 Dist.,1984)	2	In cases involving international parties and witnesses the potential for abuse of discovery is great and the trial judge must be especially sensitive to actual need for request of depositions and alternative means of taking the depositions. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 186b, 201, 201, subds. 4,5.	In cases such as the one before us involving international parties and witness, the potential for abuse in the discovery process is very great. The trial judge must be especially sensitive to the (1) actual need for the requested depositions and (2) alternative means of taking the depositions	"In cases involving international parties and witnesses, is the potential for abuse of discovery great and the trial judge must be especially sensitive?"
1245	Maddox v. Stone, 174 Md. App. 489, 506-07 (2007)	9	The rule requiring the entry of scheduling orders is intended to promote the efficient management of the trial court's docket, not to erect additional opportunities for a court to dismiss meritorious claims for lack of strict compliance with arbitrary deadlines. Md.Rule 2-504.	The rule requiring the entry of scheduling orders was intended to promote the efficient management of the trial court's docket, not to erect additional opportunities for a court to dismiss meritorious claims for lack of strict compliance with arbitrary deadlines.	Is the rule requiring the entry of scheduling orders intended to promote the efficient management of the trial court's docket?
1246	Feldman v. Miller, 106 N.Y.S.2d 684, 686 (1951)	3	The deposition procedure was never intended to remove a weapon which would defeat an attempted fraud, nor to require the innocent to provide the other party with the way out of an inconsistent situation by disclosure of proof far in advance of trial for such uses as he may make thereof. Civil Practice Act, S 288.	The law, Sec. 288, never intended to remove a weapon which, in whole or in part, would defeat an attempted fraud; nor did it intend to require the innocent to provide the other party with 'the way out', of an inconsistent situation by a disclosure of proof far in advance of the trial for such uses as he may make thereof.	Is the deposition procedure never intended to remove a weapon which would defeat an attempted fraud?
1247	Gottlieb v. Merrigan, 119 A.D.3d 1054, 1056, 990 N.Y.S.2d 109, 112 (2014)	3	Issue of whether long-arm jurisdiction exists often presents complex questions; discovery is, therefore, desirable, indeed may be essential, and should quite probably lead to a more accurate judgment than one made solely on the basis of inconclusive preliminary affidavits. McKinney's CPLR 302(a)(1).	In that regard, we note that the issue of whether long-arm jurisdiction exists often presents complex questions; "[d]iscovery is, therefore, desirable, indeed may be essential, and should quite probably lead to a more accurate judgment than one made solely on the basis of inconclusive preliminary affidavits"	Does the issue of whether a long-arm jurisdiction exist often present complex questions?

1248	Friedman v. Heart Inst. of Port St. Lucie, Inc., 863 So. 2d 189, 194 (Fla. 2003)	8	While the general rule is that personal financial information is ordinarily discoverable only in aid of execution after judgment has been entered, where materials sought by a party would appear to be relevant to the subject matter of the pending action, the information is fully discoverable.	While the general rule in Florida is that personal financial information is ordinarily discoverable only in aid of execution after judgment has been entered, see Gruman v. Bankers Trust Co., 379 So.2d 658, 659 (Fla. 3d DCA 1980); Cooper v. Fulton, 117 So.2d 33, 35-36 (Fla. 3d DCA 1960), where materials sought by a party "would appear to be relevant to the subject matter of the pending action," the information is fully discoverable	"Where materials sought by a party would appear to be relevant to the subject matter of the pending action, is the information fully discoverable?"
1250	Stelly v. Papania, 927 S.W.2d 620, 622 (Tex., 1996)	3	Good cause is threshold standard for withdrawal of deemed admissions; party can establish good cause by showing that its failure to answer was accidental or the result of a mistake, rather than intentional or the result of conscious indifference. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 169, subd. 2.	After the rule was amended in 1988, "good cause" became the threshold standard for withdrawal of deemed admissions. Halton, 792 S.W.2d at 465. A party can establish good cause by showing that its failure to answer was accidental or the result of a mistake, rather than intentional or the result of conscious indifference.	Is good cause a threshold standard for withdrawal of deemed admissions and can a party establish good cause by showing that its failure to answer was accidental or the result of a mistake?
1251	Marine Midland Bank, N.A. v. Miller, 664 F.2d 899, 904 (2d Cir. 1981)	8	In deciding pretrial motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, district court has considerable procedural leeway and may determine motion on basis of affidavits alone or may permit discovery in aid of motion or may conduct evidentiary hearing on merits of motion. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc. Rule 12(b)(2), 28 U.S.C.A.	In deciding a pretrial motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction a district court has considerable procedural leeway. It may determine the motion on the basis of affidavits alone; or it may permit discovery in aid of the motion; or it may conduct an evidentiary hearing on the merits of the motion.	Does the court have discretion to decide a pretrial motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction on the basis of affidavits alone?
1254	Texaco v. R.R. Comm'n, 583 S.W.2d 307, 310 (Tex. 1979)	3	While it is an elementary rule of property that a landowner is entitled to an opportunity to produce his fair share of oil from a common reservoir, such rule is qualified by both the rule of capture and Railroad Commission's authority to prevent waste.	While Texaco and Frost are correct that it is an elementary rule of property that a landowner is entitled to an opportunity to produce his fair share of oil from a common reservoir, this rule is qualified by both the rule of capture and the Commission's authority to prevent waste.	Is the rule of property that a landowner is entitled to an opportunity to produce his fair share of oil from a common reservoir qualified by both the rule of capture and the Commission's authority to prevent waste?
1259	Poteat v. St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co., 277 Mont. 117, 119 (1996)	1	When deciding motion to dismiss based on lack of subject matter jurisdiction, district court must determine whether complaint states facts that, if true, would vest district court with subject matter jurisdiction.	When deciding a motion to dismiss based on lack of subject matter jurisdiction, a district court must determine whether the complaint states facts that, if true, would vest the district court with subject matter jurisdiction.	"On a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, does a district court determine whether the complaint states facts that, if true, would vest the court with the subject matter jurisdiction?"

1260	Estate of Lewis v. Lewis, 275 P.3d 615, 623, 229 Ariz. 316, 324 (Ariz.App. Div. 2, 2012)	7	Absent a showing of willfulness or something akin to it, a judgment based on the failure of a nonresident litigant to appear for a pre-trial hearing, where such litigant is represented at the hearing by his attorneys of record, constitutes reversible error. 16 A.R.S. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 16(f).	Absent a showing of willfulness or something akin to it, a judgment based on "the failure of a nonresident litigant to appear for [a] pre-trial hearing, where such litigant is represented at the hearing by his attorneys of record," constitutes reversible error.	"Absent a showing of willfulness or something akin to it, does a judgment based on the failure of a nonresident litigant to appear for a pre-trial hearing constitute reversible error?"
1261	Brandt v. Brandt, 119 R.I. 607, 609 (1978)	2	Power to continue is inherent in authority of court to hear and determine cases before it, and court may grant or deny motion properly before it or, absent statutory provisions to contrary, may sua sponte order continuance when it is, in eyes of court, necessary. Gen.Laws 1956, SS 8-10-38, 15-11-1, 15-11-2.	It is well settled that the power to continue is inherent in the authority of a court to hear and determine the cases before it. See Lemoine v. Martineau, 115 R.I. 233, 238, 342 A.2d 616, 620 (1975). A court may grant or deny a motion properly before it or, absent statutory provisions to the contrary, may sua sponte order a continuance when it is, in the eyes of the court, necessary.	"Is the power to continue inherent in authority of a court to hear and determine cases before it, and a court may grant or deny a motion properly before it?"
1263	Bloxham v. Saldinger, 175 Cal. Rptr. 3d 650, 667-68 (2014)	11	Since requests for admissions are not limited to matters within personal knowledge of the responding party, that party has a duty to make a reasonable investigation of the facts before answering items which do not fall within his personal knowledge. Cal. Civ. Proc. Code S 2033.220(c).	"[S]ince requests for admissions are not limited to matters within personal knowledge *752 of the responding party, that party has a duty to make a reasonable investigation of the facts before answering items which do not fall within his personal knowledge.	"Since requests for admissions are not limited to matters within personal knowledge of the responding party, does the party has a duty to make a reasonable investigation of the facts before answering items which do not fall within his personal knowledge?"
1268	Lasko v. Meier, 394 Ill. 71, 73-74 (1946)	2	A verdict will cure not only all formal and purely technical defects and clerical errors in a complaint, but will also cure any defect in failing to allege or in alleging defectively any substantial facts essential to a right of action, if issue joined is such as necessarily requires, on trial, proof of facts so omitted or imperfectly stated, and if such facts can be implied from allegations of complaint by fair and reasonable intentment.	A verdict will cure not only all formal and purely technical defects and clerical errors in a complaint, but will also cure any defect in failing to allege or in alleging defectively or imperfectly any substantial *74 facts which are essential to a right of action, if the issue joined is such as necessarily requires, on the trial, proof of the facts so omitted or imperfectly stated and if such facts can be implied from the allegations of the complaint by fair and reasonable intentment.	Will a verdict cure technical defects in a complaint?

1270	Kenny v. Banks, 289 Conn. 529, 532–33 (2008)	4	When a defendant challenges personal jurisdiction in a motion to dismiss, the court must undertake a two-part inquiry to determine the propriety of its exercising such jurisdiction over the defendant; trial court must first decide whether the applicable state long-arm statute authorizes the assertion of jurisdiction over the defendant, and if the statutory requirements are met, its second obligation is then to decide whether the exercise of jurisdiction over the defendant would violate constitutional principles of due process. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 14.	"When a defendant challenges personal jurisdiction in a motion to dismiss, the court must undertake a two part inquiry to determine the propriety of its exercising such jurisdiction over the defendant. The trial court must first decide whether the applicable state long-arm statute authorizes the assertion of jurisdiction over the [defendant]. If the statutory requirements [are] met, its second obligation [is] then to decide whether the exercise of jurisdiction over the [defendant] would violate constitutional principles of due process....	"When a defendant challenges personal jurisdiction in a motion to dismiss, do the court undertake a two part inquiry to determine the propriety of its exercising such jurisdiction over the defendant?"
1271	Wilson v. McNeely, 690 S.E.2d 512, 513, 302 Ga.App. 213, 214 (Ga.App., 2010)	2	The trial court must have the power to impose appropriate sanctions to make effective its pre-trial orders; contempt may at times be proper, whereas, in an extreme case, the plaintiff's action may be dismissed or the defendant precluded from introducing evidence relating to his defense, although these remedies are too drastic if less harsh sanctions are appropriate.	After recognizing that the trial court must have the power "to impose appropriate sanctions to make effective its pre-trial orders," the Supreme Court noted that "[c]ontempt may at times be proper; and in an extreme case the plaintiff's action may be dismissed or the defendant precluded from introducing evidence relating to his defense, but these remedies are too drastic if less harsh sanctions are appropriate.' "	Can contempt be proper as a sanction for a violation of a trial court's pretrial order?
1274	Azimi v. Johns, 254 P.3d 1054, 1067 (Alaska 2011)	22	Before a litigation-ending order is entered on the basis of a pro se litigant's failure to prosecute or to abide by court rules, the court must give the litigant notice and an adequate opportunity to cure the defects in his pleadings. Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 37, 41(b).	In addition, we have long held that before a litigation- ending order is entered on the basis of a pro se litigant's failure to prosecute or to abide by court rules, the court must give the litigant notice and an adequate opportunity to cure the defects in his pleadings.	"Before a litigation-ending order is entered on the basis of a pro se litigant's failure to prosecute or to abide by court rules, should the court give the litigant notice and an adequate opportunity to cure?"
1275	Chappelle v. S. Florida Guardianship Program, 169 So. 3d 291, 294 (Fla. App. 2015)	3	Before a court may dismiss a cause as a sanction, it must first consider the six factors delineated in Kozel v. Ostendorf for entering dismissal as sanction and set forth explicit findings of fact in the order that imposes the sanction of dismissal.	Before a court may dismiss a cause as a sanction, it must first consider the six factors delineated in Kozel v. Ostendorf, 629 So.2d 817 (Fla.1993), and set forth explicit findings of fact in the order that imposes the sanction of dismissal.	"Before a court may dismiss a cause as a sanction for willful noncompliance with court order, should it first consider the appropriate factors and set forth explicit findings of fact in the order that imposes the sanction of dismissal?"

1276	Smith v. Sidney Moncrief Pontiac, Buick, GMC Co., 353 Ark. 701, 710 (2003)	3	It is mandatory for the trial court to dismiss the action without prejudice if service is not made within 120 days of filing the complaint and no motion to extend is timely made. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 4(i).	Pursuant to Rule 4(i) of the Arkansas Rules of Civil Procedure, it is also mandatory for the trial court to dismiss the action without prejudice if service is not made within 120 days of filing the complaint and no motion to extend is timely made.	Is it mandatory for the trial court to dismiss the action without prejudice if service is not made within 120 days of filing the complaint and no motion to extend is timely made?
1280	McGee v. Macambo Lounge, 158 Mich. App. 282, 287 (1987)	3	Provisions of court rule providing that failure to appear for duly scheduled pretrial conference shall constitute default were sufficiently general to permit default for nonappearance of insurance representative who was properly ordered to appear at settlement conference. GCR 1963, 301.9.	Failure to appear at a duly scheduled pretrial conference, ... shall constitute a default to which provisions of GCR 520 shall be applicable." [3] The provisions of GCR 1963, 301.9 were sufficiently general to permit default for the nonappearance of an insurance representative who was properly ordered to appear at a settlement conference.	Shall provisions of court rule providing that failure to appear for duly scheduled pretrial conference constitute default?
1281	Tobacco Superstore v. Darrough, 362 Ark. 103, 116 (Ark., 2005)	10	It is mandatory for the trial court to dismiss the action without prejudice if service is not made within 120 days of the filing of the complaint and no motion to extend is timely made. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 4(i).	Pursuant to Rule 4(i) of the Rules of Civil Procedure, it is also mandatory for the trial court to dismiss the action without prejudice if service is not made within 120 days of the filing of the complaint and no motion to extend is timely made.	Is it mandatory for the trial court to dismiss the action without prejudice if service is not made within 120 days of the filing of the complaint and no motion to extend is timely made?
1283	Garcia v. Mireles, 14 S.W.3d 839, 842 (Tex. App. 2000)	8	Conclusion that disobedience of its order was willful or consciously indifferent is sufficient basis for the trial court to impose the ultimate sanction of dismissing the case or striking pleadings and rendering judgment by default.	The conclusion that disobedience of its order was willful or consciously indifferent is sufficient basis for the trial court to impose the ultimate sanction of dismissing the case or striking pleadings and rendering judgment by default.	Is the conclusion that disobedience of its order was willful or consciously indifferent a sufficient basis for the trial court to impose the ultimate sanction of dismissing the case?
1284	Proctor v. Poole, 233 F.R.D. 323, 325 (W.D.N.Y., 2006)	2	Although dismissal as a sanction for failure to comply with court-ordered discovery is a drastic remedy that should be imposed only in extreme circumstances, this severe sanction may well be warranted, even in the case of pro se litigants, when, due to willfulness or bad faith, they fail to comply with discovery orders after being warned that noncompliance can result in dismissal. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 37, 28 U.S.C.A.	Although "dismissal under Fed.R.Civ.P. 37 is a drastic remedy that should be imposed only in extreme circumstances," this severe sanction may well be warranted, even in the case of pro se litigants, when, "due to willfulness or bad faith," they fail to comply with discovery orders after being warned that noncompliance can result in dismissal.	"While a trial court clearly has power to dismiss a case as a sanction for plaintiff's failure to comply with a court order, is dismissal a drastic remedy?"

1285	Bologna v. Schlanger, 995 So. 2d 526, 528 (Fla. App. 2008)	2	Dismissal for fraud is warranted where it can be demonstrated, clearly and convincingly, that a party has sentiently set in motion some unconscionable scheme calculated to interfere with the judicial system's ability to impartially adjudicate a matter by improperly influencing the trier of fact or unfairly hampering the presentation of the opposing party's claim or defense.	Dismissal for fraud is warranted "where 'it can be demonstrated, clearly and convincingly, that a party has sentiently set in motion some unconscionable scheme calculated to interfere with the judicial system's ability to impartially adjudicate a matter by improperly influencing the trier of fact or unfairly hampering the presentation of the opposing party's claim or defense.' "	"Is dismissal for fraud warranted where it can be demonstrated, clearly and convincingly?"
1286	Giglio v. NTIMP, Inc., 86 A.D.3d 301, 310, 926 N.Y.S.2d 546 (2011)	9	In instances where an answer is not demanded in response to a cross claim, the denial that is "deemed" to have been made will foreclose any motion for a default judgment on the cross claim and, by extension, foreclose dismissal of such a cross claim even where no default motion is made within one year. McKinney's CPLR 3011, 3215(c).	In instances where an answer is not demanded in response to a cross claim, the denial that is "deemed" to have been made under CPLR 3011 will foreclose any motion for a default judgment on the cross claim and, by extension, foreclose dismissal of such a cross claim even where no default motion is made within one year as required by CPLR 3215 (c).	"In instances where an answer is not demanded in response to a cross claim, will the denial that is ""deemed"" to have been made foreclose any motion for a default judgment?"
1287	Dick v. Am. Motors Sales Corp., 14 Ohio App. 3d 322, 323 (1984)	2	Trial court has authority to enforce compliance with its orders and to control its process, and where bad faith on part of prosecution intervenes, has the power to punish such abuse in appropriate case by applying penalty of dismissal.	A trial court has the authority to enforce compliance with its orders and to control its process, and where bad faith on the part of the prosecution intervenes, has the power to punish such abuse in the appropriate case, by applying a penalty of dismissal.	"Where bad faith on part of prosecution intervenes, does the court have the power to punish such abuse in an appropriate case by applying a penalty of dismissal?"
1290	Avery v. New Hampshire Dep't of Educ., 162 N.H. 604, 606 (2011)	2	When the motion to dismiss does not challenge the sufficiency of petitioners' legal claim but, instead, raises certain defenses, trial court must look beyond petitioners' unsubstantiated allegations and determine, based on the facts, whether petitioners have sufficiently demonstrated their right to claim relief.	"When the motion to dismiss does not challenge the sufficiency of the [petitioners'] legal claim but, instead, raises certain defenses, the trial court must look beyond the [petitioners'] unsubstantiated allegations and determine, based on the facts, whether the [petitioners] ha[ve] sufficiently demonstrated [their] right to claim relief."	Does the motion to dismiss challenge the sufficiency of petitioners' legal claim or raise certain defenses?
1292	Mathews v. City of Atlanta, 167 Ga. App. 168, 169 (1983)	3	Generally, a dismissal with prejudice is warranted only where a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct by plaintiff exists and a lesser sanction would not better serve interest or justice.	Generally, a dismissal with prejudice is warranted only where a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct by the plaintiff exists and a lesser sanction would not better serve the interest of justice.	Is a dismissal with prejudice warranted only where a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct by plaintiff exists and a lesser sanction would not better serve an interest or justice?

1293	Frenzel v. Browning-Ferris Industries, 780 S.W.2d 844, 845 (Tex. App. 1989)	2	In determining whether to dismiss cause for want of prosecution, trial court may consider entire history of case, including length of time case was on file, amount of activity in the case, request for trial setting and existence of reasonable excuses for delay.	In determining whether to dismiss a cause for want of prosecution, a trial court may consider the entire history of the case, including the length of time the case was on file, the amount of activity in the case, the request for a trial setting, and the existence of reasonable excuses for delay.	"Will a court consider whether a trial setting was requested, in determining whether to dismiss an action for want of prosecution?"
1294	Wood v. Guilford Cnty., 558 S.E.2d 490, 494, 355 N.C. 161, 166 (N.C.,2002)	7	Dismissal based on failure to state a claim is proper when one of the following three conditions is satisfied: (1) the complaint on its face reveals that no law supports the plaintiff's claim; (2) the complaint on its face reveals the absence of facts sufficient to make a good claim; or (3) the complaint discloses some fact that necessarily defeats the plaintiff's claim. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(6), G.S. 5 8C-1.	Dismissal under Rule 12(b) (6) is proper when one of the following three conditions is satisfied: (1) the complaint on its face reveals that no law supports the plaintiff's claim; (2) the complaint on its face reveals the absence of facts sufficient to make a good claim; or (3) the complaint discloses some fact that necessarily defeats the plaintiff's claim.	"When the complaint on its face reveals that no law supports the claim or discloses facts that necessarily defeat the claim, is dismissal proper?"
1297	Hall v. Metro. Dade Cty., 760 So. 2d 1051, 1052 (Fla. App. 2000)	2	The inquiry on a motion to dismiss for lack of prosecution involves a two-step inquiry: first, the defendant is required to show there has been no record activity for the year preceding the motion, and second, if there has been no record activity, the plaintiff has an opportunity to establish good cause why the action should not be dismissed. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.420(e).	The inquiry on a motion to dismiss for lack of prosecution involves a two-step inquiry. "First, the defendant is required to show there has been no record activity for the year preceding the motion. Second, if there has been no record activity, the plaintiff has an opportunity to establish good cause why the action should not be dismissed."	Does the plaintiff have an opportunity to establish good cause why the action should not be dismissed if there has been no record activity in the inquiry on a motion to dismiss for lack of prosecution?
1298	McCall v. D.C. Hous. Auth., 126 A.3d 701, 704 (D.C. 2015)	2	To survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, a complaint must set forth sufficient facts to establish the elements of a legally cognizable claim, containing sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. Civil Rule 12(b)(6).	"To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must set forth sufficient facts to establish the elements of a legally cognizable claim," Woods v. District of Columbia, 63 A.3d 551, 552-53 (D.C.2013), containing "sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to 'state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face."	"To survive a motion to dismiss, should a complaint set forth sufficient facts to establish the elements of a legally cognizable claim?"
1299	Mitchell v. Pruden, 251 N.C. App. 554, 559 (2017)	4	A complaint is not sufficient to withstand a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim if an insurmountable bar to recovery appears on the face of the complaint; such an insurmountable bar may consist of an absence of law to support a claim, an absence of facts sufficient to make a good claim, or the disclosure of some fact that necessarily defeats the claim. N.C. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).	A complaint is not sufficient to withstand a motion to dismiss if an insurmountable bar to recovery appears on the face of the complaint. Such an insurmountable bar may consist of an absence of law to support a claim, an absence of facts sufficient to make a good claim, or the disclosure of some fact that necessarily defeats the claim.	Is a complaint not sufficient to withstand a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim if an insurmountable bar to recovery appears on the face of the complaint?

1300	Spencer v. Beck, 358 Mont. 295, 299 (Mont., 2010)	9	When a court is inclined to make a dispositive ruling on an issue not raised by the parties, the court must first afford the parties fair notice and an opportunity to present their positions before acting on its own initiative to dismiss a petition as untimely.	When a court is inclined to make such a dispositive ruling on an issue not raised by the parties, the court must first "afford the parties fair notice and an opportunity to present their positions before acting on its own initiative to dismiss a petition as untimely."	Should a court first afford the parties fair notice and an opportunity to present their positions before acting on its own initiative to dismiss a petition as untimely?
1301	Osagie v. Peakload Temp. Services, 91 S.W.3d 326, 329 (Tenn. Ct. App., 2002)	4	Purpose of rule governing dismissal of claim for failure to prosecute is to enable court to manage its own docket, and to protect defendants against plaintiffs who are unwilling to put their claims to the test, but determined to subject them to the continuing threat of an eventual judgment. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41.02.	Osagie's wage claim to be a dismissal for failure to prosecute under rule 41.02 of the Rules of Civil Procedure. This rule is necessary to enable the court to manage its own docket, and to protect defendants against plaintiffs who are unwilling to put their claims to the test, but determined to subject them to the continuing threat of an eventual judgment.	Does the purpose of rules governing dismissal of a claim for failure to prosecute to protect defendants against plaintiffs who are unwilling to put their claims to the test?
1303	Kamhi v EmblemHealth, No. 5486/11, 944 N.Y.S.2d 821, 825, 37 Misc. 3d 171, 176, 2012 N.Y. Slip Op. 22073, 2012 WL 966939 (Sup Ct, Mar. 21, 2012)	1	Where evidentiary material is adduced in support of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action, the court is required to determine whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action, not whether he or she has stated one. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	Where evidentiary material is adduced in support a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7), "the court is required to determine whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action, not whether [he or] she has stated one"	"Where evidentiary material is adduced in support of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action, is the court required to determine whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action?"
1304	Wright v. Texas Dept. of Criminal Justice-Institutional Div., 137 S.W.3d 693, 696 (Tex.App. Houston [1 Dist.],2004)	7	A trial court can dismiss for want of prosecution under the following three situations: (1) when a party seeking affirmative relief fails to appear for any hearing or trial of which the party had notice, (2) when the case is not disposed of within the time standards of the supreme court, or (3) when the trial court finds that the case has not been prosecuted with due diligence. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a.	A trial court can dismiss for want of prosecution under the following three situations: (1) when a party seeking affirmative relief fails to appear for any hearing or trial of which the party had notice, (2) when the case is not disposed of within the time standards of the supreme court, or (3) when the trial court finds that the case has not been prosecuted with due diligence.	Can a court dismiss for want of prosecution when the case is not disposed of within the time standards of the Supreme Court?
1305	Annett v. Am. Honda Motor Co., 548 N.W.2d 798, 803 (S.D. 1996)	6	Dismissal of cause of action for failure to prosecute should be granted when, after considering all the facts and circumstances of particular case, the plaintiff can be charged with lack of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude. SDCL 15-11-11.	Finally, dismissal of the cause of action for failure to prosecute should be granted when, after considering all the facts and circumstances of the particular case, the plaintiff can be charged with lack of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude.	When the plaintiff can be charged with lack of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude should dismissal of the cause of action for failure to prosecute be granted?

1311	Annett v. Am. Honda Motor Co., 548 N.W.2d 798, 803 (S.D. 1996)	6	Dismissal of cause of action for failure to prosecute should be granted when, after considering all the facts and circumstances of particular case, the plaintiff can be charged with lack of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude. SDCL 15-11-11.	Finally, dismissal of the cause of action for failure to prosecute should be granted when, after considering all the facts and circumstances of the particular case, the plaintiff can be charged with lack of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude.	"Should dismissal of cause of action for failure to prosecute be granted when, the plaintiff can be charged with lack of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude?"
1312	James Bros. Lumber Co. v. Union Banking & Tr. Co. of Du Bois, Pa., 432 Pa. 129, 132 (1968)	1	Court may enter judgment of non pros. when party has shown want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude and there has been no compelling reason for delay, and delay has caused some prejudice to adverse party, such as death of or unexplained absence of material witness.	A Court may properly enter a judgment of non pros. when a party to the proceeding has shown a want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude, and there has been no compelling reason for the delay, and the delay has caused some prejudice to the adverse party, such as the death of or unexplained absence of material witnesses.	Can court enter judgment non pros where delay has caused prejudice to adverse party?
1313	Togo's Eatery of Florida v. Frohlich, 526 So. 2d 999, 1002 (Fla.App. 1 Dist., 1988)	5	Good cause which will avoid dismissal for failure to prosecute must include contact with opposing party and some form of excusable conduct other than negligence or inattention to pleading deadlines. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.420(e).	The good cause which will avoid dismissal for failure to prosecute must include contact with the opposing party and some form of excusable conduct other than negligence or inattention to pleading deadlines.	"Should good cause which will avoid dismissal for failure to prosecute, include contact with opposing party and some form of excusable conduct other than negligence or inattention to pleading deadlines?"
1314	Brown v. Plainfield Cmty. Consol. Dist. 202, 522 F. Supp. 2d 1068, 1072 (N.D. Ill. 2007)	4	To survive motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, plaintiff must plead enough to nudge their claims across the line from conceivable to plausible; pleading must contain something more than a statement of facts that merely creates a suspicion of a legally cognizable right of action. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 12(b)(6), 28 U.S.C.A.	To survive a motion to dismiss, a plaintiff must plead enough to "nudge[] their claims across the line from conceivable to plausible" Bell Atlantic, 127 S.Ct. at 1974. "The pleading must contain something more [than] a statement of facts that merely creates a suspicion [of] a legally cognizable right of action."	Should a pleading contain something more than a statement of facts that merely creates a suspicion of a legally cognizable right?
1315	Accredited Aides Plus v Program Risk Management, No. 522231, 46 N.Y.S.3d 246, 253, 2017 N.Y. Slip Op. 00058, 2017 WL 52812 (N.Y.A.D. 3 Dept., Jan. 05, 2017)	2	At the dismissal stage of litigation, a court is obligated to afford the complaint a liberal construction, accept the facts as alleged in the pleading as true, confer on the nonmoving party the benefit of every possible inference and determine whether the facts as alleged fit within any cognizable legal theory. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	Noting our obligation at this stage of the litigation to "afford the complaint a liberal construction, accept the facts as alleged in the pleading as true, confer on the [nonmoving party] the benefit of every possible inference and determine whether the facts as alleged fit within any cognizable legal theory"	"At the dismissal stage of litigation, is a court obligated to afford the complaint a liberal construction?"

1317	Born to Build LLC v Saleh, No. 002345-11, 950 N.Y.S.2d 236, 240, 36 Misc. 3d 590, 596, 2012 N.Y. Slip Op. 22154, 2012 WL 2086843 (Sup Ct, June 07, 2012)	3	In determining whether a cause of action exists, the pleading must be afforded a liberal construction: the facts alleged are accepted as true, the plaintiff is accorded the benefit of every favorable inference, and the court determines whether the facts alleged fit within any cognizable legal theory.	It is axiomatic that in determining whether a cause of action exists, the pleading must be afforded a liberal construction: the facts alleged are accepted as true, the plaintiff is accorded the benefit of every favorable inference and the court determines whether the facts alleged fit within any cognizable legal theory	"In determining whether a cause of action exists, should the pleading be afforded a liberal construction?"
1318	Dibrill v. Normandy Assocs., 383 S.W.3d 77, 83 (Mo. 2012)	2	When considering whether a petition fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, courts review the petition in an almost academic manner, to determine if the facts alleged meet the elements of a recognized cause of action, or of a cause that might be adopted in that case. V.A.M.R. 55.27(a)(6).	When considering whether a petition fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, we review the petition "in an almost academic manner, to determine if the facts alleged meet the elements of a recognized cause of action, or of a cause that might be adopted in that case."	"In determining whether a petition states a claim upon which relief can be granted, does a court consider only the well pleaded facts of the petition and gives the pleading its broadest intendment?"
1319	Godby v. Whitehead, 837 N.E.2d 146, 149 (Ind. App. 2005)	3	The trial court's grant of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim is proper if it is apparent that the facts alleged in the complaint are incapable of supporting relief under any set of circumstances, and in determining whether any facts will support the claim, the appellate court look only to the complaint and may not resort to any other evidence in the record. Trial Procedure Rule 12(B)(6).	The trial court's grant of a motion to dismiss is proper if it is apparent that the facts alleged in the complaint are incapable of supporting relief under any set of circumstances. In determining whether any facts will support the claim, we look only to the complaint and may not resort to any other evidence in the record.	"On a motion to dismiss for alleging facts incapable of supporting relief under any set of circumstances, can a court only look to the complaint?"
1320	Bejda v. SGL Indus., 82 Ill. 2d 322, 329 (1980)	2	Plaintiff's failure to take any action as ordered by court evidences want of prosecution by that party, and trial court may dismiss suit for failure of complainant to prosecute it with due diligence where no sufficient cause is presented, and this power exists independent of any statute.	A plaintiff's failure to take any action as ordered by the court evidences want of prosecution by that party (Leonard v. Garland (1911), 252 Ill. 300, 303, 96 N.E. 819), and as the court said in Epley v. Epley (1928), 328 Ill. 582, 585, 160 N.E. 113, 114; "The trial court may dismiss a suit for failure of complainant to prosecute it with due diligence where no sufficient cause is presented, and this power exists independent of any statute."	Can a court dismiss a suit for failure of complainant to prosecute it with due diligence where no sufficient cause is presented?

1324	Wilkerson v. Howell Contrs., Inc., 836 N.E.2d 29, 32, 163 Ohio App.3d 38, 42–43, 2005 -Ohio-4418, ¶ 9 (Ohio App. 1 Dist., 2005)	2	In determining, on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction, whether the plaintiff has alleged any cause of action that the trial court has authority to decide, the trial court is not confined to the allegations of the complaint, and may consider material pertinent to that inquiry without converting the motion into one for summary judgment. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(B)(1).	When ruling on a Civ.R. 12(B)(1) motion to dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction, the trial court must determine whether the plaintiff has alleged any cause of action that the court has authority to decide. In so determining, the trial court is not confined to the allegations of the complaint, but may consider material pertinent to that inquiry without converting the motion into one for summary judgment.	Are neither trial courts nor appellate courts confined to the allegations in the complaint for the purposes of subject-matter jurisdiction?
1325	Cogswell v. Am. Transit Ins. Co., 282 Conn. 505, 516 (2007)	8	The motion to dismiss admits all facts which are well pleaded, invokes the existing record, and must be decided upon that alone; however, where the motion is accompanied by supporting affidavits containing undisputed facts, the court may look to their content for determination of a jurisdictional issue.	"The motion to dismiss ... admits all facts which are well pleaded, invokes the existing record and must be decided upon that alone.... Where, however, as here, the motion is accompanied by supporting affidavits containing undisputed facts, the court may look to their content for determination of the jurisdictional issue...."	"Does the motion to dismiss admit all facts that are well pleaded, invokes the existing record?"
1331	Crepin v Fogarty, No. 505456, 874 N.Y.S.2d 278, 280, 2009 N.Y. Slip Op. 01272, 2009 WL 396177 (N.Y.A.D. 3 Dept., Feb. 19, 2009)	2	While factual affidavits submitted by a plaintiff may be considered to remedy defects in the complaint, affidavits submitted by a defendant do not constitute documentary evidence upon which a proponent of dismissal can rely. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(1).	While factual affidavits submitted by a plaintiff may be considered to remedy defects in the complaint (see Leon v. Martinez, 84 N.Y.2d 83, 88, 614 N.Y.S.2d 972, 638 N.E.2d 511 [1994]), affidavits submitted by a defendant do not constitute documentary evidence upon which a proponent of dismissal can rely	"While factual affidavits submitted by a plaintiff can be considered to remedy defects in the complaint, do affidavits submitted by a defendant not constitute documentary evidence upon which a proponent of a dismissal can rely?"
1332	James Bros. Lumber Co. v. Union Banking & Tr. Co. of Du Bois, Pa., 432 Pa. 129, 132 (1968)	1	Court may enter judgment of non pros. when party has shown want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude and there has been no compelling reason for delay, and delay has caused some prejudice to adverse party, such as death of or unexplained absence of material witness.	A Court may properly enter a judgment of non pros. when a party to the proceeding has shown a want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude, and there has been no compelling reason for the delay, and the delay has caused some prejudice to the adverse party, such as the death of or unexplained absence of material witnesses.	Is entry of non pros proper if party to proceeding has shown want of due diligence by failing to proceed with reasonable promptness?
1334	Wilcox v. Webster Ins., Inc., 982 A.2d 1053, 1058, 294 Conn. 206, 209 (Conn., 2009)	2	When a motion to dismiss is accompanied by supporting affidavits containing undisputed facts, the court may look to their content for determination of the jurisdictional issue and need not conclusively presume the validity of the allegations of the complaint.	When, as in the present case, a motion to dismiss "is accompanied by supporting affidavits containing undisputed facts, the court may look to their content for determination of the jurisdictional issue and need not conclusively presume the validity of the allegations of the complaint."	"When a motion to dismiss is accompanied by supporting affidavits containing undisputed facts, can the court look to their content for determination of the jurisdictional issue?"

1336	Laspina-Williams v. Laspina-Williams, 46 Conn. Supp. 165, 168 (Super. Ct. 1999)	4	Where a motion to dismiss is accompanied by supporting affidavits containing undisputed facts, the court may look to their content for determination of the jurisdictional issue and need not conclusively presume the validity of the allegations of the complaint.	Where, however ... the motion is accompanied by supporting affidavits containing undisputed facts, the court may look to their content for determination of the jurisdictional issue and need not conclusively presume the validity of the allegations of the complaint."	"Where a motion to dismiss is accompanied by supporting affidavits containing undisputed facts, can the court look to their content for determination of the jurisdictional issue?"
1337	Nielsen-Massey Vanillas v. City of Waukegan, 276 Ill. App. 3d 146, 155 (Ill.App. 2 Dist., 1995)	11	When defendant submits affidavit in support of motion to dismiss which controverts well-pleaded fact in complaint and plaintiff fails to file counter affidavits, facts set forth in affidavit are accepted as true despite any contrary assertions in complaint.	When a defendant submits an affidavit in support of a motion to dismiss which controverts a well-pleaded fact in the complaint and the plaintiff fails to file a counteraffidavit, the facts set forth in the affidavit are accepted as true despite any contrary assertions in the plaintiff's complaint.	"When a defendant submits an affidavit in support of a motion to dismiss, are facts set forth in the affidavit accepted as true despite any contrary assertions in complaint?"
1338	Scovill Fasteners, Inc. v. Sure-Snap Corp., 207 Ga. App. 539, 539, 428 S.E.2d 435, 436 (1993)	4	When outcome of motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction depends on unstipulated facts, it must be accompanied by supporting affidavits or citations to evidentiary material in the record, and to the extent that defendant's evidence controverts complaint's allegations, plaintiff may not rely on mere allegations, but must also submit supporting affidavits or documentary evidence. Uniform Superior Court Rule 6.1.	However, when the outcome of the motion depends on unstipulated facts, it must be accompanied by supporting affidavits or citations to evidentiary material in the record. See Uniform Superior Court Rule 6.1. See also Behar v. Aero Med Intl., 185 Ga.App. 845, 846 (366 SE2d 223) (1988). Further, to the extent that defendant's evidence controverts the allegations of the complaint, plaintiff may not rely on mere allegations, but must also submit supporting affidavits or documentary evidence. Id. at 846 [, 366 SE2d 223].	"When an outcome of a motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction depends upon unstipulated facts, should a motion be accompanied by a supporting affidavit or citations to evidentiary material in record?"
1339	MAG-T v. Travis Cent. Appraisal Dist., 161 S.W.3d 617, 624 (Tex. App. 2005)	10	If an agency has exclusive jurisdiction to determine a matter, a litigant's failure to exhaust all administrative remedies before seeking judicial review of the administrative body's actions deprives the court of subject matter jurisdiction over claims within the body's exclusive jurisdiction, and the court must dismiss such claims without prejudice. V.T.C.A., Government Code S 2001.171.	If an agency has exclusive jurisdiction to determine a matter, a litigant's failure to exhaust all administrative remedies before seeking judicial review of the administrative body's actions deprives the court of subject matter jurisdiction over claims within the body's exclusive jurisdiction, and the court must dismiss such claims without prejudice.	"In cases where an agency has exclusive jurisdiction, should a trial court dismiss claims without prejudice until the party has exhausted all administrative remedies?"

1341	Indus. Commc'ns v. Ward Cty. Appraisal Dist., 296 S.W.3d 707, 715 (Tex. App. 2009)	5	If an agency has exclusive jurisdiction to determine a matter, a litigant's failure to exhaust all administrative remedies before seeking judicial review of the administrative body's actions deprives the court of subject-matter jurisdiction over claims within the body's exclusive jurisdiction, and the court must generally dismiss such claims without prejudice. V.T.C.A., Government Code § 2001.171.	If an agency has exclusive jurisdiction to determine a matter, a litigant's failure to exhaust all administrative remedies before seeking judicial review of the administrative body's actions deprives the court of subject-matter jurisdiction over claims within the body's exclusive jurisdiction, and the court must generally dismiss such claims without prejudice.	"If an agency has exclusive jurisdiction, should a party exhaust all administrative remedies before seeking judicial review of the agency's action?"
1342	Esslinger v. Sun Ref. & Mktg. Co., 379 Pa. Super. 69, 73 (1988)	1	There are three requirements that must be satisfied in order to open judgment of non pros: petition to open must be promptly filed, reasonable explanation or excuse must be offered for petitioner's defective conduct, and facts constituting grounds for petitioner's underlying cause of action must be alleged.	The three requirements that must be satisfied in order to open a judgment of non pros are firmly established: (1) the petition to open must be promptly filed; (2) a reasonable explanation or excuse must be offered for the petitioner's defective conduct; and (3) facts constituting grounds for the petitioner's underlying cause of action must be alleged.	Are there three requirements that must be satisfied in order to open a judgment of non pros?
1345	Brent v. Bd. of Trustees of Davis & Elkins Coll., 173 W. Va. 36, 39-40 (1983)	1	In order to reinstate cause of action which has been dismissed for failure to prosecute, plaintiff must move for reinstatement within three terms of entry of dismissal order and make showing of good cause which adequately excuses his neglect in prosecution of case. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	Thus, under Rule 41(b), in order to reinstate a cause of action which has been dismissed for failure to prosecute, the plaintiff must move for reinstatement within three terms of entry of the dismissal order and make a showing of good cause which adequately *40 excuses his neglect in prosecution of the case.	"In order to reinstate a cause of action which has been dismissed for failure to prosecute, should the plaintiff move for reinstatement within three terms of entry of the dismissal order?"
1348	Sims-Hearn v. Office of Med. Exam'r, Cty. of Cook, 359 Ill. App. 3d 439, 443 (2005)	2	Trial court may dismiss a complaint for failure to state a cause of action with no opportunity to replead if it is clearly apparent that no set of facts can be proven which will entitle plaintiff to recovery.	A trial court may dismiss a complaint for failure to state a cause of action with no opportunity to replead if it is clearly apparent that no set of facts can be proven which will entitle plaintiff to recovery.	Should a complaint be dismissed for failure to state cause of action with no opportunity to replead only if it is clearly apparent that no set of facts can be proven that would entitle a plaintiff to recovery?
1349	Azimi v. Johns, 254 P.3d 1054, 1067 (Alaska 2011)	22	Before a litigation-ending order is entered on the basis of a pro se litigant's failure to prosecute or to abide by court rules, the court must give the litigant notice and an adequate opportunity to cure the defects in his pleadings. Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 37, 41(b).	In addition, we have long held that before a litigation-ending order is entered on the basis of a pro se litigant's failure to prosecute or to abide by court rules, the court must give the litigant notice and an adequate opportunity to cure the defects in his pleadings.	"Should a court give the litigant notice and an adequate opportunity to cure the defects in his pleadings, before a litigation-ending order is entered on the basis of a pro se litigant's failure to prosecute?"

1352	Hernandez-Zuniga v. Tickle, 374 S.C. 235, 243 (2007)	6	In determining jurisdictional questions, it must be kept in mind that the basic purpose of the workers' compensation law is the inclusion of employers and employees within its coverage and not their exclusion, and doubts of jurisdiction will be resolved in favor of inclusion rather than exclusion; however, a construction should not be adopted that does violence to the specific provisions of the workers' compensation law.	In determining such jurisdictional questions, it must be kept in mind that the basic purpose of the Workmen's Compensation Act is the inclusion of employers and employees within its coverage and not their exclusion, and doubts of jurisdiction will be resolved in favor of inclusion rather than exclusion. However, a construction should not be adopted that does violence to the specific provisions of the Act.	"With the basic purpose of the Workmens Compensation Act being the inclusion of employers and employees, not their exclusion, should a construction be adopted that does violence to the Act?"
1354	Leggs v. State, 966 N.E.2d 204, 208–09 (Ind. Ct. App. 2012)	6	A defendant is subjected to double jeopardy where a felony is elevated in class based on the same statutory factor and factual basis that was used to elevate another felony in class, thus the two cannot stand together and one must be reduced in class. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	A defendant is subjected to double jeopardy "where a felony is elevated in class based on the same statutory factor and factual basis that was used to elevate another felony in class, [thus] the two cannot stand together and one must be reduced *209 in class."	Is a defendant subjected to double jeopardy where a felony is elevated in class based on the same statutory factor and factual basis that was used to elevate another felony in class?
1355	State v. Jandreau, 157 A.3d 239, 242 (Me., 2017)	1	Absent defendant's consent to or the manifest necessity for a mistrial, the Double Jeopardy Clauses of the federal and state constitutions preclude state from bringing a second prosecution of the defendant on the same charges after the declaration of a mistrial. U.S. Const. Amend. 5; Me. Const. art. 1, S 8.	Absent the defendant's consent to or the manifest necessity for a mistrial, the Double Jeopardy Clauses of the United States and Maine Constitutions preclude the State from bringing a second prosecution of the defendant on the same charges after the declaration of a mistrial.	"Absent defendant's consent to or the manifest necessity for a mistrial, does the Double Jeopardy Clauses of the federal and state constitutions preclude a state from bringing a second prosecution of the defendant on the same charges after the declaration of a mistrial?"
1361	Smith v. McKee, 145 S.W.3d 299, 302 (Tex. App. 2004)	2	The common law vests the trial court with the inherent power to dismiss independently of the rules of civil procedure when a plaintiff fails to prosecute his or her case with due diligence. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a.	In addition, the common law vests the trial court with the inherent power to dismiss independently of the rules of procedure when a plaintiff fails to prosecute his or her case with due diligence.	Does the common law vest the trial court with the inherent power to dismiss independently of the rules of procedure when a plaintiff fails to prosecute his or her case with due diligence?
1362	In re Marriage of Buster, 115 S.W.3d 141, 143-44 (Tex. App. 2003)	1	A trial court has the inherent power to dismiss a case for want of prosecution, and express authority to do so is also given by the rules of civil procedure in cases where a party plaintiff fails to appear for any scheduled hearing, or when the case is not disposed of within the time standards set by the Texas Supreme Court. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a.	A trial court has the inherent power to dismiss a case for want of prosecution, but express authority to do so is also given by Rule 165a in cases where a *144 party plaintiff fails to appear for any scheduled hearing, or when the case is not disposed of within the time standards set by the Texas Supreme Court. TEX.R. CIV. P. 165a;	Do courts have inherent and express authority to dismiss cases for want of prosecution?

1364	United States v. Bauman, 887 F.2d 546, 549 (C.A.5 (Tex.), 1989)	1	Double jeopardy clause protects defendant's valued right to have trial completed by particular tribunal, and also bars abusive government conduct designed to harass defendant through repetitive prosecution or undertaken for purpose of increasing likelihood of conviction. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	The double jeopardy clause protects a defendant's "valued right to have his trial completed by a particular tribunal." Crist v. Bretz, 437 U.S. 28, 36, 98 S.Ct. 2156, 2161, 57 L.Ed.2d 24 (1978). It also bars abusive governmental conduct designed to harass a defendant through repetitive prosecution or undertaken for the purpose of increasing the likelihood of conviction.	Does the double jeopardy clause bars abusive governmental conduct designed to harass a defendant through repetitive prosecution?
1365	State v. Burris, 40 S.W.3d 520, 524 (Tenn.Crim.App., 2000)	9	Policy underlying double jeopardy is that the state, with all its resources, should not be able to make repeated attempts to convict an individual for an alleged offense, thereby subjecting him to embarrassment, expense, and ordeal and compelling him to live in a continuing state of anxiety and insecurity, as well as enhancing the possibility that even though innocent he may be found guilty. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	The policy underlying double jeopardy is that the State, with all its resources, should not be able "to make repeated attempts to convict an individual for an alleged offense, thereby subjecting him to embarrassment, expense and ordeal and compelling him to live in a continuing state of anxiety and insecurity, as well as enhancing the possibility that even though innocent he may be found guilty."	What are the three fundamental protections encompassed in the principle of double jeopardy?
1366	Huminski v. Lavoie, 173 Vt. 517, 519 (2001)	2	Although a claim may be entirely spurious on its face, the court cannot know, without hearing the parties, whether the plaintiff may be able to amend the complaint sufficiently to state a claim entitling the plaintiff to relief. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(6).	As we explained in Hall, although a claim may be entirely spurious on its face, the court cannot know, without hearing the parties, whether the plaintiff may be able to amend the complaint sufficiently to state a claim entitling the plaintiff to relief.	"Can the court know, without hearing the parties, whether the plaintiff can be able to amend the complaint sufficiently to state a claim entitling the plaintiff to relief?"
1369	Great Am. Ins. Companies v. Gordon Trucking, 165 Cal. App. 4th 445, 451 (2008)	6	"Equitable subrogation" permits a party who has been required to satisfy a loss created by a third party's wrongful act to "step into the shoes" of the loser and pursue recovery from the responsible wrongdoer.	"Equitable subrogation permits a party who has been required to satisfy a loss created by a third party's wrongful act to "step into the shoes" of the loser and pursue recovery from the responsible wrongdoer.	Is subrogation a right which is purely derivative and it permits a party who has been required to satisfy a loss created by a third party's wrongful act to step into the shoes of the loser and pursue recovery from the responsible wrongdoer?

1372	Admiral Ins. Co. v. Arrowood Indem. Co., 471 B.R. 687, 689 (N.D. Tex. 2012)	7	There are two types of subrogation under Texas law: "contractual subrogation," i.e., "conventional subrogation," that is created by agreement or contract that grants right to pursue reimbursement from third party in exchange for payment of loss, and "equitable subrogation," i.e., "legal subrogation," that does not depend on contract but arises in every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, has paid debt for which another was primarily liable, and which in equity should have been paid by the latter.	The Texas Supreme Court later clarified that there are two types of subrogation. Mid-Continent Ins. Co. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 236 S.W.3d 765, 774 (Tex.2007). Contractual (or conventional) subrogation is created by an agreement or contract that grants the right to pursue reimbursement from a third party in exchange for payment of a loss, while equitable (or legal) subrogation does not depend on contract but arises in every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, has paid a debt for which another was primarily liable and which in equity should have been paid by the latter.	What is the difference between legal and conventional subrogation?
1373	Fort Worth Hotel Ltd. P'ship v. Enserch Corp., 977 S.W.2d 746, 757 (Tex. App. 1998)	15	Motion in limine is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, before trial, certain evidentiary rulings that the court may be asked to make; its purpose is to prevent the other party from asking prejudicial questions and introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first asking the court's permission.	A motion in limine is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, before trial, certain evidentiary rulings that the court may be asked to make. The purpose of a motion in limine is to prevent the other party from asking prejudicial questions and introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first asking the court's permission.	Is the purpose of a motion in limine to prevent the other party from asking prejudicial questions and introducing evidence in front of the jury without first asking the court's permission?
1374	Matter of Safriet, 112 N.C. App. 747, 751 (1993)	2	Before ruling on motion for continuance, judge should hear the evidence, pro and con, consider it judicially, along with whether moving party has acted with diligence and in good faith, and then rule with view to promoting substantial justice.	Before ruling on a motion for a continuance, the judge should hear the evidence, pro and con, consider it judicially, along with whether the moving party has acted with diligence and in good faith and then rule with a view to promoting substantial justice.	Should a judge find out whether moving party has acted with diligence and in good faith and then rule with a view to promoting substantial justice?
1376	Patton v. State of N.C., 381 F.2d 636, 643-44 (C.A.4 (N.C.), 1967)	5	"Double jeopardy", rather than being a single doctrine, is comprised of three separate though related rules prohibiting (1) reprosecution for same offense following acquittal, (2) reprosecution for same offense following conviction, and (3) multiple punishment for same offense. U.S.C.A. Const. Amend. 5.	Double jeopardy, rather than being a single doctrine, is actually comprised of three separate though related rules, 21 prohibiting (1) reprosecution for the same offense following acquittal, 22 *644 (2) reprosecution for the same offense following conviction, 23 and (3) multiple punishment for the same offense.	"Rather than being a single doctrine, is double jeopardy comprised of three separate though related rules prohibiting reprosecution for a same offense following acquittal?"

1377	Mahler v. Szucs, 135 Wash. 2d 398, 411 (Wash. 1998)	1	"Subrogation" is an equitable doctrine the essential purpose of which is to provide for a proper allocation of payment responsibility; it seeks to impose ultimate responsibility for a wrong or loss on the party who, in equity and good conscience, ought to bear it.	Subrogation is an equitable doctrine the essential purpose of which is to provide for a proper allocation of payment responsibility. It seeks to impose ultimate responsibility for a wrong or loss on the party who, in equity and good conscience, ought to bear it.	"Does the doctrine of subrogation seek to impose ultimate responsibility for a wrong or loss on the party who, in equity and good conscience, ought to bear it?"
1378	Bernot v. Primus Corp., 663 N.E.2d 464, 466 (Ill. App. 1996)	5	Doctrine of "subrogation" is method whereby one who has involuntarily paid a debt or claim of another succeeds to the rights of the other with respect to the debt or claim so paid; it is alternatively defined as a doctrine under which a person who, pursuant to a legal liability, has paid for the loss or injury resulting from the negligence or wrongful act of another will be subrogated to the rights of the injured person against such wrongdoer.	Our supreme court has recently defined the doctrine of subrogation as "a method whereby one who has involuntarily paid a debt or claim of another succeeds to the rights of the other with respect to the claim or debt so paid." Dix Mutual Insurance, 149 Ill.2d at 319, 173 Ill.Dec. 648, 597 N.E.2d 622. Earlier, the supreme court had defined the doctrine as one under which "a person who, pursuant to a legal liability, has paid for a loss or injury resulting from the negligence or wrongful act of another, will be subrogated to the rights of the injured person against such wrongdoer."	Does subrogation allow one who involuntarily paid a debt or claim of another to succeed to the rights of the other with respect to the claim or debt so paid?
1379	Coronel v. AK Victory, 1 F.Supp.3d 1175, 1181 (Wash. 2014)	9	Federal courts' admiralty jurisdiction is exclusive only as to those maritime causes of action begun and carried on as proceedings in rem, that is, where a vessel or thing is itself treated as the offender and made the defendant by name or description in order to enforce a lien. 28 U.S.C.A. S 1333.	As a result, federal courts' admiralty jurisdiction "is 'exclusive' only as to those maritime causes of action begun and carried on as proceedings in rem, that is, where a vessel or thing is itself treated as the offender and made the defendant by name or description in order to enforce a lien.	Is a Federal courts admiralty jurisdiction exclusive to those maritime causes of action begun and carried on as proceedings in rem?
1381	In re Tillman, 565 B.R. 586, 597 (E.D.N.C. 2016)	8	North Carolina has three requirements that must be met in order for a manufactured home to be considered real property: (1) it is a residential structure, (2) it has the moving hitch, wheels, and axles removed, and (3) it is placed upon a permanent foundation either on land owned by the owner of the manufactured home or on land in which the owner of the manufactured home has a leasehold interest. N.C. Gen. Stat. Ann. S 105-273(13)(d).	North Carolina has three requirements that must be met in order for a manufactured home to be considered real property: (1) It is a residential structure; (2) It has the moving hitch, wheels, and axles removed; and (3) It is placed upon a permanent foundation either on land owned by the owner of the manufactured home or on land in which the owner of the manufactured home has a leasehold interest N.C. Gen. Stat. 105-273(13)(d) (2016).	Can a manufactured home be considered as real property?

1382	In re Felker, 211 B.R. 165, 168 (M.D. Pa. 1997)	2	Holder of life estate, that is, life tenant, is entitled to both possession and use of property to exclusion of remainderman, including right to rents, issues, and profits generated by parcel during tenant's life.	Under the common law, "[t]he holder of a life estate, i.e., a life tenant, is entitled to both the possession and the use of the property to the exclusion of the remainderman." "This would include the right of the life tenant to the rents, issues, and profits generated by the parcel during the tenant's life.	"Is a holder of life estate entitled to both possession and use of property to exclusion of remainderman, including right to rents, issues, and profits generated by parcel during tenant's life?"
1384	Office of Comptroller of Currency v. Spitzer, 396 F. Supp. 2d 383, 389 (S.D.N.Y., 2005)	1	National banks are instrumentalities of the federal government, created for a public purpose, and as such necessarily subject to the paramount authority of the United States; they remain subject to state laws, but only insofar as those laws do not prevent or significantly interfere with the national bank's exercise of its powers. 12 U.S.C.A. SS 21 et seq., 484(a); 12 C.F.R. S 7.4000.	"National banks are instrumentalities of the Federal government, created for a public purpose, and as such necessarily subject to the paramount authority of the United States." Davis v. Elmira Sav. Bank, 161 U.S. 275, 283, 16 S.Ct. 502, 40 L.Ed. 700 (1896). They remain subject to state laws, but only insofar as those laws do not "prevent or significantly interfere with the national bank's exercise of its powers."	"Can banks be considered as instrumentalities of the federal government, created for a public purpose, and subject to the paramount authority of the United States?"
1385	Deerfield Park Dist. v. Progress Dev. Corp., 26 Ill. 2d 296, 298-99 (1962)	1	Every private owner of property holds title subject to lawful exercise of sovereign power of eminent domain, and courts may not substitute their judgment for that of condemning authorities in inquiring into necessity and propriety of exercise of that power.	As we stated in the prior opinion, it is conceded, as it must be, that every private *299 owner of property holds his title subject to the lawful exercise of the sovereign power of eminent domain, and the courts may not substitute their judgment for that of the condemning authorities in inquiring into the necessity and propriety of the exercise of the power.	Does a private owner of property holds title subject to the lawful exercise of the sovereign power of eminent domain?
1387	Ex parte Eng'g Design Grp., 200 So. 3d 634, 640 (Ala. 2016)	9	In determining whether a county has a strong connection to a case for the purpose of deciding venue, the fact that a defendant's allegedly wrongful conduct occurred there carries considerably more weight than the fact that a plaintiff's injury was felt elsewhere. Code 1975, SS 6-3-2, 6-3-7.	Thus, it stands to reason that, in determining whether a county has a strong connection to a case, the fact that a defendant's allegedly wrongful conduct occurred there carries considerably more weight than the fact that a plaintiff's injury was felt elsewhere. I	"In determining whether a county has a strong connection to a case, does a county where a defendants wrongful conduct occurred carry more weight than a county where the plaintiffs injury was felt?"
1388	Maumee v. Pub. Util. Comm., 101 Ohio St. 3d 54, 56 (2004)	3	A "public utility" is an enterprise with the following characteristics and functions: (1) it provides essential goods or services that the general public has a right to demand from the utility, (2) it conducts its operation in such a manner as to be a matter of public concern, and (3) it occupies a monopolistic or oligopolistic position in the marketplace (by definition, a noncompetitive position).	A public utility is an enterprise with the following characteristics and functions: (1) it provides essential goods or services that the general public has a right to demand from the utility, (2) it conducts its operation in such a manner as to be a matter of public concern, and (3) it occupies a monopolistic or oligopolistic position in the marketplace (by definition, a noncompetitive position).	Does a public utility provide essential goods and services to the general public that has the legal right to demand or receive such goods?

1389	Wyatt v. U.S., 271 F.3d 1090, 1098 (C.A.Fed.,2001)	9	The mere requirement that a person obtain a permit before engaging in a certain use of his or her property does not itself "take" the property in any sense, since the very existence of a permit system implies that permission may be granted; moreover, mere fluctuations in value during the process of governmental decisionmaking, absent extraordinary delay, are incidents of ownership. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	The mere requirement that "a person obtain a permit before engaging in a certain use of his or her property does not itself 'take' the property in any sense: after all, the very existence of a permit system implies that permission may be granted." United States v. Riverside Bayview Homes, Inc., 474 U.S. 121, 126–27, 106 S.Ct. 455, 88 L.Ed.2d 419 (1985). Moreover, mere "fluctuations in value during the process of governmental decisionmaking, absent extraordinary delay, are incidents of ownership."	Are fluctuations in value during the process of governmental decision-making incidents of ownership?
1392	Offutt v. Kaplan, 884 F. Supp. 1179, 1184 (N.D.Ill., 1995)	2	Statute addressing federal treason and sedition laws is applicable to act of obtaining or furnishing guarded information pertaining to national defense of United States government for use to advantage of any foreign nation. 18 U.S.C.A. S 794(a).	Section 794(a) is applicable to the act of obtaining or furnishing guarded information pertaining to the national defense of the United States government for use to the advantage of any foreign nation.	Is the act of obtaining or furnishing guarded information pertaining to the national defense of the United States government for use to the advantage of any foreign nation treason under federal treason and sedition laws?
1395	Hill v. Cross Country Settlements, 402 Md. 281, 288 (2007)	44	Subrogation is also a remedy invoked by courts to prevent unjust enrichment, and for this purpose it is appropriate in any case where restitution is warranted and the remedy can be given without working injustice.	"Subrogation, like lien, trust, and contract, may arise by agreement of the parties. But subrogation is also a remedy invoked by courts ... to prevent unjust enrichment, and for this purpose it is appropriate in any case where restitution is warranted and the remedy can be given without working injustice."	"Is subrogation also a remedy invoked by courts to prevent unjust enrichment, and for this purpose is it appropriate that in any case where restitution is warranted the remedy can be given without working injustice?"
1397	Murray v. Cadle Co., 257 S.W.3d 291, 299 (Tex. App. 2008)	12	"Equitable subrogation" is a legal fiction whereby an obligation, extinguished by a payment made by a third person, is treated as still subsisting for the benefit of this third person, so that by means of it one creditor is substituted to the rights, remedies, and securities of another.	Equitable subrogation "is a legal fiction" whereby "an obligation, extinguished by a payment made by a third person, is treated as still subsisting for the benefit of this third person, so that by means of it one creditor is substituted to the rights, remedies, and securities of another."	Is equitable subrogation a legal fiction whereby an obligation that is extinguished by a third party is treated as still existing to allow the creditor to seek recovery from the party primarily liable?
1398	Fremont Comp. Ins. Co. v. Sierra Pine, Ltd., 121 Cal. App. 4th 389, 398 (2004)	6	"Equitable subrogation" is a legal device which permits a party who has been required to satisfy a loss created by a third party's wrong to step into the shoes of the loser and recover from the wrongdoer.	As we have explained before, "Equitable subrogation is a legal device which permits a party who has been required to satisfy a loss created by a third party's wrong to step into the shoes of the loser and recover from the wrongdoer."	Is equitable subrogation a legal device which permits a party who has been required to satisfy a loss created by a third party's wrong to step into the shoes of the loser and recover from the wrongdoer?

1399	Illinois Clean Energy Cmty. Found. v. Filan, 392 F.3d 934, 936 (7th Cir. 2004)	1	A state can, whether by statutory amendment or otherwise, regulate private entities extensively before it goes so far as to be deemed to have made a "regulatory taking," that is, a taking that does not transfer title to property from the owner to the state but achieves the same end by unreasonably restricting the use of the property, causing its value to plummet, perhaps to zero; however, the state cannot lawfully enlarge its regulatory power by deciding to take someone's property by the device of amending an existing statute rather than enacting a new one. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Of course a state can amend its statutes; and it can also, whether by amendment or otherwise, regulate private entities extensively before it goes so far as to be deemed to have made a regulatory taking, that is, a taking that, unlike the one here, does not transfer title to property from the owner to the state but achieves the same end by unreasonably restricting the use of the property, causing its value to plummet, perhaps to zero. See Lucas v. South Carolina Coastal Council, 505 U.S. 1003, 1015, 112 S.Ct. 2886, 120 L.Ed.2d 798 (1992); Penn Central Transportation Co. v. City of New York, 438 U.S. 104, 98 S.Ct. 2646, 57 L.Ed.2d 631 (1978); Raceway Park, Inc. v. Ohio, 356 F.3d 677, 684–87 (6th Cir.2004); cf. Pittman v. Chicago Board of Education, 64 F.3d 1098, 1104–05 (7th Cir.1995). But obviously the state cannot lawfully enlarge its regulatory power by deciding to take someone's property by the device of amending an existing statute rather than enacting a new one	Can the state lawfully enlarge its regulatory power by deciding to take someone's property by the device of amending an existing statute rather than enacting a new one?
1400	In re L.W., 362 Ill. App. 3d 1106, 1118 (2005)	10	Evidentiary motions, such as motions in limine, are addressed to the trial court's inherent power to admit or exclude evidence, and reviewing courts will not disturb a trial court's evidentiary ruling absent an abuse of discretion.	Generally, evidentiary motions, such as motions in limine, are addressed to the trial court's inherent power to admit or exclude evidence, and reviewing courts will not disturb a trial court's evidentiary ruling absent an abuse of discretion.	"Are evidentiary motions, such as motions in limine, addressed to the trial court's inherent power to admit or exclude evidence, and reviewing courts will not disturb a trial court's evidentiary ruling absent an abuse of discretion?"
1402	Stewart v. Lanier Park Med. Off. Bldg., Ltd., 259 Ga. App. 898, 900, 578 S.E.2d 572, 575 (2003)	7	The admission of evidence, including a ruling on a motion in limine, is a matter resting within the sound discretion of the trial court, and the appellate court will not disturb the exercise of that discretion absent evidence of its abuse.	"The admission of evidence, including a ruling on a motion in limine, is a matter resting within the sound discretion of the trial court, and we will not disturb the exercise of that discretion absent evidence of its abuse."	"Is the admission of evidence, including a ruling on a motion in limine, a matter resting within the sound discretion of the trial court that an appellate court will not disturb absent evidence of its abuse?"
1403	Mgmt. Computer Servs. v. Hawkins, Ash, Baptie & Co.,196 Wis. 2d 578, 594 (Ct. App. 1995)	5	Trial court's pretrial decision that contract was ambiguous did not prevent it from later deciding whether, as matter of law, contract was sufficiently definite to be enforced, insofar as it covered party's contractual obligations that jury found had been violated.	The court's pretrial decision that the contract was ambiguous did not prevent it from later deciding whether, as a matter of law, the contract is sufficiently definite to be enforced, insofar as it covers the party's contractual obligations that the jury found HABCO had violated.	Will a court's pretrial decision that a contract was ambiguous prevent it from later deciding whether the contract was sufficiently definite to be enforced?

1404	In re Harber, 553 B.R. 522, 528 (W.D. Pa. 2016)	9	Under Pennsylvania law, cause of action accrues on date that plaintiff could have first maintained the action to a successful conclusion by holding an enforceable claim or right after sustaining an injury that gives rise to damages.	Under Pennsylvania law, "a cause of action accrues only when one has the right to institute a suit." 19 As explained by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, a claim accrues on the date "the plaintiff could have first maintained the action to a successful conclusion" by holding an enforceable claim or right after sustaining an injury that gives rise to damages.	Does cause of action or a claim accrue on the date that plaintiff could have first maintained the action to a successful conclusion by holding an enforceable claim?
1405	Dubendorf v New York State Educ. Dept., 412 N.Y.S.2d 260, 269–70, 1978 WL 391758 (Sup Ct, Dec. 14, 1978)	15	A claimant's cause of action does not accrue until claimant possesses the legal right to be paid and to enforce its right to payment in court and, therefore, where the state's obligation to pay is contractually or statutorily conditioned on an audit, no suit can be brought by a claimant until the official charged with making the audit has done so and has formally rejected all or part of the claim. Const. art. 5, S 1.	(A) claimant's cause of action does not accrue until it possesses the legal right to be paid and to enforce its right to payment in court. It follows that where, by contract 270 or by statute, the State's obligation to pay is conditioned upon an audit, no suit can be brought by a claimant until the official charged with making the audit has done so and has formally rejected all or some part of the claim."	Does a claimant's cause of action accrue before the claimant possesses the legal right to be paid?
1406	United States v. Ciavarella, 716 F.3d 705, 729 (C.A.3 (Pa.), 2013)	30	Bribery-and-kickback theory of honest services fraud requires a quid pro quo, that is, a specific intent to give or receive something of value in exchange for an official act. 18 U.S.C.A. S 1346.	The bribery-and-kickback theory of honest services fraud requires "a quid pro quo, that is, a specific intent to give or receive something of value in exchange for an official act."	Does an honest services fraud by bribery require a quid pro quo or specific intent to give or receive something of value in exchange for an official act?
1407	Petition of Borough of Boyertown, 77 Pa. Cmwlth. 357, 369 (1983)	1	Neither physical appropriation nor formal divestiture of an owner's title are required to create right to eminent domain damages, and when entity clothed with power of eminent domain has, by even nonappropriative act or activity, substantially deprived owner of beneficial use and enjoyment of his property, taking will be deemed to have occurred. 26 P.S. S 1-502(e).	Yet, neither physical appropriation nor a formal divestiture of an owner's title are required to create a right to eminent domain damages. It is now well settled that when an entity clothed with the power of eminent domain has, by even a non-appropriative act or activity, substantially deprived an owner of the beneficial use and enjoyment of his property, a taking will be deemed to have occurred.	"What kind of taking occurs when an entity clothed with the power of eminent domain by even a non-appropriative act or activity, deprives an owner of the beneficial use and enjoyment of his property?"
1408	Glen v. Club Mediterranee S.A., 365 F. Supp. 2d 1263	1	The act of state doctrine is a judicially-created rule of decision that precludes courts of the United States from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory.	The act of state doctrine is a judicially-created rule of decision that "precludes the courts of this country from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory."	How does the act of state doctrine preclude United States courts from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory?

1411	Sikhs for Justice v. Nath, 893 F. Supp. 2d 598, 614 (S.D.N.Y., 2012)	17	Under the act of state doctrine, the courts of one state will not question the validity of public acts, acts jure imperii, performed by other sovereigns within their own borders, even when such courts have jurisdiction over a controversy in which one of the litigants has standing to challenge those acts.	Under the act of state doctrine, "the courts of one state will not question the validity of public acts (acts jure imperii) performed by other sovereigns within their own borders, even when such courts have jurisdiction over a controversy in which one of the litigants has standing to challenge those acts."	"Under the act of state doctrine, will the courts of one state question the validity of public acts, (acts jure imperii,) performed by other sovereigns within their own borders?"
1412	Provincial Gov't of Marinduque v. Placer Dome, 582 F.3d 1083, 1088 (C.A.9 (Nev.), 2009)	12	Act of state doctrine reflects the concern that the judiciary, by questioning the validity of sovereign acts taken by foreign states, may interfere with the executive branch's conduct of foreign policy.	The doctrine reflects the concern that the judiciary, by questioning the validity of sovereign acts taken by foreign states, may interfere with the executive branch's conduct of foreign policy.	"Does the act of state doctrine reflect the concern that the judiciary, by questioning the validity of sovereign acts taken by foreign states, may interfere with the executive branch's conduct of foreign policy?"
1413	Doe I v. Unocal Corp., 395 F.3d 932, 958 (9th Cir. 2002)	15	The act of state doctrine is a non-jurisdictional, prudential doctrine based on the notion that the courts of one country will not sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another, done within its own territory.	The act of state doctrine is a non-jurisdictional, prudential doctrine based on the notion that "the courts of one country will not sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another, done within its own territory."	"Is the act of state doctrine a non-jurisdictional, prudential doctrine based on the notion that the courts of one country will not sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another, done within its own territory?"
1414	U.S. v. Louisiana, 105 S.Ct. 1074, 1084, 470 U.S. 93, 110 (U.S.,1985)	7	When foreign governments know or have reason to know of the effective and continual exercise of sovereignty over maritime area, inaction or toleration on the part of the foreign governments is sufficient to permit an historic title to arise.	There is substantial agreement that when foreign governments do know or have reason to know of the effective and continual exercise of sovereignty over a maritime area, inaction or toleration on the part of the foreign governments is sufficient to permit a historic title to arise.	"Is an inaction or toleration on the part of the foreign governments, with knowledge of the effective and continual exercise of sovereignty over a maritime, area sufficient to permit an historic title to arise?"
1416	U.S. v. State of Alaska, 352 F.Supp. 815, 819 (D.C.Alaska, 1972)	3	Authority which a nation must exercise over a maritime area in order to be able to claim it as historic waters is sovereignty, but it is not necessary that a nation exercise all rights and duties which are included in the concept of sovereignty.	The authority which a nation must exercise over a maritime area in order to be able to claim it as historic waters is sovereignty. Id. 85. It is not necessary that a nation exercise all rights and duties which are included in the concept of sovereignty.	Is sovereignty the authority which a nation must exercise over a maritime area in order to be able to claim it as historic waters and is it necessary that a nation exercises all rights and duties which are included in the concept of sovereignty?
1417	Glen v. Club Mediterranee S.A., 365 F. Supp. 2d 1263	1	The act of state doctrine is a judicially-created rule of decision that precludes courts of the United States from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory.	The act of state doctrine is a judicially-created rule of decision that "precludes the courts of this country from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory."	Does the act of state doctrine preclude courts of the United States from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power commits within its own territory?

1419	T&T Dev. Co. v. S. Nat. Bank of S.C., 125 N.C. App. 600, 602 (1997)	1	Rulings on motions in limine are merely preliminary and subject to change during course of trial, depending upon actual evidence offered at trial, and thus objection to order granting or denying motion is insufficient to preserve for appeal the question of admissibility of evidence.	Rulings on these motions, however, are merely preliminary and subject to change 349 during the course of trial, depending upon the actual evidence offered at trial and thus an objection to an order granting or denying the motion "is insufficient to preserve for appeal the question of the admissibility of evidence."	Is a trial court's ruling on a motion in limine preliminary and is subject to change depending on the actual evidence offered at trial?
1420	Duran v. Hyundai Motor Am., 271 S.W.3d 178, 192 (Tenn. App. 2008)	4	A "motion in limine" provides a vehicle for requesting guidance from the trial court prior to trial regarding an evidentiary question which the court may provide, at its discretion, to aid the parties in formulating their trial strategy.	A motion in limine provides a vehicle for requesting guidance from the trial court prior to trial regarding an evidentiary question which the court may provide, at its discretion, to aid the parties in formulating their trial strategy.	"Is a ""motion in limine"" a request for guidance by the court regarding an evidentiary question, which the court may provide at its discretion to aid the parties in formulating trial strategy?"
1422	Quad City Bank & Trust v. Jim Kircher & Associates, P.C., 804 N.W.2d 83, 89 (Iowa, 2011)	2	A motion in limine serves the useful purpose of raising and pointing out before trial certain evidentiary rulings that the trial court may be called upon to make during the course of the trial and, if sustained, excludes reference or introduction of this evidence until its admissibility is determined by the trial court, outside the presence of a jury, in an offer of proof.	Thus, a motion in limine "serves the useful purpose of raising and pointing out before trial certain evidentiary rulings the court may be called upon to make during the course of the trial" and, if sustained, excludes reference or introduction of this evidence until its admissibility is determined by the trial court, outside the presence of a jury, in an offer of proof.	What useful purpose does a motion in limine serve?
1423	Inland Empire Rural Electrification v. Dep't of Pub. Serv. of Washington, 199 Wash. 527, 537 (1939)	3	A corporation becomes "public service corporation," subject to regulation by state public service department, only when and to extent that its business is dedicated or devoted to public use, and test to be applied is whether corporation holds itself out, expressly or impliedly, to supply its service or product for use by public or portion thereof which can be served by utility or merely offers to serve particular individuals of its own selection. Rem.Rev.Stat. SS 10339-10459	A corporation becomes a public service corporation, subject to regulation by the department of public service, only when, and to the extent that, its business is dedicated or devoted to a public use. The 263 test to be applied is whether or not the corporation holds itself out, expressly or impliedly, to supply its service or product for use either by the public as a class or by that portion of it that can be served by the utility, or whether, on the contrary, it merely offers to serve only particular individuals of its own selection.	Does a corporation become a public service corporation only when it becomes devoted to public use?

1425	Collateral Inv. Co. v. Pilgrim, 421 So. 2d 1274, 1276 (Ala. App. 1982)	1	Elements of equitable subrogation are that money is advanced at instance of debtor in order to extinguish prior incumbrance, that money is used for such purpose with just expectation on part of lender for obtaining security of equal dignity with prior incumbrance, that whole debt must be paid before subrogation can be enforced, that lender must be ignorant of intervening lien and that intervening lienor must not be burdened or embarrassed.	The elements of equitable subrogation are as follows: (1) the money is advanced at the instance of the debtor in order to extinguish a prior incumbrance; (2) the money is used for that purpose with the just expectation on the part of the lender for obtaining security of equal dignity with the prior incumbrance; (3) the whole debt must be paid before subrogation can be enforced; (4) the lender must be ignorant of the intervening lien; and (5) the intervening lienor must not be burdened or embarrassed.	What requirements must be met for equitable subrogation to apply?
1428	Roe v. Unocal Corp., 70 F. Supp. 2d 1073, 1076 (C.D.Cal., 1999)	9	If court determines that military officer acted on behalf of recognized government and if lawsuit turns on challenge to officer's order, then act of state doctrine bars adjudication of matter.	Thus, these cases establish that if a court determines the military officer acted on behalf of a recognized government and if the lawsuit turns on a challenge to the officer's order, then the act of state doctrine bars adjudication of the matter.	"If a court determines that military officer acted on behalf of recognized government and if the lawsuit turns on a challenge to officer's order, then does an act of state doctrine bar adjudication of the matter?"
1429	Northrop Corp. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp., 705 F.2d 1030, 1046 (C.A.9 (Cal.), 1983)	16	Act of state doctrine and political question doctrine require courts to defer to executive or legislative branches of government when those branches are better equipped to handle politically sensitive issue.	The act of state doctrine is essentially the foreign counterpart to the political question doctrine. Both doctrines require courts to defer to the executive or legislative branches of government when those branches are better equipped to handle a politically sensitive issue.	Does the act of state doctrine and political question doctrine require courts to defer to executive or legislative branches of government when those branches are better equipped to handle politically sensitive issue?
1430	Beck v Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., No. 12896/83, 481 N.Y.S.2d 211, 215 (Sup Ct, Aug. 16, 1984)	1	Act of state doctrine precludes American courts from inquiring into the validity of the public acts of a recognized foreign sovereign committed on the sovereign's own soil, whether or not the acts conformed to sovereign's own laws, and conversely, since our law ordinarily does not recognize extraterritorial jurisdiction, a sovereign cannot affect the rights of noncitizens outside its borders. United Nations Charter, Art. 1 et seq., 59 Stat. 1031.	The Act of State doctrine precludes American courts from inquiring into the validity of the public acts of a recognized foreign sovereign committed on the sovereign's own soil, whether or not the acts conformed to the sovereign's own law.5 Underhill v. Hernandez, 168 U.S. 250, 18 S.Ct. 83, 42 L.Ed. 456; *775 Banco Nacional de Cuba v. Sabbatino 376 U.S. 398, 84 S.Ct. 923, 11 L.Ed.2d 804; French v. Banco Nacional de Cuba, 23 N.Y.2d 46, 295 N.Y.S.2d 433, 242 N.E.2d 704. Conversely, since our law ordinarily does not recognize extra-territorial jurisdiction, a sovereign cannot affect the rights of non-citizens outside its borders.	"Does the act of state doctrine preclude American courts from inquiring into the validity of the public acts of a recognized foreign sovereign committed on the sovereign's own soil, whether or not the acts conformed to sovereign's own laws?"

1431	Forbo-Giubiasco S. A. v. Congoleum Corp., 516 F. Supp. 1210, 1217 (S.D.N.Y. 1981)	7	"Act of state doctrine" precludes judicial determination of legality of acts of foreign states undertaken within their own territories which might embarrass executive department in its conduct of foreign affairs.	The Act of State doctrine precludes judicial determination of the legality of acts of foreign states undertaken within their own territories which might embarrass the executive department in its conduct of foreign affairs.	Does the act of state doctrine preclude judicial determination of the legality of acts of foreign states undertaken within their own territories which might embarrass the executive department in its conduct of foreign affairs?
1432	Dominicus Americana Bohio v. Gulf & W. Indus., 473 F. Supp. 680, 689 (S.D.N.Y. 1979)	7	Act of state doctrine is not limited to cases challenging the legality of foreign government acts; if it is necessary to inquire into the motivation of an act of a foreign government harmful to the plaintiff in order to establish that the decision was instigated by a private defendant, the act of state doctrine will apply.	However, the Second Circuit has not limited the act of state doctrine to cases challenging the legality of foreign governmental acts. Rather, it has held that if it is necessary to inquire into the motivation of an act of a foreign government harmful to the plaintiff in order to establish that that decision was instigated by a private defendant, the act of state doctrine will apply.	"If it is necessary to inquire into the motivation of an act of a foreign government harmful to the plaintiff in order to establish that the decision was instigated by a private defendant, will the act of state doctrine apply?"
1434	Fort Worth Hotel Ltd. P'ship v. Enserch Corp., 977 S.W.2d 746, 757 (Tex. App. 1998)	15	Motion in limine is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, before trial, certain evidentiary rulings that the court may be asked to make; its purpose is to prevent the other party from asking prejudicial questions and introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first asking the court's permission.	A motion in limine is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, before trial, certain evidentiary rulings that the court may be asked to make. The purpose of a motion in limine is to prevent the other party from asking prejudicial questions and introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first asking the court's permission.	Is the purpose of a motion in limine to prevent the other party from introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first asking the court's permission?
1435	Kelly v. New W. Fed. Sav., 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 803, 810, 49 Cal. App. 4th 659, 672 (Cal.App. 2 Dist.,1996)	6	It is a misuse of a motion in limine to attempt to compel witness or party to conform their trial testimony to preconceived factual scenario based on testimony given during pretrial discovery.	It is a misuse of a motion in limine to attempt to compel a witness or a party to conform his or her trial testimony to a preconceived factual scenario based on testimony given during pretrial discovery.	Is it a misuse of a motion in limine to attempt to compel witness or party to conform their trial testimony to a preconceived factual scenario based on testimony given during pretrial discovery?
1437	Premium Cigars Int'l, Ltd. v. Farmer-Butler-Leavitt Ins. Agency, 208 Ariz. 557, 572 (Ct. App. 2004)	39	A "motion in limine" filed in a civil case is generally used as a substitute for evidentiary objections at trial and as a means to exclude evidence from trial for violations of the disclosure rules.	57 A motion in limine filed in a civil case "is generally used as a substitute for evidentiary objections at trial" and "as a means to exclude evidence from trial for violations of the disclosure rules."	Is a motion in limine filed in a civil case generally used as a substitute for evidentiary objections at trial and as a means to exclude evidence from trial for violations of the disclosure rules?

1438	State of Ohio ex rel. Star Supply, Div. of Star Indus. v. City of Greenfield, Ohio, 528 F. Supp. 955, 958-959 (S.D. Ohio, 1981)	2	Under Ohio law, a surety that is required to pay amounts owing to subcontractor, laborers or materialmen is thereby subrogated to the rights of those it has paid as well as to the rights of those whose obligation it has discharged.	Under Ohio law, a surety that is required to pay amounts owing to subcontractors, laborers or materialmen is thereby subrogated to the rights of those it has paid as well as to the rights of those whose obligation it has discharged.	"Is a surety that is required to pay amounts owed to the subcontractor, laborers or materialmen thereby subrogated to the rights of those it has paid as well as to the rights of those whose obligation it has discharged?"
1439	United States v. Ganim, 510 F.3d 134, 149 (C.A.2 (Conn.), 2007)	10	Bribery can be accomplished through an ongoing course of conduct, so long as evidence shows that the favors and gifts flowing to a public official are in exchange for a pattern of official actions favorable to the donor.	Thus, bribery can be accomplished through an ongoing course of conduct, so long as evidence shows that the "favors and gifts flowing to a public official [are] in exchange for a pattern of official actions favorable to the donor.	"Can bribery of a public official be accomplished through an ongoing course of conduct, so long as the evidence shows that the favors and gifts flowing to a public official are in exchange for a pattern of official actions favorable to the donor?"
1441	Wiemerslage Through Wiemerslage v. Maine Twp. High Sch. Dist. 207, 824 F. Supp. 136, 139 (N.D. Ill. 1993)	2	Federal judicial intervention in day to day operations of public schools is highly undesirable and requires significant restraint; federal courts must not intervene in resolution of conflicts which arise in daily operation of school systems and which do not directly and sharply implicate basic constitutional values.	Federal judicial intervention in the day to day operations of public schools is highly undesirable and requires significant restraint. Federal courts must not "intervene in the resolution of conflicts which arise in the daily operation of school systems and which do not directly and sharply implicate basic constitutional values."	"In the educational context, are federal courts the appropriate forum for resolving daily conflicts arising from the operation of school systems?"
1442	Driscoll v. Gen. Nutrition Corp., 34 F. Supp. 2d 789, 791-92 (Conn. 1999)	2	Connecticut Workers' Compensation Act (WCA) compromises an employee's right to a common law tort action for work related injuries in return for relatively quick and certain compensation. C.G.S.A. SS 31-275 to 31-355a.	Thus, the WCA "compromise[s] *792 an employee's right to a common law tort action for work related injuries in return for relatively quick and certain compensation."	Does the Workers Compensation Act (WCA) compromise an employees right to a common law tort action for work related injuries in return for relatively quick and certain compensation?
1443	Virginia Sunshine All. v. Nuclear Regulatory Comm'n, 509 F. Supp. 863, 864 (D.C.D.C., 1981)	1	A court is to apply the law in effect at the time it renders its decision unless doing so would result in manifest injustice or there is a statutory direction or legislative history to the contrary.	a court is to apply the law in effect at the time it renders its decision unless doing so would result in manifest injustice or there is a statutory direction or legislative history to the contrary	Is a court to apply the law in effect at the time it renders its decision unless doing so would result in manifest injustice or there is a statutory direction or legislative history to the contrary?
1444	Bank of Marlinton v. McLaughlin, 123 W. Va. 608, 17 S.E.2d 213, 218 (1941)	9	A fraudulent grantee cannot equitably apply profits derived from the use of property obtained by fraud and have "subrogation" for the payment thereof on indebtedness assumed as consideration for the fraudulent transfer.	A fraudulent grantee cannot equitably apply profits derived from the use of property obtained by fraud and have subrogation for the payment thereof on indebtedness assumed as consideration for the fraudulent transfer.	Can a fraudulent grantee equitably apply profits derived from the use of property obtained by fraud and have subrogation for the payment thereof on indebtedness assumed as consideration for the fraudulent transfer?

1445	Behr v. Hook, 173 Vt. 122, 127 (2001)	6	Standardized waiver-of-subrogation clause in a construction contract between private parties in relatively equal bargaining positions is intended to allow the parties to exculpate each other from personal liability in the event of property loss or damage to the work to the extent each party is covered by insurance; by shifting the risk of loss to the insurance company regardless of which party is at fault, these clauses seek to avoid the prospect of extended litigation which would interfere with construction.	The instant case concerns a standardized waiver-of- subrogation clause in a construction contract between private parties in relatively equal bargaining positions. Such clauses are intended to allows the parties "to exculpate each other from personal liability in the event of property loss or damage to the work to the extent each party is covered by insurance." IRMA v. O'Donnell, Wicklund, Pigozzi & Peterson Architects, Inc., 295 Ill.App.3d 784, 229 Ill.Dec. 750,692 N.E.2d 739, 744 (1998). By shifting the risk of loss to the insurance company regardless of which party is at fault, these clauses seek to avoid "the prospect of extended litigation which would interfere with construction.	Are waiver-of-subrogation clauses in construction contracts intended to allow the parties to a contract to exculpate each other from personal liability?
1446	Behr v. Hook, 173 Vt. 122, 127 (2001)	6	Standardized waiver-of-subrogation clause in a construction contract between private parties in relatively equal bargaining positions is intended to allow the parties to exculpate each other from personal liability in the event of property loss or damage to the work to the extent each party is covered by insurance; by shifting the risk of loss to the insurance company regardless of which party is at fault, these clauses seek to avoid the prospect of extended litigation which would interfere with construction.	The instant case concerns a standardized waiver-of- subrogation clause in a construction contract between private parties in relatively equal bargaining positions. Such clauses are intended to allows the parties "to exculpate each other from personal liability in the event of property loss or damage to the work to the extent each party is covered by insurance." IRMA v. O'Donnell, Wicklund, Pigozzi & Peterson Architects, Inc., 295 Ill.App.3d 784, 229 Ill.Dec. 750,692 N.E.2d 739, 744 (1998). By shifting the risk of loss to the insurance company regardless of which party is at fault, these clauses seek to avoid "the prospect of extended litigation which would interfere with construction."	Is a standardized waiver-of- subrogation clause in a construction contract allow the parties to exculpate each other from personal liability?
1447	Employers Res. Mgmt. Co. v. James, 62 F.3d 627, 634 (4th Cir. 1995)	5	Nothing in ERISA prevents Virginia from functionally requiring employer to maintain plan solely for purpose of complying with applicable worker's compensation laws. Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, S 2 et seq., 29 U.S.C.A. S 1001 et seq.; Va.Code 1950, SS 65.2-100 et seq., 65.2-801, subd. A, pars. 1, 3.	In short, nothing in ERISA prevents Virginia from functionally requiring an employer to maintain a plan "solely for the purpose of complying with applicable workmen's compensation laws."	Does The Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) prevent a state from functionally requiring an employer to maintain a plan solely for purposes of complying with the applicable workers compensation laws?

1449	Snowden v. CheckPoint Check Cashing, 290 F.3d 631, 636 (C.A.4 (Md.), 2002)	4	If a party seeks to avoid arbitration or a stay of federal court proceedings pending the outcome of arbitration by challenging the validity or enforceability of an arbitration provision on any grounds that exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract, the grounds must relate specifically to the arbitration clause and not just to the contract as a whole. 9 U.S.C.A. § 2.	The law is well settled in this circuit that, if a party seeks to avoid arbitration and/or a stay of federal court proceedings pending the outcome of arbitration by challenging the validity or enforceability of an arbitration provision on any grounds that "exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract," 9 U.S.C. § 2, the grounds "must relate specifically to the arbitration clause and not just to the contract as a whole."	Must the grounds for revocation relate specifically to the arbitration clause and not just to the contract as a whole?
1451	Illinois Commerce Comm'n v. F.E.R.C., 576 F.3d 470, 476 (7th Cir. 2009)	3	The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) is not authorized to approve a pricing scheme that requires a group of utilities to pay for facilities from which its members derive no benefits, or benefits that are trivial in relation to the costs sought to be shifted to its members.	FERC is not authorized to approve a pricing scheme that requires a group of utilities to pay for facilities from which its members derive no benefits, or benefits that are trivial in relation to the costs sought to be shifted to its members. "	Is the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) authorized to approve a pricing scheme that requires utilities to pay for facilities which the members do not derive benefits from?
1453	Referente v. City View Courtyard, 477 S.W.3d 882, 885 (Tex. App. 2015)	1	Whether a party nonsuited to avoid an unfavorable ruling is a question of fact, and that the trial court's finding on that issue may be challenged on the ground that it is not supported by sufficient evidence.	We agree that whether a party nonsuited to avoid an unfavorable ruling is a question of fact, and that the trial court's finding on that issue may be challenged on the ground that it is not supported by sufficient evidence.	Is the question whether a party nonsuited to avoid an unfavourable ruling a question of fact and can the trial court's finding on that issue be challenged on the ground that it is not supported by sufficient evidence?
1454	In re Nancy A., 344 Ill. App. 3d 540, 551 (2003)	17	Plaintiffs have an almost absolute right to take a voluntary dismissal absent an unequivocal conflict between a specific rule of the Supreme Court and Code of Civil Procedure. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-1009.	Plaintiffs have an almost absolute right to take a voluntary dismissal absent an unequivocal conflict between a specific rule of the supreme court and section 2-1009 of the Illinois Code of Civil Procedure. 735 ILCS 5/2-1009(West 2000); Winn, 308 Ill.App.3d at 1058, 242 Ill.Dec	Do plaintiffs have an almost absolute right to take a voluntary dismissal absent an unequivocal conflict between a specific rule of the Supreme Court and Code of Civil Procedure?
1455	In re Shinn, 195 Cal. App. 2d 683, 686, 16 Cal. Rptr. 165, 168 (Ct. App. 1961)	1	A primary purpose of the educational system is to train school children in good citizenship, patriotism, and loyalty to state and nation as means of protecting public welfare. West's Ann.Const. art. 9, SS 1, 5-7, 14.	A primary purpose of the educational system is to train school children in good citizenship, patriotism and loyalty to the state and the nation as a means of protecting the public welfare.	"Is training of school children in good citizenship, patriotism, and loyalty to state and nation as means of protecting public welfare a primary purpose of the educational system?"
1456	Louis R. Shapiro, Inc. v. Milspemes Corp., 20 A.D.2d 857, 857 (N.Y.S.2d Sup. Ct. 1964)	1	Ordinarily, plaintiff has right to discontinue pending action at any time unless substantial rights have accrued or his adversary's rights would be prejudiced thereby, and even then right may be exercised subject to terms imposed by courts. CPLR Rule 3217(a), par. 1.	Ordinarily, a plaintiff has a right to discontinue a pending action at any time unless substantial rights have accrued or his adversary's rights would be prejudiced thereby. Even then the right may be exercised but subject to terms imposed by the courts.	Does a plaintiff have the right to discontinue a pending action at any time unless substantial rights have accrued or his adversary's rights would be prejudiced thereby?

1457	Peninsular Florida Dist. Council of Assemblies of God v. Pan Am. Inv. & Dev. Corp., 450 So. 2d 1231, 1232 (Fla.App. 4 Dist., 1984)	1	When fraud is asserted as claim or defense, facts and circumstances constituting fraud must be plead with specificity, and all essential elements of fraudulent conduct must be stated, i.e., that plaintiff relied to his detriment on false statements concerning material fact made with knowledge of its falsity and intent to induce reliance. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.120(b).	When fraud is asserted as a claim or defense, the facts and circumstances constituting the fraud must be pled with specificity, Fla.R.Civ.P. 1.120(b), and all essential elements of fraudulent conduct must be stated, i.e., that plaintiff relied to his detriment on a false statement concerning a material fact made with knowledge of its falsity and an intent to induce reliance.	Should facts constituting fraud be plead with specificity?
1458	City of Palos Heights v. Vill. of Worth, 29 Ill. App. 3d 746, 749 (1975)	3	Upon proper notice of payment of costs, plaintiff has absolute right to dismiss his action before trial or hearing has begun and trial court has no discretion to interfere with exercise of that right. S.H.A. ch. 110, SS 52, 52(1).	Upon proper notice and payment of costs, a plaintiff has an absolute right to dismiss his action before a trial or hearing has begun, and the trial court has no discretion to interfere with the exercise of that right.	Does a plaintiff have an absolute right to dismiss his action before trial or hearing has begun and trial court has no discretion to interfere with exercise of that right upon proper notice of payment of costs?
1460	Chacon v. Jones-Schilds, 904 N.E.2d 286, 289 (2009)	6	A pretrial order is to limit the issues for trial to those not disposed of by admission or agreement of counsel, and such order when entered shall control the subsequent course of action, unless modified thereafter to prevent manifest injustice. Trial Procedure Rule 16(J).	A pretrial order is to "limit the issues for trial to those not disposed of by admission or agreement of counsel, and such order when entered shall control the subsequent course of action, unless modified thereafter to prevent manifest injustice.	"Does a pretrial order, when entered, control the subsequent course of the action unless modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice?"
1461	Rubin v. Rubin, 120 N.M. 592, 595 (1995)	4	Under Illinois law, motions for continuance alleging an inability to present certain evidence must be accompanied by affidavits establishing factual basis for the continuance, and, under both Illinois and New Mexico law, the lower court has broad discretion in granting or denying continuances.	In Illinois, motions for continuance alleging an inability to present certain evidence must be accompanied by affidavits establishing the factual basis for the continuance, and, as in New Mexico, the lower court has broad discretion in granting or denying continuances.	Should motions for continuance alleging an inability to present certain evidence be accompanied by affidavits establishing factual basis for the continuance?
1462	Gohner v. Zundel, 411 N.W.2d 75, 79-80 (N.D. 1987)	4	Imposition of appropriate sanction for violation of pretrial order is within broad discretion of trial court, and court abuses its discretion only when it acts in arbitrary, unreasonable, or unconscionable manner. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 37.	While we believe the same rationale is applicable for *80 violations of pretrial orders, the imposition of an appropriate sanction is nevertheless within the broad discretion of the trial court. A trial court abuses its discretion when it acts in an arbitrary, unreasonable, or unconscionable manner.	"Is the imposition of an appropriate sanction for violation of a pretrial order within the broad discretion of a trial court, and does a court abuse its discretion only when it acts in arbitrary, unreasonable, or unconscionable manner?"

1464	Monod v. Futura, 415 F.2d 1170, 1173 (10th Cir. 1969)	1	Once the issues have been definitively stated in the pretrial order, the pleadings are superseded, the issues are set and discovery proceeds accordingly; with the issues having been thus defined, they ought to be adhered to in the absence of some good and sufficient reason, which must rest largely within the discretion of the trial court. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc. rule 16, 28 U.S.C.A.	As we have previously stated, once the issues have been definitively stated in the pre-trial order, the pleadings are superseded, the issues are set and discovery proceeds accordingly. With the issues having been thus defined, they ought to be adhered to in the absence of some good and sufficient reason, which must rest largely within the discretion of the trial court.	"Are the issues to be adhered to in the absence of some good and sufficient reason, once they are defined in a final pretrial order?"
1465	Bill DeLuca Enterprises v. Comm'r of Revenue, 431 Mass. 314, 322 (2000)	10	Essence of any system of taxation is that it should produce revenue ascertainable, and payable to the government, at regular intervals, since only by such a system is it practicable to produce a regular flow of income and apply methods of accounting, assessment, and collection capable of practical operation.	"It is the essence of any system of taxation that it should produce revenue ascertainable, and payable to the government, at regular intervals. Only by such a system is it practicable to produce a regular flow of income and apply methods of accounting, assessment, and collection capable of practical operation."	"Is the system of taxation practicable to produce a regular flow of income and apply methods of accounting, assessment, and collection capable of practical operation?"
1466	Binger v. King Pest Control, 401 So. 2d 1310, 1313 (Fla. 1981)	1	Pretrial order directing parties to exchange names of witnesses requires listing or notification of all witnesses that parties reasonably foresee will be called to testify, whether for substantive, corroborative, impeachment or rebuttal purposes.	Consistent with this rule, we now hold that a pretrial order directing the parties to exchange the names of witnesses requires a listing or notification of all witnesses that the parties reasonably foresee will be called to testify, whether for substantive, corroborative, impeachment or rebuttal purposes.	Does a pretrial order directing parties to exchange names of witnesses require listing or notification of all witnesses that parties reasonably foresee will be called to testify?
1468	Sidwell Oil & Gas Co. v. Loyd, 230 Kan. 77, 86 (1981)	11	If parties have submitted their entire case for decision on all issues, without objection, they have consented to having court decide such issues even though outside the scope of the pretrial order.	"Where the record shows the parties have submitted their entire case for decision on all issues, without objection, they are held to have consented that the court decide such issues even though outside the scope of the pretrial order."	"If parties have submitted their entire case for decision on all issues, without objection, have they consented to having a court decide such issues even though outside the scope of the pretrial order?"
1470	Goudy v. Dayton Newspapers, 14 Ohio App. 2d 207, 208 (1967)	6	It is within discretion of trial court to grant a mistrial or a continuance for purpose of securing documentary evidence, or to grant a new trial for surprise which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against.	It is within the discretion of a trial court whether to grant a mistrial, or a continuance for the purpose of securing documentary evidence, or whether to grant a new trial for surprise which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against.	"Is it within the discretion of a trial court to grant a mistrial or a continuance for purpose of securing documentary evidence, or to grant a new trial for surprise which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against?"
1471	Montgomery v. McDaniel, 271 Va. 465, 470 (2006)	6	The ability to refile the nonsuited action at some future time is a right afforded a plaintiff by the General Assembly, regardless of any inconvenience or discomfort it might place on the nonsuited defendant. West's V.C.A. SS 8.01-229(E)(3), 8.01-380(B).	The ability to refile the action at some future time is a right afforded a plaintiff by the General Assembly, regardless of any inconvenience or discomfort it might place on the nonsuited defendant.	"Is the ability to refile the nonsuited action at some future time a right afforded a plaintiff by the General Assembly, regardless of any inconvenience or discomfort it might place on the nonsuited defendant?"

1473	Norris v. Hearst Trust, 500 F.3d 454, 461 (5th Cir. 2007)	3	Under Texas law, subject to certain conditions, plaintiff who takes nonsuit is not precluded from filing subsequent suit seeking the same relief, and nonsuit may have effect of vitiating earlier interlocutory orders. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 162.	It is recognized that under Texas law "[s]ubject to certain conditions, a plaintiff who takes a nonsuit is not precluded from filing a subsequent suit seeking the same relief," Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Specia, 849 S.W.2d 805, 806 (Tex.1993), and "a nonsuit may have the effect of vitiating earlier interlocutory orders"	"Is a plaintiff who takes nonsuit precluded from filing a subsequent suit seeking the same relief, and nonsuit may have effect of vitiating earlier interlocutory orders?"
1475	Burry & Son Homebuilders v. Ford, 310 S.C. 529, 531 (1992)	1	Generally, plaintiff is entitled to voluntary nonsuit without prejudice as matter of right unless legal prejudice is shown by defendant or important issues of public policy are present; once legal prejudice is found, granting or denial is within discretion of trial court. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(a)(1).	Generally, the plaintiff is entitled to a voluntary non-suit without prejudice as a matter of right unless legal prejudice is shown by the defendant or important issues of public policy are present. Bowen & Smoot v. Plumlee, 301 S.C. 262, 391 S.E.2d 558 (1990). 1 Once legal prejudice is found, the granting or denial is within the discretion of the trial court.	Is a plaintiff entitled to a voluntary nonsuit without prejudice as matter of right unless legal prejudice is shown by a defendant or important issues of public policy are present?
1476	Sidwell Oil & Gas Co. v. Loyd, 230 Kan. 77, 86 (1981)	11	If parties have submitted their entire case for decision on all issues, without objection, they have consented to having court decide such issues even though outside the scope of the pretrial order.	"Where the record shows the parties have submitted their entire case for decision on all issues, without objection, they are held to have consented that the court decide such issues even though outside the scope of the pretrial order."	"If parties submit their entire case for decision on all issues, without objection, do they consent to having the court decide such issues even though outside the scope of a pretrial order?"
1477	Marino v. King, 355 S.W.3d 629, 633 (Tex. 2011)	6	Although trial courts have broad discretion to permit or deny the withdrawal of deemed admissions, they cannot do so arbitrarily, unreasonably, or without reference to guiding rules or principles. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 198.3.	Although trial courts have broad discretion to permit or deny the withdrawal of deemed admissions, they cannot do so arbitrarily, unreasonably, or without reference to guiding rules or principles.	"Although trial courts have broad discretion to permit or deny the withdrawal of deemed admissions, can they do so arbitrarily, unreasonably, or without reference to guiding rules or principles?"
1480	Ramirez v. Noble Energy, 521 S.W.3d 851, 856–57 (Tex. App. 2017)	5	Trial courts have broad discretion to permit or deny withdrawal of deemed admissions; however, courts cannot do so arbitrarily, unreasonably, or without reference to guiding rules or principles. Tex. R. Civ. P. 198.3.	Trial courts have broad discretion to permit or deny withdrawal of deemed admissions; however, courts cannot do so arbitrarily, unreasonably, or *857 without reference to guiding rules or principles.	"Trial courts have broad discretion to permit or deny withdrawal of deemed admissions; however, can courts do so arbitrarily, unreasonably, or without reference to guiding rules or principles?"
1482	State ex rel. Kramer v. Carroll, 309 S.W.2d 654, 658 (Mo.App., 1958)	6	Court is without jurisdiction to require production of documentary evidence at taking of depositions unless such evidence is first shown to be relevant and material to issues in pending cause.	The trial court is without jurisdiction to require the production of documentary evidence at the taking of depositions 'unless such evidence is first shown to be relevant and material to the issues in the pending cause.	Is a court without jurisdiction to require production of documentary evidence at taking of depositions unless such evidence is first shown to be relevant and material to issues in pending cause?

1483	Chambers v. Pruitt, 241 S.W.3d 679, 685 (Tex. App. 2007)	12	Trial court has broad discretion to permit or deny the withdrawal of deemed admissions as long as it does not act unreasonably, arbitrarily, or without reference to guiding principles.	The trial court has broad discretion to permit or deny the withdrawal of deemed admissions as long as it does not act unreasonably, arbitrarily, or without reference to guiding principles.	"Does the trial court have broad discretion to permit or deny the withdrawal of deemed admissions as long as it does not act unreasonably, arbitrarily, or without reference to guiding principles?"
1486	Reeves v. Boatman, 769 P.2d 917, 920 (Wyo., 1989)	2	Effect of admissions does not mean that favored litigant is necessarily absolved from further proof to justify recovery or establish its amount if all dispositive facts involving recovery were not included in undenied admissions. Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 36, 36(b).	The effect of admissions pursuant to W.R.C.P. 36(b) does not mean that the favored litigant is necessarily absolved from further proof to justify recovery or establish its amount if all dispositive facts involving recovery were not included in the undenied admissions.	Does the effect of admissions not mean that a favored litigant is necessarily absolved from further proof to justify recovery or establish its amount if all dispositive facts involving recovery were not included in undenied admissions?
1487	Shwe v. Jaber, 147 N.C. App. 148, 151 (2001)	3	Under civil procedure rules, matters as to which admission is requested are deemed admitted unless party to whom request is directed serves written response within time permitted by rule. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 36(a), G.S. S 1A-1.	1A-1, Rule 36(a), matters as to which admission is requested are deemed admitted unless the party to whom the request is directed serves a written response within the time permitted by the rule.	"Under civil procedure rules, are matters as to which admission is requested deemed admitted unless party to whom request is directed serves written response within time permitted by rule?"
1491	Motor Car Classics v. Abbott, 316 S.W.3d 223, 236 (Tex. App. 2010)	26	Although trial courts have broad discretion to permit or deny withdrawal of deemed admissions, they cannot do so arbitrarily, unreasonably, or without reference to guiding rules or principles. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 198.2(c).	Although trial courts have broad discretion to permit or deny withdrawal of deemed admissions, they cannot do so arbitrarily, unreasonably, or without reference to guiding rules or principles.	"Although trial courts have broad discretion to permit or deny withdrawal of deemed admissions, can they do so arbitrarily, unreasonably, or without reference to guiding rules or principles?"
1492	Chappelaer v. Gen. G. M. C. Trucks, 130 Ga. App. 664, 666 (1974)	2	Continuances because of the absence of counsel are not favored and strict compliance with the law is required, particularly since the matter rests within the sound discretion of the trial court.	Continuances because of the absence of counsel are not favored and a strict compliance with the law is required, particularly since the matter rests within the sound discretion of the trial court.' Revel v.	"Are continuances because of the absence of counsel not favored and strict compliance with the law is required, particularly since the matter rests within the sound discretion of the trial court?"
1493	Cryer v. West, 771 S.W.2d 5, 7 (Tex. App. 1989)	7	Among factors court must consider in determining whether party will suffer irreparable injury from application of legislative continuance rule are nature and urgency of rights involved; moreover, it is only when opposing party does not show such irreparable injury to substantial, existing right that trial court has no discretion except to grant motion for continuance. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 254; V.T.C.A., Civil Practice & Remedies Code S 30.003.	Whether, in a given situation, a party will suffer irreparable injury from the application of the legislative continuance rule is a question within the sound discretion of the trial court. See Waites v. Sondock, 561 S.W.2d at 775. Among the factors the court must consider are the nature and urgency of the rights involved. Id. at 776. It is only when the opposing party does not show such irreparable injury to a substantial, existing legal right that the trial court has no discretion except to grant the motion for continuance.	Should the court consider nature and urgency of the rights involved in determining whether non-movant will suffer irreparable injury from application of legislative continuance statute?

1494	Shankweiler v. McCall Procter/Densham, Ltd., 183 Ga. App. 257, 258 (1987)	1	If party served with request for admission neither files timely response thereto nor moves to withdraw admission resulting from his failure to do so, matter stands conclusively admitted. O.C.G.A. S 9-11-36.	Pursuant to OCGA 9-11-36, if a party served with a request for admission neither files a timely response thereto nor moves to withdraw the admission resulting from his failure to do so, the matter stands conclusively admitted.	"If a party served with request for admission neither files timely response thereto nor moves to withdraw admission resulting from his failure to do so, does the matter stand conclusively admitted?"
1495	Vaughn v. Grand Prairie Indep. Sch. Dist., 784 S.W.2d 474, 477 (Tex.App.-Dallas, 1989)	2	When one party fails to respond to requests for admissions the matters are deemed admitted as a matter of law and it is not necessary for trial court to enter a formal ruling to such effect. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 169.	Where one party fails to respond to requests for admissions the matters are deemed admitted as a matter of law and it is not necessary for the trial court to enter a formal ruling to this effect.	"Where one party fails to respond to requests for admissions, is it necessary for the trial court to enter a formal ruling to effect that such the matters are deemed admitted as a matter of law?"
1498	Schleimer v. Winter, 2002 WL 120561, at *4 (Cal.App. 2 Dist.,2002)	5	A court's determination that amount requested is unreasonable alone does not justify denial of an award of costs of proof if moving party has presented sufficient information for court to determine a reasonable amount. West's Ann.Cal. C.C.P. S 2033, subd. o.	A court's determination that the amount requested is unreasonable alone does not justify the denial of an award of costs of proof under Code of Civil Procedure section 2033, subdivision (o) if the moving party has presented sufficient information for the court to determine a reasonable amount.	"Does a court's determination that amount requested is unreasonable, justify denial of an award of costs of proof if moving party has presented sufficient information for court to determine a reasonable amount?"
1499	Armstrong v. Collins, 366 S.C. 204, 232 (2005)	49	When a late amendment to a pleading would cause prejudice to the opposing party, the trial court should either deny the amendment or grant a continuance to allow the time reasonably necessary to prepare for the new issue. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 15.	However, when a late amendment would cause prejudice to the opposing party, the trial court should either deny the amendment or grant a continuance to allow the time reasonably necessary to prepare for the new issue.	"When a late amendment to a pleading would cause prejudice to the opposing party, should the trial court either deny the amendment or grant a continuance?"
1500	Acorn Iron Works v. Auditor Gen., 295 Mich. 143, 151 (1940)	5	Tax exactions, property or excise, must rest upon legislative enactment, and collectors can act only within express authority conferred thereby, and the scope of such laws cannot be extended by implication or forced construction, and language, if dubious, is not resolved against the taxpayer.	Tax exactions, property or excise, must rest upon legislative enactment and collectors can act only within express authority conferred thereby, the scope of 130 such laws cannot be extended by implication or forced construction and language, if dubious, is not resolved against the taxpayer.'	"Does tax exactions, property or excise, rest upon legislative enactment?"
1501	State v. Agan, 259 Ga. 541, 544 (1989)	3	Other than those emoluments of public office that are expressly authorized and established by law, no holder of public office is entitled to request or receive, from any source, directly or indirectly, anything of value in exchange for the performance of any act related to the functions of that office. O.C.G.A. SS 16-10-2, 21-5-1 et seq.	Other than those emoluments of public office that are expressly authorized and established by law, no holder of public office is entitled to request or receive-from any source, directly or indirectly- anything of value in exchange for the performance of any act related to the functions of that office.	"Under bribery statute, what is a holder of public office entitled to request or receive, from any source, directly or indirectly, anything of value in exchange for the performance of any act related to the functions of that office?"

1506	Rainwater v. Haddox, 544 S.W.2d 729, 731 (Tex. Civ. App. 1976)	1	Where application for continuance fails to conform to rules, denial of continuance comes within sound discretion of court and it will be presumed, absent a showing of abuse of discretion, that court properly exercised its discretion. Rules of Civil Procedure, rules 251, 252.	Where an application for continuance fails to conform to the rules, the denial of a continuance comes within the sound discretion of the court and it will be presumed, absent a showing of abuse of discretion, that the court properly exercised its discretion.	"Where application for continuance fails to conform to rules, does the denial of continuance come within the sound discretion of court and it will be presumed, absent a showing of abuse of discretion, that a court properly exercised its discretion?"
1508	Simonsen v. Hendricks Sodding & Landscaping Inc., 5 Neb. App. 263, 263 (1997)	2	Application for continuance must be in writing and supported by affidavit which contains factual allegations demonstrating good cause or sufficient reason necessitating postponement of proceedings.	" 'An application for continuance must be in writing and supported by an affidavit which contains factual allegations demonstrating good cause or sufficient reason necessitating postponement of proceedings.' "	Must an application for continuance be in writing and supported by affidavit which contains factual allegations demonstrating good cause or sufficient reason necessitating postponement of proceedings?
1510	Schindler v. AG Aero Distributors, 502 S.W.2d 581, 584 (Tex. App. 1973)	1	The trial court has considerable discretion in refusing or granting motion to deem admitted the matters inquired about in a request for admission where there is neither answer nor denial within the time specified in the request. Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 169.	The trial court, under Rule 169, Texas Rules of Civil Procedure, has considerable discretion in refusing or granting a motion to deem admitted the matters inquired about in a request for admissions where there is neither answer nor denial within the time specified in the request.	Does the trial court have considerable discretion in refusing or granting a motion to deem admitted the matters inquired about?
1517	Sculley v. City of Philadelphia, 381 Pa. 1, 10 (1955)	5	A pedestrian is not required to keep his vision fixed continually on the ground immediately in front of him to discover possible points of danger, especially where his attention must also be directed toward the imminent peril of approaching vehicles.	A pedestrian is not required to keep his vision fixed continually on the ground immediately in front of him to discover possible points of danger, especially where his attention must also be directed toward the imminent peril of an approaching vehicle:	Is a pedestrian required to keep his vision fixed continually on the ground to discover possible points of danger?
1518	Scott v. Scott, 147 S.W. 3d 887, 897 (Mo.App. W.D., 2004)	17	Failure to follow the simple, explicit, and mandatory procedure to properly present a motion for continuance renders the motion deficient, meaning the trial court is not obligated to consider the motion. V.A.M.R. 65.03.	Failure to follow "the simple, explicit, and mandatory procedure to properly present a motion for continuance" renders the motion deficient, meaning the trial court is not obligated to consider the motion.	"Does failure to follow the simple, explicit, and mandatory procedure to properly present a motion for continuance render the motion deficient, meaning the trial court is not obligated to consider the motion?"
1522	Sowinski v. Walker, 198 P.3d 1134, 1158 (Alaska, 2008)	29	Trial courts are afforded broad discretion to determine whether a situation entails a manifest injustice sufficient to justify departure from pretrial scheduling orders. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 16(e).	Trial courts are afforded broad discretion to determine whether a situation entails a "manifest injustice" sufficient to justify departure from pretrial scheduling orders.	Are trial courts afforded broad discretion to determine whether a situation entails a manifest injustice sufficient to justify departure from pretrial scheduling orders?

1523	Tucker v. Tucker, 55 N.Y.2d 378, 383, 434 N.E.2d 1050, 1052 (1982)	1	While authority of court to grant or to deny an application by a party seeking voluntarily to discontinue litigation is within its sound discretion, ordinarily a party cannot be compelled to litigate and, absent special circumstances, discontinuance should be granted. McKinney's CPLR 3217(b); McKinney's DRL S 236, Pts. A, B.	While the authority of a court to grant or to deny an application made to it pursuant to CPLR 3217 (subd [b]) by a party seeking voluntarily to discontinue litigation is within its sound discretion, ordinarily a party cannot be compelled to litigate and, absent special circumstances, discontinuance should be granted	Can a party be compelled to litigate while authority of a court to grant or to deny an application seeking voluntarily to discontinue litigation is within its sound discretion?
1524	Richey v. U.S., 322 F.3d 1317, 1323 (C.A.Fed.,2003)	2	An officer seeking correction of military records may either apply as an initial matter to a corrections board, or file suit under the Tucker Act in the Court of Federal Claims. 10 U.S.C.A. S 1552(a)(1); 28 U.S.C.A. SS 1346, 1491.	Congress has given the military secretaries the power to correct military records using civilian Corrections Boards. An officer seeking correction of military records may either apply as an initial matter to a Corrections Board, or file suit under the Tucker Act in the Court of Federal Claims.	"Can an officer seeking correction of military records apply as an initial matter to a corrections board, or file suit under the Tucker Act in the Court of Federal Claims?"
1526	Zavoral v. Pac. Intermountain Exp., 181 Neb. 40, 43, 146 N.W.2d 796, 799 (1966)	2	Generally, the effect of a pretrial order is to control subsequent course of the action, and unless order is modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice, court may exclude evidence on issues not stated in pretrial order, and such issues need not be submitted to jury.	Generally, the effect of a pretrial order is to control the subsequent course of the action, and unless the order is modified at the trial to prevent a manifest injustice, the court may exclude evidenc on issues not stated in the pretrial order, and such issues need not be submitted to the jury.	Does pre-trial order control a subsequent course of action and can the trial court exclude evidence on issues not stated in the pretrial order?
1527	Boulet v. State, 189 S.W.3d 833, 837 (Tex. App. 2006)	7	Although the trial court has broad discretion to permit or deny the withdrawal of deemed admissions, it cannot do so arbitrarily, unreasonably, or without reference to guiding rules or principles. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 198.3.	Although the trial court has broad discretion to permit or deny the withdrawal of deemed admissions, it cannot do so arbitrarily, unreasonably, or without reference to guiding rules or principles.	"Although the trial court has broad discretion to permit or deny the withdrawal of deemed admissions, can it do so arbitrarily, unreasonably, or without reference to guiding rules or principles?"
1528	Roberts v. TriQuint Semiconductor, 358 Or. 413, 417 (Or., 2015)	1	The question whether a trial court should dismiss an action on the basis of a forum-selection agreement is a legal determination that may be raised by way of a motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction over the subject matter. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 21(A)(1).	The question whether a trial court should dismiss an action on the basis of a forum-selection agreement "is a legal determination" that may be raised by way of an ORCP 21 A(1) motion to dismiss.	Is the question whether a trial court should dismiss an action on the basis of a forum-selection agreement a legal determination that may be raised by way of a motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction over the subject matter?

1531	Scott v. Greenville Hous. Auth., 353 S.C. 639, 651 (2003)	6	Trial court may allow party to amend or withdraw its answers to request to admit when: (1) presentation of the merits is furthered by amendment, and (2) party who obtained admission cannot demonstrate prejudice because of amendment. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 36(b).	Therefore, a trial court "may allow a party to amend or withdraw its answers to a request to admit when: (1) the presentation of the merits is furthered by the amendment; and (2) the party who obtained the admission cannot demonstrate prejudice because of the amendment."	Can a trial court allow a party to amend or withdraw its answers to request to admit when presentation of the merits is furthered by amendment and when the party who obtained admission cannot demonstrate prejudice because of amendment?
1532	Warner v. Chauffeurs, Teamsters, & Helpers Local Union No. 414, 73 N.E.3d 190, 197 (Ind.App., 2017)	6	In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the trial court may consider not only the complaint and motion but also any affidavits or evidence submitted in support. Ind. R. Trial P. 12(B)(1).	In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the trial court may consider not only the complaint and motion but also any affidavits or evidence submitted in support.	"In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, may the trial court consider not only the complaint and motion but also any affidavits or evidence submitted in support?"
1533	Turner v. Richmond Power & Light Co., 763 N.E.2d 1005, 1007 (Ind.App., 2002)	2	In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the trial court may consider not only the complaint and motion, but also any affidavits or evidence submitted in support; in addition, the trial court may weigh the evidence to determine the existence of the requisite jurisdictional facts. Trial Procedure Rule 12(B)(1).	In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the trial court may consider not only the complaint and motion, but also any affidavits or evidence submitted in support. Indiana Dep't of Highways v. Dixon, 541 N.E.2d 877, 884 (Ind.1989). In addition, the trial court may weigh the evidence to determine the existence of the requisite jurisdictional facts.	"In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, may the trial court consider not only the complaint and motion but also any affidavits or evidence submitted in support?"
1536	Moon v. Phipps, 67 Wash. 2d 948, 954 (1966)	5	The agent has burden of proving in every case that his principal not only had knowledge that agent was to be buyer or seller, but also burden of showing that all information in possession of agent had been communicated to his principal prior to giving of consent.	And the agent has the burden of proving in every case that his principal not only had knowledge that the agent was to be the buyer or seller, but also the burden of showing that all information in possession of the agent had been communicated to his principal prior to the giving of consent.	Does the agent have the burden of proving in every case that his principal not only had knowledge that the agent was to be the buyer or seller but also the burden of showing that all information in possession of the agent had been communicated to his principal prior to the giving of consent?
1537	Andra v. Left Gate Prop. Holding, 453 S.W.3d 216, 224 (Mo. 2015)	4	When a nonresident defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction is based on facts not appearing in the record, a trial court may consider affidavits and depositions properly filed in support of the motion. Mo. Sup. Ct. R. 55.28.	When the motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction is based on facts not appearing in the record, a court may also consider affidavits and depositions properly filed in support of the motion to dismiss.	"When motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction is based on facts not appearing in the record, will a trial court consider affidavits and depositions properly filed in support of the motion?"

1539	Wilkerson v. Howell Contrs., Inc., 163 Ohio App. 3d 38, 42–43 (2005)	1	When ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction, the trial court must determine whether the plaintiff has alleged any cause of action that the trial court has authority to decide. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(B)(1).	When ruling on a Civ.R. 12(B)(1) motion to dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction, the trial court must determine whether the plaintiff has alleged any cause of action that the court has authority to decide.	"When ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction, must the trial court determine whether the plaintiff has alleged any cause of action that the trial court has authority to decide?"
1540	Brookfield Mach. v. Calbrit Design, 929 F. Supp. 491, 494 (Mass. 1996)	2	In considering defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, court employs prima facie standard, under which court considers whether plaintiffs have proffered evidence that, if credited, is enough to support findings of all facts essential to personal jurisdiction; when determining whether prima facie showing has been made, court does not act as fact finder, but instead accepts properly supported proffers of evidence by plaintiff as true.	In considering defendant's motion, this Court employs the prima facie standard, under which the Court considers whether the plaintiffs have proffered evidence that, "if credited, is enough to support findings of all facts essential to personal jurisdiction." Boit v. Gar- Tec Products, Inc., 967 F.2d 671, 675 (1st Cir.1992). When determining whether a prima facie showing has been made, this Court does not act as a factfinder, but instead "accepts properly supported proffers of evidence by a plaintiff as true."	"Under the prima facie standard, is it an enquiry whether the plaintiff has proffered evidence which, if credited, sufficiently support findings of all facts essential to personal jurisdiction?"
1541	Bonner v. Peterson, 301 Ga. App. 443, 443 (2009)	2	A motion to dismiss asserting sovereign immunity is based upon the trial court's lack of subject matter jurisdiction, rather than the merits of the plaintiff's claim.	A motion to dismiss asserting sovereign immunity, however, is based upon the trial court's lack of subject matter jurisdiction, rather than the merits of the plaintiff's claim.	Is a motion to dismiss asserting sovereign immunity based upon the trial court's lack of subject matter jurisdiction rather than the merits of the plaintiff's claim?
1545	Wishard Mem'l Hosp. v. Kerr, 846 N.E.2d 1083, 1093 (Ind. Ct. App. 2006)	24	The exclusive remedies provided in the Worker's Compensation Act are in derogation of common law, and a statute that is in derogation of common law must be strictly construed against limitations on a claimant's right to bring suit. West's A.I.C. 22-3-2-6.	the remedies provided in the Worker's Compensation Act are in derogation of common law, and a statute that is in derogation of common law must be strictly construed against limitations on a claimant's right to bring suit.	"Are the remedies provided in the Workers Compensation Act in derogation of common law, and must the statute be strictly construed against limitations on a claimants right to bring suit?"
1546	Peoples Bank v. Frazee, 318 S.W.3d 121, 126 (Mo., 2010)	2	Generally, when personal jurisdiction is contested by the filing of a motion to dismiss an action, the plaintiff bears the burden of establishing that the defendant's contacts with the forum state were sufficient.	Generally, when personal jurisdiction is contested by the filing of a motion to dismiss a Missouri action, the plaintiff bears the burden of establishing that the defendant's contacts with the forum state were sufficient.	"Generally, when personal jurisdiction is contested by the filing of a motion to dismiss an action, does the plaintiff bear the burden of establishing that the defendant's contacts with the forum state were sufficient?"
1547	Suarez v. Benihana Nat. of Florida Corp., 88 So. 3d 349, 352–53 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2012)	3	When reviewing a case for fraud on the court, the trial court should consider the proper mix of factors and carefully balance a policy favoring adjudication on the merits with competing policies to maintain the integrity of the judicial system.	"When reviewing a case for fraud, the court should consider the proper mix of factors and carefully balance a policy favoring adjudication on the merits with *353 competing policies to maintain the integrity of the judicial system."	"When reviewing a case for fraud on the court, should the trial court consider the proper mix of factors and carefully balance a policy favoring adjudication on the merits?"

1548	Bartles v. Hinkle, 196 W. Va. 381, 384 (1996)	18	Although Rules of Civil Procedure do not formally require any particular procedure, before issuing sanction, court must ensure it has adequate foundation either pursuant to rules or by virtue of its inherent powers to exercise its authority; due process clause of State Constitution requires that there exist relationship between sanctioned party's misconduct and matters in controversy such that transgression threatens to interfere with rightful decision of case, and thus, court must ensure that any sanction imposed is fashioned to address identified harm caused by party's misconduct. Const. Art. 3, S 10; Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 11, 16, 37.	Although Rules 11, 16, and 37 of the West Virginia Rules of Civil Procedure do not formally require any particular procedure, before issuing a sanction, a court must ensure it has an adequate foundation either pursuant to the rules or by virtue of its inherent powers to exercise its authority. The Due Process Clause of Section 10 of Article III of the West Virginia Constitution requires that there exist a relationship between the sanctioned party's misconduct and the matters in controversy such that the transgression threatens to interfere with the rightful decision of the case. Thus, a court must ensure any sanction imposed is fashioned to address the identified harm caused by the party's misconduct.	Must a court ensure it has an adequate foundation either pursuant to the rules or by virtue of its inherent powers to exercise its authority?
1549	People ex rel. Schneiderman v. Frisco Mktg. of N.Y. LLC, 93 A.D.3d 1352, 1353, 941 N.Y.S.2d 823, 824 (2012)	1	In order to defeat motion to dismiss based upon lack of personal jurisdiction, plaintiff need only demonstrate that facts may exist to exercise personal jurisdiction over defendants.	[i]n order to defeat a motion to dismiss based upon lack of personal jurisdiction, a plaintiff need only demonstrate that facts may exist to exercise personal jurisdiction over the defendant[s]	"In order to defeat motion to dismiss based upon lack of personal jurisdiction, need a plaintiff only demonstrate that facts may exist to exercise personal jurisdiction over defendants?"
1550	Wenwei Sun v. Aviles, 53 So. 3d 1075, 1076 (Fla.App. 5 Dist., 2010)	2	Although trial courts have the inherent authority to dismiss actions based on fraud and collusion, that power should be used cautiously and sparingly, and only upon the most blatant showing of fraud, pretense, collusion, or other similar wrong doing.	Although trial courts have the inherent authority to dismiss actions based on fraud and collusion, that power should be used "cautiously and sparingly," and only upon the most blatant showing of fraud, pretense, collusion, or other similar wrong doing.	"Should the authority to dismiss actions for fraud or collusion be used cautiously and sparingly, and only upon the most blatant showing of fraud, pretense, collusion, or other similar wrong doing?"
1556	New Image Contractors v. Vill. at Mariner's Point L.P., 86 Conn. App. 692, 698 (Conn.App., 2004)	2	"Mootness" is a threshold issue that implicates subject matter jurisdiction, which imposes a duty on the court to dismiss a case if the court can no longer grant practical relief to the parties; it presents a circumstance wherein the issue before the court has been resolved or had lost its significance because of a change in the condition of affairs between the parties.	Mootness is a threshold issue that implicates subject matter jurisdiction, which "imposes a duty on the court to dismiss a case if the court can no longer grant practical relief to the parties." Hechtman v. Savitsky, 62 Conn.App. 654, 657, 772 A.2d 673 (2001). "Mootness presents a circumstance wherein the issue before the court has been resolved or had lost its significance because of a change in the condition of affairs between the parties.	Is mootness a threshold issue that implicates subject matter jurisdiction and which imposes a duty on the court to dismiss a case if the court can no longer grant practical relief to the parties?

1557	Granados v. Zehr, 979 So. 2d 1155, 1158 (Fla. App. 2008)	4	Allegations of inconsistency, nondisclosure, and even falseness are best resolved by allowing the parties to bring them to the jury's attention through cross examination or impeachment, rather than by dismissal of the entire action based on an alleged fraud upon the court.	... allegations of inconsistency, nondisclosure, and even falseness, are best resolved by allowing the parties to bring them to the jury's attention through cross examination or impeachment, rather than by dismissal of the entire action."	"Are allegations of inconsistency, nondisclosure, and even falseness, best resolved by allowing the parties to bring them to the jury's attention through cross examination or impeachment?"
1558	Williams v. Akzo Nobel Chemicals, Inc., 999 S.W.2d 836, 843 (Tex. App. 1999)	10	To determine whether sanctions are just, the reviewing court applies a two-prong test: the first prong requires that a direct relationship exist between the offensive conduct and the sanction imposed, and the trial court should attempt to determine if the offensive conduct is attributable to the attorney, the party, or both, and the second prong requires that the sanctions must be no more severe than necessary to satisfy legitimate purposes.	To determine whether sanctions are just we apply a two-prong test. The first prong requires that a direct relationship exist between the offensive conduct and the sanction imposed. Id. Under this prong, the trial court should attempt to determine if the offensive conduct is attributable to the attorney, the party, or both. Id. The second prong requires that the sanctions must be no more severe than necessary to satisfy its legitimate purposes.	What is the test of whether a sanction imposed by a trial court is just?
1561	Rockdale Mgmt. Co. v. Shawmut Bank, N.A., 418 Mass. 596, 598 (Mass., 1994)	1	"Fraud on the court" occurs where party tampers with fair administration of justice by deceiving institutions set up to protect and safeguard public or otherwise abusing or undermining integrity of judicial process.	Fraud on the court occurs where a party tampers with the fair administration of justice by deceiving "the institutions set up to protect and safeguard the public" or otherwise abusing or undermining the integrity of the judicial process.	"Does ""fraud on the court"" occur where party tampers with fair administration of justice by deceiving institutions set up to protect and safeguard the public?"
1563	Trans World Airlines v. Hughes, 332 F.2d 602, 614 (C.A.2 (N.Y.), 1964)	11	The sanction of judgment by default for failure to comply with discovery orders is the most severe sanction, which the court may apply, and its use must be tempered by careful exercise of judicial discretion to assure that its imposition is merited; however, where one party has acted in willful and deliberate disregard of reasonable and necessary court orders and efficient administration of justice, application of even so stringent a sanction is fully justified and should not be disturbed. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc. rule 37, 28 U.S.C.A.	The sanction of judgment by default for failure to comply with discovery orders is the most severe sanction which the court may apply, and its use must be tempered by the careful exercise of judicial discretion to assure that its imposition is merited. However, where one party has acted in willful and deliberate disregard of reasonable and necessary court orders and the efficient administration of justice, the application of even so stringent a sanction is fully justified and should not be disturbed.	"Where one party has acted with willful and deliberate disregard of reasonable and necessary court orders, is a stringent sanction as an entry of a default judgment fully justified?"

1564	CPI Mfg. Co. v. Industrias St. Jack's, S.A. De C.V., 870 So. 2d 89, 91 (Fla. App. 2003)	2	Resolution of a motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute involves a two-step process: first, the defendant is required to show there has been no record activity for one year preceding the motion; second, if there has been no record activity, the plaintiff has an opportunity to establish good cause why the action should remain pending. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.420(e).	In addition, the resolution of a motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute involves a two-step process. First, the defendant is required to show there has been no record activity for one year preceding the motion. Second, if there has been no record activity, the plaintiff has an opportunity to establish good cause why the action should remain pending.	Does the resolution of a motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute involve a two-step process?
1570	Republic Ins. Co. v. PAICO Receivables, 383 F.3d 341, 347 (C.A.5 (Tex.), 2004)	8	Where a party fails to demand arbitration, and in the meantime engages in pretrial activity inconsistent with an intent to arbitrate, the party later opposing a motion to compel arbitration may more easily show that its position has been prejudiced.	In contrast, "where a party fails to demand arbitration ..., and, in the meantime engages in pretrial activity inconsistent with an intent to arbitrate, the party later opposing a motion to compel arbitration may more easily show that its position has been compromised, i.e., prejudiced."	"Where a party fails to demand arbitration and engages in pretrial activity inconsistent with intent to arbitrate, can the party opposing a motion to compel arbitration show that its position has been prejudiced?"
1571	U.S. v. Pompey, 445 F.2d 1313, 1317 (C.A.Pa. 1971)	1	In order to qualify for a "ministerial exemption," registrant must show a regularity of religious preaching and teaching, the ministry must be his main and primary calling, that is his vocation rather than avocation, and his standing in his congregation must be recognized as that of a minister or leader of a group of lesser members. Military Selective Service Act of 1967, SS 6(g), 16(g) (1-3), 50 U.S.C.A. App. SS 456(g), 466(g) (1-3).	In sum, in order to qualify for a ministerial exemption, the registrant must satisfy the following tripartite test: (1) he must show a regularity of religious preaching and teaching; (2) the ministry must be his main and primary calling, his vocation rather than avocation; and (3) his standing in the congregation must be recognized as that of a minister or leader of a group of lesser members.	Does a registrant have to establish a regularity of religious preaching and teaching to qualify for a ministerial exemption?
1572	McDonald v. Hanahan, 328 Mass. 539, 541 (1952)	6	To constitute a good promissory note, there should be deducible from its face a written promise to pay money, yet that promise need not be expressed in any particular form of words, and it would be enough if from language used a written undertaking to pay may be fairly inferred.	To constitute a good promissory note there should be deducible from its face a written promise to pay the money, yet that promise need not be expressed in any particular form of words, and it will be enough if from the language used a written undertaking to pay may be fairly inferred.	Should a written promise which need not be expressed in any particular form of words constitute a good promissory note?
1574	Miller v. Nelms, 966 So. 2d 437, 440 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2007)	5	While a court has the inherent authority to dismiss an action where a fraud has been perpetrated, that is the most severe of sanctions and the court must carefully adhere to established due process, adversarial practice, and evidentiary rules when doing so.	While a court has the inherent authority to dismiss an action where a fraud has been perpetrated, that is the most severe of sanctions and the court must "carefully adhere to established due process, adversarial practice, and evidentiary rules" when doing so.	"While a court has the inherent authority to dismiss an action where a fraud has been perpetrated, is that the most severe of sanctions and the court must carefully adhere to established due process?"

1576	Bellew v. Grady, 744 So. 2d 913, 914 (Ala. App. 1999)	2	Trial court may dismiss an action, with prejudice, for lack of prosecution only when there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct by the plaintiff or a serious showing of willful default.	A trial court may dismiss an action, with prejudice, for lack of prosecution only when there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct by the plaintiff or a serious showing of willful default.	"Can a court dismiss an action, with prejudice, for lack of prosecution only when there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct by the plaintiff or a serious showing of willful default?"
1578	Foy v. Hunter, 106 N.C. App. 614, 618, 418 S.E.2d 299, 302 (1992)	1	Under civil procedure rule, trial court may enter sanctions for failure to prosecute only where plaintiff or his attorney manifests an intention to thwart progress of the action to its conclusion or fails to progress the action toward its conclusion by engaging in some delaying tactic; whether plaintiff or his attorney have manifested such an intent or has engaged in some delaying tactic may be inferred from facts surrounding delay in prosecution of the case. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b), G.S. S 1A-1.	Under Rule 41(b), a trial court may enter sanctions for failure to prosecute only where the plaintiff or his attorney "manifests an intention to thwart the progress of the action to its conclusion" or "fails to progress the action towards its conclusion" by engaging in some delaying tactic. Green v. Eure, 18 N.C.App. 671, 672, 197 S.E.2d 599, 601 (1973); Jones v. Stone, 52 N.C.App. 502, 505, 279 S.E.2d 13, 15, disc. rev. denied, 304 N.C. 195, 285 S.E.2d 99 (1981); see also Smith v. Quinn, 324 N.C. 316, 318-19, 378 S.E.2d 28, 30-31 (1989) (trial court did not err in dismissing plaintiff's action where plaintiff's attorney violated Rule of Civil Procedure for purposes of delay and gaining unfair advantage). Whether a plaintiff or his attorney has manifested an intent to thwart the progress of an action or has engaged in some delaying tactic may be inferred from the facts surrounding the delay in the prosecution of the case.	Can a court enter sanctions only where the plaintiff or his attorney manifests an intent to thwart the progress of the action or engages in some delaying tactic?
1579	Trivette v. Yount, 217 N.C. App. 477, 482 (N.C.App., 2011)	9	The purpose of the North Carolina Worker's Compensation Act is to provide certain limited benefits to an injured employee regardless of negligence on the part of the employer, and simultaneously to deprive the employee of certain rights he had at the common law.	The purpose of the North Carolina Worker's Compensation Act ("the Act") is to "provide certain limited benefits to an injured employee regardless of negligence on the part of the employer, and simultaneously to deprive the employee of certain rights he had at the common law	Does the purpose of the Workmen's Compensation Act is to provide certain limited benefits to injured employees regardless of negligence on the part of the employer?
1580	K's Merch. Mart v. Northgate Ltd. P'ship, 359 Ill. App. 3d 1137, 1143 (2005)	9	An "estoppel certificate" is a signed statement by a party, such as a tenant or mortgagee, certifying for another's benefit that certain facts are correct, as that a lease exists, that there are no defaults, and that rent is paid to a certain date.	An estoppel certificate is "[a] signed statement by a party (such as a tenant or mortgagee) certifying for another's benefit that certain facts are correct, as that a lease exists, that there are no defaults, and that rent is paid to a certain date.	"Is an estoppel certificate a signed statement by a party certifying for another's benefit that certain facts are correct, that there are no defaults, and that rent is paid to a certain date?"

1581	Hall v. Metro. Dade Cty., 760 So. 2d 1051, 1052 (Fla. App. 2000)	2	The inquiry on a motion to dismiss for lack of prosecution involves a two-step inquiry: first, the defendant is required to show there has been no record activity for the year preceding the motion, and second, if there has been no record activity, the plaintiff has an opportunity to establish good cause why the action should not be dismissed. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.420(e).	The inquiry on a motion to dismiss for lack of prosecution involves a two-step inquiry. "First, the defendant is required to show there has been no record activity for the year preceding the motion. Second, if there has been no record activity, the plaintiff has an opportunity to establish good cause why the action should not be dismissed."	Does the inquiry on a motion to dismiss for lack of prosecution require the defendant to show there has been no record activity for the year preceding the motion?
1582	James Bros. Lumber Co. v. Union Banking & Tr. Co. of Du Bois, Pa., 432 Pa. 129, 132 (1968)	1	Court may enter judgment of non pros. when party has shown want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude and there has been no compelling reason for delay, and delay has caused some prejudice to adverse party, such as death of or unexplained absence of material witness.	A Court may properly enter a judgment of non pros. when a party to the proceeding has shown a want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude, and there has been no compelling reason for the delay, and the delay has caused some prejudice to the adverse party, such as the death of or unexplained absence of material witnesses.	Is judgment of non pros properly entered when the delay has caused some prejudice to the adverse party?
1583	Grund v. Donegan, 298 Ill. App. 3d 1034, 1037 (1998)	7	A motion seeking involuntary dismissal of a claim based upon certain specified defenses raises the question of whether there is a genuine issue of material fact and whether the defendant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-619.	A section 2-619 motion, which seeks involuntary dismissal of a claim based upon certain specified defenses, raises the question of whether there is a genuine issue of material fact and whether the defendant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.	Would a motion raise the question when there is a genuine issue of material fact and if the defendant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law?
1584	People v. Salazar, 13 Misc. 3d 120, 121, 827 N.Y.S.2d 439, 440 (App. Term 2006)	1	Disorderly conduct statute, providing that a person is guilty of disorderly conduct when, with intent to cause public inconvenience, annoyance, or alarm, or recklessly creating a risk thereof, the person obstructs vehicular or pedestrian traffic, punishes disruptive behavior of a public rather than individual dimension. McKinney's Penal Law S 240.20(5).	Defendant was convicted of having violated Penal Law § 240.20(5) which provides, "[a] person is guilty of disorderly conduct when, with intent to cause public inconvenience, annoyance or alarm, or recklessly creating a risk thereof ... [h]e obstructs vehicular or pedestrian traffic...." Said provision punishes disruptive behavior of a public rather than individual dimension	"Can a person who recklessly created a risk of public inconvenience, annoyance, or alarm by obstructing traffic be convicted for disorderly conduct?"
1585	Carver v. Nall, 186 Ill. 2d 554, 557 (1999)	2	When ruling on a motion to dismiss, the trial court must interpret all pleadings and supporting documents in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party; court should grant the motion only if the plaintiff can prove no set of facts that would support a cause of action. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a).	When ruling on a motion to dismiss, the trial court must interpret all pleadings and supporting documents in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. The court should grant the motion only if the plaintiff can prove no set of facts that would support a cause of action.	"In ruling on a motion for involuntary dismissal, should the circuit court interpret all pleadings and supporting documents in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party?"

1586	Gatrell v. Kurtz, 207 P.3d 916, 917 (Colo. App. 2009)	1	In evaluating a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the court must accept the material allegations contained in the complaint as true, and may grant the motion only if the court concludes the plaintiff is not entitled to any relief under the facts pleaded. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(5).	In evaluating a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim under C.R.C.P. 12(b)(5), the court must accept the material allegations contained in the complaint as true, and may grant the motion only if the court concludes the plaintiff is not entitled to any relief under the facts pleaded.	"In ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, should the court accept the factual allegations contained in the complaint as true?"
1587	Rodefer v. McCarthy, 2015 - Ohio- 3052, ¶ 20 (Ohio App. 2 Dist., 2015)	1	In deciding on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, a court must construe the complaint in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, presume all of the factual allegations in the complaint as true, and make all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(B)(6).	"A motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, pursuant to Civ.R.12(B)(6), tests the sufficiency of a complaint." Grover v. Bartsch, 170 Ohio App.3d 188, 2006-Ohio-6115, 866 N.E.2d 547, 16 (2d Dist.). The court must construe the complaint in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, presume all of the factual allegations in the complaint as true, and make all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff.	"In analyzing the legal sufficiency of a complaint when deciding a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, should a court presume that all factual allegations in the complaint are true?"
1588	Inst. for Bus. Planning v. Standard Life & Acc. Ins. Co., 242 F. Supp. 100, 107 (W.D. Okla. 1965)	14	To establish that agent had apparent authority to do act, principal must have manifested his consent to exercise of such authority or have knowingly permitted agent to exercise such authority, third person must know of facts and, acting in good faith, have reason to believe and actually believe that agent possessed such authority, and third person relying on appearance of authority must change his position and be injured or suffer loss.	In order to establish that an agent had the apparent authority to do an act or acts in question, there are certain necessary prerequisites, as follows: (1) that the principal has manifested his consent to the exercise of such authority or has knowingly permitted the agent to assume the exercise of such authority, (2) that the third person knew of the facts and, acting in good faith, has reason to believe, and did actually believe that the agent possessed such authority; and (3) that the third person, relying on such appearance of authority, has changed his position and will be injured or suffer loss if the act or acts done by the agent does not bind the principal.	To establish apparent authority should a principal manifest his consent to exercise that authority?
1589	Swenson v. Sanborn Cty. Farmers Union Oil Co., 594 N.W.2d 339, 343 (S.D., 1999)	8	Dismissal of the cause of action for failure to prosecute should be granted when, after considering all the facts and circumstances of the case, the plaintiff can be charged with lack of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude.	Finally, dismissal of the cause of action for failure to prosecute should be granted when, after considering all the facts and circumstances of the case, the plaintiff can be charged with lack of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude.	When the plaintiff can be charged with lack of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude should dismissal of the cause of action for failure to prosecute be granted?

1590	Rogers v. Gann, 982 So. 2d 1105, 1108 (Ala.Civ.App., 2007)	2	Dismissal of an action for want of prosecution is a drastic sanction; accordingly, Alabama appellate courts scrutinize any order terminating an action for want of prosecution and do not hesitate to set one aside when they find an abuse of discretion.	"Dismissal of an action for want of prosecution is a drastic sanction. Accordingly, Alabama appellate courts scrutinize any order terminating an action for want of prosecution and do not hesitate to set one aside when they find an abuse of discretion.	Do courts scrutinize any order terminating an action for want of prosecution and do they hesitate to set one aside when they find an abuse of discretion?
1591	Gatrell v. Kurtz, 207 P.3d 916, 917 (Colo. App. 2009)	1	In evaluating a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the court must accept the material allegations contained in the complaint as true, and may grant the motion only if the court concludes the plaintiff is not entitled to any relief under the facts pleaded. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(5).	In evaluating a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim under C.R.C.P. 12(b)(5), the court must accept the material allegations contained in the complaint as true, and may grant the motion only if the court concludes the plaintiff is not entitled to any relief under the facts pleaded.	"In evaluating a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, should the court accept the material allegations of the complaint as true?"
1592	Mathews v. Diaz, 426 U.S. 67, 78–79 (1976)	7	The fact that all persons, aliens and citizens alike, are protected by the due process clause does not lead to the further conclusion that all aliens are entitled to enjoy all of the advantages of citizenship or, indeed, to the conclusion that all aliens must be placed in a single homogeneous legal classification. U.S.C.A.Const. Amendments. 5, 14.	The fact that all persons, aliens and citizens alike, are protected by the Due Process Clause does not lead to the further conclusion that all aliens are entitled to enjoy all the advantages of citizenship or, indeed, to the conclusion that all aliens must be placed in a single homogeneous legal classification.	Does the fact that aliens are protected by the Due Process Clause lead to a conclusion that all aliens are entitled to enjoy all the advantages of citizenship?
1595	Mackey v. Cannon, 996 P.2d 1081, 1085 (2000)	6	The courts are a forum for settling controversies, and if there is any doubt about whether a claim should be dismissed for the lack of a factual basis, the issue should be resolved in favor of giving the party an opportunity to present its proof. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(6).	"The courts are a forum for settling controversies, and if there is any doubt about whether a claim should be dismissed for the lack of a factual basis, the issue should be resolved in favor of giving the party an opportunity to present its proof."	"If there is any doubt about whether a claim should be dismissed for lack of factual basis, should the issue be resolved in favor of giving the party an opportunity to present its proof?"
1597	Bellew v. Grady, 744 So. 2d 913, 914 (Ala. App. 1999)	2	Trial court may dismiss an action, with prejudice, for lack of prosecution only when there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct by the plaintiff or a serious showing of willful default.	A trial court may dismiss an action, with prejudice, for lack of prosecution only when there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct by the plaintiff or a serious showing of willful default.	"Can court dismiss an action, with prejudice, for lack of prosecution when there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct by the plaintiff or a serious showing of willful default?"
1599	Spencer v. Lombardi, 500 S.W.3d 885, 890 (Mo.App. W.D., 2016)	9	On a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, a court reviews a petition in an almost academic manner to determine if the facts alleged meet the elements of a recognized cause of action or of a cause that might be adopted in that case.	"A court reviews the petition in an almost academic manner, to determine if the facts alleged meet the elements of a recognized cause of action, or of a cause that might be adopted in that case."	"Does a court review the petition in an almost academic manner, to determine if the facts alleged meet the elements of a recognized cause of action, or of a cause that might be adopted in that case?"

1600	Caravousanos v. Kings Cnty. Hosp., 74 A.D.3d 716, 718, 904 N.Y.S.2d 444, 446 (2010)	1	In considering motion to dismiss complaint for failure to state cause of action, court should accept facts as alleged in complaint as true, accord plaintiffs benefit of every possible favorable inference, and determine only whether facts as alleged fit within any cognizable legal theory. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	In considering a motion to dismiss a complaint pursuant to CPLR 3211 (a) (7), the court should "accept the facts as alleged in the complaint as true, accord plaintiffs the benefit of every possible favorable inference, and determine only whether the facts as alleged fit within any cognizable legal theory"	"When considering motion to dismiss, should a court accept facts alleged in a complaint as true?"
1601	Nicita v. City of Detroit, 216 Mich. App. 746, 750 (Mich.App., 1996)	2	On motion for summary disposition for failure to state defense, well pleaded allegations are accepted as true and the test is whether defendant's defenses are so clearly untenable as a matter of law that no factual development could possibly deny plaintiff's right to recovery. MCR 2.116(C)(9).	Only the pleadings may be considered when the motion is brought under MCR 2.116(C)(9). MCR 2.116(G)(5). The well-pleaded allegations are accepted as true, and the test is whether the defendant's defenses are so clearly untenable as a matter of law that no factual development could possibly deny a plaintiff's right to recovery.	"On a motion for summary disposition for failure to state defense, are well pleaded allegations accepted as true?"
1604	C.I.R. v. Court Holding Co., 324 U.S. 331, 334 (1945)	4	The tax consequences which arise from gains from a sale of property are not finally to be determined solely by means employed to transfer legal title, but, rather, the transaction must be viewed as a whole, and each step, from commencement of negotiations to consummation of sale, is relevant.	The tax consequences which arise from gains from a sale of property are not finally to be determined solely by the means employed to transfer legal title. Rather, the transaction must be viewed as a whole, and each step, from the commencement of negotiations to the consummation of the sale, is relevant.	"Does the court view a property transaction as a whole and its each step, from the commencement of negotiations to the consummation of the sale, as relevant aspects?"
1608	Sustala v. El-Romman, 712 S.W.2d 164, 166 (Tex.App.-Hous. (14 Dist.), 1985)	2	Trial court may consider entire history of case, including any past lack of diligence exhibited by plaintiff, in contemplation of motion to dismiss for want of prosecution.	In contemplation of a motion to dismiss for want of prosecution, a trial court may consider the entire history of a case including any past lack of diligence exhibited by the plaintiff.	"Should the court consider the entire history of case, including any past lack of diligence exhibited by plaintiff, in contemplation of motion to dismiss for want of prosecution?"
1609	Boazman v. Economics Laboratory, 537 F.2d 210, 212 (5th Cir. 1976)	1	Dismissal with prejudice is such a severe sanction that it is to be used only in extreme circumstances where there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct and where lesser sanctions would not serve best interests of justice. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc. rule 41(b), 28 U.S.C.A.	In general, the federal appellate courts have said that a dismissal of a complaint is such a severe sanction that it is to be used only in extreme circumstances when there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct and where lesser sanctions would not serve the best interests of justice.	Is dismissal of complaint to be used only in extreme circumstances where there is clear record of delay or contumacious conduct and where lesser sanctions would not serve best interests of justice?
1610	Chenango Contracting, Inc. v. Hughes Assocs., Landscape Architects PLLC, 128 A.D.3d 1150, 1151, 8 N.Y.S.3d 724, 726 (2015)	1	When dismissal is sought for failure to state a cause of action and plaintiff submits affidavits, a court may freely consider those affidavits and the criterion is whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action, not whether he or she has stated one. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	When dismissal is sought for failure to state a cause of action and, as here, plaintiff submits affidavits, "a court may freely consider [those] affidavits . . . and 'the criterion is whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action, not whether he [or she] has stated one	"When dismissal is sought for failure to state a cause of action and plaintiff submits affidavits, can a court freely consider those affidavits and the criterion is whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action?"

1612	City of Fort Wayne v. Sw. Allen Cty. Fire Prot. Dist., 82 N.E.3d 299, 303 (2017)	4	In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the trial court may consider not only the complaint and motion but also any affidavits or evidence submitted in support; in addition, the trial court may weigh the evidence to determine the existence of the requisite jurisdictional facts. Ind. R. Trial P. 12(B)(1).	In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the trial court may consider not only the complaint and motion but also any affidavits or evidence submitted in support. GKN Co. v. Magness, 744 N.E.2d 397, 400 (Ind. Ct. App. 2001). In addition, the trial court may weigh the evidence to determine the existence of the requisite jurisdictional facts.	"In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, can a trial court consider not only the complaint and motion but also any affidavits or evidence submitted in support?"
1615	Cook v. Fergus Elec. Co-op., 235 Mont. 173, 176 (1988)	1	Defendant may request involuntary dismissal of civil action where plaintiff fails to exercise due diligence, absent sufficient showing of excuse, in bringing his or her case to trial. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	Rule 41(b), M.R.Civ.P., has been interpreted as providing that a defendant may request involuntary dismissal of a civil action where a plaintiff fails to exercise due diligence, absent a sufficient showing of excuse, in bringing his or her case to trial.	"Can defendant request involuntary dismissal of civil action where plaintiff fails to exercise due diligence, in bringing his or her case to trial?"
1616	Vosbein v. Bellias, 866 So. 2d 489, 493 (Miss.App.,2004)	1	Dismissal with prejudice for failure to prosecute is an extreme and harsh sanction that deprives a litigant of the opportunity to pursue his or her claim and is reserved for the most egregious cases, usually where clear delay and ineffective lesser sanctions are present. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	Dismissal with prejudice is an extreme and harsh sanction that deprives a litigant of the opportunity to pursue his or her claim and is reserved for the most egregious cases, usually where clear delay and ineffective lesser sanctions are present	Is dismissal with prejudice for failure to prosecute an extreme and harsh sanction that deprives a litigant of the opportunity to pursue his or her claim and is reserved for the most egregious cases?
1617	Hanson v. Griffiths, 204 Misc. 736, 738, 124 N.Y.S.2d 473, 476 (Sup. Ct. 1953)	2	Generally speaking "taxes" are burdens of a pecuniary nature imposed generally upon individuals or property for defraying the cost of governmental functions, whereas charges are sustainable as "fees" where they are imposed upon a person to defray or help defray the cost of particular services rendered for his account.	Generally speaking, taxes are burdens of a pecuniary nature imposed generally upon individuals or property for defraying the cost of governmental functions, while, on the other hand, charges are sustainable as fees where they are imposed upon a person to defray or help defray the cost of particular services rendered for his account.	"If a charge is imposed upon a person to defray the cost of particular services rendered for his account, is the charge a tax?"
1618	Dorchester House Assocs. Ltd. P'ship v. D.C. Rental Hous. Comm'n, 913 A.2d 1260, 1264 (D.C. App. 2006)	7	A plaintiff must be given an opportunity to withdraw his motion to dismiss without prejudice and proceed with the litigation in the event that a district judge proposes to convert a voluntary dismissal to one with prejudice. Civil Rule 41(b).	"[T]he plaintiff [must be given] an opportunity to withdraw his motion and proceed with the litigation in the event that a district judge proposes to convert a voluntary dismissal to one with prejudice."	Should a plaintiff be given an opportunity to withdraw his motion to dismiss without prejudice and proceed with the litigation in the event that a district judge proposes to convert a voluntary dismissal to one with prejudice?
1619	Southview Co-op. Hous. Corp. v. Rent Control Bd. of Cambridge, 396 Mass. 395, 402-403 (1985)	4	In determining whether regulatory charges are fees rather than taxes, reasonable latitude must be given to agency in fixing charges to cover its anticipated expenses in connection with services to be rendered.	In determining whether regulatory charges are fees rather than *403 taxes, reasonable latitude must be given to the agency in fixing charges to cover its anticipated expenses in connection with the services to be rendered.	"In determining whether regulatory charges are fees rather than taxes, should reasonable latitude be given to the agency in fixing charges to cover its anticipated expenses?"

1621	Ex parte Puccio, 923 So. 2d 1069, 1077 (Ala. 2005)	17	A denial of a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction is interlocutory and preliminary only; after such a denial, the continuation of personal jurisdiction over a defendant who appropriately persists in challenging it in the defendant's answer to the complaint and by motion for summary judgment or at trial depends on the introduction of substantial evidence to prove the plaintiff's jurisdictional allegations in the plaintiff's complaint. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(2).	However, we note: "A denial of a Rule 12(b)(2)[, Ala.R.Civ.P.,] motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction is interlocutory and preliminary only. After such a denial, the continuation of personal jurisdiction over a defendant who appropriately persists in challenging it in the defendant's answer to the complaint and by motion for summary judgment or at trial depends on the introduction of substantial evidence to prove the plaintiff's jurisdictional allegations in the plaintiff's complaint."	Is a denial of a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction interlocutory and preliminary only?
1622	In re Gen. Motors Corp., 296 S.W.3d 813, 827-28 (Tex. App. 2009)	24	A trial court may dismiss for want of prosecution when any party seeking affirmative relief fails to appear for any hearing or trial of which the party had notice or when a case is not disposed within the time standards promulgated by the supreme court. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a.	A trial court may dismiss under Rule 165a on "failure of any party seeking affirmative relief to appear for any hearing or trial of which the party had notice," or when a case is "not disposed of within time standards promulgated by the Supreme Court." Tex.R.Civ.P. 165a(1)-(2).	"Can a court dismiss for want of prosecution, when any party seeking affirmative relief fails to appear for any hearing or trial of which the party had notice?"
1623	Burton v. Airborne Exp., 367 Ill. App. 3d 1026, 1029 (2006)	2	A motion to dismiss based upon certain defects or defenses admits the legal sufficiency of a plaintiff's complaint but raises defects, defenses, or other affirmative matters that appear on the complaint's face or that are established by external submissions acting to defeat the complaint's allegations. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-619.	A motion to dismiss pursuant to section 2-619 of the Code (735 ILCS 5/2-619 (West 2004)) admits the legal sufficiency of a plaintiff's complaint but raises defects, defenses, or other affirmative matters that appear on the complaint's face or that are established by external submissions acting to defeat the complaint's allegations.	Will a motion to dismiss based on certain defects or defenses admit the legal sufficiency of a plaintiff's allegations?
1624	Dinerstein v. Evanston Athletic Clubs, Inc., 2016 IL App (1st) 153388, ¶ 13, 64 N.E.3d 1132, 1138-39	3	Under rule permitting dismissal of a claim when the claim is barred by other affirmative matter avoiding the legal effect of or defeating the claim, the affirmative matter must be apparent on the face of the complaint or supported by affidavits or certain other evidentiary materials. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(9).	Defendants' motion was specifically based on subsection (a)(9), which permits dismissal where "the claim asserted * * * is barred by other affirmative matter avoiding the legal effect of or defeating the claim." 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(9) (West 2014); see also Van Meter v. Darien Park District, 207 Ill.2d 359, 367, 278 Ill.Dec. 555, 799 N.E.2d 273 (2003). The "affirmative matter" must be apparent on the face of the complaint or supported by affidavits 54 *1139 or certain other evidentiary materials.	Should the affirmative matter be apparent on the face of the complaint or supported by affidavits or evidence when the claim is barred by other affirmative matter avoiding the legal effect or defeating the claim?

1625	Vozniak v. Winans, 191 W. Va. 228, 229 (W.Va.,1994)	1	To reinstate cause of action which has been dismissed for failure to prosecute, plaintiff must move for reinstatement within three terms of entry of dismissal order and make showing of good cause which adequately excuses his neglect in prosecution of case. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	Under W.Va.R.Civ.P. 41(b), in order to reinstate a cause of action which has been dismissed for failure to prosecute, the plaintiff must move for reinstatement within three terms of entry of the dismissal order and make a showing of good cause which adequately excuses his neglect in prosecution of the case.	"To reinstate cause of action which has been dismissed for failure to prosecute, should a plaintiff move for reinstatement within three terms of an entry of a dismissal order?"
1626	Provencher v. Buzzell-Plourde Associates, 142 N.H. 848, 853 (1998)	4	When motion to dismiss does not challenge the sufficiency of the plaintiff's legal claim but, instead, raises certain defenses, the trial court must look beyond the plaintiff's unsubstantiated allegations and determine, based on the facts, whether the plaintiff has sufficiently demonstrated his right to claim relief.	When, however, the motion to dismiss does not challenge the sufficiency of the plaintiff's legal claim but, instead, raises certain defenses, the "trial court must look beyond the plaintiff's unsubstantiated allegations and determine, based on the facts, whether the plaintiff has sufficiently demonstrated his right to claim relief."	How does the court determine whether plaintiff has sufficiently demonstrated his right to claim relief?
1627	Anthony v. Tidwell, 560 S.W.2d 908, 909 (Tenn. 1977)	1	Complaint is subject to dismissal for failure to state claim if affirmative defense clearly and unequivocally appears on face of complaint; it is not necessary for defendant to submit evidence in support of motion to dismiss when facts on which he relies to defeat plaintiff's claim are admitted by plaintiff in his complaint. Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 12.02(6).	A complaint is subject to dismissal under rule 12.02(6) for failure to state a claim if an affirmative defense clearly and unequivocally appears on the face of the complaint. It is not necessary for the defendant to submit evidence in support of his motion when the facts on which he relies to defeat plaintiff's claim are admitted by the plaintiff in his complaint.	Can a complaint be subject to dismissal if an affirmative defense clearly and unequivocally appear on the face of the complaint?
1628	Prodromos v. Poulos, 202 Ill. App. 3d 1024, 1028 (1990)	3	In motion to dismiss, court must also consider whether defendant has brought forth facts which constitute affirmative defense that could defeat plaintiff's cause of action. S.H.A. ch. 110, P 2-619.	In a motion brought under Ill.Rev.Stat.1989, ch. 110, par. 2-619, the court must also consider whether the defendant has brought forth facts which constitute an affirmative defense that could defeat the plaintiff's cause of action.	Should the court consider if defendant has brought forth facts which constitute affirmative defense that could defeat plaintiff's cause of action?
1629	In re Adoption of Jason K., 41 Misc. 3d 885, 892, 972 N.Y.S.2d 481, 488 (Fam. Ct. 2013)	8	By including restrictions on intent in the definition of some nonimmigrant classes, Congress must have meant aliens to be barred from these classes if their real purpose in coming to the United States was to immigrate permanently. Immigration and Nationality Act, S 101(a)(15)(F)(i), 8 U.S.C.A. S 1101(a)(15)(F)(i).	[b]y including restrictions on intent in the definition of some nonimmigrant classes, Congress must have meant aliens to be barred from these classes if their real purpose in coming to the United States was to immigrate permanently.	"By including restrictions on intent in the definition of some nonimmigrant classes, did Congress mean to bar aliens from these classes if their real purpose in coming to the United States was to immigrate permanently?"

1630	Arizona v. United States, 567 U.S. 387, 394-95 (2012)	1	Government of United States has broad, undoubted power over subject of immigration and status of aliens, resting, in part, on its constitutional power to "establish an uniform Rule of Naturalization," and its inherent power as sovereign to control and conduct relations with foreign nations. U.S.C.A. Const. Art. 1, S 8, cl. 4.	First, the federal government "has broad, undoubted power over the subject of immigration and the status of aliens," authority that rests on the constitutional power to "establish an uniform Rule of Naturalization," Art. I, 8, cl. 4, and on the national government's "inherent power as sovereign to control and conduct relations with foreign nations."	Does the power of the government over the status of aliens rest on the federal governments power to control relations with foreign nations?
1633	Sturgess v Zelman, 15 Misc. 3d 487, 489 (N.Y. Sup Ct, 2007)	1	To restore a matter to the trial calendar, after a year has passed from it being marked off, a plaintiff must demonstrate: (1) a reasonable excuse for the failure to timely restore; (2) a meritorious cause of action; (3) a lack of intent to abandon; and (4) lack or prejudice to the opposing party. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	To restore a matter to the trial calendar pursuant to CPLR § 3404, after a year has passed from it being marked off, a plaintiff must demonstrate (1) a reasonable excuse for the failure to timely restore; (2) a meritorious cause of action; (3) a lack of intent to abandon; and (4) lack or prejudice to the opposing party.	"To restore a matter to the trial calendar, after a year has passed from it being marked off, what should a plaintiff demonstrate?"
1634	Etter v. Cnty. of Nassau, 261 A.D.2d 571, 571, 690 N.Y.S.2d 712, 713 (1999)	1	Actions which are deemed abandoned and which are automatically dismissed may not be restored to the calendar unless the plaintiff produces evidence which (1) rebuts the presumption of abandonment, (2) demonstrates the merit of the underlying cause of action, and (3) shows that the defendants have not been prejudiced. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	Actions which are deemed abandoned and which are automatically dismissed pursuant to CPLR 3404 may not be restored to the calendar unless the plaintiff produces evidence which (1) rebuts the presumption of abandonment, (2) demonstrates the merit of the underlying cause of action, and (3) shows that the defendants have not been prejudiced	Can actions which are deemed abandoned and which are automatically dismissed not be restored to the calendar unless the plaintiff produces evidence?
1635	Muhammed v. Manhattan Payment Ctr., Inc., 251 A.D.2d 228, 229, 675 N.Y.S.2d 45, 46 (1998)	2	Action which has been deemed abandoned as result of having been marked off or stricken from calendar, and not having been restored within one year, may thereafter be restored where moving party demonstrates meritorious cause of action, reasonable excuse for delay, lack of prejudice to opposing party, and lack of intent to abandon action. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	A case that has been marked off or stricken from the calendar and that has not been restored within one year is deemed abandoned under CPLR 3404 (Syndicate Build. Corp. v. Lorber, 193 A.D.2d 506, 507, 597 N.Y.S.2d 372). However, the action may be restored where the moving party demonstrates a meritorious cause of action, a reasonable excuse for the delay, a lack of prejudice to the opposing party and a lack of intent to abandon the action	Can an action which has been deemed abandoned as a result of having been marked off or stricken from a calendar thereafter be restored?
1636	Samaras v. Hartwick, 698 A.2d 71, 73 (Pa.Super., 1997)	3	To successfully set aside termination of action, aggrieved party must demonstrate that petition for reactivation was timely filed, reasonable explanation exists for docket inactivity, and facts exist supporting a meritorious cause of action. Pa.R.J.A. No. 1901.	In order to successfully set aside the termination of an action, the aggrieved party must demonstrate that: (1) the petition for reactivation was timely filed; (2) a reasonable explanation exists for the docket inactivity; and (3) facts exist supporting a meritorious cause of action.	"To successfully set aside termination of action, should an aggrieved party demonstrate that a petition for reactivation was timely filed?"

1637	Liton Lighting v. Platinum Television Grp., 2 So. 3d 366, 367 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2008)	2	A trial judge may not sua sponte dismiss an action based on affirmative defenses not raised by proper pleadings; when a trial judge sua sponte dismisses a cause of action on grounds not pleaded, the trial judge denies the parties due process because the claim is being dismissed without notice and an opportunity for the parties and counsel to be heard. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 14.	A trial judge may not sua sponte dismiss an action based on affirmative defenses not raised by proper pleadings. See Kerrigan, Estess, Rankin, & McLeod v. State, 711 So.2d 1246, 1249 (Fla. 4th DCA 1998). When a trial judge sua sponte dismisses a cause of action on grounds "not pleaded," the trial judge denies the parties due process because the claim is being dismissed without "notice and an opportunity for the parties and counsel to be heard." Id.	Can a judge dismiss an action based on affirmative defenses not raised by proper pleadings?
1639	People v. Niccolich, 220 A.D.2d 461, 462, 631 N.Y.S.2d 922, 923 (1995)	2	When court declares mistrial without obtaining defendant's consent, double jeopardy provisions of state and federal constitutions prohibit retrial for same crime unless there is manifest necessity for the mistrial, or the ends of public justice would otherwise be defeated. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	When a court declares a mistrial without obtaining the defendant's consent, the double jeopardy provisions of the State and Federal Constitutions prohibit retrial for the same crime unless "there is a manifest necessity for [the mistrial], or the ends of public justice would otherwise be defeated	Can a retrial after a mistrial present an issue of double jeopardy unless the mistrial is based on reasons of manifest necessity or unless the defendant consented or requested a mistrial?
1640	Antoine E.J. v. Birch Fam. Servs., Inc., 95 A.D.3d 832, 833, 943 N.Y.S.2d 219, 220 (App. Div. 2012)	3	Injury caused by impulsive, unanticipated act of fellow student ordinarily will not give rise to finding of negligence on part of school, absent proof of prior conduct that would have put reasonable person on notice to protect against injury-causing act.	[A]n injury caused by the impulsive, unanticipated act of a fellow student ordinarily will not give rise to a finding of negligence absent proof of prior conduct that would have put a reasonable person on notice to protect against the injury-causing act	"Will an injury caused by the impulsive, unanticipated act of a fellow student, give rise to a finding of negligence?"
1641	Montanaro v. Aspetuck Land Tr., 137 Conn. App. 1, 9, 48 A.3d 107, 113–14 (2012)	2	Highways are established by one of the following four methods: (1) through the direct action of the legislature; (2) through authorized proceedings involving an application to a court; (3) through authorized proceedings by agents appointed for that purpose, such as selectmen of towns and specified authorities of cities and boroughs; (4) through private dedication of land for that purpose and its acceptance by the public. C.G.S.A. SS 13a-7, 13A-61.	Highways 114 are established by one of the following four methods: "(1) through the direct action of the legislature; (2) through authorized proceedings involving an application to a court; (3) through authorized proceedings by agents appointed for that purpose, such as selectmen of towns [General Statutes 13a-61] and specified authorities of cities and boroughs [General Statutes 13a-7]; (4) through private dedication of land for that purpose and its acceptance by the public."	Can a public highway be established through private dedication of land accepted by the public?

1642	Clark v. Yarbrough, 900 S.W.2d 406, 408–09 (Tex. App. 1995)	4	In reinstatement hearing, after dismissal for failure to prosecute, question of whether party's conduct was intentional or a result of conscious indifference is question of fact to be determined by trial court in its discretion but once finding is made, rule's language is mandatory . Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a, subd. 3.	The reinstatement provisions of Rule 165a(3) apply only to dismissals for *409 failure to appear at trial or a hearing. Id. at 901–03. Whether the party's conduct was intentional or the result of conscious indifference is a question of fact to be determined by the trial court in its discretion . Price v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., 700 S.W.2d 730, 733 (Tex.App.—Dallas 1985, no writ). Once the finding is made, the rule's language is mandatory .	"After dismissal for failure to prosecute, is the question of whether a party's conduct was intentional or a result of conscious indifference a question of fact to be determined by a trial court?"
1643	Burton v. Hoffman, 959 S.W.2d 351, 354 (Tex. App. 1998)	6	Rule requiring court to reinstate dismissed case upon finding after hearing that failure of party or his attorney was not intentional or result of conscious indifference but was due to accident or mistake or that failure had been otherwise reasonably explained applies only to dismissals for failure to appear at trial or other hearing and does not apply to cases dismissed for failure to proceed. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a, subd. 3.	According to this rule , the court shall reinstate the case upon finding after a hearing that the failure of the party or his attorney was not intentional or the result of conscious indifference but was due to an accident or mistake or that the failure had been otherwise reasonably explained . See Tex.R. Civ. P. 165a(3). However, appellate courts have held that this rule applies only to dismissals for failure to appear at trial or other hearing and does not apply to cases dismissed for failure to proceed .	Shall a court reinstate a dismissed case upon a finding after hearing that failure of party or his attorney was not intentional or result of conscious indifference?
1646	Jeffs v. Janessa, Inc., 226 A.D.2d 504, 504, 641 N.Y.S.2d 75, 76 (1996)	1	Party seeking to restore case to trial calendar after if has been dismissed as abandoned must demonstrate merits of case, reasonable excuse for delay, absence of intent to abandon matter, and lack of prejudice to nonmoving party in event that case is restored to trial calendar . McKinney's CPLR 3404.	A party seeking to restore a case to the trial calendar after it has been dismissed pursuant to CPLR 3404 must demonstrate the merits of the case, a reasonable excuse for the delay, the absence of an intent to abandon the matter, and the lack of prejudice to the nonmoving party in the event that the case is restored to the trial calendar	"Should a party seeking to restore a matter to a trial calendar after it has been dismissed as abandoned show, inter alia, a reasonable excuse for any delay?"
1648	Harper Companies v. Scott, Royce, Harris, Bryan, Barra & Jorgensen, P.A., 656 So. 2d 627, 629 (Fla. App. 1995)	4	When party may be able to allege additional facts to support its cause of action or even to support another cause of action based on different legal theory, dismissal with prejudice is abuse of discretion.	It is well-settled that where a party may be able to allege additional facts to support its cause of action or even to support another cause of action based on a different legal theory, dismissal with prejudice is an abuse of discretion.	Can a dismissal with prejudice constitute an abuse of discretion where a party can be able to plead additional facts to support its cause of action or support another cause of action under a different legal theory?
1649	In re Gen. Motors Corp., 296 S.W.3d 813, 827-28 (Tex. App. 2009)	25	Common law vests the trial court with inherent power, independent of the rules of procedure, to move its docket by dismissing cases that are not prosecuted with due diligence.	Additionally, common law vests the trial court with inherent power, independent of the rules of procedure, *828 to move its docket by dismissing cases that are not prosecuted with due diligence .	"Does common law vest the trial court with inherent power, independent of the rules of procedure, to move its docket by dismissing cases that are not prosecuted with due diligence?"

1651	Prear v. State, 933 S.W.2d 643, 646 (Tex. App. 1996)	6	To determine if forfeiture is "punitive" for double jeopardy purposes, court's inquiry is two-fold: whether legislature intended proceedings under forfeiture statute to be criminal or civil, and whether proceedings are so punitive in fact as to persuade court that forfeiture proceedings may not legitimately be viewed as civil in nature, despite legislative intent; question of whether forfeiture is civil or criminal therefore starts as one of statutory construction. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	To determine if a forfeiture is punitive for double jeopardy purposes, the court's inquiry is two-fold: "(1) whether the Legislature intended proceedings under the forfeiture statute to be criminal or civil; and (2) whether the proceedings are so punitive in fact as to persuade us that the forfeiture proceedings may not legitimately be viewed as civil in nature, despite legislative intent." The question of whether a forfeiture is civil or criminal therefore starts as one of statutory construction.	"To determine if forfeiture is punitive for double jeopardy purposes, is a court's inquiry two-fold?"
1652	George v. State, 41 S.W.3d 241, 244 (Tex. App. 2001)	4	Further prosecution is barred by double jeopardy when a judge commits incurable error and does so with the intent to cause a mistrial or with knowledge that a mistrial is likely but nonetheless consciously disregards that likelihood. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; Vernon's Ann.Texas Const. Art. 1, § 14.	Accordingly, we hold that further prosecution is barred by double jeopardy when a judge commits incurable error and does so with the intent to cause a mistrial or with knowledge that a mistrial is likely but nonetheless consciously disregards that likelihood.	Is further prosecution barred by double jeopardy when a judge commits incurable error and does so with the intent to cause a mistrial or with knowledge that a mistrial is likely but nonetheless consciously disregards that likelihood?
1654	Prive v. Vermont Asbestos Grp., 992 A.2d 1035, 1040 (Vt., 2010)	3	Even when a plaintiff has omitted essential elements from the original complaint, the rules allow a plaintiff to plead over and require the court to take the plaintiff's additional allegations as true on a motion to dismiss. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 15(a).	As we stated in Colby, even when a plaintiff "has omitted essential elements" from the original complaint, "the rules allow a plaintiff to plead over ... and require the court to take the plaintiff's [additional] allegations as true on a motion to dismiss."	"Even when a plaintiff has omitted essential elements from the original complaint, do the rules allow a plaintiff to plead over and the court to take the allegations as true on a motion to dismiss?"
1657	Wise v. Shinseki, 26 Vet. App. 517, 531 (2014)	14	By requiring only an approximate balance of positive and negative evidence to prove any issue material to a claim for veterans benefits, the nation, in recognition of its debt to veterans, has taken upon itself the risk of error in awarding such benefits. 38 U.S.C.A. § 5107(b).	By requiring only an "approximate balance of positive and negative evidence" to prove any issue material to a claim for veterans benefits, 38 U.S.C. § 5107(b), the nation, "in recognition of our debt to our veterans," has "taken upon itself the risk of error" in awarding such benefits	Does requiring only an approximate balance of positive and negative evidence necessary to prove any issue material to a claim for veterans benefits recognize society's debt to veterans?

1658	United States v. Jackson, 904 F. Supp. 1185, 1186 (D. Or. 1995), aff'd, 99 F.3d 1147 (9th Cir. 1996)	2	Criminal and civil forfeiture proceedings which are based upon same acts may subject defendant to double jeopardy; to attack criminal conviction under double jeopardy clause, petitioner bears burden of demonstrating that jeopardy attached in civil forfeiture process before he entered guilty plea in criminal action. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Criminal and civil forfeiture proceedings which are based upon the same acts may subject a defendant to double jeopardy. See United States v. $405,089.23 U.S. Currency, 33 F.3d 1210 (9th Cir.1994), amended, 56 F.3d 41 (9th Cir.1995). To attack a criminal conviction under the double jeopardy clause, petitioner bears the burden of demonstrating that jeopardy attached in the civil forfeiture process before he entered a guilty plea in the criminal action.	Can criminal and civil forfeiture proceedings based on the same facts subject a defendant to double jeopardy?
1659	Conner v. Deramus, 374 F. Supp. 504, 509 (Pa. 1974)	4	In reviewing trial court's declaration of mistrial, court must look at possibility of manipulation inherent in procedure complained of, alternatives available to trial judge at time, and presence of some important countervailing interest of proper judicial administration.	In reviewing a trial court's declaration of a mistrial, the court must look at the possibility of manipulation inherent in the procedure complained of, the alternatives available to the trial judge at the time, and the presence of some important countervailing interest of proper judicial administration.	"In reviewing a trial court's declaration of mistrial, should a court look at a possibility of manipulation inherent in a procedure complained of?"
1660	Johnson v. Smith, 215 N.C. 322, 1 S.E.2d 834, 836 (1939)	1	Dismissal of complaint is proper when one or more of following three conditions is satisfied: when on its face complaint reveals no law supports plaintiff's claim, when on its face complaint reveals absence of fact sufficient to make good claim, and when some fact disclosed in complaint necessarily defeats plaintiff's claim; thus, complaint is deemed sufficient to withstand motion to dismiss where no "insurmountable bar" to recovery appears on face of complaint and complaint's allegations give adequate notice of nature and extent of claim. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(6), G.S. S 1A-1.	Dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) is proper when one or more of the following three conditions is satisfied: (1) when on its face the complaint reveals no law supports plaintiff's claim; (2) when on its face the complaint reveals the absence of fact sufficient to make a good claim; and (3) when some fact disclosed in the complaint necessarily defeats plaintiff's claim. Oates v. JAG, Inc., 314 N.C. 276, 278, 333 S.E.2d 222, 224 (1985). Thus, a complaint is deemed sufficient to withstand a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) where no "insurmountable bar" to recovery appears on the face of the complaint and the complaint's allegations give adequate notice of the nature and extent of the claim.	Is a complaint sufficient if no insurmountable bar to recovery appears on its face and its allegations give adequate notice of nature and extent of claim?
1663	U.S. v. Hardwell, 80 F.3d 1471, 1498-99 (C.A.10 (Kan.),1996)	81	Use of evidence of related criminal conduct to enhance defendant's sentence for a separate crime does not constitute punishment for that conduct within meaning of double jeopardy clause. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Use of evidence of related criminal conduct to enhance a defendant's sentence for a separate crime does not constitute punishment for that conduct within the meaning of the double jeopardy clause.	Does use of evidence of related criminal conduct to enhance defendant's sentence for a separate crime constitute punishment for that conduct within meaning of double jeopardy clause?

1665	Shirrell v. Missouri Edison Co., 535 S.W.2d 446, 448 (Mo., 1976)	1	General rule is that courts have inherent power in exercise of sound judicial discretion to dismiss case for failure to prosecute with due diligence and action thereon will not be disturbed on appeal unless such discretion was abused.	Lemay Bank & Trust Co., 386 S.W.2d 398, 399 (Mo.1965), as follows: 'The general rule is that courts have inherent power, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss a case for failure to prosecute with due diligence, and that the action thereon will not be disturbed on appeal unless such discretion was abused.	"Do courts have the inherent power, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss case for failure to prosecute with due diligence?"
1666	Shirrell v. Missouri Edison Co., 535 S.W.2d 446, 448 (Mo., 1976)	1	General rule is that courts have inherent power in exercise of sound judicial discretion to dismiss case for failure to prosecute with due diligence and action thereon will not be disturbed on appeal unless such discretion was abused.	Lemay Bank & Trust Co., 386 S.W.2d 398, 399 (Mo.1965), as follows: 'The general rule is that courts have inherent power, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss a case for failure to prosecute with due diligence, and that the action thereon will not be disturbed on appeal unless such discretion was abused.	"Do courts have the inherent power, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss a case for failure to prosecute with due diligence?"
1667	Binner v. Limestone Cty., 129 S.W.3d 710, 712(Tex. App. 2004)	3	Common law vests the trial court with the inherent power to dismiss independently of the rules of procedure when a plaintiff fails to prosecute her case with due diligence. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a.	In addition, the common law vests the trial court with the inherent power to dismiss independently of the rules of procedure when a plaintiff fails to prosecute her case with due diligence.	Does common law vest the trial court with the inherent power to dismiss independently of the rules of procedure when a plaintiff fails to prosecute her case with due diligence?
1668	State v. Howard, 150 Idaho 471, 478 (2011)	10	When a trial court enters a judgment of acquittal based on a determination that the evidence is factually insufficient to support a charge, the prohibition against double jeopardy bars retrying that charge. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; West's I.C.A. Const. Art. 1, S 13.	When a trial court enters a judgment of acquittal based on a determination that the evidence is factually insufficient to support a charge, the prohibition against double jeopardy bars retrying that charge.	"When a trial court enters a judgment of acquittal based on a determination that the evidence is factually insufficient to support a charge, does the prohibition against double jeopardy bar retrying that charge?"
1670	U.S. v. Parris, 88 F.Supp.2d 555, 562 (E.D.Va.,2000)	7	When a jury acquits a defendant of a charge, the Double Jeopardy Clause prohibits the government from relitigating issues of fact necessarily decided by that acquittal in a subsequent prosecution. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	When a jury acquits a defendant of a charge, the Double Jeopardy Clause prohibits the government from relitigating issues of fact necessarily decided by that acquittal in a subsequent prosecution.	"When a jury acquits a defendant of a charge, does the Double Jeopardy Clause prohibit the government from relitigating issues of fact necessarily decided by that acquittal in a subsequent prosecution?"
1671	Washington v. Jarvis, 307 F. Supp. 2d 794, 803 (E.D.Va.,2004)	2	Absent judicial or prosecutorial misconduct intended to goad defendant into moving for mistrial, double jeopardy principles will not bar reprosecution where criminal defendant consents to declaration of mistrial. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Absent judicial or prosecutorial misconduct intended to "goad" the defendant into moving for a mistrial, double jeopardy principles will not bar reprosecution where a criminal defendant consents to the declaration of a mistrial.	"Absent judicial or prosecutorial misconduct intended to goad defendant into moving for mistrial, will double jeopardy principles not bar reprosecution where a criminal defendant consents to a declaration of mistrial?"

1672	State v. Howes, 432 A.2d 419, 423-424 (Me., 1981)	5	Fact alone that criminal defendant has been acquitted for insufficiency of evidence does not suffice to make protection against double jeopardy operative so as to bar State's appeal. 15 M.R.S.A. § 2115-A, subd. 2; Const. Art. 1, § 8; U.S.C.A.Const. Amendments. 5, 14.	Moreover, the fact alone that a criminal defendant has been acquitted for insufficiency of evidence does not suffice to make the protection against double jeopardy operative, thereby to bar the State's appeal under 15 M.R.S.A.	Does the fact alone that a criminal defendant has been acquitted for insufficiency of evidence not suffice to make protection against double jeopardy operative so as to bar State's appeal?
1673	U.S. v. McCallum, 721 F.3d 706, 709, 406 U.S.App.D.C. 74, 77 (C.A.D.C.,2013)	2	The constitutional protection against double jeopardy comprises not only the defendant's right to be secure in a judgment of conviction or acquittal but also his valued right to have his trial completed by a particular tribunal. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	The constitutional protection against double jeopardy comprises not only the defendant's right to be secure in a judgment of conviction or acquittal but also his "valued right to have his trial completed by a particular tribunal.	Does the constitutional protection against double jeopardy comprise not only the defendant's right to be secure in a judgment of conviction or acquittal but also his valued right to have his trial completed by a particular tribunal?
1674	U.S. v. Morse, 613 F.3d 787, 796 (C.A.8 (Minn.), 2010)&(FN3)	19	Relevant conduct which has been considered in a prior sentencing can be a basis for subsequent prosecution without violating the double jeopardy clause so long as the earlier sentence was within the statutory or legislatively authorized punishment range. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	"Relevant conduct which has been considered in a prior sentencing can be a basis for subsequent prosecution without violating the double jeopardy clause so long as the earlier sentence was within the statutory or legislatively authorized punishment range.	"When can relevant conduct which has been considered in a prior sentencing, be a basis for subsequent prosecution without violating the double jeopardy clause?"
1676	People v. Burtron, 376 Ill. App. 3d 856, 862 (2007)	3	Although a retrial is automatically barred when a trial ends with an acquittal or a conviction, the same is not true when a criminal proceeding ends before a final resolution of the merits of the charges against the accused is reached. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Although a retrial is automatically barred when a trial ends with an acquittal or a conviction, the same is not true when a criminal proceeding ends before a final resolution of the merits of the charges against the accused is reached.	"Although a retrial is automatically barred when a trial ends with an acquittal or a conviction, is the same true when a criminal proceeding ends before a final resolution of the merits of the charges against the accused is reached?"
1677	Davis Next Friend LaShonda D. v. Monroe Cty. Bd. of Educ., 526 U.S. 629, 633 (1999)	1	A private damages action may lie against a school board under Title IX in cases of student-on-student harassment, but only where the funding recipient acts with deliberate indifference to known acts of harassment in its programs or activities, and only for harassment that is so severe, pervasive, and objectively offensive that it effectively bars the victim's access to an educational opportunity or benefit. Education Amendments of 1972, § 901(a), as amended, 20 U.S.C.A. § 1681(a).	We consider here whether a private damages action may lie against the school board in cases of student-on-student harassment. We conclude that it may, but only where the funding recipient acts with deliberate indifference to known acts of harassment in its programs or activities. Moreover, we conclude that such an action will lie only for harassment that is so severe, pervasive, and objectively offensive that it effectively bars the victim's access to an educational opportunity or benefit.	Can school boards be liable under Title IX for sexual harassment of students?

1678	High v. United States, 128 A.3d 1017, 1020 (D.C. App. 2015)	5	To obtain a conviction for threats to do bodily harm, the government must prove, inter alia, the following beyond a reasonable doubt: that (1) the defendant uttered words to another person, and that (2) those words were of such a nature as to convey fear of serious bodily harm or injury to the ordinary hearer. D.C. Official Code, 2001 Ed. S 22-407.	To obtain a conviction of threats to do bodily harm, the government must prove, inter alia, the following beyond a reasonable doubt: that "(1) the defendant uttered words to another person, [and that] (2) those words were of such a nature as to convey fear of serious bodily harm or injury to the ordinary hearer...."	What must the government prove in order to obtain a conviction for threats to do bodily harm?
1679	Provenzano v. Provenzano, 88 Conn. App. 217, 221-222 (2005)	3	Clear and convincing proof denotes a degree of belief that lies between the belief that is required to find the truth or existence of the fact in issue in an ordinary civil action and the belief that is required to find guilt in a criminal prosecution; the burden is sustained if evidence induces in the mind of the trier a reasonable belief that the facts asserted are highly probably true, that the probability that they are true or exist is substantially greater than the probability that they are false or do not exist.	[C]lear and convincing proof ... denotes a degree of belief that lies between the belief that is required to find the truth or existence of the [fact in issue] in an ordinary civil action and the belief that is required to find guilt in a criminal prosecution.... [The burden] is sustained if evidence induces in the mind of the trier a reasonable belief that the facts asserted are highly probably true, that the probability that they are true or exist is substantially greater than the probability that they are false or do *222 not exist..	What is the standard of proof required to claim adverse possession?
1680	Mahler v. Szucs, 135 Wash. 2d 398, 411 (Wash. 1998)	1	"Subrogation" is an equitable doctrine the essential purpose of which is to provide for a proper allocation of payment responsibility; it seeks to impose ultimate responsibility for a wrong or loss on the party who, in equity and good conscience, ought to bear it.	. Subrogation is an equitable doctrine the essential purpose of which is to provide for a proper allocation of payment responsibility. It seeks to impose ultimate responsibility for a wrong or loss on the party who, in equity and good conscience, ought to bear it.	Does subrogation seek to impose ultimate responsibility for a wrong or loss on the party who in equity and good conscience ought to bear it?
1682	Gautreaux v. Maya, 112 So. 3d 146, 149 (Fla. App. 2013)	5	When reviewing case for fraud on court justifying dismissal of action, court should consider proper mix of factors and carefully balance policy favoring adjudication on merits with competing policies to maintain integrity of judicial system.	When reviewing a case for fraud, the court should "consider the proper mix of factors" and carefully balance a policy favoring adjudication on the merits with competing policies to maintain the integrity of the judicial system.	"When reviewing case for fraud on a court justifying an extraordinary measure of dismissal, should a court consider a proper mix of factors and carefully balance policy favoring adjudication?"

1683	Evans v. Empire Dist. Elec. Co., 346 S.W.3d 313, 317 (2011)	7	A pre-trial dismissal based on an affirmative defense must be granted under the standards of summary judgment; an exception exists, however, whereby a defendant may properly file a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim when it appears from the face of the petition that an affirmative defense is applicable. V.A.M.R. 55.27(a)(6).	"A pre-trial dismissal based on an affirmative defense must be granted under the standards of summary judgment." Id. (citing Fortenberry v. Buck, 307 S.W.3d 676, 679 (Mo.App. W.D.2010)). An exception exists, however, whereby a defendant may properly file a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim under Rule 55.27(a)(6) 4 when it appears from the face of the petition that an affirmative defense is applicable.	Is there an exception for a pre-trial dismissal to be granted based on an affirmative defense?
1684	Am. Petroleum Inst. v. U.S. E.P.A., 52 F.3d 1113, 1119 (D.C. Cir. 1995)	3	Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) cannot rely on its general authority to make rules necessary to carry out its functions when specific statutory directive defines relevant functions of EPA in particular area.	EPA cannot rely on its general authority to make rules necessary to carry out its functions when a specific statutory directive defines the relevant functions of EPA in a particular area.	Can the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) rely on its general authority to make rules to carry on functions when a specific statutory directive defines its relevant functions in a particular area?
1686	Love Terminal Partners v. United States, 126 Fed. Cl. 389, 410 (2016)	13	A regulation that restricts the use of property or unduly burdens private property interests results in a regulatory, not a physical, taking; in other words, a regulatory taking is one in which the government prevents the landowner from making a particular use of the property that otherwise would be permissible. U.S. Const. Amend. 5.	A regulation that restricts the use of property or unduly burdens private property interests results in a regulatory, not a physical, taking. Huntleigh USA Corp. v. United States, 525 F.3d 1370, 1378 (Fed.Cir.2008); accord Tuthill Ranch, Inc., 381 F.3d at 1137. In other words, a regulatory taking is one in which "the government prevents the landowner from making a particular use of the property that otherwise would be permissible.	In a regulatory taking does the government prevent the landowner from making a particular use of the property that otherwise would be permissible?
1687	Goudy v. Dayton Newspapers, 14 Ohio App. 2d 207, 208 (1967)	6	It is within discretion of trial court to grant a mistrial or a continuance for purpose of securing documentary evidence, or to grant a new trial for surprise which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against.	It is within the discretion of a trial court whether to grant a mistrial, or a continuance for the purpose of securing documentary evidence, or whether to grant a new trial for surprise which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against.	"Is it within discretion of a trial court to grant a mistrial or a continuance for purpose of securing documentary evidence, or to grant a new trial for surprise which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against?"

1688	Moy v. Ng, 371 Ill. App. 3d 957, 960, 864 N.E.2d 752, 755 (2007)	6	Where a party fails to properly respond to a request to admit facts, those factual matters in the request are deemed judicial admissions which cannot later be controverted by any contrary evidence; such an admission is considered incontrovertible and has the effect of withdrawing a fact from contention. Sup.Ct.Rules, Rule 216.	Where a party fails to properly respond to a Rule 216 request to admit facts, those factual matters in the request are deemed judicial admissions which cannot later be controverted by any contrary evidence. Robertson v. Sky Chefs, Inc., 344 Ill.App.3d 196, 199, 279 Ill.Dec. 49, 799 N.E.2d 852 (2003). Such an admission is considered incontrovertible and has the effect of withdrawing a fact from contention.	"Where a party fails to properly respond to a request to admit facts, will those factual matters in the request be deemed judicial admissions which cannot later be controverted by any contrary evidence? "
1689	State v. Schenkolewski, 301 N.J. Super. 115, 138-139 (1997)	4	Neither offeror nor the recipient of bribe need be public official to prove bribery, and it is sufficient if recipient created understanding with offeror that he could influence matters in connection with official duty, whether or not he was capable of actually effecting such an act. N.J.S.A. 2C:27-2.	Under N.J.S.A. 2C:27-2, neither the offeror nor the recipient of the bribe need be a public official to prove bribery. Rather, it is sufficient if the recipient created the understanding with the briber that he could influence matters in connection with an official duty, whether or not he was capable of actually effecting *139 such an act.	"To prove bribery, is it sufficient if the recipient created the understanding with the briber that he could influence matters in connection with an official duty?"
1690	Colorado Interstate Gas Co. v. Sears, 362 S.W.2d 396, 400 (Tex. Civ. App. 1962),	3	Rule of fair chance or fair share is reason for "confiscation" exception to well-spacing rule whereby owner or lessee can get oil and gas well permit for small tract, and proper test of confiscation under the rule is whether owner, with wells which already exist, has been accorded a fair and equal opportunity with other producers of surrounding tracts within drainage area to recover his fair share of oil in place underneath his tract.	'The rule of fair chance or fair share is the reason for the 'confiscation' exception to Rule 37 whereby an owner or lessee can get a well permit for a small tract. Brown v. Humble Oil & Refining Co., 1935, 126 Tex. 296, 83 S.W.2d 935, 87 S.W.2d 1069, 99 A.L.R. 1107, 101 A.L.R. 1393; Railroad Commission of Texas v. Gulf Production Co., 1939, 134 Tex. 122, 132 S.W.2d 254. In fact, it has been held that the proper test of confiscation under Rule 37 is whether an owner, with the wells which already exist, has been accorded a fair and equal opportunity with other producers of surrounding tracts within the drainage area to recover his fair share of the oil in place beneath his tract. If he has, no confiscation results.	"Is the proper test of confiscation whether an owner, with the wells which already exist, has been accorded a fair and equal opportunity with other producers of surrounding tracts to recover his fair share of the oil in place beneath his tract?"
1691	Bloomgarden v. Lanza, 143 A.D.3d 850, 851, 40 N.Y.S.3d 142, 144 (2016)	1	Although the ultimate burden of proof regarding personal jurisdiction rests with the plaintiff, to defeat a motion to dismiss a complaint for lack of personal jurisdiction, the plaintiff need only make a prima facie showing that the defendant is subject to the personal jurisdiction of the court. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(8).	Although the ultimate burden of proof regarding personal jurisdiction rests with the plaintiff, to defeat a CPLR 3211(a)(8) motion to dismiss a complaint, the plaintiff need only make a prima facie showing that the defendant is subject to the personal jurisdiction of the court	Need a plaintiff only make a prima facie showing that the defendant is subject to the personal jurisdiction of the court?

1695	State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Weiss, 194 P.3d 1063, 1067 (Colo.App., 2008)	4	"Subrogation" is a creature of equity having for its purpose the working out of an equitable adjustment between the parties by securing the ultimate discharge of a debt by the person who in equity and good conscience ought to pay it.	"Subrogation is a 'creature of equity having for its purpose the working out of an equitable adjustment between the parties by securing the ultimate discharge of a debt by the person who in equity and good conscience ought to pay it.'	Is subrogation a creature of equity having for its purpose the working out of an equitable adjustment between the parties by securing the ultimate discharge of a debt by the person who in equity and good conscience ought to pay it?
1696	Thrower v. Anson, 276 Neb. 102, 110 (Neb., 2008)	15	"Subrogation" involves the substitution of one person in the place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand, or right, so that the one who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relation to the debt or claim and its rights, remedies, or securities.	Subrogation involves the substitution of one person in the place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand, or right, so that the one who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relation to the debt or claim and its rights, remedies, or securities.	"Does subrogation involve the substitution of one person in the place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand, or right, so that the one who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relation to the debt or claim and its rights, remedies, or securities?"
1697	Yaw v. Beeghly, 109 Ill. App. 3d 627, 632 (1982)	7	Absence of counsel is just one factor to be considered in granting continuance; more important factor is whether party seeking continuance has acted with diligence, and the very fact that no one has appeared to seek a continuance can be construed as lack of diligence.	Absence of counsel is just one factor to be considered in granting a continuance. A more important factor is whether the party seeking a continuance had acted with diligence. (Thilman, at 294, 42 Ill.Dec. 305, 408 N.E.2d 1014.) The very fact that no one appeared to seek a continuance can be construed as lack of diligence.	"Is absence of counsel just one factor to be considered in granting a continuance and is the more important factor whether the party seeking continuance has acted with diligence, and can the very fact that no one has appeared to seek a continuance be construed as lack of diligence?"
1699	In re Bill Heard Enterprises, 423 B.R. 771, 783 (N.D. Ala. 2010)	19	Doctrine of equitable subrogation is designed to protect parties who have actually given up property of value in order to discharge an obligation so that another party is not unjustly enriched at the parties' expense.	The doctrine of equitable subrogation is designed to protect parties who have actually given up property of value in order to discharge an obligation so that another party is not unjustly enriched at the parties' expense.	Is the doctrine of equitable subrogation designed to protect parties who have actually given up property of value in order to discharge an obligation so that another party is not unjustly enriched at the parties' expense?
1700	World Wide Mins. Ltd. v. Republic of Kazakhstan, 116 F. Supp. 2d 98, 104 (D.D.C. 2000)	8	"Act of state doctrine" bars consideration of claims when the resolution of a case turns on the legality or illegality of official action taken by a foreign sovereign in its own territory.	The act of state doctrine bars consideration of claims when the resolution of a case turns on the legality or illegality of official action taken by a foreign sovereign in its own territory	Does the Act of state doctrine bar consideration of claims when the resolution of a case turns on the legality or illegality of an official action taken by a foreign sovereign in its own territory?
1701	Autin v. Goetz, 524 S.W.3d 617, 631 (Tenn. App. 2017)	9	A plaintiff's right to voluntary dismissal without prejudice is subject to the exceptions expressly stated in rule of civil procedure governing voluntary dismissal as well as to an implied exception which prohibits nonsuit when it would deprive the defendant of some vested right. Tenn. R. Civ. P. 41.01(1).	Consequently, "[a] plaintiff's right to voluntary dismissal without prejudice is subject to the exceptions expressly stated in Rule 41.01(1) as well as to an implied exception which prohibits nonsuit when it would deprive the defendant of some vested right." Lacy v. Cox, 152 S.W.3d 480, 484 (Tenn.	Is a plaintiff's right to voluntary dismissal without prejudice subject to the exceptions expressly stated in rule of civil procedure governing voluntary dismissal?

1702	In re Frankum, 399 B.R. 498, 504 (E.D. Ark. 2009)	10	Subrogation may arise in two different contexts: (1) when a person who is not liable for a debt pays a creditor and seeks reimbursement from the debtor for the monies paid to that creditor, and (2) when a person is liable for the debt as a codebtor, surety, or guarantor, and seeks reimbursement of the debt he has paid.	Subrogation may arise in two different contexts: (1) when a person who is not liable for a debt pays a creditor and seeks reimbursement from the debtor for the monies paid to that creditor; or (2) when a person is liable for the debt as a codebtor, surety or guarantor, and seeks reimbursement of the debt he has paid.	"Can subrogation arise when a person who is not liable for a debt pays a creditor and seeks reimbursement from the debtor for the monies paid to that creditor, and when a person is liable for the debt as a codebtor, surety, or guarantor, and seeks reimbursement of the debt he has paid?"
1703	Broward Cty. v. Carney, 586 So. 2d 425, 427 (Fla. App. 1991)	2	"Full compensation" for the taking of private property for public purpose, within meaning of the Florida Constitution, consists of two elements: value of property taken and severance damages to the remainder, if any; other damages, such as business damages and lost profits, do not constitute a part of the constitutionally protected concept of "just" or "full" compensation, since they are intangibles which generally are not "property" in the constitutional sense. West's F.S.A. Const. Art. 10, S 6(a).	"Full compensation" for the taking of private property for a public purpose, within the meaning of the Florida Constitution, consists of two elements: the value of the property taken and severance damages to the remainder, if any. Id. at 159. Other damages, such as business damages and lost profits, do not constitute a part of the constitutionally protected concept of "just" or "full" compensation, since they are intangibles which generally are not "property" in the constitutional sense.	What elements constitute full compensation in eminent domain matters?
1705	Brentwood Med. Assocs. v. United Mine Workers of Am., 396 F.3d 237, 238-39 (3rd Cir. 2005)	1	Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) codifies Congress' desire to uphold private arbitration agreements that produce prompt and fair dispute resolution without involving courts; in furtherance of this interest, court must scrupulously honor bargains implicit in arbitration agreements and interfere only when award is severely problematic. 9 U.S.C.A. S 1 et seq.	The Federal Arbitration Act codifies Congress' desire to uphold private arbitration agreements that produce prompt and fair dispute resolution without involving the courts. In furtherance of this interest, a court must scrupulously honor the *239 bargains implicit in such agreements and interfere only when an award is severely problematic.	What is the intention of Congress in codifying Federal Arbitration Act?
1709	Bramon v. U-Haul, 945 S.W.2d 676, 684 (Miss. App. 1997)	18	Three degrees of malice exist for purposes of actions for malicious prosecution; "actual malice" means ill will, spite, personal hatred, or vindictive motives, while "legal malice" embraces any improper motive, and "malice in law" is a wrongful act done intentionally without just cause or excuse.	Three degrees of malice exist for purposes of actions for malicious prosecution. Pernoud v. Martin, 891 S.W.2d 528, 535 [2] (Mo.App.1995). "Actual malice" means ill will, spite, personal hatred, or vindictive motives. Id. "Legal malice" embraces any improper motive. Id. "Malice in law" is a wrongful act done intentionally without just cause or excuse.	What are the three degrees of malice in malicious prosecution actions?

1713	Howard Univ. v. Roberts-Williams, 37 A.3d 896, 910 (D.C. App. 2012)	16	Rulings on motions in limine normally are considered provisional, in the sense that the trial court may revisit its pre-trial evidentiary rulings in the context of the presentation of the evidence in the case.	However, "rulings on motions in limine normally are considered provisional, in the sense that the trial court may revisit its pre-trial evidentiary rulings in the context of the presentation of the evidence in the case."	"Are rulings on motions in limine normally considered provisional, in the sense that the trial court may revisit its pre-trial evidentiary rulings in the context of the presentation of the evidence in the case?"
1714	First Specialty Ins. Corp. v. Novapro Risk Sols., LP, 468 F. Supp. 2d 1321, 1339 (D. Kan. 2007)	1	Under New Jersey law, "subrogation" is equitable rather than contractual doctrine, applied in interest of justice when one party who is not volunteer pays obligation which should be imposed on another.	Under New Jersey law, "subrogation is an equitable rather than a contractual doctrine applied in the interest of justice when one party who is not a volunteer pays an obligation which should be imposed on another...."	"Is subrogation an equitable rather than contractual doctrine, applied in interest of justice when one party who is not volunteer pays obligation which should be imposed on another?"
1715	Bainbridge v. Travelers Cas. Co. of Connecticut, 159 P.3d 748, 751 (Colo. App. 2006)	9	Equitable subrogation is a creature of equity having for its purpose the working out of an equitable adjustment between the parties by securing the ultimate discharge of a debt by the person who in equity and good conscience ought to pay it.	It is "a creature of equity having for its purpose the working out of an equitable adjustment between the parties by securing the ultimate discharge of a debt by the person who in equity and good conscience ought to pay it."	Is equitable subrogation a creature of equity having for its purpose the working out of an equitable adjustment between the parties by securing the ultimate discharge of a debt by the person who in equity and good conscience ought to pay it?
1716	In re Karp, 373 B.R. 837, 843-44 (N.D. Ill. 2007)	13	Four requirements must be met in order for potential subrogee to assert right of subrogation under Illinois law: (1) debt or claim must have been paid in full; (2) subrogee must have paid debt for which third party, and not subrogee, is primarily liable; (3) subrogor must possess right which he could enforce against third party; and (4) subrogee must not have acted as mere volunteer in paying debt or claim.	To assert a right of subrogation, a potential subrogee is required to *844 satisfy the following requirements: (1) the debt or claim must have been paid in full; (2) the subrogee must have paid a debt for which a third party and not the subrogee is primarily liable; (3) the subrogor must possess a right which he could enforce against a third party; and (4) the subrogee must not have acted as a mere volunteer in paying the debt or claim.	What four requirements must be met in order for a potential subrogee to assert the right of subrogation?

1717	Sunshine v. Bankers Tr. Co., 34 N.Y.2d 404, 411-412, 314 N.E.2d 860, 864-65 (1974)	9	Statute providing that, if payor bank has paid item over stop payment order of drawer, to prevent unjust enrichment and only to extent necessary to prevent loss to bank by reason of its payment of item, payor bank shall be subrogated to rights of maker against payee with respect to transaction out of which item arose confers on bank substantive rights of subrogation, even if technical mechanical requirements of common-law subrogation have not been met. Uniform Commercial Code, § 4-407.	Another remedy appellant attempts to pursue is that of subrogation. Section 4—407 of the code states that: ‘If a payor bank has paid an item over the stop payment order of the drawer or maker or otherwise under circumstances giving a basis for objection by the drawer or maker, to prevent unjust enrichment and only to the extent necessary to prevent loss to the bank by reason of its payment of the item, the payor bank shall be subrogated to the rights * * * (c) of the drawer or maker against the payee * * * with respect to the transaction out of which the item arose.’ ... In short, we read section 4—407 as conferring on the Bank the substantive rights of subrogation even if the technical mechanical requirements of common-law subrogation have not been met	When does payor bank have to be subrogated to rights of drawer against payee to prevent unjust enrichment?
1718	Kansas City, Mo. v. Tri-City Const. Co., 666 F. Supp. 170, 172 (W.D. Mo. 1987)	2	All that is necessary for surety's equitable right of subrogation and equitable lien upon retained funds to attach to the exclusion of the contractor is that the contractor be in default as a matter of fact and that the surety become obligated to pay under its payment bond and discharge the obligation.	Under Missouri law all that is necessary for a surety's equitable right of subrogation and equitable lien upon retained funds to attach to the exclusion of the contractor is that "the contractor be in default as a matter of fact, and that as a result of such default the surety become obligated to pay under its payment bond, and discharge the obligations of its principal."	What is necessary for a surety's equitable right of subrogation and equitable lien upon retained funds to attach to the exclusion of the contractor?
1719	Walker Process Equip. Co. v. Cooley Bldg. Corp., 129 Vt. 333, 339 (Vt. 1971)	5	"Subrogation" is an equity called into existence for purpose of enabling party secondarily liable but who has paid debt to reap benefit of any securities or remedies which creditor may hold against principal debtor and by use of which party paying may thus be made whole.	Subrogation is an equity called into existence for the purpose of enabling a party secondarily liable, but who has paid the debt, to reap the benefit of any securities or remedies which the creditor may hold against the principal debtor and by the use of which the party paying may thus be made whole.	Does the doctrine of equitable subrogation or subrogation enable a secondarily liable party who has been compelled to pay a debt to be made whole by collecting that debt from the primarily liable party?

1720	State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Weiss, 194 P.3d 1063, 1067 (Colo.App., 2008)	9	The pertinent differences between assignment and subrogation include the following: (1) assignment transfers the entire value of the claim, whereas subrogation transfers the claim only to the extent necessary to reimburse the subrogee, (2) assignees are typically voluntary investors, whereas subrogees, usually insurers, are obligated to pay the insured's obligation to a third party, and (3) assignment is an outright transfer of the claim, whereas subrogation entails a substitution of the subrogee for the subrogor.	The pertinent differences between assignment and subrogation include the following: (1) assignment transfers the entire value of the claim, whereas subrogation transfers the claim only to the extent necessary to reimburse the subrogee; (2) assignees are typically voluntary investors, whereas subrogees, usually insurers, are obligated to pay the insured's obligation to a third party; and (3) assignment is an outright transfer of the claim, whereas subrogation entails a substitution of the subrogee for the subrogor.	What are the pertinent differences between assignment and subrogation?
1721	A/S Ivarans Rederi v. United States, 895 F.2d 1441, 1445 (D.D.C. 1990)	2	Private, regulated parties cannot agree to waive subject matter jurisdiction of agency charged with statutory responsibility to insure that parties implement agreements as approved by and filed with that agency.	Private regulated parties cannot agree to waive the subject matter jurisdiction of the agency charged with the statutory responsibility to insure that parties implement agreements as approved by and filed with that agency.	Can private regulated parties waive the subject matter jurisdiction of the agency charged with the statutory responsibility to insure that parties implement agreements as approved by and filed with that agency?
1724	R.S.B. Ventures v. Berlowitz, 211 So. 3d 259, 263 (Fla.App. 4 Dist., 2017)	5	A cause of action for legal malpractice in the litigation context does not accrue until the litigation is concluded by final judgment and the final judgment becomes final, meaning that the time for filing an appeal or postjudgment motions has expired or, if an appeal was taken, the underlying legal proceeding has been completed on appellate review.	A cause of action for legal malpractice in the litigation context does not accrue until "the litigation is concluded by final judgment" and "the final judgment becomes final," meaning that the time for filing an appeal or postjudgment motions has expired or, if an appeal was taken, the underlying legal proceeding has been completed on appellate review.	Does a cause of action for legal malpractice in the litigation context accrue before the litigation is concluded by final judgment?
1725	U.S. v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332, 359 (C.A.4 (Va.), 2012)	5	In order to establish the quid pro quo essential to proving bribery, government need not show that the defendant intended for his payments to be tied to specific official acts or omissions; rather, bribery can be accomplished through an ongoing course of conduct. 18 U.S.C.A. S 201.	We agree with that court's explanation that, "in order to establish the quid pro quo essential to proving bribery, the government need not show that the defendant intended for his payments to be tied to specific official acts (or omissions)." Id. at 148 (internal quotation marks omitted). Rather, "bribery can be accomplished through an ongoing course of conduct." Id.	Does the Government need to show that the defendant intended for his payments to be tied to specific official acts or omissions in order to establish the quid pro quo essential to proving bribery?
1726	Genter v. Blair Cty. Convention & Sports Facilities Auth., 805 A.2d 51, 56 (Pa. 2002)	7	Merely having house that is somewhat less desirable to live in does not constitute type of exceptional circumstance needed to prove de facto taking of entire residential property. 26 P.S. S 1-502(e).	"Merely having a house that is somewhat less desirable to live in does not constitute the type of exceptional circumstance needed to prove a de facto taking of an entire residential property."	Does merely having a house that is less desirable to live in constitute the type of exceptional circumstance needed to prove a de facto taking of an entire residential property?

1727	Du Daobin v. Cisco Sys., 2 F. Supp. 3d 717, 725 (D.Md. 2014)	8	The act of state doctrine is premised on the principle that every sovereign state is bound to respect the independence of every other sovereign state, and the courts of one country will not sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another, done within its own territory.	The act of state doctrine is premised on the principle that "[e]very sovereign state is bound to respect the independence of every other sovereign state, and the courts of one country will not sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another, done within its own territory.	"Under the act of state doctrine, will the courts of one country sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another, done within its own territory?"
1728	Warfaa v. Ali, 33 F. Supp. 3d 653, 661 (E.D.Va., 2014)	10	Like the political question doctrine, the act of state doctrine is derived in part from the concern that the Judiciary, by questioning the validity of a foreign government's acts, could interfere with the Executive Branch's conduct of foreign affairs.	Like the political question doctrine, the act of state doctrine is derived in part from the concern that the Judiciary, by questioning the validity of such acts, could interfere with the Executive Branch's conduct of foreign affairs.	"Like the political question doctrine, is the act of state doctrine derived in part from the concern that the judiciary could interfere with the conduct of foreign affairs?"
1730	Fed. Republic of Germany v. Elicofon, 358 F. Supp. 747, 752 (E.D.N.Y. 1970)	2	A government is in every sense of the word acting in international affairs when it seeks aid of a foreign government in an attempt to vindicate the private rights of specific citizens or of its citizenry as a whole.	A government is in every sense of the word acting in international affairs when it seeks the aid of a foreign government in an attempt to vindicate the private rights of specific citizens or of its citizenry as a whole.	Is a government acting in international affairs when it seeks the aid of a foreign government in an attempt to vindicate the private rights of specific citizens or of its citizenry as a whole?
1731	United States v. Sum of $70,990,605, 234 F.Supp.3d 212, 243 (D.D.C., 2017)	23	The act of state doctrine does not establish an exception for cases or controversies that may embarrass foreign governments, but merely requires that, in the process of deciding, the acts of foreign sovereigns taken within their own jurisdiction shall be deemed valid.	"The act of state doctrine does not establish an exception for cases or controversies that may embarrass foreign governments, but merely requires that, in the process of deciding, the acts of foreign sovereigns taken within their own jurisdiction shall be deemed valid.	Does the act of state doctrine require acts of foreign sovereigns taken within their own jurisdiction to be deemed valid?
1732	Branch v. F.T.C., 141 F.2d 31, 35 (7th Cir. 1944)	8	The United States in exercising its sovereign control over its commerce and acts of its resident citizens therein does not invade sovereignty of any other country or attempt to act beyond territorial jurisdiction of the United States.	The exercise by the United States of its sovereign control over its commerce and the acts of its resident citizens therein is no invasion of the sovereignty of any other country or any attempt to act beyond the territorial jurisdiction of the United States.	"Does the United States, in exercising its sovereign control over its commerce and acts of its resident citizens therein invade sovereignty of any other country, or attempt to act beyond territorial jurisdiction of the United States?"
1734	Du Daobin v. Cisco Sys., 2 F. Supp. 3d 717, 725 (D.Md. 2014)	8	The act of state doctrine is premised on the principle that every sovereign state is bound to respect the independence of every other sovereign state, and the courts of one country will not sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another, done within its own territory.	The act of state doctrine is premised on the principle that "[e]very sovereign state is bound to respect the independence of every other sovereign state, and the courts of one country will not sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another, done within its own territory."	"Is the act of state doctrine a non-jurisdictional, prudential doctrine based on the notion that the courts of one country will not sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another, done within its own territory?"

1735	Harper v. Patterson, 270 Ga. App. 437, 441 (2004)	14	A motion in limine is a pretrial motion which may be used two ways: (1) movant seeks, not a final ruling on the admissibility of evidence, but only to prevent the mention by anyone, during the trial, of a certain item of evidence or area of inquiry until its admissibility can be determined during course of trial outside the presence of the jury; and (2) movant seeks a ruling on the admissibility of evidence prior to the trial.	A motion in limine is a pretrial motion which may be used two ways: 1) The movant seeks, not a final ruling on the admissibility of evidence, but only to prevent the mention by anyone, during the trial, of a certain item of evidence or area of inquiry until its admissibility can be determined during the course of the trial outside the presence of the jury. 2) The movant seeks a ruling on the admissibility of evidence prior to the trial.	"Is ""motion in limine"" the name commonly given a pretrial motion that attempts to prevent the offer of, or reference to, specific evidence or other matter in the presence of the jury?"
1736	Evans v. Family Inns of Am., 141 N.C. App. 520, 523 (2000)	3	Rulings on motions in limine are merely preliminary and subject to change during the course of trial, depending on the actual evidence offered at trial, and thus, objection to an order granting or denying such motion is insufficient to preserve for appeal the question of the admissibility of evidence.	Rulings on these motions, however, are merely preliminary and subject to change 349 during the course of trial, depending upon the actual evidence offered at trial and thus an objection to an order granting or denying the motion "is insufficient to preserve for appeal the question of the admissibility of evidence."	Is an objection to an order granting or denying such motion insufficient to preserve for appeal the question of the admissibility of evidence?
1737	Katiuzhinsky v. Perry, 152 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1294, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 309, 312 (2007)	3	While trial judges ordinarily enjoy broad discretion with respect to the admission and exclusion of evidence in ruling on motions in limine, a court's discretion is limited by the legal principles applicable to the case.	While trial judges ordinarily enjoy broad discretion with respect to the admission and exclusion of evidence in ruling on motions in limine (Greer v. Buzgheia (2006) 141 Cal.App.4th 1150, 1156, 46 Cal.Rptr.3d 780 (Greer)), a court's discretion is limited by the legal principles applicable to the case.	"With respect to the admission and exclusion of evidence in ruling on motions in limine, is a court's discretion limited by the legal principles applicable to the case?"
1740	Rapture Shipping, Ltd. v. Allround Fuel Trading B.V., 350 F. Supp. 2d 369, 373 (S.D.N.Y., 2004)	3	Under the principles of international comity, United States courts ordinarily refuse to review acts of foreign governments and defer to proceedings taking place in foreign countries, allowing those acts and proceedings to have extraterritorial effect in the United States.	"Under the principles of international comity, United States courts ordinarily refuse to review acts of foreign governments and defer to proceedings taking place in foreign countries, allowing those acts and proceedings to have extraterritorial effect in the United States.	"Do United States courts ordinarily defer to proceedings taking place in foreign countries, allowing those proceedings to have extraterritorial effect in the United States?"
1743	Higgins v. Columbia Gas of Ohio, 136 Ohio App. 3d 198, 201-202 (2000)	3	Pure contract and common-law tort claims against a public utility may be brought in a common pleas court, as the Public Utilities Commission has no power to judicially ascertain and determine legal rights and liabilities, or to award damages. R.C. S 4905.26.	Pure contract and common-law tort claims against a *202 public utility may be brought in a common pleas court because "the Commission has no power to judicially ascertain and determine legal rights and liabilities," or to award damages.	Are pure contract and common-law torts claims against public utilities brought in a common pleas court?

1745	In re Pihl, 560 B.R. 1, 9 (D.Mass. 2016)	8	In deciding whether equitable subrogation applies, Massachusetts courts look for the presence of the following factors: (1) that alleged subrogee made payment to protect his or her own interest, (2) that subrogee did not act as volunteer, (3) that subrogee was not primarily liable for the debt paid, (4) that subrogee paid off the entire encumbrance, and (5) that subrogation will not work any injustice to the rights of junior lienholder; however, not all factors need be present for equitable subrogation to apply.	Under Massachusetts law courts look to the following factors to determine whether equitable subrogation applies: (1) the subrogee made the payment to protect his or her own interest, (2) the subrogee did not act as a volunteer, (3) the subrogee was not primarily liable for the debt paid, (4) the subrogee paid off the entire encumbrance, and (5) subrogation would not work any injustice to the rights of the junior lienholder. Not all factors need be present for equitable subrogation to apply.	Are there factors that must be determined before equitable subrogation can be applied?
1746	In re Jones, 534 B.R. 588, 595 (D. Vt. 2015)	2	Equitable subrogation is doctrine which revolves around the substitution of one party for another whose debt the party pays, entitling the paying party to rights, remedies, or securities that would otherwise belong to party whose debt was paid.	Subrogation is a doctrine which revolves around the "substitution of one party for another whose debt the party pays, entitling the paying party to rights, remedies, or securities that would otherwise belong to the [party whose debt was paid]"	"When a party is substituted for another whose debt the party pays, is the subrogated party entitled to rights, remedies, or securities that would otherwise belong to the debtor?"
1747	Zhang v. Slattery, 55 F.3d 732, 744 (2d Cir. 1995)	9	Notice and comment provisions of Administrative Procedure Act are inapplicable to rules involving military or foreign affairs function of United States, presumably to avoid public airing of matters that might inflame or embarrass relations with other countries. 5 U.S.C.A. S 553(a)(1).	The notice and comment provisions of the APA are inapplicable to rules involving "a military or foreign affairs function of the United States," § 553(a)(1), presumably to avoid the public airing of matters that might enflame or embarrass relations with other countries.	Are rules involving military or foreign affairs exempted from the notice and comment provisions of the Administrative Procedures Act?
1748	United States v. Jones, 207 F.Supp.3d 576, 581 (E.D.N.C., 2016)	2	For an act by a public official to qualify as an "official act" under the federal bribery statute: (1) it must connote, refer, or involve a focused and concrete formal exercise of governmental power that is pending before the public official performing the act, or before another public official, or is within the specific duties of an official's position, and (2) the public official must make a decision or take action on that act or agree to do so. 18 U.S.C.A. S 201(a)(3).	In sum, for an act by a public official to qualify as an "official act" under the federal bribery statute: (1) It must "connote," "refer," or "involve" a "focused and concrete ... formal exercise of governmental power" that is pending before the public official performing the act, or before another public official, or is "within the specific duties of an official's position" (the "identification" requirement); and (2) The public official must make a decision or take action on that act or agree to do so (the "performance" requirement)	What is an official act under the bribery statute?

1750	Bate v. Davis, 309 Ky. 709, 711 (1949)	1	An action cannot be maintained if commenced before accrual of cause which is sought to be enforced, and such an action should be dismissed without prejudice to plaintiff's right to begin a new action on accrual of the cause; and, upon proper and timely objection being made, the nonexistence of a cause of action when suit was started is a fatal defect which cannot be cured by accrual of cause pending suit.	On the other hand, an action cannot be maintained if it is commenced before the accrual of the cause of action which is sought to be enforced. Such an action should be dismissed without prejudice to the plaintiff's right to begin a new action on the accrual of the cause of action, upon proper and timely objection being made the nonexistence of a cause of action when the suit was started is a fatal defect which cannot be cured by the accrual of a cause pending suit.'	Can an action be maintained if it commenced before the accrual of the cause of action sought to be enforced?
1752	City of Mount Dora v. JJ's Mobile Homes, 579 So. 2d 219, 225 (Fla. App. 1991)	15	When each of two public service utility entities, whether governmental or private, have legal basis for claim of right to provide similar services in same territory, and each has present ability to promptly and efficiently do so, that entity with earliest acquired legal right has exclusive legal right to provide service in that territory without interference from entity with later acquired claim of right.	When each of two public service utility entities, whether governmental or private, have a legal basis for the claim of a right to provide similar services in the same territory and each has the present ability to promptly and efficiently do so, that entity with the earliest acquired (prior) legal right has the exclusive legal right to provide service in that territory without interference from the entity with the later acquired (subsequent) claim of right.	Does an entity providing a similar service as another in the same territory have an exclusive right to provide service in that territory if the entity had an earlier acquired right?
1753	Ussery v. Darrow, 238 Ala. 67, 71 (Ala., 1939)	3	The principle of "laches" is that complainant will be precluded from relief where, from delay, any conclusion the court may arrive at must at best be conjectural, and the original transactions have become so obscured by lapse of time, loss of evidence, and death of parties as to render it difficult, if not impossible, to do justice, and court need not be satisfied that original claim was unjust, or has been satisfied, or is barred by limitations or prescription.	The principle of laches is as follows: "Where, from delay, any conclusion the court may arrive at must at best be conjectural, and the original transactions have become so obscured by lapse of time, loss of evidence, and death of parties as to render it difficult if not impossible to do justice, the complainant will by his laches be precluded from relief; and it is not even necessary that the court should be satisfied that the original claim was unjust, or has been satisfied. And this is true even though the demand is not barred by the statute of limitations, nor under the ban of the doctrine of prescription	When will a plaintiff by his laches be precluded from relief?

1754	Haefner v. First Nat. Bank of Elmwood Place, 67 Ohio App. 213, 218-19 (1941)	4	If a plaintiff or defendant has no valid and subsisting title or right to subject of his action or counterclaim at time of its commencement, he may not, by subsequent acquisition, or perfection of such right or title, remedy the defect so as to succeed in the action.	The rule supported by the overwhelming weight *219 of authority appears to be that if a plaintiff or defendant has no valid and subsisting title or right to the subject of his action or counterclaim at the time of its commencement, he may not by the subsequent acquisition, or perfection of such right or title, remedy the defect so as to succeed in the action.'	"If a plaintiff or defendant has no valid and subsisting title or right to subject of his action or counterclaim at time of its commencement, may he remedy the defect so as to succeed in the action?"
1755	Barbieri v. Mount Sinai Hosp., 264 A.D.2d 1, 4, 706 N.Y.S.2d 8, 10-11 (2000)	2	For employees, workers' compensation statute ensures a swift and sure source of benefits in exchange for the loss of a common-law tort claim for which benefits, potentially, might be greater. McKinney's Workers' Compensation Law S 10.	For employees, the statute ensures a swift and sure source of benefits in exchange for the loss of a common-law tort claim for which benefits, potentially, might be greater	Does the workers compensation statute ensure employees a swift and sure source of benefits in exchange for the loss of a common-law tort claim for which benefits might be greater?
1757	Edward Balf Co. v. Town of E. Granby, 152 Conn. 319, 323 (1965)	4	Zoning regulations are presumed to be for welfare of entire community, and mere institution of legal proceeding to determine rights should not be allowed to "freeze" rights and possibly upset development of community according to its comprehensive plan.	Also, since zoning regulations are presumed to be for the welfare of the entire community, the mere institution of a legal proceeding to determine the plaintiff's rights should not be allowed to 'freeze' his rights and possibly upset the development of a community according to its comprehensive plan.	"Since zoning regulations are presumed to be for the welfare of an entire community, should an institution of a legal proceeding to determine rights be allowed to ""freeze"" rights?"
1759	Karavolos v. Brown Derby, 99 Ohio App. 3d 548, 552 (1994)	5	In context of workers' compensation matters the definition of and principles governing torts apply, so one may consider that proximate cause of event is that which in natural and continuous sequence, unbroken by any new, independent cause, produces event, and without which that event would not have occurred.	In the context of workers' compensation matters: "The definition of and principles governing torts apply, so one may consider that the proximate cause of an event is that which in a natural and continuous sequence, unbroken by any new, independent cause, produces the event and without which the event would not have occurred.	How principles governing torts do applies in the context of workers compensation matters?
1760	U.S. v. Woods, 21 M.J. 856, 869-70 (ACMR,1986)	2	The President has both constitutional and statutory authority to promulgate rules and regulations for the Government of the United States Army, and, so long as military rules prescribed by President are not inconsistent with congressional statutes, they are within scope of his authority as Commander in Chief.	The President has both constitutional and statutory authority to promulgate rules and regulations for the government of the Army, and, so long as the military rules prescribed by the President are not inconsistent with Congressional statutes, they are within the scope of his authority as Commander in Chief.	Do military rules prescribed by the President come within the scope of his authority as commander in chief if they are inconsistent with the congressional statutes?

1761	Leisure v. Leisure, 605 N.E.2d 755, 758 (Ind. 1993)	2	Federal worker's compensation system, created for similar policy reasons as state worker's compensation system, gives employees quicker and more certain relief than common-law tort action.	The federal worker's compensation system, created for similar policy reasons as the state worker's compensation system, gives employees a quicker and more certain relief than a common law tort action.	"Does the federal workers compensation system, created for similar policy reasons as a states workers compensation system, give employees quicker and more certain relief than common-law tort actions?"
1762	Openshaw v. FedEx Ground Package System, Inc., 731 F.Supp.2d 987, 994 (C.D.Cal., 2010)	11	Numerous factors may make an arbitration provision substantively unconscionable, including severe restrictions on discovery, high arbitration costs borne by one party, limitations on remedies, and curtailed judicial review; essentially, an arbitration provision is substantively unconscionable if it creates an arbitration procedure that favors one party over another. 9 U.S.C.A. SS 2, 4.	Numerous factors may make an arbitration provision substantively unconscionable, including severe restrictions on discovery, high arbitration costs borne by one party, limitations on remedies, and curtailed judicial review. Essentially, an arbitration provision is substantively unconscionable if it creates an arbitration procedure that favors one party over another	What are the factors that make an arbitration provision substantively unconscionable?
1765	Louis R. Shapiro, Inc. v. Milspemes Corp., 20 A.D.2d 857, 857 (N.Y.S.2d Sup. Ct. 1964)	1	Ordinarily, plaintiff has right to discontinue pending action at any time unless substantial rights have accrued or his adversary's rights would be prejudiced thereby, and even then right may be exercised subject to terms imposed by courts. CPLR Rule 3217(a), par. 1.	Ordinarily, a plaintiff has a right to discontinue a pending action at any time unless substantial rights have accrued or his adversary's rights would be prejudiced thereby. Even then the right may be exercised but subject to terms imposed by the courts.	Should a plaintiff be permitted to discontinue the action at any time unless substantial rights have accrued or his adversary's rights would be prejudiced thereby?
1766	Bowie v. Montfort Jones Mem'l Hosp., 861 So. 2d 1037, 1042 (Miss. 2003)	7	Trial judges are afforded considerable discretion in managing the pre-trial discovery process in their courts, including the entry of scheduling orders setting out various deadlines to assure orderly pre-trial preparation resulting in timely disposition of the cases.	Our trial judges are afforded considerable discretion in managing the pre-trial discovery process in their courts, including the entry of scheduling orders setting out various deadlines to assure orderly pre-trial preparation resulting in timely disposition of the cases.	Does trial judges have considerable discretion in managing the pre-trial discovery process in their courts?
1767	Dunham v. Roer, 708 N.W.2d 552, 573 (Minn. App. 2006)	52	Court considers two factors when determining whether to grant a continuance; first, the court considers whether the moving party has been diligent in obtaining or seeking discovery, and, second, the court considers whether the moving party seeks further discovery with the good faith belief that material facts will be uncovered, or is merely engaging in a "fishing expedition".	Accordingly, the court considers two factors when determining whether to grant a continuance. Id. First, the court considers whether the moving party has been "diligent in obtaining or seeking discovery." Id. Second, the court considers whether the moving party seeks further discovery with "the good faith belief that material facts will be uncovered, or ... [is] merely engaging in a 'fishing expedition.' "	What two factors does a court consider when determining whether to grant a continuance?

1770	Chacon v. Jones-Schilds, 904 N.E.2d 286, 289 (2009)	6	A pretrial order is to limit the issues for trial to those not disposed of by admission or agreement of counsel, and such order when entered shall control the subsequent course of action, unless modified thereafter to prevent manifest injustice. Trial Procedure Rule 16(J).	A pretrial order is to "limit the issues for trial to those not disposed of by admission or agreement of counsel, and such order when entered shall control the subsequent course of action, unless modified thereafter to prevent manifest injustice.	Does a pretrial order control the subsequent course of an action unless modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice?
1771	King v. Thompson, 186 Ga. App. 12, 13 (1988)	1	Pretrial order controls subsequent course of action unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice; if claim or issue is omitted from pretrial order, it is waived. O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16(b).	The order, when entered, controls the subsequent course of the action unless modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice. OCGA § 9-11-16(b). If a claim or issue is omitted from the order, it is waived." (Cits.	Does a pretrial order control the subsequent course of action unless modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice and if a claim or issue is omitted from the order is it waived?
1773	Florida Marine Enterprises v. Bailey, 632 So. 2d 649, 651-52 (Fla. App. 1994)	1	Except in cases of clear abuse of discretion prejudicial to affected party, circuit courts must be allowed to enforce pretrial orders to achieve orderly and efficient administration of justice, fair to all parties.	Except in cases of a clear abuse of discretion prejudicial to the affected party, trial courts must be allowed to enforce pretrial orders to achieve the orderly and efficient *652 administration of justice, fair to all parties.	"Can circuit courts be allowed to enforce pretrial orders to achieve orderly and efficient administration of justice, fair to all parties?"
1775	U.S. v. Dreyer, 804 F.3d 1266, 1272 (C.A.9 (Wash.), 2015)	4	Posse Comitatus Act (PCA) eliminates the direct active use of federal troops by civil law authorities, and prohibits Army and Air Force military personnel from participating in civilian law enforcement activities. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1385.	The statute "eliminate[s] the direct active use of Federal troops by civil law authorities," United States v. Banks, 539 F.2d 14, 16 (9th Cir.1976), and "prohibits Army and Air Force military personnel from participating in civilian law enforcement activities," Chon, 210 F.3d at 993.	Does the Posse Comitatus Act (PCA) prohibit Army and Air Force military personnel from participating in civilian law enforcement activities?
1776	Am. Fed'n of Musicians v. Superior Ct. In & For Los Angeles Cnty., 150 Cal. App. 2d 165, 170, 309 P.2d 874, 878 (Cal. Dist. Ct. App. 1957)	5	Code of Civil Procedure provision authorizing inspection of writings is remedial in nature and therefore should be liberally construed, and use of remedy provided therein should be encouraged rather than discouraged. West's Ann.Code Civ.Proc., § 1000.	Section 1000 of the Code of Civil Procedure, providing for inspection, is remedial in nature and therefore should be liberally construed and, as has been said, use of the remedy should be encouraged rather than discouraged.	"Is the Code of Civil Procedure provision authorizing inspection of writings remedial in nature and therefore should be liberally construed, and use of remedy provided therein should be encouraged rather than discouraged?"
1778	C.C. Collings & Co. v. Com., 88 Pa. Cmwlth. 184, 198 (1985)	3	Necessity of elevating substance over semantics in categorization of tax legislation has as one consequence the impropriety of applying case authorities to species of taxation other than those made subject of judicial decision.	The necessity of elevating substance over semantics in the categorization of tax legislation has as one consequence the impropriety of applying case authorities to species of taxation other than those made the subject of judicial decision.	"Is impropriety of applying case authorities to species of taxation, a consequence of necessity of elevating substance over semantics in categorization of tax legislation?"

1779	United States v. Bailey, 444 U.S. 394, 412-413 (U.S. Dist. Col., 1980)	10	To be entitled to instruction on duress or necessity as defense to charge of escape, escapee must offer evidence justifying his continued absence from custody as well as his initial departure, and indispensable element of such offer is testimony of bona fide effort to surrender or return to custody as soon as claimed duress or necessity has lost its coercive force. 18 U.S.C.A. § 751(a).	In order to be entitled to an instruction on duress or necessity as a defense to a charge of escape, an escapee must first offer evidence justifying his continued absence from custody as well as his initial departure, and an indispensable element of such an offer is testimony of a bona fide effort to surrender or return to custody as soon as the claimed duress or necessity had lost its coercive force.	"If a defendant fails to present sufficient evidence of an affirmative defense, does the court have to instruct the jury to consider that defense?"
1780	U.S. v. Wright, 665 F.3d 560, 568 (3rd Cir. (Pa.), 2012)	7	An honest services fraud prosecution for bribery requires the factfinder to determine two things: (1) it must conclude that the payor provided a benefit to a public official intending that he will thereby take favorable official acts that he would not otherwise take; and (2) it must conclude that the official accepted those benefits intending, in exchange for the benefits, to take official acts to benefit the payor, and the intent of both parties may be inferred from circumstantial evidence. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1346.	An honest services fraud prosecution for bribery after Skilling thus requires the factfinder to determine two things. First, it must conclude that the payor provided a benefit to a public official intending that he will thereby take favorable official acts that he would not otherwise take. Second, it must conclude that the official accepted those benefits intending, in exchange for the benefits, to take official acts to benefit the payor. The intent of both parties may be inferred from circumstantial evidence.	What are the questions that the factfinder needs determine in an honest services fraud prosecution for bribery?
1782	Country Club Home v. Harder, 228 Kan. 756, 756 (1980)	1	When pretrial order is agreed on by parties and followed by trial court in deciding issues as set forth in order, parties have acquiesced therein and cannot enlarge those issues on appeal; such an order when entered controls subsequent course of action unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice. Rules of Civil Procedure, K.S.A. 60-216.	When a pretrial order is agreed on by the parties and followed by the trial court in deciding the issues as set forth in the order, the parties have acquiesced therein and cannot enlarge those issues on appeal. Such an order when entered controls the subsequent course of the action, unless modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice. K.S.A. 60-216; Kleibrink v.	Does a pretrial order entered by court control subsequent course of action?
1784	Scarantino v. Pub. Sch. Employees' Ret. Bd., 68 A.3d 375, 382 (Pa. Cmwlth., 2013)	3	For public official to be found guilty of bribery for accepting or agreeing to accept from another any pecuniary benefit as consideration for a recommendation, public official must have acted intentionally, knowingly, or recklessly. 18 Pa.C.S.A. § 4701.	18 Pa.C.S. § 4701(b)(1). [3] Section 4701 provides that a public official is guilty of bribery if he accepts or agrees to accept from another any pecuniary benefit as consideration for a recommendation. The public official must have acted intentionally, knowingly, or recklessly.	"Is it essential to show that the public official acted intentionally, knowingly, or recklessly, to be found guilty of bribery for accepting or agreeing to accept from another any pecuniary benefit as consideration for a recommendation?"

1785	State ex rel. Johnson v. Circuit Court of Milwaukee Cty., 61 Wis. 2d 1, 3 (1972)	1	Trial court has the discretion to allow audio-video recordings of depositions of witnesses to be made and admitted in evidence in addition to stenographic and transcribed recordings provided for in statutes. W.S.A. 887.09, 887.10; Fed.Rules Civ.Proc. rule 30(b)(4), 28 U.S.C.A.	While the court is not prepared at this time to lay down or adopt permanent rules, we think the trial court should have the discretion to allow audio-video recordings of depositions of witnesses to be made and admitted in evidence in addition to the stenographic and transcribed recordings now provided for in our statutes.	Does a trial court have the discretion to allow audio-video recordings of depositions of witnesses to be made and admitted in evidence in addition to stenographic and transcribed recordings provided for in statutes?
1786	Young v. Brown, 154 Ga. App. 452, 453, 268 S.E.2d 729, 731 (1980)	1	Evidence would have to be presented and considered by trial court as to whether merits of the action would be subverted by allowing defendant to withdraw admissions and whether plaintiffs would be prejudiced by withdrawal in maintaining their action on the merits. Code, S 81A-136.	Consequently, evidence must be presented and considered by the trial court as to whether the merits of the action “will be subverted” by the allowance of the defendants to withdraw the admissions and whether the plaintiffs will be prejudiced by a withdrawal in maintaining their action on the merits.	Will evidence have to be presented and considered by a trial court as to whether merits of the action would be subverted by allowing a defendant to withdraw admissions and whether plaintiffs would be prejudiced by withdrawal in maintaining their action on the merits?
1789	Fibreboard Corp. v. Pool, 813 S.W.2d 658, 682 (Tex. App. 1991)	44	Trial court has broad discretion to permit or deny withdrawal of deemed admissions when nonanswering party presents sufficient evidence to establish good cause for failure to make timely answers to requested admissions; however, court must also find that withdrawals can be ordered without causing undue prejudice to party relying on admissions and that presentation of merits of action will be subverted by withdrawal. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 169.	The trial court has broad discretion to permit or deny the withdrawal of deemed admissions when the nonanswering party presents sufficient evidence to establish good cause for his failure to make timely answers to the requested admissions. Boone v. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n, 790 S.W.2d 683, 688 (Tex.App.-Tyler 1990, no writ). However, the court also must find that the withdrawals can be ordered without causing undue prejudice to the party relying on the admissions and that the presentation of the merits of the action will be subverted by the withdrawal.	Should a court find that withdrawals can be ordered without causing undue prejudice to party relying on admissions and that presentation of merits of action will be subverted by withdrawal?

1793	Campero USA Corp. v. STPC Partners, 410 F. Supp. 2d 1268, 1271-72 (2006)	1	Under the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA), upon motion of a party, district courts must compel arbitration of all claims subject to arbitration, but on the other hand, the FAA does not require parties to arbitrate when they have not agreed to do so, nor does it prevent parties who do agree to arbitrate from excluding certain claims from the scope of their arbitration agreement; because parties are free to structure their arbitration agreements as they see fit, they may limit by contract the issues which they will arbitrate. 9 U.S.C.A. § 1 et seq.	"Under the FAA, upon motion of a party, district courts must compel arbitration of all claims subject to arbitration." American Express Financial Advisors, Inc. v. Makarewicz, 122 F.3d 936, 940 (11th Cir.1997) (citations omitted). "On the other hand, 'the FAA does not require *1272 parties to arbitrate when they have not agreed to do so, ... nor does it prevent parties who do agree to arbitrate from excluding certain claims from the scope of their arbitration agreement.' " Id. "Because parties are free to structure their arbitration agreements as they see fit, 'they may limit by contract the issues which they will arbitrate.' "	Can parties to an arbitration agreement limit by a contract the issues that they will arbitrate?
1794	Matter of Wong, 252 Mont. 111, 117 (1992)	5	In making decision on request for continuance due to lack of counsel, court or agency must assess whether party petitioning for continuance has acted diligently in seeking counsel.	In making its decision on a requested continuance due to lack of counsel, a court or agency must assess whether the party petitioning for continuance has acted diligently in seeking counsel.	"In making a decision on a request for continuance due to lack of counsel, should a court or agency assess whether party petitioning for continuance has acted diligently in seeking counsel?"
1795	Martin v. Wyatt, 243 Ga. App. 319, 321 (2000)	4	Continuances because of the absence of counsel are not favored, and a strict compliance with the law is required, particularly since the matter rests within the sound discretion of the trial judge. O.C.G.A. § 9-10-155.	" 'Continuances because of the absence of counsel are not favored, and a strict compliance with the law is required, particularly since the matter rests within the sound discretion of the trial judge.' "	"Are continuances because of the absence of counsel not favored, and a strict compliance with the law is required, particularly since the matter rests within the sound discretion of the trial judge?"
1796	Robertson-Ryan & Assocs., Inc. v. Pohlhammer, 112 Wis. 2d 583, 587-88, 334 N.W.2d 246, 249 (1983)	5	Where there is no good cause for defendant's absence, a motion to continue the case on that basis may properly be denied particularly when the real purpose in seeking a continuance is to delay trial.	This court has held that where there is no good cause for a defendant's absence from trial, a motion to continue the case on that basis may be properly denied. Schweitzer v. Doepke, 195 Wis. 341, 343, 218 N.W. 188 (1928). Allis and Others v. The Meadow Spring Distilling Co., 67 Wis. 16, 21, 29 N.W. 543 (1886). This is particularly true when the real purpose in moving for a *588 continuance is to delay the trial.	"Where there is no good cause for defendant's absence, may a motion to continue the case on that basis properly be denied particularly when the real purpose in seeking a continuance is to delay trial?"

1797	Grynberg v. Karlin, 134 P.3d 563, 565 (Colo. App. 2006)	2	When a party fails to respond in a timely way to a request for admissions, thus admitting the relevant subject matter of the request, these admissions may then be used to support a summary judgment. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 36.	When a party fails to respond in a timely way to a request for admission, it admits the relevant subject matter of the request. Lionelle v. S.E. Colo. Water Conservancy Dist., 676 P.2d 1162, 1167 (Colo.1984); Cox v. Pearl Inv. Co., 168 Colo. 67, 72, 450 P.2d 60, 62 (1969); Engel v. Engel, 902 P.2d 442, 446 (Colo.App.1995). These admissions may then be used to support a summary judgment.	"When a party fails to respond in a timely way to a request for admissions, thus admitting the relevant subject matter of the request, may these admissions then be used to support a summary judgment?"
1799	Dell Dev. Corp. v. Best Indus. Unif. Supply Co., 743 S.W.2d 302, 303 (Tex. App. 1987)	1	Decision of whether to grant motion for continuance, or to continue case sua sponte, rests within discretion of trial court; action of trial court will not be disturbed unless record discloses clear abuse of discretion.	The decision of whether to grant a motion for continuance, or to continue a case sua sponte, rests within the discretion of the trial court. The action of the trial court will not be disturbed unless the record discloses a clear abuse of discretion.	"Does the decision of whether to grant a motion for continuance, or to continue case sua sponte, rest within the discretion of a trial court?"
1800	Acorn Iron Works v. Auditor Gen., 295 Mich. 143, 151 (1940)	5	Tax exactions, property or excise, must rest upon legislative enactment, and collectors can act only within express authority conferred thereby, and the scope of such laws cannot be extended by implication or forced construction, and language, if dubious, is not resolved against the taxpayer.	Tax exactions, property or excise, must rest upon legislative enactment and collectors can act only within express authority conferred thereby, the scope of 130 such laws cannot be extended by implication or forced construction and language, if dubious, is not resolved against the taxpayer.'	Can the scope of tax laws be extended by implication or forced construction?
1802	Moscow Fire Ins. Co. v. Bank of New York & Tr. Co., 280 N.Y. 286, 311-12 (N.Y., 1939)	20	Though state court may not sit in judgment on act of government of foreign country within its own territory or choose between different policies, where no choice is open under established rules of law, it is guided by common-law principles and traditions embodied in state Constitution, statutes, and judicial decisions, where there is room for choice.	Though we may not 'sit in judgment upon the acts of the government of another, done within its own territory;' though this State may not choose between different policies where no choice is left open to us under established rules of law, yet where there is room for choice we are guided by common law principles and traditions embodied in our Constitution, statutes and judicial decisions.	"Can a state sit in judgment upon the acts of the government of another, done within its own territory?"

1803	Landry v. State, 562 So. 2d 843, 843–44 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1990)	1	Trial court has the discretion to refuse continuance where defendant in bad faith neglects to obtain counsel within time provided, but court may apply that discretion only after reasonable inquiry and warning.	The circuit court's opinion recognized that the trial court does have the discretion to refuse a continuance where a defendant in bad faith neglects to obtain counsel within the time provided. See United States v. Gates, 557 F.2d 1086 (5th Cir.1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1017, 98 S.Ct. 737, 54 L.Ed.2d 763 (1978). See also Jones v. State, 449 So.2d 253 (Fla.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 893, 105 S.Ct. 269, 83 L.Ed.2d 205 (1984). However, the court may apply even that discretion only after reasonable inquiry and warning.	Does a trial court have the discretion to refuse continuance where defendant in bad faith neglects to obtain counsel within time provided?
1804	Jones v. Green, 74 Cal. App. 2d 223, 230 (Cal. App. 1946)	2	The granting or refusing of a continuance on account of illness or absence of counsel rests largely, if not wholly, in discretion of trial court, and such discretion will not be reviewed unless it is clearly abused.	It is well established 'that the granting or refusing [of] a continuance on account of the illness or absence of counsel is a matter which rests largely, if not wholly in the discretion of the trial court, and such discretion will not be reviewed unless it is clearly shown to have been abused	"Does the granting or refusing of a continuance on account of illness or absence of counsel rest largely in discretion of trial court, and such discretion will not be reviewed unless it is clearly abused?"
1805	Williams v. Gould, Inc., 232 Neb. 862, 884, 443 N.W.2d 577, 591 (1989)	17	Application for continuance must be in writing and supported by affidavit which contains factual allegations demonstrating good cause or sufficient reason necessitating postponement of proceedings. Neb.Rev.St. S 25-1148.	An application for continuance must be in writing and supported by an affidavit which contains factual allegations demonstrating good cause or sufficient reason necessitating postponement of proceedings	Should an application for continuance be in writing and supported by an affidavit which contains factual allegations demonstrating good cause or a sufficient reason necessitating postponement of proceedings?
1806	Bowers v. Fred W. Amend Co., 72 Ga. App. 714, 716 (1945)	1	Trial court did not abuse its discretion in overruling motion for continuance based upon absence of material witness, in absence of showing that such witness lived in county or had been subpoenaed, and where it appeared that witness was serving overseas in United States Army and there was no reason to expect that he would be present at next term of court. Code, S 81-1410.	The court did not abuse its discretion in overruling the motion for continuance, based upon the absence of an alleged material witness, where it was not shown that such witness lived in the county or had been subpoenaed, and where it appeared that the witness was serving overseas in the United States Army, and there was no reason to expect that he would be present at the next term of the court. Code, S 81-1410.	Should an application for continuance state that the absent witness is expected to be procured at the next term?

1807	Ramsey v. Criswell, 850 S.W.2d 258, 259 (Tex. App. 1993)	1	Party seeking to have deemed admissions withdrawn has burden to prove good cause for failure to make timely answers, that withdrawal of admissions would not prejudice opposing party, and that presentation of merits would be subverted by withdrawal; requirement of good cause may be established by showing that failure to file was not intentional or in conscious disregard of obligation to timely file answer, and under this standard, even slight excuse for original failure to answer is sufficient. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 169, subds. 1, 2.	The party seeking to have deemed admissions withdrawn has the burden to present evidence to the court that establishes good cause for his failure to make timely answers, that withdrawal of the admissions would not prejudice the opposing party, and that the presentation of the merits would be subverted by the withdrawal. Tinney v. Team Bank, 819 S.W.2d 560, 562 (Tex.App.–Fort Worth 1991, writ denied); Boone v. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n, 790 S.W.2d 683, 688 (Tex.App.–Tyler 1990, no writ). The requirement of good cause may be established by a showing that the failure to file was not intentional or in conscious disregard of the party's obligation to timely file an answer. Boone v. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n, 790 S.W.2d at 689. Under this standard, even a slight excuse for the original failure to answer is sufficient.	Is the burden of proof on the party seeking withdrawal of deemed admissions to establish good cause for failure to make timely answers to requested admissions?
1808	Killian Const. Co. v. Tri-City Const. Co., 693 S.W.2d 819, 827 (Mo. Ct. App. 1985)	2	Civil rule (V.A.M.R. 59.01), relating to requests for admissions, empowers the trial court to accept the default of the party addressed to answer as admission of the matters requested and to deem them as conclusively established.	Thus, composite Rule 59.01 empowers the trial court to accept the default of the party addressed to answer as admissions of the matters requested, and to deem them as conclusively established.	Does the civil rule relating to requests for admissions empower the trial court to accept the default of the party addressed to answer as admission of the matters requested and to deem them as conclusively established?
1809	Martinez v. Scandrol, 130 Ill. App. 3d 712, 714–15 (1985)	3	Once a cause is reached for hearing, no motion for continuance is to be heard without sufficient excuse being shown for the delay in so moving, and movant is then required to present especially grave reasons to support his request. S.H.A. ch. 110A, P 231(f).	Once a cause is reached for hearing, no motion for continuance is to be heard without sufficient excuse being shown for the delay in so moving (87 Ill.2d R. 231(f)), and the movant is *715 then required to present especially grave reasons to support his request.	"Once a cause is reached for hearing, is no motion for continuance to be heard without a sufficient excuse being shown for the delay in so moving?"
1811	Body, Vickers & Daniels v. Custom Mach., 77 Ohio App. 3d 587, 591 (1991)	1	Where party objecting to augmented or supplemental pleadings is not prepared to proceed under new pleadings, court may still allow amendment and grant continuance to enable opposing party to meet new evidence. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 15.	Further, where a party objecting to amended or supplemental pleadings is not prepared to proceed under the new pleadings, the court may still allow an amendment under Civ.R. 15 and grant a continuance to enable the opposing party to meet the new evidence.	"Where a party objecting to augmented or supplemental pleadings is not prepared to proceed under new pleadings, may a court still allow amendment and grant continuance?"

1814	BioMagic v. Dutch Bros. Enterprises, 729 F. Supp. 2d 1140, 1148 (2010)	6	Inclusion of a generic choice of law clause in a contract does not reflect intent to be bound by specific state procedural rules on arbitration that differ from the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA). 9 U.S.C.A. § 1 et seq.	Moreover, as a practical matter, inclusion of a generic choice of law clause in a contract does not reflect intent to be bound by specific state procedural rules on arbitration that differ from the FAA.	Does an inclusion of a generic choice of law clause in a contract reflect the intent of the parties to be bound by specific state procedural rules which differ from Federal Arbitration Act (FAA)?
1815	Stevenson v. Aquila Foreign Qualifications Corp., 326 S.W.3d 920, 930 (Mo.App. W.D., 2010)	15	When a plaintiff expressly alleges a right to recover for the exact same injury or damage from independent tortfeasors, the non-settling independent tortfeasor should be permitted to conduct limited discovery regarding the details of a settlement with the other tortfeasor; otherwise, the non-settling independent tortfeasor is deprived access to evidence necessary to prove the affirmative defense of satisfaction.	However, where a plaintiff expressly alleges a right to recover for the exact same injury or damage from independent tortfeasors, as Stevenson did in this case, the non-settling independent tortfeasor should be permitted to conduct limited discovery regarding the details of a settlement with the other tortfeasor. Otherwise, the non-settling independent tortfeasor is deprived access to evidence necessary to prove the affirmative defense of satisfaction.	"When a plaintiff expressly alleges a right to recover for the exact same injury or damage from independent tortfeasors, should the non-settling independent tortfeasor be permitted to conduct limited discovery?"
1818	Stony Brook I Homeowners Ass'n v. Superior Court, 84 Cal.App.4th 691, 699 (Cal.App. 4 Dist., 2000)	2	Court must not generously order disclosure of the private financial affairs of nonparties without a careful scrutiny of the real needs of the litigant who seeks discovery.	It follows that a court must not generously order disclosure of the private financial affairs of nonparties without a careful scrutiny of the real needs of the litigant who seeks discovery	Should a court generously order disclosure of the private financial affairs of nonparties without a careful scrutiny of the real needs of the litigant who seeks discovery?
1820	Melendez Camilo v. United States, 642 F.3d 1040, 1044 (Fed. Cir. 2011)	3	When a military officer is involuntarily separated from active duty, or mandatorily retired, for twice failing to be selected for promotion, she may apply for relief to the appropriate correction board. 10 U.S.C.A. § 1552(a).	III [3] As this court has noted before, "when a military officer is involuntarily separated from active duty, or mandatorily retired, for twice failing to be selected for promotion, [s]he may apply for relief, pursuant to 10 U.S.C. § 1552(a), to the appropriate correction board."	"Can a person apply for relief when a military officer is involuntarily separated from active duty, or mandatorily retired, for twice failing to be selected for promotion?"
1821	U.S. v. Kincaid-Chauncey, 556 F.3d 923, 943 (C.A.9 (Nev.), 2009)	20	Quid pro quo necessary for a bribery honest services fraud conviction need not be explicit, and the district court need not use the words "quid pro quo" when it instructs the jury so long as the essential idea of give-and-take is conveyed. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1343.	Like the quid pro quo requirement for Hobbs Act extortion under color of official right charges, the quid pro quo necessary for a bribery honest services fraud conviction need not be explicit, and the district court need not use the words "quid pro quo" when it instructs the jury so long as the essential idea of give-and-take is conveyed.	Does the quid pro quo necessary for a bribery honest services fraud conviction need to be explicit?

1822	Bedford v. White, 106 Colo. 439, 444 (1940)	1	A "pension" is not a matter of contract and is not founded on legal liability, and no legal vested right thereto exists, but instead "pension" is mere bounty or gratuity given by government in consideration or recognition of meritorious past services, or of loss or damage sustained in public services, and springs from appreciation and graciousness of sovereign, and may be bestowed on such persons and on such terms as legislature prescribes.	A pension is not a matter of contract, and is not founded upon any legal liability. No man has a legal vested right to a pension; it is a mere bounty or gratuity given by the government in consideration or recognition of meritorious past services, or of loss or damage sustained in the public service and 'springing from the appreciation and graciousness of the sovereign.' It may be bestowed upon such persons and upon such terms as the law making body of the government prescribes.	Should pensions be subject to such limitations as may be imposed?
1826	U.S. v. Jefferson, 562 F.Supp.2d 687, 692 (E.D.Va.,2008)	8	An indictment under the bribery statute is sufficient if the acts alleged to have been undertaken in return for the bribe are among the defendant's official duties or among the settled customary duties or practices of his office. 18 U.S.C.A. S 201.	6 It follows that an indictment under 201 is sufficient if the acts alleged to have been undertaken in return for the bribe are among the defendant's official duties or among the settled customary duties or practices of his office. 5 The bribery statute, 18 U.S.C. 201(b), and the gratuity statute, 18 U.S.C.	Under the bribery statute is an indictment sufficient if the acts alleged to have been undertaken in return for the bribe are among the defendant's official duties or among the settled customary duties or practices of his office?
1827	Kissinger v. Sch. Dist. No. 49 of Clay Cty., 163 Neb. 33, 33 (1956)	3	Where a party properly serves requests for admissions of relevant matters of fact, failure to make proper response within time allotted constitutes admission of facts sought to be elicited. R.S.Supp.1955, S 25-1267.41.	The rule is that where a party properly serves a request for admissions of relevant matters of fact, the failure to make a proper response within the time allotted constitutes an admission of the facts sought to be elicited.	"Where a party properly serves requests for admissions of relevant matters of fact, does failure to make a proper response within the time allotted constitute an admission of facts sought to be elicited?"
1828	Brooks v. Am. Broad. Co., 179 Cal. App. 3d 500, 508 (1986)	1	Determination of whether there was no good reason for denial, whether requested admission was of substantial importance, and amount of expenses awarded for establishing fact denied, if any, are within sound discretion of trial court. West's Ann.Cal.C.C.P. S 2034(c).	The determination of whether "there were no good reasons for the denial," whether the requested admission was "of substantial importance," and the amount of expenses to be awarded, if any, are all within the sound discretion of the trial court.	"Is determination of whether there was no good reason for denial, and amount of expenses awarded for establishing fact denied, within the sound discretion of trial court?"
1829	Williams v. Gould, Inc., 232 Neb. 862, 883, 443 N.W.2d 577, 591 (1989)	16	Any party to action in which special appearance has been filed is entitled to discovery authorized by Nebraska Discovery Rules to ascertain facts relevant to court's jurisdiction over person of defendant.	Therefore, any party to an action in which a special appearance has been filed is entitled to discovery authorized by the Nebraska Discovery Rules to ascertain facts relevant to the court's jurisdiction over the person of a defendant.	Is any party to an action in which a special appearance has been filed entitled to discovery authorized by rules to ascertain facts relevant to a court's jurisdiction over a person of defendant?

1830	Matter of Heftel Broad. Honolulu, 57 Haw. 175, 175 (1976)	7	Basic test of state jurisdiction to tax is whether the tax bears some reasonable fiscal relation to the protection, opportunities and benefits given by the state, i. e., whether the state has provided something for which in fairness it can ask such a return. U.S.C.A.Const. art. 1, S 8, cl. 3; Amend. 14.	The basic test of State jurisdiction to tax is whether the tax bears some reasonable 244 fiscal relation to the protection, opportunities, and benefits given by the State, i. e. whether the State has provided something for which in fairness it can ask such a return.	"Is whether the tax bears some reasonable fiscal relation to the protection, opportunities and benefits given by the state, the basic test of the state jurisdiction to tax?"
1832	People v. Adams, 86 Misc. 2d 634, 637, 382 N.Y.S.2d 879, 881 (Co. Ct. 1976)	3	The gist of the crime of bribery is the wrong done to the People by corruption in the public service, and thus, the public servant who agrees to and does manipulate events, not to benefit himself or a third party, but for the personal satisfaction of commanding obedience, is said to receive no bribe. Penal Law S 200.10.	The gist of the crime of bribery is the wrong done to the people of corruption in the public service. Thus, the public servant who agrees to and does manipulate events, not to benefit himself or a third party, but for the personal satisfaction of commanding obedience, is said to receive no bribe	Is the gist of the crime of bribery the wrong done to the people by corruption in the public service?
1833	Gerrity Oil & Gas Corp. v. Magness, 946 P.2d 913, 926-27 (Colo. 1997)	16	In the absence of statutes, regulations, or lease provisions to the contrary, unless conduct of oil and gas operator in accessing, exploring, drilling, and using surface is reasonable and necessary to development of mineral interest, conduct is "trespass."	In the absence of statutes, regulations, or lease provisions to the contrary, *927 unless the conduct of an operator in accessing, exploring, drilling, and using the surface is reasonable and necessary to the development of the mineral interest, the conduct is a trespass.	"Is the conduct of an operator in accessing, exploring, drilling, and using the surface trespass if it is not reasonable and necessary to the development of the mineral interest?"
1836	Addison v. Avshalumov, 153 A.D.3d 477, 478, 59 N.Y.S.3d 746, 747 (App. Div. 2017)	1	To be relieved of a default in appearing at a compliance conference in a personal injury action, a plaintiff is required to show both a reasonable excuse for the default and the existence of a potentially meritorious cause of action. McKinney's CPLR 5015(a)(1).	To be relieved of the default in appearing at the conference, the plaintiff was required to show both a reasonable excuse for the default and the existence of a potentially meritorious cause of action	"To be relieved of a default in appearing at a compliance conference in a personal injury action, is a plaintiff required to show both a reasonable excuse for the default and the existence of a potentially meritorious cause of action?"
1837	Adelson v. Hananel, 510 F.3d 43, 48 (2007)	3	Court of Appeals must accept the plaintiff's properly documented evidentiary proffers as true for the purpose of determining the adequacy of the prima facie jurisdictional showing, irrespective of whether the defendant disputes them, and in so doing, Court of Appeals must construe them in the light most congenial to the plaintiff's jurisdictional claim; those facts put forward by the defendant become part of the mix only to the extent that they are uncontradicted.	We "must accept the plaintiff's (properly documented) evidentiary proffers as true for the purpose of determining the adequacy of the prima facie jurisdictional showing." Foster-Miller, 46 F.3d at 145. In fact, we accept those facts as true, irrespective of whether the defendant disputes them, and in so doing, "construe them in the light most congenial to the plaintiff's jurisdictional claim." Mass. Sch. of Law at Andover, Inc. v. Am. Bar Ass'n, 142 F.3d 26, 34 (1st Cir.1998). Those facts put forward by the defendant become part of the mix only to the extent that they are uncontradicted.	Should the court construe the plaintiff's evidentiary proffers in the light most congenial to the plaintiff's jurisdictional claim?

1841	Christian v. Lincoln Auto. Co., 403 Ill. App. 3d 1038, 1042 (2010)	5	Although controversies should ordinarily be resolved on their merits after both sides have had their day in court, a plaintiff may not complain where the dismissal resulted from his own lack of diligence in effectuating service. Sup.Ct.Rules, Rule 103(b).	Furthermore, although controversies should ordinarily be resolved on their merits after both sides have had their day in court, a plaintiff may not complain where the dismissal resulted from his own lack of diligence in effectuating service.	"Can a plaintiff complain where the dismissal resulted from his own lack of diligence in effectuating service, although controversies should ordinarily be resolved on their merits after both sides have had their day in court?"
1842	Whitaker v. Town of Scotland Neck, 154 N.C. App. 660, 662 (2002)	1	Workers' Compensation Act was created to provide certain limited benefits to an injured employee regardless of negligence on the part of the employer, and simultaneously to deprive the employee of certain rights he had at the common law. West's N.C.G.S.A. S 97-1 et seq.	The Workers' Compensation Act was created to "provide certain limited benefits to an injured employee regardless of negligence on the part of the employer, and simultaneously to deprive the employee of certain rights he had at the common law.	Was the Workers Compensation Act created to provide certain limited benefits to an injured employee regardless of negligence on the part of the employer?
1843	Bloomgarden v. Lanza, 143 A.D.3d 850, 851, 40 N.Y.S.3d 142, 144 (2016)	1	Although the ultimate burden of proof regarding personal jurisdiction rests with the plaintiff, to defeat a motion to dismiss a complaint for lack of personal jurisdiction, the plaintiff need only make a prima facie showing that the defendant is subject to the personal jurisdiction of the court. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(8).	Although the ultimate burden of proof regarding personal jurisdiction rests with the plaintiff, to defeat a CPLR 3211(a)(8) motion to dismiss a complaint, the plaintiff need only make a prima facie showing that the defendant is subject to the personal jurisdiction of the court	QuestionNeed a plaintiff only make a prima facie showing that the defendant is subject to the personal jurisdiction of the court?
1844	First Community Bank, N.A. v. First Tennessee Bank, N.A., 489 S.W.3d 369, 382 (Tenn. 2015)	7	When trial court expresses an intent to rule on motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction without an evidentiary hearing, defendant may, but is not required to, support motion with affidavits or other evidentiary materials. Tenn. R. Civ. P. 12.02(2).	When a trial court expresses an intent to rule on a motion to dismiss without an evidentiary hearing, a defendant "may, but is not required to, support the motion with affidavits or other evidentiary materials."	"When a trial court expresses an intent to rule on motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction without an evidentiary hearing, should a defendant support the motion with affidavits or other evidentiary materials?"
1846	Munson v. Valley Energy Inv. Fund, U.S., LP, 264 Or. App. 679, 695 (2014)	12	When considering a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the trial court may decide disputed jurisdictional facts based on evidence submitted by the parties, but the court may not, at that stage, decide disputed facts that go to the merits of the underlying claim because to do so would deprive a party of its entitlement to a trial on disputed questions of material fact. Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 21, 47.	Thus, when considering a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the trial court may decide disputed jurisdictional facts based on evidence submitted by the parties, but the court may not, at that stage, decide disputed facts that go to the merits of the underlying claim because to do so would deprive a party of its entitlement to a trial "on disputed questions of material fact."	Must a trial court make findings of the jurisdictional facts presented with a motion to dismiss on the basis of lack of jurisdiction?

1847	Rucker v. Taylor, 828 N.W.2d 595, 601 (Iowa, 2013)	10	Dismissal for failing to timely accomplish service of process is appropriate when the failure results from inadvertence, neglect, misunderstanding, ignorance of the rule or its burden, or half-baked attempts at service. I.C.A. Rule 1.302(5).	In the end, the results of both cases are consistent with our long-standing approach that dismissal for failing to timely accomplish service of process is appropriate when the failure results from "[i]nadvertence, neglect, misunderstanding, ignorance of the rule or its burden, or half-baked attempts at service."	"Is dismissal for failing to timely accomplish service of process appropriate when the failure results from inadvertence, neglect, and misunderstanding, ignorance of the rule or its burden, or half-baked attempts at service?"
1849	Christian v. Lincoln Auto. Co., 403 Ill. App. 3d 1038, 1042 (2010)	5	Although controversies should ordinarily be resolved on their merits after both sides have had their day in court, a plaintiff may not complain where the dismissal resulted from his own lack of diligence in effectuating service. Sup.Ct.Rules, Rule 103(b).	Furthermore, although controversies should ordinarily be resolved on their merits after both sides have had their day in court, a plaintiff may not complain where the dismissal resulted from his own lack of diligence in effectuating service.	"Although controversies should ordinarily be resolved on their merits after both sides have had their day in court, can a plaintiff not complain where the dismissal resulted from his own lack of diligence in effectuating service?"
1851	McAdoo v. Univ. of N. Carolina at Chapel Hill, 225 N.C. App. 50, 67 (2013)	9	Whenever, during the course of litigation it develops that the relief sought has been granted or that the questions originally in controversy between the parties are no longer at issue, the case should be dismissed, for courts will not entertain or proceed with a cause merely to determine abstract propositions of law.	Our Supreme Court has succinctly stated the test for mootness: Whenever, during the course of litigation it develops that the relief sought has been granted or that the questions originally in controversy between the parties are no longer at issue, the case should be dismissed, for courts will not entertain or proceed with a cause merely to determine abstract propositions of law.	Will courts entertain or proceed with a cause merely to determine abstract propositions of law?
1853	In re Peoples, 296 N.C. 109, 147 (1978)	12	Whenever during course of litigation it develops that relief sought has been granted or that questions originally in controversy between parties are no longer in issue, case should be dismissed, for courts will not entertain or proceed with a cause merely to determine abstract propositions of law.	Whenever, during the course of litigation it develops that the relief sought has been granted or that the questions originally in controversy between the parties are no longer at issue, the case should be dismissed, for courts will not entertain or proceed with a cause merely to determine abstract propositions of law.	Should a case be dismissed when it develops that the questions originally in controversy between the parties are no longer at issue?
1855	JP Morgan Chase Bank, Nat. Ass'n v. Iardo, 36 Misc. 3d 359, 377 (N.Y.S.2d Sup. Ct. 2012)	13	Dismissal of any claim due to a default in the observance of procedural statutes is considered a drastic remedy available only upon a clear showing of willful and contumacious conduct. McKinney's CPLR 3126, 3216.	In any event, dismissal of any claim due to a default in the observance of procedural statutes is considered a drastic remedy available only upon a clear a showing of wilful and contumacious conduct	Is dismissal of any claim due to a default in the observance of procedural statutes considered a drastic remedy available only upon a clear showing of willful and contumacious conduct?

1856	United States v. Fernandez, 722 F.3d 1, 11-12 (1st Cir. 2013)	7	Measures to police the integrity of entities receiving federal funds fall under the scope of Congress's power under the Necessary and Proper Clause to enact the federal bribery statute, even absent evidence of an agent's authority to act specifically with respect to the covered entity's funds. U.S.C.A. Const. Art. 1, S 8, cl. 18; 18 U.S.C.A. S 666.	[7] We have no hesitation in concluding that "measures to police the integrity *12 of entities receiving federal funds fall under the scope of this power," Keen, 676 F.3d at 991, even absent evidence of an agent's authority to act specifically with respect to the covered entity's funds.	Do measures to police the integrity of entities receiving federal funds fall under the scope of Congress's power to enact the federal bribery statute?
1858	Flores v. Georgeson, 191 Cal. App. 4th 881, 887 (2011)	3	A court has inherent power, upon a sufficient factual showing, to dismiss an action shown to be sham, fictitious or without merit in order to prevent abuse of the judicial process.	A court has inherent power, upon a sufficient factual showing, to dismiss an action "shown to be sham, fictitious or without merit in order to prevent abuse of the judicial process."	"Does a court have power to dismiss an action shown to be sham, fictitious or without merit in order to prevent abuse of the judicial process?"
1859	Mazzuca v. Warren P. Wielt Tr., 59 A.D.3d 907, 908 (N.Y.A.D. 3 Dept., 2009)	2	While a trial court has discretion to dismiss a complaint as a sanction against a plaintiff who fails to comply with a court order and frustrates the disclosure process, this drastic sanction is generally only justified when the party seeking dismissal demonstrates that the failure to comply with the request and order for disclosure was willful and contumacious. McKinney's CPLR 3126(3).	While a trial court has discretion to dismiss a complaint as a sanction against a plaintiff who fails to comply with a court order and frustrates the disclosure process, this drastic sanction is generally only justified when the party seeking dismissal demonstrates that the failure to comply with the request and order for disclosure was willful and contumacious .	Can a trial court dismiss a complaint as a sanction if it finds that a party has willfully disregarded a court order?
1861	Benware v. Means, 1999-1410, 8-9 (La. 1/19/00), 752 So.2d 841, 846-47 (La. 2000)	2	"Death penalty" of dismissal or judgment by default is authorized in appropriate cases of disobedience of or disregard for orders pertaining to pre-trial procedure, although this extreme penalty should seldom be imposed and should be reserved for only the most flagrant case. LSA-C.C.P. art. 1551, subd. C.	Thus, Article 1551C, which incorporated Article 1471(2) and (3), now authorizes the "death penalty" of dismissal or judgment by default in appropriate cases of disobedience of or disregard for orders pertaining to pre-trial procedure. However, this extreme penalty obviously should seldom be imposed and should be reserved for only the most flagrant case.	"Is a ""death penalty"" of dismissal or judgment by default authorized in appropriate cases of disobedience of or disregard for orders pertaining to pre-trial procedure?"
1862	Burkes v. Fas-Chek Food Mart Inc., 217 W. Va. 291, 293 (2005)	9	If a plaintiff fails to serve a summons and complaint upon a defendant within 120 days, then the circuit court should dismiss the action against that defendant without prejudice; however, the circuit court shall extend the time for service if the plaintiff shows good cause for the failure. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 4(k).	Under Rule 4(k) of the West Virginia Rules of Civil Procedure [1998], if a plaintiff fails to serve a summons and complaint upon a defendant within 120 days, then the circuit court should dismiss the action against that defendant without prejudice. However, the circuit court shall extend the time for service if the plaintiff shows good cause for the failure.	"If a plaintiff fails to serve a summons and complaint upon a defendant within 120 days, should the circuit court dismiss the action against that defendant without prejudice?"

1863	Akinyemi v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, N.A., 391 Ill. App. 3d 334, 339–40, 908 N.E.2d 163, 170 (2009)	17	If the defendant in a purported class action tenders to the named plaintiff the relief requested before the class is certified, the underlying cause of action must be dismissed as moot as there is no longer an actual controversy pending; consequently, should the defendant then file a motion to dismiss the cause, the trial court may rule upon that motion even before it has examined the issue of class certification.	Therefore, the general rule has developed that if the defendant tenders to the named plaintiff the relief requested before the class is certified, the underlying cause of action must be dismissed as moot as there is no longer an actual controversy pending. See Kostecki v. Dominick's Finer Foods, Inc., 361 Ill.App.3d 362, 376–77, 297 Ill.Dec. 106, 836 N.E.2d 837 (2005) (this is the “general rule” regarding class actions and tenders); accord Gelb, 356 Ill.App.3d at 700, 292 Ill.Dec. 250, 826 N.E.2d 391 (proper tender before certification “mandates dismissal”); Bruemmer, 329 Ill.App.3d at 763, 263 Ill.Dec. 516, 768 N.E.2d 276; Arriola, 323 Ill.App.3d at 150, 256 Ill.Dec. 168, 751 N.E.2d 221; Hillenbrand, 308 Ill.App.3d at 391, 241 Ill.Dec. 832, 720 N.E.2d 287; see, e.g., *340 Yu v. International Business Machines Corp., 314 Ill.App.3d 892, 899, 247 Ill.Dec. 841, 732 N.E.2d 1173 (2000) (where the plaintiff was aware of tender after filing complaint but before filing motion for class certification, case must be dismissed). Consequently, should the defendant then file a motion to dismiss the cause, the trial court may rule upon that	Should the underlying cause of action be dismissed as moot if the defendant in a purported class action tenders to the named plaintiff the relief requested before the class is certified?
1864	Rockdale Mgmt. Co. v. Shawmut Bank, N.A., 418 Mass. 596, 598 (Mass., 1994)	2	When fraud on court is shown through clear and convincing evidence to have been committed in ongoing case, trial judge has inherent power and broad discretion to fashion judicial response warranted by fraudulent conduct; dismissal of claims or entire action, or entry of default judgment, may be warranted by fraud.	When a fraud on the court is shown through clear and convincing evidence to have been committed in an ongoing case, the trial judge has the inherent power to take action in response to the fraudulent conduct. The judge has broad discretion to fashion a judicial response warranted by the fraudulent conduct. Dismissal of claims or of an entire action may be warranted by the fraud, see, e.g., Aoude, supra at 1118, as may be the entry of a default judgment, see, e.g., Eppes v.	"When faced with a finding of fraud on the court, does the judge have broad discretion to fashion a judicial response warranted by the fraudulent conduct?"
1865	Albert S. v. Dep't of Health & Mental Hygiene, 166 Md. App. 726, 746 (2006)	4	A case that has become moot will be dismissed without a decision on the merits of the controversy unless it presents unresolved issues in matters of important public concern that, if decided, will establish a rule for future conduct, or the issue presented is capable of repetition, yet evading review.	Ordinarily, then, a case that has become moot "will be dismissed without a decision on the merits of the controversy unless it presents 'unresolved issues in matters of important public concern that, if decided, will establish a rule for future conduct,' or the issue presented is 'capable of repetition, yet evading review.'	Will a case be dismissed without a decision on the merits of the controversy if it has become moot?

1867	Kornblum v. Schneider, 609 So. 2d 138, 139 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1992)	1	Trial court has inherent authority, in exercise of its sound judicial discretion, to dismiss an action when plaintiff has perpetrated a fraud on the court, or where a party, or the party's counsel, persistently fails or refuses to comply with court orders.	The trial court has the inherent authority, in the exercise of its sound judicial discretion, to dismiss an action when the plaintiff has perpetrated a fraud on the court, 2 or where a party, 3 or the party's counsel, 4 persistently fails or refuses to comply with court orders.	"Does a trial court have inherent authority, in exercise of its sound judicial discretion, to dismiss an action when a plaintiff has perpetrated a fraud on the court?"
1868	Port Auth. of Allegheny Cty. v. Div. 85, Amalgamated Transit Union, 34 Pa. Cmwlth. 71, 78 (1978)	2	A recognized exception to the doctrine that a case will be dismissed if at any stage of the judicial process it is rendered moot is illustrated by cases in which technically moot issues are nevertheless decided on the merits because they are of a recurring nature, capable of repeatedly avoiding review, and involve issues of important public interest.	A case will be dismissed if at any stage of the judicial process it is rendered moot. A recognized exception to this doctrine is illustrated by cases in which technically moot issues were nevertheless decided on the merits because they were of a recurring nature, capable of repeatedly avoiding review and involved issues of important public interest.	Could a case which may be rendered moot be dismissed where issues raised are capable of repeatedly avoiding review and yet are of important public interest?
1871	Kornblum v. Schneider, 609 So. 2d 138, 139 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1992)	1	Trial court has inherent authority, in exercise of its sound judicial discretion, to dismiss an action when plaintiff has perpetrated a fraud on the court, or where a party, or the party's counsel, persistently fails or refuses to comply with court orders.	The trial court has the inherent authority, in the exercise of its sound judicial discretion, to dismiss an action when the plaintiff has perpetrated a fraud on the court, 2 or where a party, 3 or the party's counsel, 4 persistently fails or refuses to comply with court orders.	"Does the trial court have the inherent authority, within the exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss an action when a plaintiff has perpetrated a fraud on the court?"
1872	Kentucky Harlan Coal Co. v. Holmes, 872 S.W.2d 446, 451 (Ky. 1994)	2	Commonwealth's power to legislate public policy in area of employer/employee relations derives from its police power, and there is community interest in regulating safety in workplace requiring employers to provide for injured workers and their dependents so that they do not become burden on the community.	We restate that the Commonwealth's power to legislate public policy in the area of employer/employee relations derives from its police power, and the fact that there is a community interest in regulating the safety of the workplace and in requiring employers to provide for injured workers and their dependents so that they do not become a burden on the community.	Is there a community interest in requiring employers to provide compensation for injured workers and their dependents so they do not become a burden on the community?
1873	United States v. Gentile, 525 F.2d 252, 259 (C.A.2 (N.Y.), 1975)	3	Failure to give Miranda warnings, even in custodial setting, would not prevent prosecution for attempt to bribe law enforcement officer made subsequent to arrest.	A failure to give Miranda warnings, however, even in a custodial setting, would not prevent a prosecution for an attempt to bribe a law enforcement officer made subsequent to the arrest.	Would failure to give Miranda warnings prevent prosecution for an attempt to bribe law enforcement officer made subsequent to arrest?

1876	Scaccia v. State Ethics Comm'n, 431 Mass. 351, 356 (2000)	3	To establish a violation of gratuity statute, there must be proof of linkage to a particular official act, not merely the fact that the official was in a position to take some undefined or generalized action, such as holding a hearing on proposed legislation that, if passed, could benefit the giver of the gratuity. M.G.L.A. c. 268A, § 3(b).	Therefore, in order for the commission to establish a violation of G.L. c. 268A, § 3 (a) and (b), there must be proof of linkage to a particular official act, not merely the fact that the official was in a position to take some undefined or generalized action, such as holding a hearing on proposed legislation that, if passed, could benefit the giver of the gratuity.	Is the fact that a public official was in a position to take some form of action enough to establish a violation of the statute prohibiting bribery of a public official?
1877	Riley v. Bi-State Transit Sys., 459 S.W.2d 753, 756 (Mo.App., 1970)	1	Absent statute or ordinance regulating vehicle traffic at highway intersections, vehicle first reaching and entering intersection has right-of-way over vehicles subsequently reaching intersection unless situation would indicate to reasonably prudent man that to proceed would probably result in collision, it being duty of second arrival to allow first arrival to pass in safety.	640, 285 S.W.2d 575, 580, is that: Absent statute or ordinance regulation of vehicle traffic at highway intersections, the vehicle first reaching and entering the intersection has the right of way over a vehicle subsequently reaching the intersection unless the situation would indicate to a reasonably prudent man that to proceed would probably result in a collision, it being the duty of the second arrival to allow the first arrival to pass in safety.	Does a vehicle reaching an intersection first have a right of way?
1879	Johnson v. Smith, 215 N.C. 322, 1 S.E.2d 834, 836 (1939)	5	Circuit court has both statutory authority and inherent authority to sanction parties for failure to prosecute, failure to comply with procedural statutes or rules, or failure to obey court orders. W.S.A. 802.10(3)(d), 804.12(2)(a)3, 805.03.	The circuit court has both statutory authority, through secs. 802.10(3)(d), 805.03, and 804.12(2)(a)3, Stats., and inherent authority to sanction parties for failure to prosecute, failure to comply with procedural *274 statutes or rules, and for failure to obey court orders.	"Does a circuit court have both statutory authority and inherent authority to sanction parties for failure to prosecute, failure to comply with procedural statutes or rules, or failure to obey court orders?"

1881	Sterry v. Bethlehem Steel Corp., 64 Md. App. 175, 183, 494 A.2d 748, 752 (1985)	1	Other than exceptions created by the act itself, the Workmen's Compensation Act provides exclusive remedy and liability, with respect to all injuries arising out of and in course of employment, as to both employers and employees who come within its purview; as such, this comprehensive and exclusive system replaces prior common-law causes of action against employers for injuries to employees. Code 1957, Art. 101, § 15.	Other than the exceptions created by the act itself, the Workmen's Compensation Act provides the exclusive remedy and liability, with respect to all injuries arising out of and in the course of the employment, as to both employers and employees who come within its purview. Knoche v. Cox, 282 Md. 447, 385 A.2d 1179 (1978), St. Paul Fire & Marine Insurance v. Treadwell, 263 Md. 430, 283 A.2d 601 (1971), Wood v. Aetna Casualty and Surety Co., 260 Md. 651, 273 A.2d 125 (1971), Athas v. Hill, 54 Md.App. 293, 458 A.2d 859, aff'd 300 Md. 133, 476 A.2d 710 (1984). As such, this comprehensive and exclusive system replaces prior common law causes of action against employers for injuries to employees.	"Besides the exceptions created by the act itself, does the Workmens Compensation Act provide the exclusive remedy and liability, with respect to all injuries arising out of and in the course of the employment, as to both employers and employees?"
1883	Jarecki Mfg. Co. v. Merriam, 104 Kan. 646, 180 P. 224, 225 (1919)	3	Dismissals for want of prosecution should be employed reluctantly, and while there is no set time limit for the prosecution of an action where the record shows that a plaintiff has been guilty of dilatory or contumacious conduct, or has repeatedly disregarded the procedural directives of the court, such a dismissal is likely to be upheld. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	Dismissals for want of prosecution should be employed reluctantly, and while "[t]here is no set time limit for the prosecution of an action ... where the record shows that a plaintiff has been guilty of dilatory or contumacious conduct, or has repeatedly disregarded the procedural directives of the court, such a dismissal is likely to be upheld."	Will dismissal for failure to prosecute be upheld only where the record shows the plaintiff has been guilty of dilatory or contumacious conduct?
1884	Rogers v. Gann, 982 So. 2d 1105, 1108 (Ala.Civ.App., 2007)	2	Dismissal of an action for want of prosecution is a drastic sanction; accordingly, Alabama appellate courts scrutinize any order terminating an action for want of prosecution and do not hesitate to set one aside when they find an abuse of discretion.	Dismissal of an action for want of prosecution is a drastic sanction. Accordingly, Alabama appellate courts scrutinize any order terminating an action for want of prosecution and do not hesitate to set one aside when they find an abuse of discretion.	Can courts scrutinize any order terminating an action for want of prosecution and set one aside when they find an abuse of discretion?
1885	Hillman v. Weatherly, 14 So. 3d 721, 726 (Miss. 2009)	6	The propriety of a dismissal with prejudice is bolstered by the presence of aggravating factors, including: (1) the extent to which the plaintiff, as distinguished from his counsel, was personally responsible for the delay, (2) the degree of actual prejudice to the defendant, and (3) whether the delay was the result of intentional conduct. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	The propriety of a dismissal with prejudice is bolstered by the presence of aggravating factors, including: (1) "the extent to which the plaintiff, as distinguished from his counsel, was personally responsible for the delay," (2) "the degree of actual prejudice to the defendant," and (3) "whether the delay was the result of intentional conduct."	"Is the propriety of a dismissal with prejudice bolstered by the extent to which the plaintiff, as distinguished from his counsel, was personally responsible for the delay?"

1886	Prewitt v. Brown, 525 S.W.3d 616, 620 (Tenn.Ct.App., 2017)	2	The purpose of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is to test the legal sufficiency of the complaint; in determining whether the pleadings state a claim upon which relief can be granted, only the legal sufficiency of the complaint is tested, not the strength of the plaintiff's proof. Tenn. R. Civ. P. 12.02(6).	R. Civ. P. 12.02(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is to test the legal sufficiency of the complaint. In determining whether the pleadings state a claim upon which relief can be granted, only the legal sufficiency of the complaint is tested, not the strength of the plaintiff's proof.	"When considering a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted, does the court look only to the pleadings to determine whether a claim for relief has been stated?"
1887	Jones v. Rochdale Vill., Inc., 96 A.D.3d 1014, 1017, 948 N.Y.S.2d 80, 85 (2012)	6	When the party moving to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action submits evidentiary material in support of his or her motion, the criterion then becomes whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action, not whether he or she has stated one. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	When the moving party submits evidentiary material in support of his or her motion, "the criterion then becomes 'whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action, not whether he [or she] has stated one' " (Sokol v.	"When the party moving to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action submits evidentiary material in support of his or her motion, does the criterion then become whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action?"
1888	Andrews v. Marriott Int'l, 2016 IL App (1st) 122731, ¶ 19 (IL App. 2016)	4	Under statute allowing involuntary dismissal of a claim where the claim asserted is barred by other affirmative matter avoiding the legal effect of or defeating the claim, "affirmative matter" is something in the nature of a defense which negates the cause of action completely or refutes crucial conclusions of law or conclusions of material fact contained in or inferred from the complaint. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(9).	The circuit court dismissed plaintiff's complaint pursuant to section 2-619(a)(9) of the Code, which permits the involuntary dismissal of a claim where the claim asserted is "barred by other affirmative matter avoiding the legal effect of or defeating the claim." 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(9) (West 2010). Affirmative matter 846 *1114 is "something in the nature of a defense which negates the cause of action completely or refutes crucial conclusions of law or conclusions of material fact contained in or inferred from the complaint."	Would an affirmative matter negate the cause of action completely or refute crucial conclusions of law or conclusions of material fact contained in or inferred from the complaint?
1890	Barber v. Schmidt, 354 P.3d 158, 162 (Alaska 2015)	7	For the non-moving party to survive a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, it is enough that the complaint set forth allegations of fact consistent with and appropriate to some enforceable cause of action. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(6).	Alaska Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) provides for a motion to dismiss if the complaint "fail[s] ... to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." In order for the non-moving party to survive this motion "it is enough that the complaint set forth allegations of fact consistent with and appropriate to some enforceable cause of action....	Is it enough that the complaint set forth allegations of fact consistent with and appropriate to some enforceable cause of action?

1891	Peters v. Riggs, 2015 IL App (4th) 140043, ¶ 39 (2015)	2	A motion to dismiss brought pursuant to statute governing motions with respect to pleadings presents the question of whether the facts alleged in the complaint, viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, and taking all well-pleaded facts and all reasonable inferences that may be drawn from those facts as true, are sufficient to state a cause of action upon which relief may be granted. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-615.	"A motion to dismiss brought pursuant to section 2-615 of the Code attacks the legal sufficiency of the complaint." Such a motion "presents the question of whether the facts alleged in the complaint, viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, and taking all well-pleaded facts and all reasonable inferences that may be drawn from those facts as true, are sufficient to state a cause of action upon which relief may be granted."	Does a motion to dismiss with respect to section 2615 attack the legal sufficiency of a complaint?
1892	Mabra v. SF, 316 Ga. App. 62, 66 (2012)	11	A complaint may be dismissed on motion for failure to state a claim if it is clearly without any merit, and this want of merit may consist in an absence of law to support a claim of the sort made, or of facts sufficient to make a good claim, or in the disclosure of some fact which will necessarily defeat the claim. West's Ga.Code Ann. S 9-11-12(b)(6).	"A complaint may be dismissed on motion [for failure to state a claim] if clearly without any merit; and this want of merit may consist in an absence of law to support a claim of the sort made, or of facts sufficient to make a good claim, or in the disclosure of some fact which will necessarily defeat the claim."	Can a complaint be dismissed on motion for failure to state a claim if it is clearly without any merit?
1893	Wright v. Texas Dep't of Crim. Just.-Institutional Div., 137 S.W.3d 693, 696 (Tex. App. 2004)	7	A trial court can dismiss for want of prosecution under the following three situations: (1) when a party seeking affirmative relief fails to appear for any hearing or trial of which the party had notice, (2) when the case is not disposed of within the time standards of the supreme court, or (3) when the trial court finds that the case has not been prosecuted with due diligence. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a.	A trial court can dismiss for want of prosecution under the following three situations: (1) when a party seeking affirmative relief fails to appear for any hearing or trial of which the party had notice, (2) when the case is not disposed of within the time standards of the supreme court, or (3) when the trial court finds that the case has not been prosecuted with due diligence.	Can court dismiss a case when the case has not been disposed of within the Supreme Court's time standard?
1894	Hughes v. Fink, Fink & Assocs., 718 A.2d 316, 318 (Pa. 1998)	4	Judgment of non pros is properly entered when: (1) a party to the proceeding has shown a want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude, (2) there is no compelling reason for the delay, and (3) the delay has caused some prejudice to the adverse party.	our Supreme Court announced that judgment of non pros is properly entered when: (1) a party to the proceeding has shown a want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude; (2) there is no compelling reason for the delay; and (3) the delay has caused some prejudice to the adverse party.	Is judgment of non pros properly entered when a party to the proceeding has shown a want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude?

1896	South Carolina Dept. of Transp. v. Hinson Family Holdings, LLC, 361 S.C. 649, 655 (2004)	5	State Department of Transportation (DOT) and the local municipality are indispensable parties that must be joined in an action to abandon a public road; without their inclusion, they would not be bound by the decision or discharged from their maintenance duties or other obligations and liabilities. Code 1976, S 57-9-10.	City of Beaufort, 315 S.C. 306, 319, 433 S.E.2d 875, 884 (Ct.App.1992). DOT and the local municipality are indispensable parties that must be joined 785 in an action to abandon a public road. Without their inclusion, they would not be bound by the decision or discharged from their maintenance duties or other obligations and liabilities.	Are the Department of Transportation and the local municipality indispensable parties that must be joined in an action to abandon a public road?
1899	330 Acquisition Co., LLC v. Regency Sav. Bank, F.S.B., 293 A.D.2d 314, 316, 741 N.Y.S.2d 24, 26 (App. Div. 2002)	6	Existence of an unambiguous written agreement setting forth the respective rights of the parties obviates the need to rely on evidence extrinsic to the contract or to indulge in factual determinations, on a motion to dismiss.	Furthermore, the existence of an unambiguous written agreement setting forth the respective rights of the parties obviates the need to rely on evidence extrinsic to the contract or to indulge in factual determinations	Does the existence of an unambiguous written agreement setting forth the respective rights of the parties obviate the need to rely on evidence extrinsic to the contract?
1900	James Bros. Lumber Co. v. Union Banking & Tr. Co. of Du Bois, Pa., 432 Pa. 129, 132 (1968)	1	Court may enter judgment of non pros. when party has shown want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude and there has been no compelling reason for delay, and delay has caused some prejudice to adverse party, such as death of or unexplained absence of material witness.	A Court may properly enter a judgment of non pros. when a party to the proceeding has shown a want of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude, and there has been no compelling reason for the delay, and the delay has caused some prejudice to the adverse party, such as the death of or unexplained absence of material witnesses.	Can court enter judgment non pros where there is no compelling reason for delay?
1902	Nygaard v. Sioux Valley Hosps. & Health Sys., 731 N.W.2d 184, 190 (S.D., 2007)	6	While a court must accept allegations of fact as true when considering a motion to dismiss, the court is free to ignore legal conclusions, unsupported conclusions, unwarranted inferences and sweeping legal conclusions cast in the form of factual allegations. SDCL S 15-6-12(b).	Therefore, "[w]hile the court must accept allegations of fact as true when considering a motion to dismiss, the court is free to ignore legal conclusions, unsupported conclusions, unwarranted inferences and sweeping legal conclusions cast in the form of factual allegations.	"Is a court free to ignore legal conclusions, unsupported conclusions, unwarranted inferences, and sweeping legal conclusions cast in the form of factual allegations?"
1903	Ball v. City of Syracuse, 60 A.D.3d 1312, 1313, 875 N.Y.S.2d 412, 413 (2009)	3	In determining motions to dismiss in the context of an Article 78 proceeding, a court may not look beyond the petition and must accept all allegations in the petition as true where no answer or return has been filed. McKinney's CPLR 7801 et seq.	In determining motions to dismiss in the context of [a CPLR] article 78 proceeding, a court may not look beyond the petition and must accept all allegations in the petition as true ... where, as here, no answer or return has been filed	"In determining motions to dismiss in the context of an Article 78 proceeding, can a court not look beyond the petition and must accept all allegations in the petition as true?"
1904	Blankenship v. Kane Cty., 85 Ill. App. 3d 621, 622 (1980)	1	Motion to dismiss based on laches is insufficient absent some allegation of knowledge since that doctrine does not apply unless party against whom defense is asserted has discovered or should have discovered fact upon which his claim is based. S.H.A. ch. 110, S 48; Supreme Court Rules, Rule 191, S.H.A. ch. 110A, S 191.	A motion to dismiss based on laches would be insufficient absent some allegation of knowledge since that doctrine does not apply unless the party against whom the defense is asserted has discovered or should have discovered the fact upon which his claim is based.	Does motion to dismiss doctrine of laches not apply unless party against whom defense is asserted has discovered or should have discovered fact upon which his claim is based?

1905	Oratowski v. Civil Service Commission of City of Chicago, 3 Ill.App.2d 551, 561 (Ill.App. 1 Dist. 1954)	5	An officer of the law must exercise the greatest degree of restraint in dealing with the public and he must not conceive that every threatening or insulting word, gesture, or motion amounts to disorderly conduct, since it may be of such character or so provoked or conditioned as to be fully justified.	An officer of the law must exercise the greatest degree of restraint in dealing with the public. He must not conceive that every threatening or insulting word, gesture, or motion amounts to disorderly conduct. It may be of such a character or so provoked or conditioned as to be fully justified.	Should police officers conceive that every threatening word amounts to disorderly conduct?
1907	Ritterbusch v. Holt, 789 S.W.2d 491, 493 (Mo., 1990)	1	A petition is sufficient to withstand a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim if it involves substantive principles of law entitling plaintiff to relief and alleges ultimate facts informing defendant of that which plaintiff will attempt to establish at trial.	*493 A petition is sufficient to withstand a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim if it invokes substantive principles of law entitling plaintiff to relief and alleges ultimate facts informing defendant of that which plaintiff will attempt to establish at trial.	Is a petition sufficient to withstand a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim if it invokes principles of substantive law?
1908	Austin v. Clark, , 755 S.E.2d 796, 799 (Ga. 2014)	6	Motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim should not be granted unless it appears to a certainty that the plaintiff would be entitled to no relief under any state of facts which could be proved in support of his claim; if, within the framework of the complaint, evidence may be introduced which will sustain a grant of relief to the plaintiff, the complaint is sufficient.	In other words, [a] motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim should not be granted unless it appears to a certainty that the plaintiff would be entitled to no relief under any state of facts which could be proved in support of his claim. If, within the framework of the complaint, evidence may be introduced which will sustain a grant of relief to the plaintiff, the complaint is sufficient.	"If evidence is introduced which will sustain a grant of relief to the plaintiff, is the complaint sufficient?"
1909	Coleman v. City of Mesa, 230 Ariz. 352, 356 (Ariz., 2012)	6	Complaint's exhibits, or public records regarding matters referenced in a complaint, are not outside the pleading, and courts may consider such documents without converting a motion to dismiss for failure to state claim into a summary judgment motion. 16 A.R.S. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(6).	A complaint's exhibits, or public records regarding matters referenced in a complaint, are not "outside the pleading," and courts may consider such documents without converting a Rule 12(b)(6) motion into a summary judgment motion.	Are exhibits or public records appended to a complaint regarding matters within it not outside the pleading and can be considered by the courts without converting a motion to dismiss?
1910	Pedersen v. Blythe, 292 P.3d 182, 185 (Alaska, 2012)	12	When considering materials outside the pleadings on motion to dismiss, court must give notice to opposing party of its intent to take judicial notice and afford him opportunity to dispute facts judicially noticed.	But just as it does when converting a motion to dismiss, the court must give notice to the opposing party of its intent to take judicial notice and "afford him an opportunity to dispute the facts judicially noticed."	"When considering materials outside the pleadings on motion to dismiss, should a court give notice to opposing party of its intent to take judicial notice?"

1911	State ex rel. Missouri Highway & Transp. Comm'n v. Kersey, 663 S.W.2d 364, 367–68 (Mo. Ct. App. 1983)	4	In deciding whether to order dismissal for failure to prosecute, trial court may consider not only length of delay, but attendant circumstances; a fair test is whether the excepting party had a reasonable opportunity to bring its exceptions to trial.	In deciding whether to order dismissal for failure to prosecute, a trial court may consider not only the length of delay, but attendant circumstances. Schreck v. *368 Parker, 388 S.W.2d 538, 541 (Mo.App.1965); State ex rel. State Highway Commission v. Milnes, 573 S.W.2d 727, 728 (Mo.App.1978). A fair test is whether the excepting party (here, appellant) had a reasonable opportunity to bring its exceptions to trial. Milnes, 573 S.W.2d at 728.	Will the court consider not only the length of the delay but also attendant circumstances in deciding whether to order dismissal for failure to prosecute?
1912	Duggar v. Quality Dev. Corp., 350 So. 2d 816, 817 (Fla. App. 1977)	1	Amended rule requiring that activity appear on the face of the record to prevent dismissal for failure to prosecute is not applicable to cases involving nonrecord activity prior to the effective date of the amendment. 30 West's F.S.A. Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 1.420(e).	The amended rule which requires that the activity appear on the face of the record to prevent dismissal is not applicable to cases involving nonrecord activity prior to the effective date of that amendment.	"Is amended rule requiring that activity appear on the face of the record to prevent dismissal for failure to prosecute, applicable to cases involving non-record activity prior to the effective date of the amendment?"
1913	High Definition MRI, P.C. v. Travelers Companies, Inc., 137 A.D.3d 602, 602, 29 N.Y.S.3d 23, 24 (2016)	1	On a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action, court may freely consider affidavits submitted by the plaintiff to remedy any defects in the complaint, and the criterion is whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action, not whether he has stated one. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	[A] court may freely consider affidavits submitted by the plaintiff to remedy any defects in the complaint and the criterion is whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action, not whether he has stated one	"When dismissal is sought for failure to state a cause of action and plaintiff submits affidavits, can a court freely consider those affidavits and the criterion is whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action?"
1914	First Community Bank, N.A. v. First Tennessee Bank, N.A., 489 S.W.3d 369, 382 (Tenn. 2015)	7	When trial court expresses an intent to rule on motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction without an evidentiary hearing, defendant may, but is not required to, support motion with affidavits or other evidentiary materials. Tenn. R. Civ. P. 12.02(2).	When a trial court expresses an intent to rule on a motion to dismiss without an evidentiary hearing, a defendant "may, but is not required to, support the motion with affidavits or other evidentiary materials."	"When trial court expresses an intent to rule on motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction without an evidentiary hearing, should a defendant support a motion with affidavits or other evidentiary materials?"
1917	Hartmann Realtors v. Biffar, 13 N.E.3d 350, 356 (Ill. App. 2014)	4	When deciding a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the court may not consider affidavits, the products of discovery, documentary evidence not incorporated into the pleadings as exhibits, testimonial evidence, or other evidentiary materials. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-615.	When deciding a section 2-615 motion to dismiss, the court may not consider affidavits, the products of discovery, documentary evidence not incorporated into the pleadings as exhibits, testimonial evidence, or other evidentiary materials.	"When deciding a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, can the court not consider affidavits, the products of discovery, or documentary evidence not incorporated into the pleadings as exhibits?"
1918	Peoples Bank v. Frazee, 318 S.W.3d 121, 126 (Mo., 2010)	2	Generally, when personal jurisdiction is contested by the filing of a motion to dismiss an action, the plaintiff bears the burden of establishing that the defendant's contacts with the forum state were sufficient.	Generally, when personal jurisdiction is contested by the filing of a motion to dismiss a Missouri action, the plaintiff bears the burden of establishing that the defendant's contacts with the forum state were sufficient.	"When personal jurisdiction is contested by the filing of a motion to dismiss an action, does the plaintiff bears the burden of establishing that the defendant's contacts with the forum state were sufficient?"

1919	First Nat. Bank of Logansport v. Logan Mfg. Co., 577 N.E.2d 949, 954 (Ind. 1991)	5	Doctrine of estoppel springs from equitable principles and is designed to aid law in administration of justice where, without its aid, injustice might result; its purpose is to preserve rights previously acquired and not to create new ones.	The doctrine of estoppel springs from equitable principles and is designed to aid the law in the administration of justice where, without its aid, injustice might result. Its purpose is to preserve rights previously acquired and not to create new ones.	Does estoppel spring from equitable principles and is it designed to aid in the administration of justice where injustice might result?
1920	Burks v. Madyun, 105 Ill. App. 3d 917, 919 (1982)	2	In determining legal sufficiency of complaint on motion to dismiss, all well-pleaded facts are to be taken as true, and reviewing court must determine whether allegations of complaint, when interpreted in light most favorable to plaintiff, are sufficient to set forth cause of action upon which relief may be granted.	In determining the legal sufficiency of a complaint on a motion to dismiss, all well-pleaded facts are to be taken as true (Fitzgerald v. Chicago Title & Trust Co. (1978), 72 Ill.2d 179, 20 Ill.Dec. 581, 380 N.E.2d 790) and a reviewing court must determine whether the allegations of the complaint, when interpreted in the light most favorable to plaintiff, are sufficient to set forth a cause of action upon which relief may be granted.	"In reviewing a motion to dismiss a complaint as untimely, will a reviewing court take all well-pled facts in a complaint as true and will not weigh the evidence?"
1921	Frenzel v. Browning-Ferris Industries, 780 S.W.2d 844, 845 (Tex. App. 1989)	2	In determining whether to dismiss cause for want of prosecution, trial court may consider entire history of case, including length of time case was on file, amount of activity in the case, request for trial setting and existence of reasonable excuses for delay.	In determining whether to dismiss a cause for want of prosecution, a trial court may consider the entire history of the case, including the length of time the case was on file, the amount of activity in the case, the request for a trial setting, and the existence of reasonable excuses for delay.	What should court consider in determining whether to dismiss cause for want of prosecution?
1922	City of Fort Wayne v. Sw. Allen Cty. Fire Prot. Dist., 82 N.E.3d 299, 303 (2017)	4	In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the trial court may consider not only the complaint and motion but also any affidavits or evidence submitted in support; in addition, the trial court may weigh the evidence to determine the existence of the requisite jurisdictional facts. Ind. R. Trial P. 12(B)(1).	In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the trial court may consider not only the complaint and motion but also any affidavits or evidence submitted in support. GKN Co. v. Magness, 744 N.E.2d 397, 400 (Ind. Ct. App. 2001). In addition, the trial court may weigh the evidence to determine the existence of the requisite jurisdictional facts.	"In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, can the trial court consider not only the complaint and motion but also any affidavits or evidence submitted in support?"

1923	Green v. Wiggins, 304 Ark. 484, 489, 803 S.W.2d 536, 539 (1991)	2	Under rule providing that, if service of summons is not made upon defendant within 120 days after filing of complaint, action shall be dismissed without prejudice, "without prejudice" language does not apply if plaintiff's action is otherwise barred by running of statute of limitations. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 4(i).	Of course, appellant's interpretation of Rule 4(i) is correct insofar as it goes, viz., if service of summons is not made upon a defendant within 120 days after the filing of the complaint, the action shall be dismissed without prejudice. Lyons v. Forrest City Machine Works, Inc., 301 Ark. 559, 785 S.W.2d 220 (1990); see also Cole v. First Nat'l Bank, 304 Ark. 26, 800 S.W.2d 412 (1990). However, that dismissal without prejudice language does not apply if the plaintiff's action is otherwise barred by the running of a statute of limitations.	"Does a rule provide that if service of the summons is not made upon a defendant within 120 days after filing of the complaint, the action shall be dismissed as to that defendant without prejudice upon motion?"
1924	Vosbein v. Bellias, 866 So. 2d 489, 493 (Miss.App.,2004)	3	Lesser sanctions than dismissal with prejudice for want of prosecution include fines, costs, or damages against plaintiff or his counsel, attorney disciplinary measures, conditional dismissal, dismissal without prejudice, and explicit warnings. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	Lesser sanctions include 'fines, costs, or damages against plaintiff or his counsel, attorney disciplinary measures, conditional dismissal, dismissal without prejudice, and explicit warnings	"Do lesser sanctions than dismissal with prejudice for want of prosecution include fines, costs, or damages against plaintiff or his counsel, attorney disciplinary measures, conditional dismissal, and dismissal without prejudice?"
1926	Thomas v. Knight, 52 S.W.3d 292, 296 (Tex. App. 2001)	9	When an appellate court reviews whether a trial court abused its discretion in dismissing a state prisoner's civil rights suit, it should consider whether the suit was dismissed with prejudice, and if it was, determine whether the prisoner's error could be remedied through more specific pleading; if the error could be remedied, then a dismissal with prejudice is improper. V.T.C.A., Civil Practice and Remedies Code, S 14.004.	When an appellate court reviews whether a trial court abused its discretion in dismissing an inmate's suit, it should consider whether the suit was dismissed with prejudice and if the suit was, determine whether the inmate's error could be remedied through more specific pleading. Denton, 504 U.S. at 34, 112 S.Ct. 1728; Hickman, 35 S.W.3d at 124. If the error could be remedied, then a dismissal with prejudice is improper.	"When reviewing whether a trial court abused its discretion by dismissing an inmate suit with prejudice, should the appellate court consider whether the inmate error could be remedied with a more specific pleading?"
1927	Burton v. Allen, 628 So. 2d 814, 815 (Ala. App. 1993)	3	Trial court may dismiss action, with prejudice, for lack of prosecution only when there is clear record of delay or contumacious conduct by plaintiff or serious showing of willful default. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	A trial court may dismiss an action, with prejudice, for lack of prosecution only when there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct by the plaintiff or a serious showing of willful default.	"Can a trial court dismiss an action, with prejudice, for lack of prosecution only when there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct by the plaintiff or a serious showing of willful default?"

1928	Burkes v. Fas-Chek Food Mart Inc, 217 W. Va. 291, 293 (2005)	9	If a plaintiff fails to serve a summons and complaint upon a defendant within 120 days, then the circuit court should dismiss the action against that defendant without prejudice; however, the circuit court shall extend the time for service if the plaintiff shows good cause for the failure. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 4(k).	Under Rule 4(k) of the West Virginia Rules of Civil Procedure [1998], if a plaintiff fails to serve a summons and complaint upon a defendant within 120 days, then the circuit court should dismiss the action against that defendant without prejudice. However, the circuit court shall extend the time for service if the plaintiff shows good cause for the failure.	"If a plaintiff fails to serve a summons and complaint upon a defendant within 120 days, should then the circuit court dismiss the action against that defendant without prejudice?"
1929	Swenson v. Sanborn Cty. Farmers Union Oil Co., 594 N.W.2d 339, 343 (S.D., 1999)	8	Dismissal of the cause of action for failure to prosecute should be granted when, after considering all the facts and circumstances of the case, the plaintiff can be charged with lack of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude.	Finally, dismissal of the cause of action for failure to prosecute should be granted when, after considering all the facts and circumstances of the case, the plaintiff can be charged with lack of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude.	"Should dismissal of a cause of action for failure to prosecute be granted when, the plaintiff can be charged with lack of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptness?"
1931	Chudoba v. Chudoba, 36 Misc. 2d 213, 216, 232 N.Y.S.2d 115, 118–19 (Sup. Ct. 1962)	6	Although pleading attacked for legal insufficiency must be accorded every fair and reasonable intendment, liberality cannot be used as substitute for matters of substance and conclusions utilized to supply material facts by inference within doctrine of liberal construction.	While a pleading attacked for legal insufficiency must be accorded every fair and reasonable intendment, liberality 'cannot be used as a substitute for matters of substance' and conclusions utilized 'to supply material facts by inference within the doctrine of liberal construction	Should pleadings attacked for legal insufficiency be accorded every fair and reasonable intendment?
1932	Texas Mut. Ins. Co. v. Olivas, 323 S.W.3d 266, 273 (Tex. App. 2010)	3	A trial court does not abuse its discretion by denying a motion to reinstate a suit if the movant receives notice of the actual order of dismissal in time to file a motion to reinstate, and has an opportunity to be heard on the motion.	However, "a trial court does not abuse its discretion by denying a motion to reinstate if the movant (a) receives notice of the actual order of dismissal in time to file a motion to reinstate, and (b) has an opportunity to be heard on the motion."	Does a trial court not abuse its discretion by denying a motion to reinstate a suit if the movant receives notice of the actual order of dismissal in time to file a motion to reinstate?
1933	Kruis v. McKenna, 2001 PA Super 366, ¶ 7 (2001)	2	Before a petition to open a judgment of non pros may be granted, the moving party must: (1) promptly file a petition to open; (2) present a reasonable explanation or excuse for the default or delay that precipitated the non pros; and (3) establish that there are sufficient facts to support a cause of action.	Before a petition to open a judgment of non pros may be granted, the moving party must 1) promptly file a petition to open, 2) present a reasonable explanation or excuse for the default or delay that precipitated the non pros, and 3) establish that there are sufficient facts to support a cause of action.	What should the moving party do before a petition to open a judgment of non pros can be granted?

1935	In re Adoption of Jason K., 41 Misc. 3d 885, 888, 972 N.Y.S.2d 481, 485 (Fam. Ct. 2013)	2	The issuance by a juvenile court of an order of guardianship or an order of adoption for an alien minor residing in the United States may provide a basis for the juvenile court to make the special findings necessary to submit an application to United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) for Special Immigrant Juvenile (SIJ) status, although guardianship of an alien minor may be granted independently of any application for SIJ status. Immigration and Nationality Act, S 101(a)(27)(J), 8 U.S.C.A. S 1101(a)(27)(J).	The issuance of an order of guardianship or an order of adoption for a minor child residing in the United States by a juvenile court may provide a basis for the juvenile court to make the special findings necessary to submit an application to USCIS for Special Immigrant Juvenile ("SIJ") status pursuant to 8 USC § 1101(a)(27)(J), although guardianship of an alien minor may be granted independently of any application for SIJ status	Are special findings of juvenile court necessary to permit a juvenile to file an application for Special Immigrant Juvenile (SIJ) status?
1936	In re Lynd Co., 195 S.W.3d 682, 685 (Tex. 2006)	3	A sworn motion to extend post-judgment deadlines establishes a prima facie case that the party lacked timely notice and invokes a trial court's otherwise-expired jurisdiction for the limited purpose of holding an evidentiary hearing to determine the date on which the party or its counsel first received notice or acquired knowledge of the judgment. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 306a.	The sworn motion establishes a prima facie case that the party lacked timely notice and invokes a trial court's otherwise-expired jurisdiction for the limited purpose of holding an evidentiary hearing to determine the date on which the party or its counsel first received notice or acquired knowledge of the judgment.	When is a trial court required to hold an evidentiary hearing?
1937	Fico v. Health Ins. Plan of Greater New York, 248 A.D.2d 432, 433, 669 N.Y.S.2d 380, 381 (1998)	1	Party seeking to restore case to trial calendar after it has been dismissed as abandoned must demonstrate merits of case, reasonable excuse for delay, absence of intent to abandon matter, and lack of prejudice to nonmoving party in event that case is restored to trial calendar; all four components of test must be satisfied before dismissal can be properly vacated. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	A party seeking to restore a case to the trial calendar after it has been dismissed pursuant to CPLR 3404 must demonstrate the merits of the case, a reasonable excuse for the delay, the absence of an intent to abandon the matter, and the lack of prejudice to the nonmoving party in the event that the case is restored to the trial calendar. The moving party must satisfy all four components of the test before the dismissal can be properly vacated.	A party seeking to restore a case to the trial calendar after it has been dismissed as abandoned must demonstrate what?
1939	474 W. 150th St. Realty Corp. v. Lewis, 166 Misc. 2d 954, 956 (New York 1995)	2	In order to have dismissal for abandonment vacated and action restored to trial calendar, movant must show meritorious cause of action, reasonable excuse for delay, lack of prejudice to opposing party and lack of intent to abandon action. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	In order to have such a dismissal vacated and the action restored to the trial calendar, the movant must show "a meritorious cause of action, a reasonable excuse for the delay, a lack of prejudice to the opposing party and a lack of intent to abandon the action"	"In order to have a dismissal for abandonment vacated and action restored to a trial calendar, should a movant show a meritorious cause of action?"
1940	Shirrell v. Missouri Edison Co., 535 S.W.2d 446, 448 (Mo., 1976)	1	General rule is that courts have inherent power in exercise of sound judicial discretion to dismiss case for failure to prosecute with due diligence and action thereon will not be disturbed on appeal unless such discretion was abused.	Lemay Bank & Trust Co., 386 S.W.2d 398, 399 (Mo.1965), as follows: 'The general rule is that courts have inherent power, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss a case for failure to prosecute with due diligence, and that the action thereon will not be disturbed on appeal unless such discretion was abused.	"Do courts have the inherent authority, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss a case for failure to prosecute with due diligence?"

1941	Campaign for Quality Educ. v. State, 209 Cal. Rptr. 3d 888, 895, 246 Cal.App.4th 896, 907 (2016)	14	State constitution vests legislature with sweeping and comprehensive powers in relation to public schools, including broad discretion to determine types of programs and services which further the purposes of education and such functions as educational focus, teaching methods, school operations, furnishing of textbooks, and the like. (Per Jenkins, J., with one justice concurring separately.) Cal. Const. art. 9, SS 1, 5.	Second, there is no dispute that "our Constitution vests the Legislature with sweeping and comprehensive powers in relation to our public schools (Hall v. City of Taft [(1956)] 47 Cal.2d [177,] 179 [302 P.2d 574]), including broad discretion to determine the types of programs and services which further the purposes of education ([Hayes,] supra, 5 Cal.App.4th at p. 1528 [7 Cal.Rptr.2d 699])," and "such functions as educational focus, teaching methods, school operations, furnishing of textbooks and the like."	Do state constitutions delegate power to the Legislature over the public school system?
1942	Owczarkowski v. Pawlicki, 35 A.D.2d 773, 773, 316 N.Y.S.2d 688, 689 (1970)	2	On motion by defaulting party to vacate order of dismissal he must show a justifiable excuse for the default and present evidentiary facts establishing that he has a meritorious cause of action.	Upon a motion by a defaulting party to vacate an order of dismissal he must show a justifiable excuse for the default and present evidentiary facts establishing that he has a meritorious cause of action.	"On a motion by a defaulting party to vacate order of dismissal, should he show a justifiable excuse for the default and present evidentiary facts establishing that he has a meritorious cause of action?"
1943	Gohel v. Montgomery Hosp., 698 A.2d 653, 654 (Pa. 1997)	2	To open judgment of non pros, petitioner must demonstrate to trial court's satisfaction that petition to open was promptly filed, delay was reasonably explained, and facts exist which support cause of action. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 3051(b), 42 Pa.C.S.A.	To remove a judgment of non pros, the petitioner must demonstrate to the trial court's satisfaction that the petition to open was promptly filed, provide a reasonable explanation for the delay, and demonstrate the *1243 existence of facts to support the cause of action.	"To open judgment of non pros(JNP) , should a petitioner demonstrate to a trial court's satisfaction that a petition to open was promptly filed?"
1946	Stoddard v. Rutgers, 24 N.J. Tax 187, 193-194 (2008)	2	In ruling on a motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim a court must test the adequacy of a pleading by determining whether a cause of action is suggested by the facts alleged in the complaint, without regard to the ability of the plaintiff to prove those facts. R. 4:6-2.	The standard for the grant of a Rule 4:6-2 motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim was set forth by our Supreme Court in Printing Mart- Morristown v. Sharp Electronics Corp., 116 N.J. 739, 563 A.2d 31 (1989). A court must test the adequacy of a pleading by determining whether a cause of action is suggested by the facts alleged in the complaint, without *194 regard to the ability of the plaintiff to prove those facts.	"On motion to dismiss complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, is the test for determining the adequacy of a pleading whether a cause of action is suggested by the facts?"

1947	Cambridge Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Crete, 150 N.H. 673, 678 (2004)	13	To assure that the opportunity for amendment has practical meaning, a plaintiff must be given leave to amend the writ to correct perceived deficiencies before an adverse judgment has preclusive effect; therefore, the trial court must allow the plaintiff opportunity to amend the writ before dismissing for failure to state a claim, allowing the plaintiff two chances to state a case before precluding the plaintiff from burdening the courts and opposing parties with further attempts.	To assure that the opportunity for amendment has practical meaning, however, the plaintiff must be given leave to amend the writ to correct perceived deficiencies before an adverse judgment has preclusive effect. Id. Therefore, the trial court must allow the plaintiff opportunity to amend the writ before dismissing for failure to state a claim, allowing the plaintiff two chances to state a case before precluding the plaintiff from burdening the courts and opposing parties with further attempts.	"To assure that the opportunity for amendment has practical meaning, should a plaintiff be given leave to amend the writ to correct perceived deficiencies before an adverse judgment has preclusive effect?"
1948	Gray v. Gray, 102 Ohio App. 239, 242 (1956)	4	Generally, courts have inherent power, independent of statute, to dismiss an action where it appears that plaintiff has failed to have summons issued for an unreasonable period, or there is an unreasonable delay in serving summons, or failure to comply with an order of the court or diligently to prosecute the case. R.C. SS 2323.04, 2323.05.	However, it is generally recognized that courts have inherent power, independent of statute, to dismiss an action where it appears that plaintiff has failed to have summons issued for an unreasonable period, or there is an unreasonable delay in serving summons, or on failure to comply with an order of the court or diligently prosecute his case.	Does the court have the inherent power to dismiss independently of the rules of procedure when a plaintiff fails to prosecute its case with due diligence?
1949	Bobbin v. Sail the Sounds, 153 Conn. App. 716, 726-27 (2014)	8	Courts must remain mindful that it is the policy of the law to bring about a trial on the merits of a dispute whenever possible and that termination of proceedings without a determination of the merits of the controversy is not favored, where that can be brought about with due regard to necessary rules of procedure.	Courts must remain mindful, however, that "[i]t is the policy of the law to bring *727 about a trial on the merits of a dispute whenever possible"; Snow v. Calise, 174 Conn. 567, 574, 392 A.2d 440 (1978); and that "[o]ur practice does not favor the termination of proceedings without a determination of the merits of the controversy where that can be brought about with due regard to necessary rules of procedure."	Should courts remain mindful that it is the policy of the law to bring about a trial on the merits of a dispute?
1950	PDC Consulting v. Porter, 196 P.3d 626, 629 (Utah App., 2008)	2	It is well within a trial court's discretion to dismiss a case for failure to prosecute when a party fails to move forward according to the rules and the directions of the court, without justifiable excuse. Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 37, 41(b).	In other words, it is well within a trial court's discretion to dismiss a case under rule 41(b) when "a party fails to move forward according to the rules and the directions of the court, without justifiable excuse.	Is it well within a trial court discretion to dismiss a case for failure to prosecute when a party fails to move forward according to the rules and the directions of the court?
1951	Caraballo v. Montefiore Med. Ctr., 89 A.D.3d 638, 639, 933 N.Y.S.2d 278, 279 (2011)	2	To vacate an order dismissing an action for want of prosecution, a plaintiff must demonstrate both a reasonable excuse for the failure to comply with the 90-day demand to serve and file a note of issue and a meritorious cause of action.	To vacate an order dismissing an action pursuant to CPLR 3216, a plaintiff must demonstrate both a reasonable excuse for the failure to comply with the 90-day demand to serve and file a note of issue and a meritorious cause of action	"To vacate an order dismissing an action for want of prosecution, should a plaintiff demonstrate a reasonable excuse for the failure to comply with the 90-day demand to serve?"

1952	State v. Nielsen, 2000 ME 202, ¶ 5 (2000)	3	A declaration of mistrial after a jury is impaneled will prevent the government from attempting prosecution again on the same charges except in certain limited circumstances-when the defendant consents to the mistrial, or a manifest necessity for the mistrial exists. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; M.R.S.A. Const. Art. 1, S 8.	A declaration of mistrial after a jury is impaneled will thus prevent the government from attempting prosecution again on the same charges except in certain limited circumstances-when the defendant consents to the mistrial, 4 or a manifest necessity for the mistrial *879 exists.	Will a declaration of mistrial after a jury is impaneled prevent the government from attempting prosecution again on the same charges except in certain limited circumstances-when the defendant consents to the mistrial?
1953	United States v. Aguilar-Aranceta, 957 F.2d 18, 21 (C.A.1 (Puerto Rico), 1992)	4	Protection embodied in double jeopardy clause is personal defense that may be waived or foreclosed by defendant's voluntary actions or choices, including requests for or effectual consent to mistrial. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	The protection embodied in the Double Jeopardy Clause is a personal defense that may be waived or foreclosed by a defendant's voluntary actions or choices, including a request for or effectual consent to a mistrial.	Is protection embodied in double jeopardy clause a personal defense that may be waived or foreclosed by a defendant voluntary actions or choices?
1954	U.S. v. McCallum, 721 F.3d 706, 710, 406 U.S.App.D.C. 74, 78 (C.A.D.C.,2013)	3	Although retrial is not automatically barred when a criminal proceeding is terminated prematurely, the prosecutor must shoulder the burden of justifying the mistrial if he is to avoid the double jeopardy bar. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Although "retrial is not automatically barred when a criminal proceeding is terminated [prematurely] ..., the prosecutor must shoulder the burden of justifying the mistrial if he is to avoid the double jeopardy bar." Id.	"Although retrial is not automatically barred when a criminal proceeding is terminated prematurely, should the prosecutor shoulder the burden of justifying the mistrial if he is to avoid the double jeopardy bar?"
1955	People v. Cobb, 19 Ill. App. 3d 520, 522 (1974)	1	Though not every mistrial necessarily gives rise to a valid claim of double jeopardy, right not to be put twice in jeopardy for the same offense is a substantial right which should be zealously guarded.	While it is true that not every mistrial necessarily gives rise to a valid claim of double jeopardy, nonetheless the right not to be put twice in jeopardy for the same offense is a substantial right which should be zealously guarded.	"Though not every mistrial necessarily gives rise to a valid claim of double jeopardy, is a right not to be put twice in jeopardy for the same offense a substantial right which should be zealously guarded?"
1956	Morriss v. First Nat. Bank of Mission, 249 S.W.2d 269, 279 (Tex. Civ. App. 1952)	6	The "bonus" provided for in oil and gas lease represents market value of lease apart from royalties to be paid on production and other considerations under the lease, and is a sum of money paid upon execution of a lease or agreed to be paid at some later date, usually out of lessee's share of first oil produced from the land, and is frequently computed at a cash amount per acre.	Bonus 'represents market value of a lease apart from royalties to be paid on production and the other considerations of the lease; and is a sum of money paid upon execution of a lease or agreed to be paid at some later date, usually out of the lessee's share of the first oil produced from the land.' 3 Summers, Oil & Gas, s 571; State Nat. Bank of Corpus Christi v. Morgan, supra. Bonus is frequently computed at a cash amount per acre.	"Can the term bonus be defined as a sum of money paid in consideration for the execution of a lease, as distinguished from the return or royalty reserved by the lessor to be paid by the lessee through the term of the lease?"

1957	People ex rel. Dept. of Revenue v. Countryman, 162 Ill.App.3d 134, 136 (1987)	3	Dismissal for want of prosecution should be set aside where satisfactory explanation of apparent delay has been given, there has been no intentional or willful disregard of any directions of court, and it is does not appear that further postponement of controversy on merits would result in prejudice or hardship to any of parties.	Moreover, a dismissal for want of prosecution should be set aside where a satisfactory explanation of the apparent delay has been given, there has been no intentional or willful disregard of any directions of the court, and it does not appear that further postponement of a controversy on its merits would result in prejudice or hardship to any of the parties.	Should a dismissal for want of prosecution be set aside where a satisfactory explanation of apparent delay has been given?
1958	McGinnis v. Steeleman, 199 So. 3d 69, 73 (Ala. Civ. App. 2015)	4	A trial court has the discretion and inherent power to dismiss claims for various reasons, including failure to prosecute and failure to attend a hearing, but since dismissal with prejudice is a drastic sanction, it is to be applied only in extreme situations.	"A trial court has the discretion and inherent power to dismiss claims for various reasons, including failure to prosecute and failure to attend a hearing, but " "since dismissal with prejudice is a drastic sanction, it is to be applied only in extreme situations.	"Does the court have the discretion and inherent power to dismiss claims for various reasons, including failure to prosecute and failure to attend a hearing?"
1959	Progressive Ins. Co. v. Brown, 195 So.3d 1007, 1010 (Ala.Civ.App., 2015)	1	Trial court has the discretion and inherent power to dismiss claims for various reasons, including failure to prosecute and failure to attend a hearing, but since dismissal with prejudice is a drastic sanction, it is to be applied only in extreme situations.	"A trial court has the discretion and inherent power to dismiss claims for various reasons, including failure to prosecute and failure to attend a hearing, but " "since dismissal with prejudice is a drastic sanction, it is to be applied only in extreme situations." "	"Does the court have the discretion and inherent power to dismiss claims for various reasons, including failure to prosecute and failure to attend a hearing?"
1960	Scarzella v. DeMers, 17 Cal.App.4th 1762, 1769–70 (Cal.App.3.Dist)	6	Dismissal for failure to serve summons within two years and dismissal for failure to bring action to trial within prescribed time, after action is commenced, are both matters within discretion of trial court; although both are addressed in same statute, scope of discretion is not same. West's Ann.Cal.C.C.P. S 583.420(a), (a)(1, 2), (b).	Dismissal for failure to serve summons within two years under section 583.420, subdivision (a)(1), and dismissal for failure to bring the action to trial within the prescribed time under section 583.420, subdivision (a)(2), after the action is commenced, are both matters within the discretion of the trial court. Although both are addressed in the same statute, the scope of discretion is not the same	"Are the dismissal for failure to serve summons within two years and dismissal for failure to bring action to trial within prescribed time, after action is commenced, both matters within discretion of trial court?"
1961	State v. Huffman, 141 W. Va. 55, 79-80 (1955)	24	To sustain conviction for an attempt to commit rape, proof must establish specific intent to commit rape, and force, or attempted force or an intention to use force, by offender, in perpetration of offense, necessary to overcome the will of victim, together with an attempt to accomplish his lustful desire against will of female and notwithstanding her resistance.	To sustain a conviction for an attempt to commit the crime of rape the proof must establish the specific 556 intent to commit the crime of rape, and force, or attempted force, or an intention to use force, by the offender, in the perpetration of the offense, *80 necessary to overcome the will of the victim, together with an attempt to accomplish his lustful desire against the will of the female and notwithstanding her resistance.	Is the proof of the specific intent to commit rape essential to sustain a conviction on the charge of attempt to commit rape?

1963	State v. Guillaume, 293 Mont. 224, 231 (1999)	7	Application of weapon enhancement statute to felony convictions where underlying offense requires proof of use of weapon violates the double jeopardy provision of Montana Constitution. Const. Art. 2, § 25; MCA 46-18-221(1, 4).	We further hold that application of the weapon enhancement statute to felony convictions where the underlying offense requires proof of use of a weapon violates the double jeopardy provision of Article II, Section 25 of the Montana Constitution.	Does application of weapon enhancement statute to felony convictions where underlying offense requires proof of use of weapon violate the double jeopardy provision of Constitution?
1965	State v. Creamer, 161 S.W.3d 420, 425 (Mo.App. W.D., 2005)	13	A court may declare a mistrial sua sponte and retry the defendant without violating the double jeopardy clause if the declaration of mistrial meets the manifest necessity doctrine. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Specifically, a court may declare a mistrial sua sponte and retry the defendant without violating the double jeopardy clause if the declaration of mistrial meets the "manifest necessity" doctrine.	Can a court declare a mistrial sua sponte and retry the defendant without violating the double jeopardy clause if the declaration of mistrial meets the manifest necessity doctrine?
1966	State v. C.J.F., 183 S.W.3d 841, 847 (Tex. App. 2005)	7	A defendant's valued right to have his trial completed by a particular tribunal is within the protection of the constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy, because that right lies at the foundation of the federal rule that jeopardy attaches when the jury is empaneled and sworn. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	A defendant's "valued right to have his trial completed by a particular tribunal" is now within the protection of the constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy, because that right lies at the foundation of the federal rule that jeopardy attaches when the jury is empaneled and sworn.	Is a defendant's right to have his trial completed by a particular tribunal within the protection of the constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy?
1967	Walck v. Edmondson, 472 F.3d 1227, 1236 (10th Cir. (Okla.), 2007)	15	Because a criminal defendant's right to have his trial completed by a particular tribunal is substantial, and any mistrial frustrates that right, the prosecution must overcome a heavy burden in justifying a mistrial over the defendant's objection if the double jeopardy bar is to be avoided. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Nevertheless, because a criminal defendant's right to have his trial completed by a particular tribunal is substantial, and any mistrial frustrates that right, the prosecution must overcome a heavy burden in justifying a mistrial over the defendant's objection if the double jeopardy bar is to be avoided.	Should the prosecution overcome a heavy burden in justifying a mistrial over the defendant's objection if the double jeopardy bar is to be avoided?
1968	State v. Ross, 189 Conn. 42, 48 (1983)	4	If because of unavailability of suppressed evidence, defendant has been acquitted, principle of double jeopardy would prevent new trial regardless of whether exclusionary ruling was erroneous. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	If because of the unavailability of the suppressed evidence a defendant has been acquitted, the principle of double jeopardy would prevent a new trial regardless of whether the exclusionary ruling was erroneous.	"If because of unavailability of suppressed evidence, defendant has been acquitted, will the principle of double jeopardy prevent a new trial regardless of whether an exclusionary ruling was erroneous?"
1970	Wen v. Willis, 117 F. Supp. 3d 673, 680 (E.D.Pa., 2015)	3	Under Pennsylvania law, the gist of the action doctrine forecloses a party's pursuit of a tort action for the mere breach of contractual duties without any separate or independent event giving rise to the tort.	The gist of the action doctrine "forecloses a party's pursuit of a tort action for the mere breach of contractual duties without any separate or independent event giving rise to the tort.	"Does the gist-of-the-action doctrine foreclose a party's pursuit of a tort action for the mere breach of contractual duties, without any separate or independent event giving rise to the tort?"

1972	In re Vital Prod. Co., 210 B.R. 109, 111 (N.D. Ohio 1997)	3	In resolving whether transaction characterized as lease is actually something other than lease, bankruptcy courts typically look to applicable nonbankruptcy law for guidance, and where state has adopted the Uniform Commercial Code (UCC), provisions of UCC are considered in distinguishing true lease from disguised security transaction. U.C.C. S 1-201(37).	In resolving whether a transaction characterized as a lease is actually something other than a lease, bankruptcy courts typically look to applicable nonbankruptcy law for guidance, and the characterization affixed by the parties involved is not necessarily controlling. Where states have adopted the Uniform Commercial Code (U.C.C.), provisions of U.C.C. 1-201(37) are considered in distinguishing a true lease from a disguised security transaction.	Is characterization affixed by parties not necessarily controlling in distinguishing between a true lease and a disguised security agreement?
1976	Browning-Ferris Indus. of Kansas City v. Dance, 671 S.W.2d 801, 809 (1984)	12	In exercising inspection authority through the police power, municipal corporations may impose license fees, permanent fees, or taxes to recover the costs of inspection by a flat amount or an amount based upon volume of business.	In exercising inspection authority through the police power, municipal corporations may impose license, permit fees, or taxes to recover their costs of inspection by a flat amount or an amount based upon volume of business.	"While exercising inspection authority through a police power, can municipal corporations impose license, permit fees, or taxes to recover their costs of inspection?"
1977	Flores v. Georgeson, 191 Cal. App. 4th 881, 887 (2011)	3	A court has inherent power, upon a sufficient factual showing, to dismiss an action shown to be sham, fictitious or without merit in order to prevent abuse of the judicial process.	A court has inherent power, upon a sufficient factual showing, to dismiss an action "shown to be sham, fictitious or without merit in order to prevent abuse of the judicial process."	"Does court have power to dismiss an action when it is shown to be sham, fictitious or without merit in order to prevent abuse of the judicial process?"
1978	Casey v. Ne. Utilities, 249 Conn. 365, 378 (1999)	11	Under Workers' Compensation Act, employee surrenders his right to bring common law action against employer, thereby limiting employer's liability to the statutory amount, and in return, employee is compensated for his losses without having to prove liability; Act compromises employee's right to common law tort action for work-related injuries in return for relatively quick and certain compensation. C.G.S.A. S 31-275 et seq.	Under the statute, the employee surrenders his right to bring a common law action against the employer, thereby limiting the employer's liability to the statutory amount.... In return, the employee is compensated for his or her losses without having to prove liability.... In a word, these statutes compromise an employee's *379 right to a common law tort action for work related injuries in return for relatively quick and certain compensation.	"Under the Workers' Compensation Act, does an employee surrender his right to bring a common law action against the employer by limiting the employers liability to the statutory amount? "
1980	Farmers Auto. Ins. Ass'n v. Neumann, 2015 IL App (3d) 140026, 28 N.E.3d 830, 835 (Ill. App. 2015)	13	The test for determining the factual sufficiency of an affirmative defense is the same as that applied in deciding a motion to dismiss; the facts constituting the defense must be plainly set forth and the court will disregard any conclusions of law or fact not supported by allegations of specific fact. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-613(d).	The test for determining the factual sufficiency of an affirmative defense is the same as that applied in deciding a motion to dismiss; the facts constituting the defense must be plainly set forth and the court will disregard any conclusions of law or fact not supported by allegations of specific fact.	Is the test for determining the factual sufficiency of an affirmative defense the same as that applied in deciding a motion to dismiss?

1981	Broadstone Realty Corp. v. Evans, 213 F. Supp. 261, 265 (1962)	1	With respect to diversity jurisdiction of federal courts, "citizenship" has same meaning as domicile and it imports permanent residence in a particular state with intention of remaining; residence alone is not equivalent of citizenship, although place of residence is prima facie the domicile; citizenship is not necessarily lost by protracted absence from home where intention to return remains. 28 U.S.C.A. § 1331(a).	It is well established that 'with respect to the diversity jurisdiction of the federal courts, citizenship has the same meaning as domicile. It imports permanent residence in a particular state with the intention of remaining * * *. Residence alone is not the equivalent of citizenship, although the place of residence is prima facie the domicile; and citizenship is not necessarily lost by protracted absence from home where the intention to return remains.'	"Is residence not the equivalent of domicile, although it is prima facie evidence of domicile?"
1982	Iacono v. Japan Line, Ltd., 89 A.D.2d 948, 949, 454 N.Y.S.2d 438, 439 (1982)	2	Even if a violation of a preclusion order may be deemed a "neglect to prosecute" which would bar a second action even if the judgment dismissing the first action was not on the merits, that rule cannot be applied in such a way as to shorten the period otherwise available to the plaintiff. McKinney's CPLR 205(a).	Assuming a violation of a preclusion order may be deemed a "neglect to prosecute", which would bar a second action pursuant to CPLR 205(a) even if the judgment dismissing the first action were not on the merits, CPLR 205(a) "cannot be applied in such a way as to shorten the period otherwise available to the plaintiff	Can a rule be applied in such a way as to shorten the period otherwise available to the plaintiff?
1984	SPS Dev. Co. v. DS Enterprises of Palm Beaches, 970 So. 2d 495, 497 (Fla.App. 4 Dist., 2007)	5	Although a trial court has the discretionary power to dismiss a complaint if plaintiff fails to timely file an amendment, because dismissal is the ultimate sanction in the adversarial system, it should be reserved for those aggravating circumstances in which a lesser sanction would fail to achieve a just result.	Although a trial court has the discretionary power to dismiss a complaint if the plaintiff fails to timely file an amendment, id. at 817, "[b]ecause dismissal is the ultimate sanction in the adversarial system, it should be reserved for those aggravating circumstances in which a lesser sanction would fail to achieve a just result."	Does a court have the discretionary power to dismiss a complaint if the plaintiff fails to timely file an amendment?
1986	State, Dep't of Transp. v. Douglas Asphalt Co., 297 Ga. App. 470, 471 (2009)	1	The admission of evidence, including a ruling on a motion in limine, is a matter resting within the sound discretion of the trial court, and an appellate court will not disturb the exercise of that discretion absent evidence of its abuse.	"The admission of evidence, including a ruling on a motion in limine, is a matter resting within the sound discretion of the trial court, and we will not disturb the exercise of that discretion absent evidence of its abuse."	"Is the admission of evidence, including a ruling on a motion in limine, a matter resting within the sound discretion of the trial court that will not be disturbed absent evidence of abuse? "
1987	State v. N. Atl. Ref. Ltd., 160 N.H. 275, 280, 999 A.2d 396, 403 (2010)	1	When the trial court rules upon the motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction without holding an evidentiary hearing, the trial court applies a prima facie standard, and the appellate court reviews the trial court's decision de novo.	When, as in this case, the trial court rules upon the motion without holding an evidentiary hearing, the trial court applies a "prima facie " standard, and we review the trial court's decision de novo.	"When the trial court rules upon the motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction without holding an evidentiary hearing, does the trial court apply a prima facie standard?"

1988	Jackson v. Joyner, 309 S.W.3d 910, 915 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2009)	2	A motion in limine provides a means by which a party may seek guidance from the trial court regarding an evidentiary question in order to formulate their trial strategy; it essentially substitutes for an evidentiary objection which may be made at trial.	Rather, a motion in limine provides a means by which a party may seek guidance from the trial court regarding an evidentiary question in order to formulate their trial strategy. Id. It essentially substitutes for an evidentiary objection which may be made at trial. Id.	Does a motion in limine provide a means by which a party may seek guidance from the trial court regarding an evidentiary question?
1989	In re Pihl, Inc., 529 B.R. 414, 425 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2015)	8	Under Massachusetts law, court considers five factors in deciding whether equitable subrogation applies: (1) whether the subrogee made payment to protect his or her own interest, (2) whether subrogee acted other than as volunteer, (3) whether subrogee was not the one primarily liable for the debt paid, (4) whether subrogee paid off the entire encumbrance, and (5) whether subrogation can be applied without working any injustice to rights of junior lienholder; however, equitable subrogation is a broad equitable remedy, and may apply even when one or more of these factors is absent.	In Massachusetts, a party must prove the following five factors for subrogation to apply: (1) the subrogee made the payment to protect his or her own interest, (2) the subrogee did not act as a volunteer, (3) the subrogee was not primarily liable for the debt paid, (4) the subrogee paid off the entire encumbrance, and (5) subrogation would not work any injustice to the rights of the junior lienholder. ⁶⁸ Equitable subrogation is a “broad equitable remedy” and “may apply even where one or more of these factors is absent.”	What prerequisites must be met in order for equitable subrogation to apply?
1991	Caito v. United California Bank, 20 Cal. 3d 694, 704, 576 P.2d 466, 471 (1978)	11	One who claims to be equitably subrogated to the rights of secured creditor must satisfy certain prerequisites, namely, that payment must have been made by the subrogee to protect his own interest; that the subrogee must not have acted as a volunteer; that the debt paid must be one for which the subrogee was not primarily liable; that the entire debt must have been paid and that the subrogation must not work any injustice to the rights of others.	One who claims to be equitably subrogated to the rights of a secured creditor must satisfy certain prerequisites. These are: “(1) Payment must have been made by the subrogee to protect his own interest. (2) The subrogee must not have acted as a volunteer. (3) The debt paid must be one for which the subrogee was not primarily liable. (4) The entire debt must have been paid. (5) Subrogation must not work any injustice to the rights of others.”	Should one satisfy certain prerequisites to claim to be equitably subrogated?
1992	Deloitte Noraudit A/S v. Deloitte Haskins & Sells, U.S., 9 F.3d 1060, 1063 (2d Cir. 1993)	1	Federal Arbitration Act requires federal courts to enforce arbitration agreements, reflecting Congress' recognition that arbitration is to be encouraged as means of reducing costs and delays associated with litigation; federal policy favoring arbitration is even stronger in context of international transactions. 9 U.S.C.A. § 1 et seq.	(1988), requires the federal courts to enforce arbitration agreements, reflecting Congress' recognition that arbitration is to be encouraged as a means of reducing the costs and delays associated with litigation. Genesco, Inc. v. T. Kakiuchi & Co., 815 F.2d 840, 844 (2d Cir.1987). The federal policy favoring arbitration is even stronger in the context of international transactions.	Does Federal Arbitration Act require the federal courts to enforce arbitration agreement?

1993	Hawkeye Land Co. v. ITC Midwest LLC, 125 F. Supp. 3d 885, 892 (2015)	1	Under Iowa law, nuisance and trespass are related doctrines, but there are differences between them; claim of "trespass" involves an actionable invasion of interests in the exclusive possession of land, and an actual invasion by tangible matter, whereas claim of "nuisance" is an actionable invasion of interests in the use and enjoyment of land, usually by intangible substances, such as noises or odors, and usually involving the idea of continuance or recurrence over a considerable period of time. I.C.A. S 657.1.	Nuisance and trespass are related doctrines, but there are differences between them. On the one hand, a claim of trespass involves "an actionable invasion of interests in the exclusive possession of land," and "an actual invasion by tangible matter." On the other hand, a claim of nuisance is "an actionable invasion of interests in the use and enjoyment of land," the invasion "is usually by intangible substances, such as noises or odors," and "[i]t usually involves the idea of continuance or recurrence over a considerable period of time."	Is the tort of trespass similar to nuisance?
1994	Hawkeye Land Co. v. ITC Midwest LLC, 125 F. Supp. 3d 885, 892 (2015)	1	Under Iowa law, nuisance and trespass are related doctrines, but there are differences between them; claim of "trespass" involves an actionable invasion of interests in the exclusive possession of land, and an actual invasion by tangible matter, whereas claim of "nuisance" is an actionable invasion of interests in the use and enjoyment of land, usually by intangible substances, such as noises or odors, and usually involving the idea of continuance or recurrence over a considerable period of time. I.C.A. S 657.1.	Nuisance and trespass are related doctrines, but there are differences between them. On the one hand, a claim of trespass involves "an actionable invasion of interests in the exclusive possession of land," and "an actual invasion by tangible matter." On the other hand, a claim of nuisance is "an actionable invasion of interests in the use and enjoyment of land," the invasion "is usually by intangible substances, such as noises or odors," and "[i]t usually involves the idea of continuance or recurrence over a considerable period of time."	What are the differences between nuisance and trespass?
1995	U.S. v. Fink, 69 F.Supp. 610, 613 (D.Neb., 1946)	1	Congress by the Second War Powers Act intended to and did make a valid general delegation to the President of authority to allocate, ration and control scarce and critical materials upon conditions which he deemed necessary or appropriate in the public interest and to promote the national defense. Act June 28, 1940, S 2(a) as amended 50 U.S.C.A.Appendix, S 1152(a).	That Congress, by the previously quoted provisions of Title III of the Second War Powers Act, intended to and did make a valid general delegation to the President of authority and power to allocate, ration and control scarce and critical materials upon conditions which he deemed 'Necessary or appropriate in the public interest and to promote the national defense' may not be doubted.	Is it unconstitutional for Congress to invest the President with the power of allocation?

1996	Red Hill Farm Trust v. Schregardus, 102 Ohio App.3d 90, 94-95 (Ohio App. 10 Dist.,1995)	1	In reviewing decision of Director of Ohio Environmental Protection Agency (OEPA), Environmental Board of Review (EBR) is limited to considering whether director's action was unreasonable or unlawful, given evidence presented at de novo hearing, and EBR may not substitute its judgment for that of director as to factual determinations, whereas appellate court is charged with determining whether EBR's decision concerning reasonableness and lawfulness of Director's decision is supported by reliable, probative and substantive evidence and is in accordance with law. R.C. S 3745.06.	Preliminarily, in reviewing a decision of the director, the EBR is limited to considering whether the director's action was unreasonable or unlawful, given the evidence presented at the de novo hearing; it may not substitute its judgment for that of the director as to factual determinations. CECOS Internatl., Inc. v. Shank (1992), 79 Ohio App.3d 1, 6, 606 N.E.2d 973, 977; see R.C. 3745.05. In contrast, an appellate court is charged with determining whether the EBR's decision concerning the reasonableness and lawfulness of the director's decision is supported by reliable, probative and substantial evidence and is in accordance with law. Id.; see R.C. 3745.06.	Can the Environmental Board of Review (EBR) substitute its judgment for that of the Director of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) as to factual issues in de novo hearings?
1997	Ogden v. Association of United States Army, 177 F. Supp. 498, 502 (D.D.C, 1959)	1	The modern American law of libel has adopted the "single publication rule", and it is the prevailing American doctrine that publication of a book, periodical or newspaper containing defamatory matter gives rise to but one cause of action for libel, which accrues at time of original publication, and statute of limitations runs from that date and it is no longer the law that every sale or delivery of a copy of the publication creates a new cause of action.	From the foregoing discussion the conclusion is inescapable that the modern American law of libel has adopted the so-called 'single publication' rule; and, therefore, this principle must be deemed a part of the common law of the District of Columbia. In other words, it is the prevailing American doctrine that the publication of a book, periodical, or newspaper containing defamatory matter gives rise to but one cause of action for libel, which accrues at the time of the original publication, and that the statute of limitations runs from that date. It is no longer the law that every sale or delivery of a copy of the publication creates a new cause of action.	What is the single publication rule in defamation law?
1998	Robinson v. Salazar, 838 F. Supp. 2d 1006, 1027-1028 (E.D.Cal., 2012)	26	To establish a prima facie case for violation of the Indian Nonintercourse Act, an Indian tribe is required to allege that (1) it is an Indian tribe, (2) the land in question is tribal land, (3) the sovereign has never consented to or approved the alienation of this tribal land, and (4) the trust relationship between the United States and the tribe has not been terminated or abandoned. 25 U.S.C.A. S 177.	To establish a prima facie case for violation of the Indian Nonintercourse Act, an Indian tribe is required to allege that (1) it is an Indian tribe, (2) the land in *1028 question is tribal land, (3) the sovereign has never consented to or approved the alienation of this tribal land, and (4) the trust relationship between the United States and the tribe has not been terminated or abandoned.	What are the elements to prove a prima facie case for violation of the Indian Nonintercourse Act?

1999	Brentwood Med. Assocs. v. United Mine Workers of Am., 396 F.3d 237, 238-39 (3rd Cir. 2005)	1	Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) codifies Congress' desire to uphold private arbitration agreements that produce prompt and fair dispute resolution without involving courts; in furtherance of this interest, court must scrupulously honor bargains implicit in arbitration agreements and interfere only when award is severely problematic. 9 U.S.C.A. § 1 et seq.	The Federal Arbitration Act codifies Congress' desire to uphold private arbitration agreements that produce prompt and fair dispute resolution without involving the courts. In furtherance of this interest, a court must scrupulously honor the *239 bargains implicit in such agreements and interfere only when an award is severely problematic.	When will courts interfere with arbitration agreements?
2001	Int'l Bhd. of Teamsters v. Amerijet Int'l, 904 F. Supp. 2d 1278, 1282 (S.D. Fla. 2012)	5	Since minor disputes must be resolved only through the RLA mechanisms, including the carrier's internal dispute-resolution processes and an adjustment board established by the employer and the unions, federal courts lack subject matter jurisdiction over such disputes. Railway Labor Act, § 1 et seq., 45 U.S.C.A. § 151 et seq.	Since minor disputes "must be resolved only through the RLA mechanisms, including the carrier's internal dispute-resolution processes and an adjustment board established by the employer and the unions," federal courts lack subject matter jurisdiction over such disputes.	"If the grievances under the Railway Labor Acts (RLA) mandatory arbitral mechanism are minor disputes, should those be resolved only through the RLA mechanisms?"
2002	In re Pihl, 560 B.R. 1, 9 (D.Mass. 2016)	8	In deciding whether equitable subrogation applies, Massachusetts courts look for the presence of the following factors: (1) that alleged subrogee made payment to protect his or her own interest, (2) that subrogee did not act as volunteer, (3) that subrogee was not primarily liable for the debt paid, (4) that subrogee paid off the entire encumbrance, and (5) that subrogation will not work any injustice to the rights of junior lienholder; however, not all factors need be present for equitable subrogation to apply.	Under Massachusetts law courts look to the following factors to determine whether equitable subrogation applies: (1) the subrogee made the payment to protect his or her own interest, (2) the subrogee did not act as a volunteer, (3) the subrogee was not primarily liable for the debt paid, (4) the subrogee paid off the entire encumbrance, and (5) subrogation would not work any injustice to the rights of the junior lienholder. Not all factors need be present for equitable subrogation to apply.	What are the factors that determine equitable subrogation?
2003	Flying Tiger Line v. Boyd, 244 F. Supp. 889, 892 (D.D.C. 1965)	8	Agency performing legislative function need not proceed on evidence formally presented at hearings, but may act on basis of data contained in its own files, on information informally gained by members of body, on its own expertise, or on its own views or opinions.	An agency performing a legislative function need not proceed on evidence formally presented at hearings. It may act on the basis of data contained in its own files, on information informally gained by members of the body, on its own expertise, or on its own views or opinions.	Does an agency performing legislative functions always have to proceed on evidence formally presented at hearings?
2008	Baker v. Pennsylvania Pub. Util. Comm'n, 14 Pa. Cmwlth. 245, 249 (1974)	2	Statutory scheme allows Public Utility Commission on filing of tariffs and without notice and hearing to permit rates to become effective pending decision concerning lawfulness of rates. 66 P.S. §§ 1148(b), 1150.	The statutory scheme is that the commission may, on the filing of tariffs and without notice and hearing, permit rates to become effective pending decision concerning their lawfulness.	Can the Public Utility Commission (PUC) permit rates to become effective or suspend them pending decisions concerning their lawfulness without notice or hearing?

2012	Matagorda Cty. v. Texas Ass'n of Ctys. Cty. Gov't Risk Mgmt. Pool, 975 S.W.2d 782, 785 (Tex. App. 1998)	7	Doctrine of "equitable subrogation" is given a liberal application and is broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, has paid a debt for which another was primarily liable and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter.	The doctrine of equitable subrogation is given a liberal application and is broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, has paid a debt for which another was primarily liable and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter.	Is equitable subrogation a broad doctrine which is given liberal application?
2013	Wilhite v. Schendle, 92 F.3d 372, 376 (5th Cir. 1996)	5	Under Louisiana law, "conventional subrogation" occurs when obligee receives performance from third person and in express terms subrogates that person to rights of obligee, even without obligor's consent; "legal subrogation" takes place by operation of law in favor of obligor who pays debt he owes with others and who has recourse against those others as result of the payment. LSA-C.C. arts. 1825, 1827, 1829.	"Conventional" subrogation occurs when an obligee receives performance from a third person and in express terms subrogates that person to the rights of the obligee, even without the obligor's consent.12 "Legal" subrogation takes place by operation of law in favor of an obligor who pays a debt he owes with others and who has recourse against those others as a result of the payment	Can subrogation be conventional or legal?
2015	Employers Ins. of Wausau v. Com., Dep't of Transp., 581 Pa. 381, 394 (2005)	15	Doctrine of "equitable subrogation" is a means of placing the ultimate burden of a debt upon the one who in good conscience ought to pay it and is generally applicable when one pays out of his own funds a debt or obligation that is primarily payable from the funds of another.	The doctrine of equitable subrogation is "a means of placing the ultimate burden of a debt upon the one who in good conscience ought to pay it, and is generally applicable when one pays out of his own funds a debt or obligation that is primarily payable from the funds of another."	"Does the equitable subrogation doctrine place the ultimate burden for discharging a debt or liability on the person or entity who, in good conscience, ought to pay?"
2016	Brooks v. Savitch, 576 A.2d 1329, 1331 (Del. 1989)	3	Surety which discharges obligation of principal becomes entitled to right of subrogation, to whatever security creditor has for enforcement of claim against principal, and to all rights, means, or remedies which creditor had for enforcing payment.	When a surety discharges an obligation of his principal, the surety becomes entitled by right of subrogation, to whatever security the creditor has for enforcement of his claim against the principal or to all the rights ... means or remedies which the creditor has for enforcing payment against the principal.	"Does a surety who discharges an obligation of the principal become entitled to the right of subrogation, to whatever security the creditor has for enforcement of the claim against principal, and to all rights, means, or remedies which the creditor had for enforcing payment?"

2017	Norcon Builders, LLC v. GMP Homes VG, LLC, 161 Wash.App. 474, 494 (Wash.App. Div. 1, 2011)	18	As an equitable remedy, subrogation is designed to avoid one person receiving an unearned windfall, i.e., the intervening lienholder through an advancement in priority, at the expense of another, i.e., the new mortgagee who paid the prior debt. Restatement (Third) of Property (Mortgages) S 7.6.	Prestance, 160 Wash.2d at 564-65, 160 P.3d 17. "As an equitable remedy, subrogation is designed to avoid one person receiving an unearned windfall, i.e., the intervening lienholder through an advancement in priority, at the expense of another, i.e., the new mortgagee who paid the prior debt." Bank of America, 126 Wash.App. at 714, 109 P.3d 863. In Prestance, our Supreme Court adopted the definition of "equitable subrogation" from 847 Restatement (Third) of Property: Mortgages 7.6 (1997).	Is equitable subrogation or subrogation designed to avoid a person receiving an unearned windfall at the expense of another?
2019	Frymire Eng'g Co., ex rel. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Jomar Int'l, Ltd., 194 S.W.3d 713, 715 (Tex. App. 2006)	3	The "equitable subrogation doctrine" allows one who involuntarily pays another's debt to seek repayment of that debt by the person who in equity and good conscience should have paid it.	The equitable subrogation allows a person, not acting voluntarily, who pays the debt owed by another to seek repayment of that debt by the person who in equity and good conscience should have paid it.	Does the equitable subrogation doctrine allow one who involuntarily pays another's debt to seek repayment of that debt by the person who in equity and good conscience should have paid it?
2020	Hunt v. Mobil Oil Corp., 410 F. Supp. 10, 25 (S.D.N.Y. 1975)	17	Public interest in the enforcement of the antitrust laws makes antitrust claims inappropriate subjects for arbitration; stay of antitrust judicial proceedings in favor of arbitration will not be granted where the arbitrators would be required to consider antitrust issues with respect to the controversy to be determined by them. Sherman Anti-Trust Act, S 1, 15 U.S.C.A. S 1.	It is now cardinal doctrine that the public interest in the enforcement of the antitrust laws makes antitrust claims inappropriate subjects for arbitration. As a corollary, a stay of antitrust judicial proceedings in favor of arbitration will not be granted where the arbitrators would be required to consider antitrust issues with respect to the controversy to be determined by them.	Does public interest in the enforcement of antitrust laws make antitrust claims inappropriate subjects for arbitration?

2021	Dillon v. BMO Harris Bank, N.A., 856 F.3d 330, 334 (4th Cir. 2017)	4	Arbitration agreements that operate as a prospective waiver of a party's right to pursue statutory remedies are not enforceable under the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) because they are in violation of public policy; under this prospective waiver doctrine, courts will not enforce an arbitration agreement if doing so would prevent a litigant from vindicating federal substantive statutory rights. 9 U.S.C.A. § 1 et seq.	Consistent with these contract principles, the Supreme Court has recognized that arbitration agreements that operate “as a prospective waiver of a party's right to pursue statutory remedies” are not enforceable because they are in violation of public policy. See Mitsubishi Motors Corp. v. Soler Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc., 473 U.S. 614, 637 n.19, 105 S.Ct. 3346, 87 L.Ed.2d 444 (1985); see also Am. Express Co. v. Italian Colors Rest., — U.S. —, 133 S.Ct. 2304, 2310, 186 L.Ed.2d 417 (2013); 14 Penn Plaza LLC v. Pyett, 556 U.S. 247, 273–74, 129 S.Ct. 1456, 173 L.Ed.2d 398 (2009); Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp., 500 U.S. 20, 28, 111 S.Ct. 1647, 114 L.Ed.2d 26 (1991). Under this “prospective waiver” doctrine, courts will not enforce an arbitration agreement if doing so would prevent a litigant from vindicating federal substantive statutory rights.	Is an arbitration agreement that operates as a waiver of a party's right to pursue statutory remedies enforceable?
2022	Cahill v. San Diego Gas & Elec. Co., 194 Cal. App. 4th 939, 955 (2011)	14	A writ petition that “may” be filed to challenge a good faith settlement determination is a permissive, not mandatory, means of challenging such a determination, and the availability of writ review, or the summary denial of a writ petition, does not preclude an appeal after a final judgment. West's Ann.Cal.C.C.P. § 877.6(e).	Based on our review of section 877.6(e)'s language and legislative history, and Main Fiber, O'Hearn, Maryland Casualty, and Wilshire, we conclude a writ petition that “may” be filed pursuant to section 877.6(e) is a permissive, not mandatory, means of challenging a good faith settlement determination, and the availability of writ review, or the summary denial of a writ petition, does not preclude *956 an appeal after a final judgment..	“Is a writ petition filed pursuant to section 877.6(e), a permissive mean to challenge a trial court's good faith settlement determination?”
2023	Consumers Union of U.S. v. State, 5 N.Y.3d 327, 354, 840 N.E.2d 68, 82 (2005)	6	Condition placed on land use is an “exaction,” and therefore an unconstitutional taking, if the condition lacks an essential nexus with the state interest for which it is imposed, and is not roughly proportional to the impact of the proposed development. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; McKinney's Const. Art. 1, § 7.	A condition placed on land use is an exaction, and therefore an unconstitutional taking, if the condition lacks an “essential nexus” with the state interest for which it is imposed (see Nollan v California Coastal Comm'n, 483 US 825, 837 [1987]), and is not “rough[ly] proportional[]” to the impact of the proposed development (see Dolan v City of Tigard, 512 US 374, 391 [1994]).	“Is a condition placed on land use an exaction, and therefore an unconstitutional taking, if the condition lacks an essential nexus with the state interest for which it is imposed?”

2027	Doe I v. State of Israel, 400 F.Supp.2d 86, 113 (D.D.C.,2005)	53	The act of state doctrine, which is a close cousin of the political question doctrine, prevents a court from deciding a case when the outcome turns upon the legality or illegality of official action by a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory.	A close cousin of the political question doctrine, the act of state doctrine prevents a court from deciding a case "when the outcome turns upon the legality or illegality ... of official action by a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory."	Does the act of state doctrine bar courts from deciding the legality of a foreign sovereign's public acts taken in its own territory?
2029	United States v. One Gulfstream G-V Jet Aircraft, 941 F. Supp. 2d 1, 11 (D.D.C. 2013)	12	The policies underlying the "act of state doctrine" precluding domestic courts from inquiring into the validity of the public acts that a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory include international comity, respect for the sovereignty of foreign nations on their own territory, and the avoidance of embarrassment to the Executive Branch in its conduct of foreign relations.	The act of state doctrine precludes domestic courts from inquiring into the validity of the public acts that a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory. McKesson Corp. v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 539 F.3d 485, 491 (D.C.Cir.2008); see Underhill v. Hernandez, 168 U.S. 250, 252, 18 S.Ct. 83, 42 L.Ed. 456 (1897) ("Every sovereign state is bound to respect the independence of every other sovereign state, and the courts of one country will not sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another done within its territory."); see also RESTATEMENT (THIRD) OF THE FOREIGN RELATIONS LAW OF THE UNITED STATES § 443 (1987). The doctrine applies when the relief sought or the defense interposed would require a court in the United States to declare invalid the official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its boundaries. W.S. Kirkpatrick & Co. v. Evtl. Tectonics Corp., 493 U.S. 400, 405, 110 S.Ct. 701, 107 L.Ed.2d 816 (1990). The policies underlying the doctrine include international comity, respect for the sovereignty of foreign nations on their own territory, and the	Does the act of state doctrine preclude domestic courts from inquiring into the validity of the public acts that a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory?
2030	Sarei v. Rio Tinto, PLC, 487 F.3d 1193, 1208 (9th Cir. 2007)	12	An action may be barred under act of state doctrine if (1) there is an official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory'; and (2) the relief sought or the defense interposed in the action would require a court in the United States to declare invalid the foreign sovereign's official act.	As a result, an action may be barred if (1) there is an "official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory"; and (2) "the relief sought or the defense interposed [in the action would require] a court in the United States to declare invalid the [foreign sovereign's] official act."	Can an action be barred under the act of state doctrine if there is an official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory?
2031	Pac. Merch. Shipping Ass'n v. Aubry, 709 F. Supp. 1516, 1518 (C.D. Cal. 1989), rev'd, 918 F.2d 1409 (9th Cir. 1990)	1	Coastal nation may exercise extensive control over "marginal or territorial sea," within three miles of nation's coast, but cannot deny right of innocent passage to foreign nations.	The second zone, measured seaward from the nation's coast, is comprised of a three-mile belt known as the marginal or territorial sea. A coastal nation may exercise extensive control over the territorial zone, but cannot deny the right of innocent passage to foreign nations.	"Can a coastal nation exercise extensive control over marginal or territorial sea, within three miles of the nation's coast, and deny the right of innocent passage to foreign nations?"

2034	Sarei v. Rio Tinto PLC., 221 F. Supp. 2d 1116, 1130-1131 (C.D.Cal., 2002)	23	Act of state doctrine precludes a United States court from adjudicating claims if doing so would require that the court invalidate a foreign sovereign's official acts within its own territory.	The act of state doctrine precludes a United States court from adjudicating claims if doing so would require that the court invalidate a foreign sovereign's official acts within its own territory.	Does the Act of state doctrine preclude a United States court from adjudicating claims if doing so would require that the court invalidate a foreign sovereign's official acts within its own territory?
2035	Credit Suisse v. U.S. Dist. Court for Cent. Dist. of California, 130 F.3d 1342, 1346 (1997)	7	Under current view of act of state doctrine, action will be barred only if (1) there is official act of foreign sovereign performed within its own territory, and (2) relief sought or defense interposed in action would require court in United States to declare invalid foreign sovereign's official act.	[7] Under this current view, an action will be barred only if: (1) there is an "official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory"; and (2) "the relief sought or the defense interposed [in the action would require] a court in the United States to declare invalid the [foreign sovereign's] official act." Id.	Is a claim barred by the act of state doctrine only if it involves an official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory?
2036	Filartiga v. Pena-Irala, 630 F.2d 876, 888 (2d Cir. 1980)	11	It is only where the nations of world have demonstrated that the wrong is of mutual, and not merely several, concern, by means of express international accords, that a wrong generally recognized becomes an international law violation within the meaning of the Alien Tort Statute. 28 U.S.C.A. S 1350.	It is only where the nations of the world have demonstrated that the wrong is of mutual, and not merely several, concern, by means of express international accords, that a wrong generally recognized becomes an international law violation within the meaning of the statute.	Does a wrong generally recognized become an international law violation within the meaning of the Alien Tort Statute (ATS)?
2038	Loftus v. Primero Mining Corp., 230 F. Supp. 3d 1209, 1229 (C.D. Cal. 2017)	12	The act of state doctrine in its traditional formulation precludes courts from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory.	"The act of state doctrine in its traditional formulation precludes the courts of this country from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory."	Does the Act of State doctrine preclude courts from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power commits within its own territory?
2039	Miller v. Forsyth Mem'l Hosp., 173 N.C. App. 385, 388 (2005)	2	A trial court's pretrial ruling on a motion in limine is merely preliminary and subject to change during the course of trial, depending upon the actual evidence offered at trial.	A trial court's pretrial ruling on a motion in limine is merely "preliminary and subject to change during the course of trial, depending upon the actual evidence offered at trial."	"Is a trial court's pretrial ruling on a motion in limine merely preliminary and subject to change during the course of trial, depending upon the actual evidence offered at trial?"
2041	Katiuzhinsky v. Perry, 152 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1294 (2007)	3	While trial judges ordinarily enjoy broad discretion with respect to the admission and exclusion of evidence in ruling on motions in limine, a court's discretion is limited by the legal principles applicable to the case.	"While trial judges ordinarily enjoy broad discretion with respect to the admission and exclusion of evidence in ruling on motions in limine [citation], a court's discretion is limited by the legal principles applicable to the case."	Do trial courts ordinarily enjoy broad discretion with respect to the admission and exclusion of evidence in ruling on motions in limine?
2042	Huber v. Rohrig, 280 Neb. 868, 869 (2010)	29	A motion in limine is but a procedural step to prevent prejudicial evidence from reaching the jury; it is not the purpose of a motion in limine to obtain a final ruling upon the ultimate admissibility of the evidence.	A motion in limine is but a procedural step to 595 prevent prejudicial evidence from reaching the jury. It is not the purpose of a motion in limine to obtain a final ruling upon the ultimate admissibility of the evidence.	"Is a motion in limine only a procedural step to prevent prejudicial evidence from reaching the jury, and whose purpose is to obtain a final ruling upon the ultimate admissibility of the evidence?"

2043	Swick v. Liautaud, 169 Ill. 2d 504, 521 (1996)	15	Trial judge has discretion in granting motion in limine and reviewing court will not reverse trial court's order allowing or excluding evidence unless that discretion was clearly abused.	A trial judge has discretion in granting a motion in limine and a reviewing court will not reverse a trial court's order allowing or excluding evidence unless that discretion was clearly abused.	Does the trial judge have discretion in granting motion in limine and reviewing court will not reverse trial court's order allowing or excluding evidence unless that discretion was clearly abused?
2045	Wilbourn v. Cavalenes, 398 Ill. App. 3d 837, 851 (2010)	11	The purpose of a "motion in limine" is to permit a party to obtain an order before trial excluding inadmissible evidence and prohibiting interrogation concerning such evidence without the necessity of having the questions asked and objections thereto made in the presence of the jury; in this way, the moving party is protected from whatever prejudicial impact the mere asking of the questions and the making of objections may have upon the jury.	The purpose of a motion in limine is to permit a party to obtain an order before trial excluding inadmissible evidence and prohibiting interrogation concerning such evidence without the necessity of having the questions asked and objections thereto made in the presence of the jury. [cite] In this way, the moving party is protected from whatever prejudicial impact the mere asking of the questions and the making of objections may have upon the jury.	Does a motion in limine permit a party to obtain an order excluding inadmissible evidence?
2048	In re Ryan N., 92 Cal. App. 4th 1359, 1374–75, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620, 632 (2001)	5	In order to obtain a conviction for aiding, advising or encouraging a suicide, it is necessary to establish all of the following essential elements: (1) the defendant specifically intended the victim's suicide; (2) the defendant undertook some active and direct participation in bringing about the suicide, such as by furnishing the victim with the means of suicide; and, finally, (3) the victim actually committed a specific, overt act of suicide. West's Ann.Cal.Penal Code S 401.	Thus, in order to prove a violation of *1375 section 401 it is necessary to establish all of the following essential elements: (1) the defendant specifically intended the victim's suicide; (2) the defendant undertook some active and direct participation in bringing about the suicide, such as by furnishing the victim with the means of suicide; and, finally, (3) the victim actually committed a specific, overt act of suicide.	"What are the elements required to establish a conviction for aiding, advising and encouraging a suicide?"
2049	Casa de Cambio Comdiv S.A. de C.V. v. United States, 48 Fed. Cl. 137, 143-44 (2000)	9	In illegal exaction cases, in contrast to other actions for money damages, jurisdiction exists in the Court of Federal Claims even when the constitutional provision allegedly violated does not contain compensation mandating language.	In illegal exaction cases, in contrast to other actions for money damages, jurisdiction exists even when the provision allegedly violated does not contain compensation mandating language.	"Does jurisdiction exist in illegal exaction cases, even when the Constitutional provision allegedly violated does not contain compensation mandating language?"

2050	Spectrum Stores v. Citgo Petroleum Corp., 632 F.3d 938, 954 (C.A.5 (Tex.), 2011)	17	The act of state doctrine overlaps in many respects with the political question doctrine, as it is rooted in constitutional separation-of-powers concerns; it recognizes the thoroughly sound principle that on occasion individual litigants may have to forgo decision on the merits of their claims because the involvement of the courts in such a decision might frustrate the conduct of United States foreign policy.	The doctrine thus overlaps in many respects with the political question doctrine, as it is rooted in constitutional separation-of-powers concerns. See Banco Nacional de Cuba v. Sabbatino, 376 U.S. 398, 425, 84 S.Ct. 923, 11 L.Ed.2d 804 (1964). It recognizes "the thoroughly sound principle that on occasion individual litigants may have to forgo decision on the merits of their claims because the involvement of the courts in such a decision might frustrate the conduct of [United States] foreign policy." "	Does the act of state doctrine prohibit United States courts from sitting in judgment of official acts taken by another country within its own borders that might frustrate the conduct of foreign relations by the political branches of the government?
2051	U.S. v. Labs of Virginia, Inc., 272 F.Supp.2d 764, 770 (N.D.Ill.,2003)	5	Act of state issues arise only when a court must decide-that is, when the outcome of the case turns upon-the effect of official action by a foreign sovereign. When that question is not in the case, neither is the act of state doctrine.	That is, act of state issues arise only when "a court must decide-that is, when the outcome of the case turns upon-the effect of official action by a foreign sovereign. When that question is not in the case, neither is the act of state doctrine." W.S.	Does an act of state issue arise only when a court must decide the outcome of the case turns upon-the effect of official action by a foreign sovereign?
2052	Int'l Tin Council v. Amalgamet Inc., 138 Misc. 2d 383, 386, 524 N.Y.S.2d 971, 974 (Sup. Ct. 1988)	2	Under Act of State Doctrine, even where sovereign immunity does not technically exist, certain international disputes more properly should be resolved by executive branch of United States government rather than by courts.	Under this doctrine it is recognized that even where sovereign immunity does not technically exist, certain international disputes more properly should be resolved by the executive branch of the United States government rather than by the courts.	Under the Act of State Doctrine should certain international disputes more properly be resolved by the executive branch of the United States government rather than by the courts?
2053	Drexel Burnham Lambert Grp. Inc. v. Comm. of Receivers for A.W. Galadari, 810 F. Supp. 1375, 1390 (S.D.N.Y. 1993)	11	Purpose of Act of State Doctrine is to avoid adjudication of actions that foreign states take on their own soil that might embarrass Executive Branch or interfere with foreign policy.	The purpose of the Act of State Doctrine is to avoid the adjudication of actions that foreign states take on their own soil that might embarrass the Executive Branch or interfere with foreign policy.	Is the purpose of the Act of State Doctrine to avoid adjudication of actions that foreign states take on their own soil that might embarrass the Executive Branch or interfere with foreign policy?

2054	de Sanchez v. Banco Cent. De Nicaragua, 770 F.2d 1385, 1389 (5th Cir. 1985)	1	Sovereign immunity is jurisdictional in nature, and thus if it exists, court lacks both personal and subject-matter jurisdiction to hear case and must enter an order of dismissal; in contrast, act of state doctrine merely requires that court, after exercising jurisdiction, decline to review certain issues, in particular, validity or propriety of foreign acts of state.	Unlike the act of state doctrine, sovereign immunity is not merely a defense on the merits—it is jurisdictional in nature . If sovereign immunity exists , then the court lacks both personal and subject matter jurisdiction to hear the case and must enter an order of dismissal . Verlinden B.V. v. Central Bank of Nigeria, 461 U.S. 480, 493 n. 20, 103 S.Ct. 1962, 1971 n. 20, 76 L.Ed.2d 81 (1983); Sheldon ex rel. Olsen v. Government of Mexico, 729 F.2d 641, 644 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 917, 105 S.Ct. 295, 83 L.Ed.2d 230 (1984). In contrast, the act of state doctrine merely requires that a court, after exercising jurisdiction, decline to review certain issues—in particular, the validity or propriety of foreign acts of state.	"Since sovereign immunity is jurisdictional in nature, does a court lack both personal and subject-matter jurisdiction to hear case and must the court enter an order of dismissal?"
2055	Sharon v. Time, 599 F. Supp. 538, 544 (S.D.N.Y. 1984)	1	Act of state doctrine provides that a United States court will refrain from examining validity of act of foreign state by which that state has exercised its jurisdiction to give effect to its public interests.	The act of state doctrine provides that a United States court "will refrain from examining the validity of an act of a foreign state by which that state has exercised its jurisdiction to give effect to its public interests."	Does the act of state doctrine provide that a United States court will refrain from examining the validity of an act of a foreign state by which that state has exercised its jurisdiction to give effect to its public interests?
2056	Outboard Marine Corp. v. Pezetel, 461 F. Supp. 384, 397 (D. Del. 1978)	12	In invoking act-of-state doctrine, which precludes courts of United States from inquiring into validity of public acts recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its territory, a litigant must establish that what is involved is (1) a public act (2) committed by a recognized foreign power (3) exclusively within its own territory.	The act-of-state doctrine "precludes the courts of this country from inquiring into the validity of the public acts of a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory." Banco Nacional de Cuba v. Sabbatino, 376 U.S. 398, 401, 84 S.Ct. 923, 926, 11 L.Ed.2d 804 (1964). A litigant, in invoking the act-of-state doctrine under Sabbatino, must establish that what is involved is (1) a public act (2) committed by a recognized foreign power (3) exclusively within its own territory.	In invoking act-of-state doctrine must a litigant establish that what is involved is a public act committed by a recognized foreign power exclusively within its own territory?

2057	United States v. Best, 172 F. Supp. 2d 656, 660 (D.Virgin Islands, 2001)	2	In addition to the "subjective territorial principle," by which a state has jurisdiction to prescribe law with respect to conduct that, wholly or in substantial part, takes place within its territory, United States recognizes five other principles of jurisdiction under international law by which a nation may reach conduct outside its territory: (1) the objective territorial principle; (2) the protective principle; (3) the nationality principle; (4) the passive personality principle; and (5) the universality principle. Restatement (Third) of the Foreign Relations Law of the United States § 402(1)(a).	As restated by the American Law Institute, the primary basis of extraterritorial jurisdiction recognized by the United States is the "subjective territorial principle," by which "a state has jurisdiction to prescribe law with respect to ... conduct that, wholly or in substantial part, takes place within its territory." RESTATEMENT (THIRD) OF THE FOREIGN RELATIONS LAW OF THE UNITED STATES § 402(1) (a) ["RESTATEMENT"]. The United States also recognizes five other principles of jurisdiction under international law by which a nation may reach conduct outside its territory: (1) the objective territorial principle; (2) the protective principle; (3) the nationality principle; (4) the passive personality principle; and (5) the universality principle. United States v.	Does the United States recognize principles of jurisdiction under international law by which a nation may reach conduct outside its territory?
2058	Quad City Bank & Trust v. Jim Kircher & Associates, P.C., 804 N.W.2d 83, 89 (Iowa, 2011)	2	A motion in limine serves the useful purpose of raising and pointing out before trial certain evidentiary rulings that the trial court may be called upon to make during the course of the trial and, if sustained, excludes reference or introduction of this evidence until its admissibility is determined by the trial court, outside the presence of a jury, in an offer of proof.	Thus, a motion in limine "serves the useful purpose of raising and pointing out before trial certain evidentiary rulings the court may be called upon to make during the course of the trial" and, if sustained, excludes reference or introduction of this evidence until its admissibility is determined by the trial court, outside the presence of a jury, in an offer of proof.	What is the purpose of a motion in limine?
2059	Delnick v. Outboard Marine Corp., 197 Ill. App. 3d 770, 777 (1990)	1	Application of doctrine of res ipsa loquitur is a question of law which must be decided in the first instance by the trial court, and it is proper function of trial court, at the pretrial motion stage, to determine appropriateness of res ipsa loquitur to facts of the case.	This procedure was proper as the application of the doctrine in a given case is a question of law which must be decided in the first instance by the trial court (Imig v. Beck (1986), 115 Ill.2d 18, 27, 104 Ill.Dec. 767, 503 N.E.2d 324), and it is the proper function of the trial court, at the pretrial motion stage, to determine the appropriateness of res ipsa loquitur to the facts of the case presented.	Is the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur a question of law that is determined at the pretrial motion stage?
2060	Katiuzhinsky v. Perry, 152 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1294 (2007)	3	While trial judges ordinarily enjoy broad discretion with respect to the admission and exclusion of evidence in ruling on motions in limine, a court's discretion is limited by the legal principles applicable to the case.	"While trial judges ordinarily enjoy broad discretion with respect to the admission and exclusion of evidence in ruling on motions in limine [citation], a court's discretion is limited by the legal principles applicable to the case.	"With respect to the admission of evidence in ruling on motions in limine, is a court's discretion limited by the legal principles applicable to the case?"

2061	Katiuzhinsky v. Perry, 152 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1294 (2007)	3	While trial judges ordinarily enjoy broad discretion with respect to the admission and exclusion of evidence in ruling on motions in limine, a court's discretion is limited by the legal principles applicable to the case.	"While trial judges ordinarily enjoy broad discretion with respect to the admission and exclusion of evidence in ruling on motions in limine [citation], a court's discretion is limited by the legal principles applicable to the case.	"With respect to the exclusion of evidence in ruling on motions in limine, is a court's discretion limited by the legal principles applicable to the case?"
2062	Manhattan Ice & Cold Storage v. City of Manhattan, 294 Kan. 60, 69 (2012)	6	In determining if a pretrial ruling on a motion in limine is justified, a district court should weigh whether the court will be in a better position during trial to assess the value and utility of evidence and its potential prejudice.	In determining if a pretrial ruling is justified a district court should weigh whether the court will be in a better position during trial to assess the value and utility of evidence and its potential prejudice.	"In determining if a pretrial ruling is justified, should a district court weigh whether the court will be in a better position during trial to assess the value of the potential prejudice?"
2063	Manhattan Ice & Cold Storage v. City of Manhattan, 294 Kan. 60, 69 (2012)	6	In determining if a pretrial ruling on a motion in limine is justified, a district court should weigh whether the court will be in a better position during trial to assess the value and utility of evidence and its potential prejudice.	In determining if a pretrial ruling is justified a district court should weigh whether the court will be in a better position during trial to assess the value and utility of evidence and its potential prejudice.	"In determining if a pretrial ruling is justified, should a district court weigh whether the court will be in a better position during trial to assess the utility of the potential prejudice?"
2064	Olson v. Sherrerd, 266 Neb. 207, 214 (Neb., 2003)	8	A "motion in limine" is but a procedural step to prevent prejudicial evidence from reaching the jury; it is not the purpose of such a motion to obtain a final ruling upon the ultimate admissibility of the evidence.	A motion in limine is but a procedural step to prevent prejudicial evidence from reaching the jury. It is not the purpose of such a motion to obtain a final ruling upon the ultimate admissibility of the evidence.	Is a motion in limine a procedural step to prevent prejudicial evidence from reaching the jury and whose purpose is to obtain a final ruling upon the ultimate admissibility of the evidence?
2066	State of N.Y. Natl. Bank v Gregorio, 328 N.Y.S.2d 799, 801 (Sup Ct, Dec. 16, 1971)	1	The fiction that the law maintains that insured is the real party in interest at the trial of underlying negligence action is only to protect the insurance company against overly sympathetic juries, but the reason for the fiction does not exist at pretrial stage of the litigation.	The fiction that the law maintains that the insured is the real party in interest at the trial of the underlying negligence action is only to protect the insurance company against overly sympathetic juries. Leotta v. Plessinger, 8 N.Y.2d 449, 461—462, 209 N.Y.S.2d 304, 312—313, 171 N.E.2d 454, 459—460. The reason for the fiction does not exist at the pre-trial stage of the litigation.	"Is the fiction that the law maintains i.e., that the insured is the real party in interest at the trial of underlying negligence action, only to protect the insurance company against overly sympathetic juries?"
2067	Kaufman v. Comm'n for Lawyer Discipline, 197 S.W.3d 867, 873 (Tex. App. 2006)	9	A motion in limine is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, prior to trial, certain evidentiary issues the court may be asked to rule upon.	A motion in limine is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, prior to trial, certain evidentiary issues the court may be asked to rule upon.	Is a motion in limine a procedural device that permits a party to identify certain evidentiary issues the court may be asked to rule upon?
2068	Premium Cigars Int'l, Ltd. v. Farmer-Butler-Leavitt Ins. Agency, 208 Ariz. 557, 572 (Ct. App. 2004)	39	A "motion in limine" filed in a civil case is generally used as a substitute for evidentiary objections at trial and as a means to exclude evidence from trial for violations of the disclosure rules.	57 A motion in limine filed in a civil case "is generally used as a substitute for evidentiary objections at trial" and "as a means to exclude evidence from trial for violations of the disclosure rules."	Is a motion in limine filed in a civil case a substitute for evidentiary objections at trial and a means to exclude evidence from trial for violations of the disclosure rules?

2069	People v. Alvarez-Garcia, 395 Ill. App. 3d 719, 733 (2009)	22	Three mental states or conduct that can accompany acts that cause a murder are: (1) a defendant can intend to kill or do great bodily harm to the victim, which is intentional murder; (2) a defendant can know that his acts create a strong probability of death or great bodily harm to the victim, which is knowing murder or strong probability murder; and (3) a defendant can attempt or commit a forcible felony other than second degree murder, which is felony murder. S.H.A. 720 ILCS 5/9-1(a).	In Illinois, the following are three mental states or conduct that can accompany acts that cause a murder: (1) a defendant can intend to kill or do great bodily harm to the victim (intentional murder), (2) a defendant can know that his acts create a strong probability of death or great bodily harm to the victim (knowing murder, also known as strong probability murder), or (3) a defendant can attempt or commit a forcible felony other than second degree murder (felony murder).	What are the mental states that can accompany the act of murder?
2070	Atl. Container Line AB v. Aref Hassan Abul, 281 F. Supp. 2d 457, 468 (N.D.N.Y. 2003)	17	To establish a right to recovery for trespass to chattels under New York law, a plaintiff must establish that the alleged trespasser acted for the purpose of interfering with the chattel, or acted with knowledge that such would be the result of his conduct; while the trespasser need not intend or expect the damaging consequences of his intrusion, he must intend the act which amounts to or produces the unlawful invasion, and the intrusion must at least be the immediate or inevitable consequence of what he willfully does, or which he does so negligently as to amount to willfulness.	Under the principle of law that allows recovery for a trespass to chattels, it is necessary that the defendant have acted for the purpose of interfering with the chattel, or what is almost the same thing, that he have acted with knowledge that such would be the result of his conduct. Trespass is an intentional harm at least to this extent; while the trespasser, to be liable, need not intend or expect the damaging consequence of his intrusion, he must intend the act which amounts to or produces the unlawful invasion, and the intrusion must at least be the immediate or inevitable consequence of what he willfully does, or which he does so negligently as to amount to willfulness.	How can a right to recovery for trespass to chattels be established?
2072	United States v. Alomia-Riascos, 825 F.2d 769, 771 (C.A.4 (N.C.), 1987)	2	Protective principle of international law permits nation to assert subject matter criminal jurisdiction over person whose conduct outside nation's territory threatens national interest.	The protective principle of international law permits a nation to assert subject matter criminal jurisdiction over a person whose conduct outside the nation's territory threatens the national interest.	"Under the ""protective principle"" of international law, is a nation permitted to assert jurisdiction over a person whose conduct outside the nation's territory threatens the nation's security?"

2076	In re Yanke, 225 B.R. 428, 434 (D.Minn. 1998)	8	Although the same business entity often serves as both insurer and surety, the alignment of parties in the two relationships gives rise to different legal consequences in subrogation; in the case of property and casualty insurance, the insurer indemnifies its insured from a loss, and upon payment gains the right to pursue the responsible third party, while under a bond, the surety indemnifies third parties from losses at the hands of its principal, and upon payment gains the right to recover from its own principal.	Though the same business entities often serve as insurers and sureties both, the alignment of parties in the two relationships gives rise to different legal consequences in subrogation. In the case of property and casualty insurance, the insurer indemnifies its insured from a loss, and upon payment gains the right to pursue the responsible third party. Under a bond, the surety indemnifies third parties from losses at the hands of its principal, and upon payment gains the right to recover from its own principal.	"If the same business entity often serves as both insurer and surety, does the alignment of parties in the two relationships give rise to different legal consequences in subrogation?"
2078	James P. Paul Water Co. v. Arizona Corp. Comm'n, 137 Ariz. 426, 429 (1983)	6	Once granted, a certificate of convenience and necessity confers upon its holder an exclusive right to provide the relevant service for as long as the grantee can provide adequate service at a reasonable rate. A.R.S. SS 40-281 to 40-285.	Once granted, the certificate confers upon its holder an exclusive right to provide the relevant service for as long as the grantee can provide adequate service at a reasonable rate.	Does the granted certificate of convenience and necessity confer upon its holder an exclusive right to provide services at reasonable rates?
2079	Miller v. City Hosp., Inc., 197 W. Va. 403, 407, 475 S.E.2d 495, 499 (1996)	8	Workers' compensation system benefits injured workers by providing benefits and full compensation through a basic "no-fault" system and protects employers from financial consequences of civil liability to injured employees.	Our workers' compensation system is supposed to benefit injured workers by providing benefits and full compensation through a basic "no-fault" system (Mandolidis v. Elkins Industries, Inc., 161 W.Va. 695, 700, 246 S.E.2d 907, 911 (1978)), superseded by statute as recognized by, Bell v. Vecellio & Grogan, Inc., 197 W.Va. 138, 475 S.E.2d 138 (1996)(hereinafter Bell II) and to protect employers "from the financial consequences of civil liability to injured employees."	Does the workers compensation system benefit injured workers by providing benefits and full compensation through a basic no-fault system and protect employers from the financial consequences of civil liability to injured employees?
2080	Kazanteno v. California-W. States Life Ins. Co., 137 Cal. App. 2d 361, 376 (Cal.App. 2 Dist.,1955)	10	Court of Equity will make final disposition which is governed by circumstances shown to exist at time decree is made, rather than at time of inception of the litigation, and a supplemental pleading is not necessary to such end.	Respondent correctly asserts that a court of equity will make a final disposition of the litigation governed by the circumstances as shown to exist at the time the decree is made rather than at the inception of the litigation, and a supplemental pleading is not necessary to that end.	Will the court of equity make a final disposition of the litigation governed by circumstances shown to exist at the time the decree is made?

2081	Nesbitt v. Gettys, 219 S.C. 221, 226 (S.C., 1951)	2	School districts have no inherent right of local self-government which is beyond legislative control, and legislature may, within constitutional limits, establish a new high school district without consent either of people affected or trustees of constituent districts.	It is equally well established that school districts have no inherent right of local self-government, which is beyond legislative control, Moseley v. Welch, 209 S.C. 19, 39 S.E.2d 133; and the Legislature may, within constitutional limits, establish a new high school district without the consent either of the people affected or the trustees of the constituent districts.	Do school districts have inherent right of local self-government which is beyond legislative control?
2082	Laidlaw Waste Sys. v. City of Phoenix, 168 Ariz. 563, 567 (Ct. App. 1991)	6	Government's exercise of its right to compete with businesses, that results in diminution and destruction of value of businesses within area, does not transform lawful competition into compensable taking. A.R.S. Const. Art. 2, S 17; U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	In addition, a government's exercise of its right to compete with businesses that results in the diminution or destruction of the value of the businesses within the area does not transform lawful competition into a compensable taking.	Does a government's exercise of its right to compete with businesses those results in the diminution or destruction of the value of the businesses within the area transform lawful competition into a compensable taking?
2083	Eagle Bus Lines v. Illinois Com. Comm'n, 3 Ill. 2d 66, 72, 119 N.E.2d 915, 919 (1954)	7	Provision of the Public Utilities Act that certificate of convenience and necessity shall not be construed to grant a monopoly or exclusive privilege, immunity, or franchise discloses the intention of the Legislature that mere existence of a certificate shall not preclude the granting of a second certificate. S.H.A. ch. 111 2/3, § 56.	The Public Utilities Act discloses the legislature's intention that a mere existence of a certificate shall not preclude the granting of a second certificate by its declaration that a certificate of convenience and necessity shall not be construed as granting a monopoly or exclusive privilege, immunity, or franchise. (Ill.Rev.Stat.1953, chap. 111 2/3, par. 56.)	"Can a certificate of public convenience and necessity be construed as granting a monopoly or an exclusive privilege, immunity or franchise?"

2084	Behr v. Hook, 173 Vt. 122, 127 (2001)	6	Standardized waiver-of-subrogation clause in a construction contract between private parties in relatively equal bargaining positions is intended to allow the parties to exculpate each other from personal liability in the event of property loss or damage to the work to the extent each party is covered by insurance; by shifting the risk of loss to the insurance company regardless of which party is at fault, these clauses seek to avoid the prospect of extended litigation which would interfere with construction.	The instant case concerns a standardized waiver-of- subrogation clause in a construction contract between private parties in relatively equal bargaining positions. Such clauses are intended to allows the parties "to exculpate each other from personal liability in the event of property loss or damage to the work to the extent each party is covered by insurance." IRMA v. O'Donnell, Wicklund, Pigozzi & Peterson Architects, Inc., 295 Ill.App.3d 784, 229 Ill.Dec. 750, 692 N.E.2d 739, 744 (1998). By shifting the risk of loss to the insurance company regardless of which party is at fault, these clauses seek to avoid "the prospect of extended litigation which would interfere with construction."	Are waiver-of-subrogation clauses intended to allow the parties to exculpate each other from personal liability?
2085	Smith v. H.C. Bailey Companies, 477 So. 2d 224, 230 (Miss., 1985)	2	Trial court's decision on motion for voluntary dismissal must consider effect that such action will have upon defendants and other plaintiffs, if any, and must insure fairness and protection for them; generally, voluntary dismissal should be permitted unless such prejudice will occur, other than prospect of another lawsuit. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(a).	The trial court's decision in disposition of a motion for voluntary dismissal must consider the effect that the action will have upon the defendants and other plaintiffs, if any, and must insure fairness and protection for them. Generally, a voluntary dismissal should be permitted unless such prejudice will occur, other than the prospect of another lawsuit, since a dismissal under Rule 41(a) is without prejudice, unless the order states otherwise.	"Should a trial court's decision on a motion for voluntary dismissal consider the effect that such action will have upon defendants and other plaintiffs, if any, and must insure fairness and protection for them?"
2087	Phelps v. Positive Action Tool Co., 26 Ohio St. 3d 142, 144 (1986)	1	Purpose of Workers' Compensation Act is not to make employer absolute insurer of employee's safety, but only to protect employee against risks and hazards incident to performance of his work. R.C. S 4123.01 et seq.	The purpose of the Workers' Compensation Act is not to make an employer 971 an absolute insurer of the employee's safety, but only to protect the employee against risks and hazards incident to the performance of his work.	"Is the purpose of the workers compensation act to make an employer an absolute insurer of employee safety, or to only protect employees against risks and hazards incident to the performance of his work?"
2088	Zundell v. Dade Cnty. Sch. Bd., 636 So. 2d 8, 12 (Fla. 1994)	8	Workers' compensation is administrative remedy designed to speed employee's compensation while insulating both employer and employee from costs and delays inherent in purely judicial adversarial proceedings.	Workers' compensation is an administrative remedy designed to speed an employee's compensation while insulating both employer and employee from the costs and delays inherent in purely judicial adversarial proceedings.	Is workers compensation an administrative remedy designed to speed the employees compensation while insulating both the employer and employee from the costs and delays inherent in purely judicial adversarial proceedings?

2089	Meadows Indem. Co. v. Baccala & Shoop Ins. Servs., Inc., 760 F. Supp. 1036, 1043 (E.D.N.Y. 1991)	9	While parties may not be compelled to submit commercial dispute to arbitration unless they have contracted to do so, federal policy requires district court to construe arbitration clauses as broadly as possible and any doubts concerning scope of arbitrable issue should be resolved in favor of arbitration.	While parties may not be compelled to submit a commercial dispute to arbitration unless they have contracted to do so, federal policy "requires us to construe arbitration clauses as broadly as possible," S.A. Mineracao Dea Trindade-Samitri v. Utah Int'l, Inc., 745 F.2d 190, 194 (2d Cir.1984), and "any doubts concerning the scope of arbitrable issues should be resolved in favor of arbitration."	Does federal policy favoring arbitration require courts to construe arbitration clauses as broadly as possible?
2090	Holiday Queen Land Corp. v. Baker, 489 F.2d 1031, 1032 (5th Cir. 1974)	1	A court exercising its discretion in considering a motion for voluntary dismissal must follow the traditional principle that dismissal should be allowed unless defendant will suffer some plain prejudice other than the mere prospect of a second lawsuit; and it is not a bar that plaintiff may obtain some tactical advantage thereby. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc. rule 41(a)(2), 28 U.S.C.A.	a court exercising its discretion in considering voluntary dismissal must: follow the traditional principle that dismissal should be allowed unless the defendant will suffer some plain prejudice other than the mere prospect of a second lawsuit. It is no bar to dismissal that plaintiff may obtain some tactical advantage thereby.	"In determining whether to grant a voluntary dismissal, should a court follow the traditional principle that dismissal should be allowed unless the defendant will suffer some plain legal prejudice?"
2091	Georgiades v. Di Ferrante, 871 S.W.2d 878, 880 (Tex. App. 1994)	2	Defensive pleading states affirmative right to relief, so as to bar plaintiff from taking nonsuit, if it alleges that defendant has cause of action that is independent of plaintiff's claim, upon which defendant could recover benefits, compensation, or relief, even if plaintiff abandons his or her own cause of action or fails to establish it; creative pleading that merely restates defenses in form of declaratory judgment action cannot deprive plaintiff of right to nonsuit.	A defensive pleading states an affirmative right to relief if it alleges that the defendant has a cause of action that is independent of the plaintiff's claim, and upon which he could recover benefits, compensation, or relief, even if the plaintiff abandons his own cause of action or fails to establish it. A creative repleading "that merely restates defenses in the form of a declaratory judgment action cannot deprive the plaintiff" of the right to nonsuit.	Is a plaintiff's right to take a nonsuit unqualified and absolute as long as the defendant has not made a claim for affirmative relief?
2092	New York Mortg. Tr., Inc. v. Dasdemir, 116 A.D.3d 679, 679, 985 N.Y.S.2d 86, 87 (2014)	1	In general, absent a showing of special circumstances, including prejudice to a substantial right of the defendant or other improper consequences, a motion for a voluntary discontinuance should be granted without prejudice. McKinney's CPLR 3217(c).	In general, absent a showing of special circumstances, including prejudice to a substantial right of the defendant or other improper consequences, a motion for a voluntary discontinuance should be granted without prejudice	Is motion for voluntary discontinuance generally granted absent a showing of special circumstances which includes prejudice or other improper consequences?
2093	Ex parte Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 248 S.C. 412, 421 (1966)	3	Where reasonably necessary in the promotion of justice, a court in the exercise of equity jurisdiction has inherent authority to require discovery of a chattel in the possession of the adverse party. Const. art. 5, SS 1, 15; art. 6, S 3; Code 1962, SS 10-7 to 10-10, 10-8, 26-501 to 26-512.	We join these authorities in holding that where reasonably necessary in the promotion of justice, a court in the exercise of equity jurisdiction does have inherent authority to require discovery of a chattel in the possession of the adverse party.	"Where reasonably necessary in the promotion of justice, does a court in the exercise of equity jurisdiction have an inherent authority to require discovery of a chattel in the possession of the adverse party?"

2094	Pasadena Metro Blue Line Constr. Auth. v. Pac. Bell Tel. Co., 140 Cal. App. 4th 658, 664 (2006)	1	Codified common law rules provide that when a public utility accepts franchise rights in public streets, it assumes an implied obligation to pay for the relocation of its facilities when necessary to make way for a proper governmental use, which obligation arises from the paramount right of the people as a whole to use public thoroughfares; the Legislature may grant a utility the right to compensation for relocating its facilities, but must do so specifically. West's Ann.Cal.Pub.Util.Code S 6297.	Section 6297 codifies the common law rules that when a public utility accepts franchise rights in public streets, it assumes an implied obligation to pay for the relocation of its facilities when necessary to make way for a proper governmental use. That obligation arises from the paramount right of the people as a whole to use public thoroughfares. (City of Livermore v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1997) 51 Cal.App.4th 1410, 1413, 59 Cal.Rptr.2d 852.)The Legislature may grant a utility the right to compensation for relocating its facilities, but must do so specifically.	What is the implied obligation assumed by a public utility accepting franchise rights in public streets?
2095	Mellone v. Lewis, 233 Cal. App. 2d 4, 13 (Cal. App. 1965)	5	Statute relating to sanctions which may be imposed for disobedience of discovery orders is not specifically applicable to pretrial orders, but does provide suitable method of practice harmonious with purposes of implementing and enforcing portions of pretrial order relating to evidence and discovery. West's Ann.Code Civ.Proc. § 2034.	Section 2034 of the Code of Civil Procedure provides for sanctions which may be imposed for disobedience of discovery orders. Although this section is not made specifically applicable to pretrial orders, it does provide a suitable method of practice harmonious with the purposes of implementing and enforcing the portions of the present pretrial order relating to evidence and discovery.	Is a statute relating to sanctions which may be imposed for disobedience of discovery orders specifically applicable to pretrial orders?
2098	Jacob Hartz Seed Co. v. Thomas, 253 Ark. 176, 179-80 (1972)	2	The public, as bearer of ultimate burden of compensation protection, has a material interest in minimization of risk of an injured employee becoming object of public charity or public relief. Ark.Stats. S 81-1319(l).	The public, as the bearer of the ultimate burden of compensation protection, has *180 a material interest in the minimization of the risk of an injured employee becoming the object of public charity or public relief.	"Does the public, as a bearer of the ultimate burden of compensation protection, have a material interest in the minimization of risk of an injured employee becoming an object of public charity or public relief?"

2099	Com. v. Fall River Motor Sales, Inc., 409 Mass. 302, 307–08, 565 N.E.2d 1205, 1209–10 (1991)	2	Continuance is appropriate if party opposing summary judgment motion shows that it cannot, without further discovery, present, by affidavit, facts essential to justify its opposition; one common reason for denial of continuance is irrelevance of further discovery to issue being adjudicated in summary judgment. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 56(f), 438 M.G.L.A.	A continuance is appropriate if the party opposing a summary judgment motion shows that it cannot, without further discovery, "present by affidavit facts essential to justify [its] opposition." Mass.R.Civ.P. 56(f), 365 Mass. 825 (1974). See Godbout v. Cousens, 396 Mass. 254, 262 n. 11, 485 N.E.2d 940 (1985); First Nat'l Bank v. Slade, 379 Mass. 243, 244–245 (1979). See generally Annot., *308 Sufficiency of Showing, Under Rule 56(f) of Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, of Inability to Present by Affidavit Facts Justifying Opposition to Motion for Summary Judgment, 47 A.L.R.Fed. 206 (1980). One common reason for the denial of a continuance in this context is the irrelevance of further discovery to the issue being adjudicated in summary judgment.	"Is continuance appropriate if a party opposing summary judgment motion shows that it cannot, without further discovery, present, by affidavit, facts essential to justify its opposition?"
2100	Shawe v. Elting, 157 A.3d 142, 150-151 (Del.Supr., 2017)	11	A party is not obligated to preserve every shred of paper, every e-mail or electronic document, but instead must preserve what it knows, or reasonably should know, is relevant to the action, is reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence, is reasonably likely to be requested during discovery and/or is the subject of a pending discovery request.	"A party is not obligated to 'preserve every shred of paper, every e-mail or electronic document, but instead must preserve what it knows, or reasonably should know, is relevant to the action, is reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence, is reasonably likely to be requested during discovery and/or is the subject of a pending discovery request.' "	"Is a party obligated to preserve what it knows, or reasonably should know, is relevant to the action?"
2101	Tober v. Hampton, 178 Neb. 858, 864 (Neb., 1965)	5	If at pretrial conference it appears there are issues which might be determinative of cause, although not then within the pleadings, they should be stated in pretrial order which should thereafter govern proceeding in that respect.	If at a pretrial conference it appears there are issues which might be determinative of the cause although not then within the pleadings, they should be stated in the pretrial order which should thereafter govern the proceeding in that respect.	"If at pretrial conference it appears there are issues which might be determinative of cause although not then within the pleadings, should they be stated in the pretrial order which should thereafter govern proceeding in that respect?"
2102	Hasenauer v. Durbin, 216 Neb. 714, 719 (1984)	1	Purpose of pretrial conference is to simplify issues, to amend pleadings when necessary, and to avoid unnecessary proof of facts at trial; to that end, litigants must adhere to spirit of procedure and are bound by pretrial order to which no exception has been taken.	The purpose of a pretrial conference is to simplify the issues, to amend pleadings when necessary, and to avoid unnecessary proof of facts at trial. To that end litigants must adhere to the spirit of the procedure and are bound by the pretrial order to which no exception has been taken.	Should litigants adhere to the spirit of procedure and are they bound by pretrial order to which no exception has been taken?

2105	Pleasant v. Pleasant, 97 Md. App. 711, 732–33 (1993)	25	Although party may choose to depose nonparty holder of documents rather than use request for production of documents, that option is not one that may be forced on party seeking discovery.	Although a party may choose to depose the non-party holder of documents rather than utilize a request for production of documents, that option is not one that may be forced upon the party seeking discovery.	"Although a party may choose to depose nonparty holder of documents rather than use request for production of documents, is that option not one that may be forced on a party seeking discovery?"
2106	De Courcy v. Am. Emery Wheel Works, 89 R.I. 450, 453 (1959)	1	The superior court has no inherent authority apart from statute to permit a party to a cause to examine, prior to trial, evidence in the possession or control of the opposing party.	It is well settled in this state that the superior court has no inherent authority apart from statute to permit a party to a cause to examine, prior to the trial, evidence in the possession or control of the opposing party.	"Does the superior court have an inherent authority apart from statute to permit a party to a cause to examine, prior to trial, evidence in the possession or control of the opposing party?"
2107	City of Prichard v. Moulton, 277 Ala. 231, 240 (1964)	19	Grant of continuance because of absent but subpoenaed witness is largely within trial court's discretion and his ruling will not be error unless palpable abuse is shown.	The matter of granting a continuance because of an absent, but subpoenaed witness, is largely within the discretion of the trial court. His ruling in such regard will not be error unless palpable abuse is shown.	Is a grant of continuance because of an absent but subpoenaed witness largely within a trial court's discretion and his ruling will not be an error unless palpable abuse is shown?
2108	State v. Patton, 84 S.W.3d 554, 556 (Mo. Ct. App. 2002)	3	When a continuance request is based upon the absence of a witness, it is required that the application show the materiality of the potential testimony, the particular facts the witness will prove, due diligence on the part of the defendant to obtain the testimony, and reasonable grounds to believe the attendance or testimony of the witness will be procured within a reasonable time. V.A.M.R. 24.10.	When a continuance request is based upon the absence of a witness, Rule 24.10 requires the application show the materiality of the potential testimony, the particular facts the witness will prove, due diligence on the part of the defendant to obtain the testimony, and reasonable grounds to believe the attendance or testimony of the witness will be procured within a reasonable time.	When will the absence of a witness be grounds for a continuance?
2109	Univ. of Texas Med. Branch at Galveston v. Estate of Blackmon ex rel. Shultz, 195 S.W.3d 98, 100 (Tex.,2006)	3	While the date on which the trial court signs an order dismissing the suit is the starting point for determining when a trial court's plenary power expires, a nonsuit is effective when it is filed. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 162, 329b.	While the date on which the trial court signs an order dismissing the suit is the "starting point for determining when a trial court's plenary power expires," a nonsuit is effective when it is filed.	"While the date on which the trial court signs an order dismissing the suit is the starting point for determining when a trial court's plenary power expires, is a nonsuit effective when it is filed?"
2110	Morgan Stanley Dean Witter Com. Fin. Servs., Inc. v. Sutula, 185 Ohio App. 3d 152, 155 (Ohio App. 8 Dist., 2009)	1	When a case has been properly voluntarily dismissed, the trial court patently and unambiguously lacks jurisdiction to proceed, and a writ of prohibition will issue to prevent the exercise of jurisdiction. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(A)(1).	"[W]hen * * * a case has been properly voluntarily dismissed pursuant to Civ.R. 41(A)(1), the trial court patently and unambiguously lacks jurisdiction to proceed, and a writ of prohibition will issue to prevent the exercise of jurisdiction.	"When a case has been properly voluntarily dismissed, does the trial court patently and unambiguously lack jurisdiction to proceed, and a writ of prohibition will issue to prevent the exercise of jurisdiction?"

2111	Joachim v. Travelers Ins. Co., 279 S.W.3d 812, 816 (Tex. App. 2008), rev'd, 315 S.W.3d 860 (Tex. 2010)	6	While the date a trial court signs an order dismissing the suit is the starting point for determining when a trial court's plenary power expires, a nonsuit is effective when filed. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 162.	While the date a trial court signs an order dismissing the suit is the "starting point for determining when a trial court's plenary power expires," a nonsuit is effective when filed.	"While the date a trial court signs an order dismissing the suit is the starting point for determining when a trial court's plenary power expires, is a nonsuit effective when filed?"
2112	In re Carolina Tobacco Co., 360 B.R. 702, 721 (D. Or. 2007)	22	"Tax" is: (1) involuntary pecuniary burden, regardless of name, laid upon individuals or property; (2) imposed by, or under authority of, the legislature; (3) for public purposes, including purpose of defraying expenses of government or undertakings authorized by it; and (4) under the police or taxing power of state.	A tax is (1) an involuntary pecuniary burden, regardless of name, laid upon individuals or property; (2) imposed by, or under authority of the legislature; (3) for public purposes, including the purposes of defraying expenses of government or undertakings authorized by it; and (4) under the police or taxing power of the state.	"Is tax for public purposes, including purpose of defraying expenses of government or undertakings authorized by it?"
2113	Mayor & City Council of Baltimore v. Vonage Am. Inc., 544 F. Supp. 2d 458, 464 (D. Md. 2008)	4	Under the Tax Injunction Act (TIA), the "classic tax" is imposed by the legislature upon a large segment of society, and is spent to benefit the community at large, while the "classic fee" is imposed by an administrative agency upon only those persons, or entities, subject to its regulation for regulatory purposes, or to raise money placed in a special fund to defray the agency's regulation-related expenses. 28 U.S.C.A. § 1341.	As Valero has explained, the "classic tax" is "imposed by the legislature upon a large segment of society, and is spent to benefit the community at large," while the "classic fee" is "imposed by an administrative agency upon only those persons, or entities, subject to its regulation for regulatory purposes, or to raise money placed in a special fund to defray the agency's regulation-related expenses.	Who is classic tax imposed upon?
2114	United States v. Menendez, 137 F.Supp.3d 709, 718 (D.N.J., 2015)	6	Under the stream of benefits doctrine, the bribery statute's quid pro quo requirement is satisfied so long as the evidence shows a course of conduct of favors and gifts flowing to a public official in exchange for a pattern of official actions favorable to the donor. 18 U.S.C.A. § 201.	To repeat, under the stream of benefits doctrine bribery's "quid pro quo requirement is satisfied so long as the evidence shows a course of conduct of favors and gifts flowing to a public official in exchange for a pattern of official actions favorable to the donor	How is bribery's quid pro quo requirement satisfied under the stream of benefits doctrine?
2115	State v. Sherwin, 127 N.J. Super. 370, 385 (1974)	10	Corrupt intent necessary to bribery conviction is supplied simply by showing that opportunity was used to perform a public duty as a means of acquiring unlawful benefit. N.J.S.A. 2A:85-14, 2A:93-6.	The necessary corrupt intent is supplied simply by showing that the opportunity was used to perform a public duty as a means of acquiring an unlawful benefit.	Is the corrupt intent necessary to bribery conviction supplied simply by showing that opportunity was used to perform a public duty as a means of acquiring unlawful benefit?
2116	Wheeler v. Green, 157 S.W.3d 439, 443 (Tex. 2005)	5	Undue prejudice, as element for withdrawing deemed admissions or for allowing a late summary-judgment response, depends on whether withdrawing an admission or filing a late response will delay trial or significantly hamper the opposing party's ability to prepare for it. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 166a(c), 198.3.	Undue prejudice depends on whether withdrawing an admission or filing a late response will delay trial or significantly hamper the opposing party's ability to prepare for it.	Does undue prejudice depend on whether withdrawing a deemed admission will delay the trial or significantly hamper the opposing party's ability to prepare for it?

2117	In re Estate of Klaas, 8 S.W.3d 906, 909 (Mo. App. 2000)	6	Trial court loses jurisdiction when a plaintiff voluntarily dismisses a case, without order of court and prior to introduction of evidence; trial court may take no further action as to the dismissed action and any step attempted is a nullity.	A trial court loses jurisdiction when a plaintiff voluntarily dismisses a case, without order of court and prior to introduction of evidence. The trial court may take no further action as to the dismissed action and any step attempted is a nullity.	"Does a trial court lose jurisdiction when a plaintiff voluntarily dismisses a case, without an order of the court and prior to the introduction of evidence?"
2118	Escude ex rel. Escude v. King Cty. Pub. Hosp. Dist. No. 2, 117 Wash. App. 183, 192-93 (2003)	7	After the voluntary dismissal of an action, a trial court retains jurisdiction to consider the defendant's motion for expenses if the motion is made pursuant to a statute or a contractual provision. CR 41(a)(4).	After the voluntary dismissal of an action under CR 41(a), a trial court retains jurisdiction to consider the defendant's motion for expenses if the motion is made pursuant to a statute or a contractual provision.	"After the voluntary dismissal of an action, does a trial court retain jurisdiction to consider the defendant's motion for expenses if the motion is made pursuant to a statute or a contractual provision?"
2119	Thor Industries v. Indiana Dept. of State Revenue, 60 N.E.3d 308, 313 (Ind.Tax, 2016)	9	Where a litigant's use of rule governing deemed admissions contravenes the rule's important purpose of more quickly and efficiently reaching a resolution based on the actual facts, the court may withdraw the admissions when the presentation of the merits will be subserved and the party benefiting from them is not prejudiced. Trial Procedure Rule 36(B).	In instances like these, where a litigant's use of Trial Rule 36(B) contravenes the Rule's important purpose of more quickly and efficiently reaching a resolution based on the actual facts, the Court may withdraw the admissions when the presentation of the merits will be subserved and the party benefiting from them is not prejudiced.	Can a court withdraw the admissions when the presentation of the merits will be sub-served and the party benefiting from them is not prejudiced?
2120	Flamm v. Hughes, 329 F.2d 378, 380 (2d. Cir. 1964)	3	Congress has great latitude in promulgating statutory scheme for compensation of workers who may suffer broad range of injuries in terms of duration and severity. Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, S 8(c), 33 U.S.C.A. S 908(c).	Congress enjoys great latitude in promulgating a statutory scheme for the compensation of workers who may suffer a broad range of injuries in terms of duration and severity.	Does Congress have great latitude in promulgating the statutory scheme for compensation of workers who may suffer a broad range of injuries in terms of duration and severity?
2121	Jentoft v. United States, 450 F.3d 1342, 1343 (Fed. Cir. 2006)	2	During times of national emergencies, the President may mobilize the National Guard, putting it in federal duty status and making its members available for military duties normally assigned to the active armed forces and armed forces reserves.	During times of national emergencies, the President may mobilize the National Guard, putting it in federal duty status and making its members available for military duties normally assigned to the active armed forces and armed forces reserves.	Can the president mobilize the National Guard putting it in federal duty status and making its members available for military duties?

2123	Stelly v. Papania, 927 S.W.2d 620, 622 (Tex., 1996)	1	Trial court does not abuse its discretion by allowing a party to withdraw and amend its original answers to a request for admissions if moving party shows that there is good cause, that party relying on the responses will not be unduly prejudiced, and that the withdrawal will serve purpose of legitimate discovery and the merits of case. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 169, subd. 2.	We consider whether a trial court abuses its discretion by allowing a party to withdraw and amend its original answers to a request for admissions. We hold that a trial court does not abuse its discretion when the moving party shows: (1) good cause; (2) that the party relying on the responses will not be unduly prejudiced; and (3) that the withdrawal will serve the purpose of legitimate discovery and the merits of the case.	"Does a trial court have discretion to permit a party to withdraw an admission if the party shows good cause, and if the trial court finds that the party relying on the admission will not be unduly prejudiced?"
2124	Indep. Tr. Corp. v. Stan Miller, 796 P.2d 483, 492 (Colo. 1990)	8	Pretrial conferences and orders are tools for simplifying issues with eye toward ultimately resolving lawsuits on the merits, not methods for avoiding trials altogether.	[8] Pretrial conferences and orders are tools for simplifying the issues with an eye toward ultimately resolving lawsuits on the merits, not methods for avoiding trials altogether.	"Are pretrial conferences and orders tools for simplifying issues with eye toward ultimately resolving lawsuits on the merits, not methods for avoiding trials altogether?"
2125	Batchelor v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 240 Ga. App. 366, 367 (1999)	1	Unlike an evidentiary admission, which may be contradicted, facts admitted via requests for admission are "judicial admissions" which are conclusive unless withdrawal is permitted by the trial court. O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(b).	It is true that unlike an "evidentiary admission," which may be contradicted, 69 facts admitted via requests for admission are "judicial admissions," which are conclusive unless withdrawal is permitted by the trial court.	"Unlike an evidentiary admission, which may be contradicted, are facts admitted via requests for admission ""judicial admissions"" which are conclusive unless withdrawal is permitted by the trial court?"
2127	Wheeler v. Green, 157 S.W.3d 439, 443 (Tex., 2005)	7	While trial courts have broad discretion to permit or deny withdrawal of deemed admissions, they cannot do so arbitrarily, unreasonably, or without reference to guiding rules or principles. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 198.3.	We recognize that trial courts have broad discretion to permit or deny withdrawal of deemed admissions, but they cannot do so arbitrarily, unreasonably, or without reference to guiding rules or principles.	"While trial courts have broad discretion to permit or deny withdrawal of deemed admissions, can they do so arbitrarily, unreasonably, or without reference to guiding rules or principles?"
2129	Collett v. Cordovana, 290 Va. 139, 145 (2015)	7	To recover for trespass to land, a plaintiff must prove an invasion that interfered with the right of exclusive possession of the land, and that was a direct result of some act committed by the defendant; any physical entry upon the surface of the land constitutes such an invasion, whether the entry is a walking upon it, flooding it with water, casting objects upon it, or otherwise.	[T]o recover for trespass to land, a plaintiff must prove an invasion that interfered with the right of exclusive possession of the land, and that was a direct result of some act committed by the defendant. Any physical entry upon the surface of the land constitutes such an invasion, whether the entry is a walking upon it, flooding it with water, casting objects upon it, or otherwise.	How can a plaintiff recover for trespass to land?

2130	Gulf Guar. Life Ins. Co. v. Connecticut Gen. Life Ins. Co., 304 F.3d 476, 487 (5th Cir. 2002)	11	Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) does not provide for any court intervention prior to issuance of arbitral award, even after court determines that some default has occurred, beyond determination of whether agreement to arbitrate exists and enforcement of that agreement by compelled arbitration of claims falling within scope of agreement. 9 U.S.C.A. S 1 et seq.	9 U.S.C. 4 (1999). The FAA does not provide therefore for any court intervention prior to issuance of an arbitral award beyond the determination as to whether an agreement to arbitrate exists and enforcement of that agreement by compelled arbitration of claims that fall within the scope of the agreement even after the court determines some default has occurred.	Does Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) provide for any court intervention prior to issuance of arbitral award?
2131	14 Penn Plaza LLC v. Pyett, 556 U.S. 247, 265-66 (2009)	3	The decision to resolve ADEA claims by way of arbitration instead of litigation does not waive statutory right to be free from workplace age discrimination; it waives only the right to seek relief from a court in the first instance. Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, S 2 et seq., 29 U.S.C.A. S 621 et seq.	The decision to resolve ADEA claims by way of arbitration instead of litigation does not waive the statutory right to be free from workplace age discrimination; it waives only the right to seek relief *266 from a court in the first instance.	Does the decision to resolve Age Discrimination in Employment Act claims by way of arbitration waive the statutory right?
2132	Cardiff Equities v. Superior Court, 166 Cal. App. 4th 1541, 1550 (2008)	5	A dismissal "without prejudice" necessarily means without prejudice to the filing of a new action on the same allegations, so long as it is done within the period of the appropriate statute of limitations. West's Ann.Cal.C.C.P. S 581.	"A dismissal 'without prejudice' necessarily means without prejudice to the filing of a new action on the same allegations, so long as it is done within the period of the appropriate statute of limitations.	"Does a dismissal ""without prejudice"" necessarily mean without prejudice to the filing of a new action on the same allegations, so long as it is done within the period of the appropriate statute of limitations?"
2133	Hawk v. Branjes, 97 Wash. App. 776, 782-83 (1999)	3	While a voluntary dismissal generally divests a court of jurisdiction to decide a case on the merits, an award of attorney fees pursuant to a statutory provision or contractual agreement is collateral to the underlying proceeding; as a result, the court retains jurisdiction for the limited purpose of considering a defendant's motion for fees. CR 41(a)(1).	While a voluntary dismissal under CR 41(a)(1) generally divests a court of jurisdiction to decide a case on the merits, an award of attorneys' fees pursuant to a statutory provision *783 or contractual agreement is collateral to the underlying proceeding. As a result, the court retains jurisdiction for the limited purpose of considering a defendant's motion for fees.	"Does a trial court retain jurisdiction, following landlords' voluntary dismissal of action to enforce terms of commercial leases?"
2135	Gendebien v. Gendebien, 668 S.W.2d 905, 908 (Tex. App. 1984)	3	Showing that failure to be represented at trial was not due to party's own fault or negligence is required in civil cases in which absence of counsel is urged as grounds for a continuance.	In civil cases in which the absence of counsel has been urged as grounds for a continuance, Texas courts have required a showing that the failure to be represented at trial was not due to the party's own fault or negligence.	Is showing that failure to be represented at trial not due to party's own fault or negligence is required in civil cases in which absence of counsel is urged as grounds for a continuance?

2136	Ruiz v. Nicolas Trevino Forwarding Agency, 888 S.W.2d 86, 88 (Tex. App. 1994)	2	If party to whom request for admissions is directed does not properly respond within 30 days after service of request, subject of requests are deemed admitted and trial court has no discretion to deem or refuse to deem admissions admitted. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 21a.	If the party to whom a request for admissions is directed does not properly respond within thirty days after service of the request, the subject of the requests "are deemed admitted and the trial court has no discretion to deem or refuse to deem the admissions admitted."	"If a party to whom a request for admissions is directed does not properly respond within 30 days after service of the request, are subject to requests deemed admitted and a trial court has no discretion to deem or refuse to deem admissions admitted?"
2137	Bezou v. Bezou, 2015-1879 (La. App. 1 Cir. 9/16/16), 203 So. 3d 488, 500 (La. App. 2016)	15	The trial court has wide discretion in determining whether to award attorney's fees based on a party's failure to admit the truth of any matter that is later proved to be genuine. La. Code Civ. Proc. Ann. art. 1472.	The trial court has wide discretion in determining whether to award attorney's fees based on a party's failure to admit the truth of any matter that is later proved to be genuine.	Does the court have wide discretion in determining whether to award party's attorney's fees for opposing party's failure to admit genuineness of document or truth of any matter?
2138	McElveen v. City of New Orleans, 888 So. 2d 878, 884-85 (2004)	5	In determining whether the party failing to admit a fact had reasonable grounds to believe that it might prevail for purposes of determining whether to award attorney fees for that failure, the proper test is whether the party acted reasonably in believing that it might prevail. LSA-C.C.P. art. 1472.	In determining whether the party failing to admit a fact had reasonable grounds to believe that it might prevail for purposes of determining whether to award attorney fees for that failure, the proper test is whether the party acted reasonably in believing that it might prevail.	What is the proper test in determining whether the party failing to admit a fact during discovery had reasonable grounds to believe that it might prevail?
2141	Chandler v. Chandler, 536 S.W.2d 260, 262 (Tex. App. 1976)	1	Basis for continuance because of absence of attorney is matter within sound discretion of trial court and trial court's ruling will not be disturbed on appeal unless there has been showing of abuse of discretion.	The basis for a continuance because of absence of the attorney is a matter within the sound discretion of the trial court. The trial court's ruling will not be disturbed on appeal unless there has been a showing of an abuse of discretion.	"Since the basis for continuance due to absence of the attorney is a matter within the sound discretion of trial court, will trial court's ruling be disturbed on appeal unless there has been showing of an abuse of discretion?"
2142	Waste Water v. Alpha Finishing & Developing Corp., 874 S.W.2d 940, 943 (Tex.App. Hous. [14 Dist.],1994)	4	It is movant's conduct in discharging counsel, as related to his diligence in prosecuting or defending suit, that determines whether "good cause" exists for granting continuance. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 253.	It is the movant's conduct in discharging counsel, as related to his diligence in prosecuting or defending a suit, that determines whether good cause exists for granting a continuance.	"Is it a movant's conduct in discharging counsel, as related to his diligence in prosecuting or defending suit, that determines whether ""good cause"" exists for granting continuance?"
2143	Lamb v. Groce, 95 N.C. App. 220, 222 (1989)	6	If attorney has not given sufficient prior notice of his intent to withdraw, trial court must either grant a reasonable continuance or deny the attorney's motion to withdraw.	This rule presupposes that the attorney has given sufficient prior notice of his intent to withdraw. Williams and Michael, supra. If not, the trial court must either grant a reasonable continuance or deny the attorney's motion to withdraw.	"If an attorney has not given sufficient prior notice of his intent to withdraw, must a trial court either grant a reasonable continuance or deny the attorney's motion to withdraw?"

2144	Montalbano Builders v. Rauschenberger, 341 Ill. App. 3d 1075, 1080 (2003)	6	Although a party may constructively admit facts, even ultimate facts, by failing to respond to a request for admission, a party does not constructively admit legal conclusions by a failure to respond to requests that contain those conclusions.	Although a party may constructively admit facts, even "ultimate" facts, by failing to respond to a request for admission, a party does not constructively admit "legal conclusions" by a failure to respond to requests that contain those conclusions.	"Although a party may constructively admit facts, even ultimate facts, by failing to respond to a request for admission, does a party constructively admit legal conclusions by a failure to respond to requests that contain those conclusions?"
2145	McElveen v. City of New Orleans, 888 So. 2d 878, 884–85 (2004)	4	Attorney fees awarded for a party's failure to admit genuineness of documents or truth of any matter is the reasonable expense incurring in proving the truth of the requested admission. LSA-C.C.P. art. 1472.	Attorney's fees awarded for a party's failure to admit genuineness of documents or truth of any matter is the reasonable expense incurring in proving the truth of the requested admission.	"is attorney fees awarded for a party's failure to admit genuineness of documents or truth of any matter, the reasonable expense incurring in proving the truth of the requested admission?"
2146	Herzog v. Reinhardt, 2 Ariz. App. 103, 105 (1965)	8	In its discretion, court of equity may withhold giving one party remedy of contempt if he himself has violated any part of court's orders, but that does not in any way prevent court from enforcing its orders.	It is true that in its discretion a court of equity may and frequently will withhold giving one party the remedy of contempt if he himself has violated any part of the court's orders, but this rule does not in any way prevent the court from enforcing its orders.	"In its discretion, may a court of equity withhold giving one party a remedy of contempt if he himself has violated any part of a court's orders, but that does not in any way prevent a court from enforcing its orders?"
2147	In re Marriage of Kuntz, 2007-0601 (La. App. 4 Cir. 10/15/08), 998 So.2d 120, 124 (2008)	2	Since courts are to construe discovery statutes liberally and broadly, including those provisions addressing the scope of discovery, any relevant unprivileged information, whether or not admissible at trial and whether documents or tangible things, is discoverable. LSA-C.C.P. art. 1420 et seq.	Since courts are to construe discovery statutes liberally and broadly, including 5 those provisions addressing the scope of discovery, any relevant unprivileged information, whether or not admissible at trial and whether documents or tangible things, is discoverable.	"Since courts are to construe discovery statutes liberally and broadly, is any relevant unprivileged information discoverable?"
2149	Fawcett v. Altieri, 38 Misc. 3d 1022, 1025, 960 N.Y.S.2d 592, 595 (Sup. Ct. 2013)	6	Broad discovery on the issue of damages is allowed where a plaintiff states a general loss of the enjoyment of life due to injuries sustained as a result of an accident. McKinney's CPLR 3101(a).	The Appellate Division, Second Department allows for broad discovery on the issue of damages where a plaintiff states a general loss of the enjoyment of life due to injuries sustained as a result of an accident.	Is broad discovery on the issue of damages allowed where a plaintiff states a general loss of the enjoyment of life due to injuries sustained as a result of an accident?

2150	United States v. Evans, 572 F.2d 455, 480-481 (C.A.5 (Tex.), 1978)	35	Requisite intent necessary to sustain conviction for bribery is that official accept thing of value "corruptly"; however, under unlawful gratuity subsection all that need be proven is that official accepted, because of his position, a thing of value otherwise than as provided by law for proper discharge of official duty, and thus, latter subsection makes it criminal for public official to accept thing of value to which he is not lawfully entitled regardless of intent of donor or donee. 18 U.S.C.A. S 201(c, g).	The requisite intent necessary to sustain a conviction for bribery is that the official accept a thing of value "corruptly." However, under the unlawful gratuity subsection all that need be proven is that the official accepted, because of his position, a thing of value "otherwise than as provided by law for the proper discharge of official duty." Compare 18 U.S.C.A. s 201(c) with 18 U.S.C.A. s 201(g). Thus, s 201(g) makes it criminal for a public official to accept a thing of value to which he is not lawfully entitled, regardless of the intent of the donor or donee.	Under unlawful gratuity is all that need be proven that the official accepted a thing of value otherwise than as provided by law for the proper discharge of official duty because of his position?
2151	U.S. v. Kemp, 500 F.3d 257, 282 (C.A.3 (Pa.), 2007)	15	Key to whether a gift constitutes a bribe is whether the parties intended for the benefit to be made in exchange for some official action; government need not prove that each gift was provided with the intent to prompt a specific official act.	The key to whether a gift constitutes a bribe is whether the parties intended for the benefit to be made in exchange for some official action; the government need not prove that each gift was provided with the intent to prompt a specific official act.	Does the government need to prove that each gift was provided with the intent to prompt a specific official act to prove that a gift constitutes a bribe?
2152	Widmer v. Mod. Ford Tractor Sales, 244 Ark. 696, 702-03 (1968)	2	Motion to quash requests for admissions may constitute written objection thereto, and a failure to answer the requests in such case does not necessarily mean that the requests stand admitted.	We have also held that a motion to quash requests for admissions may constitute written objection thereto and that a failure to answer the requests in such case does not necessarily mean that the requests stand admitted.	"May a motion to quash requests for admissions constitute written objection thereto, and a failure to answer the requests in such a case does not necessarily mean that the requests stand admitted?"
2153	Grossmann v. Wagner, 161 Misc. 1, 2, 291 N.Y.S. 869, 870-71 (Sup. Ct. 1936)	2	Right to examination of defendant before trial is not usually denied unless complaint is so obviously bad that no cause of action may be spelled out from facts alleged and reasonable inferences that may be drawn therefrom.	The right to an examination is not usually denied unless the complaint is so obviously bad that no cause of action may be spelled out from the facts alleged and the reasonable inferences that may be drawn therefrom.	Is the right to examination of a defendant before trial usually denied unless a complaint is so obviously bad that no cause of action may be spelled out?
2154	Wilborn v. GE Marquette Med. Sys., Inc., 163 S.W.3d 264, 268 (Tex. App. 2005)	7	When a trial court allows an attorney to voluntarily withdraw, it must give the party time to secure new counsel and time for the new counsel to investigate the case and prepare for trial.	Therefore, when a trial court allows an attorney to voluntarily withdraw, it must give the party time to secure new counsel and time for the new counsel to investigate the case and prepare for trial.	"When a trial court allows an attorney to voluntarily withdraw, must it give the party time to secure new counsel and time for the new counsel to investigate the case and prepare for trial?"

2155	StreetScenes v. ITC Entm't Grp., 103 Cal. App. 4th 233, 243 (2002)	3	A court may order a defendant to produce evidence of his or her financial condition following a determination of liability for punitive damages even if the plaintiff has not attempted to obtain that information prior to trial.	Issod (2000) 78 Cal.App.4th 597, 609, 92 Cal.Rptr.2d 897, a court may order a defendant to produce evidence of his or her financial condition following a determination of liability 761 for punitive damages even if the plaintiff has not attempted to obtain that information prior to trial. Here, of course, respondents did attempt to obtain the information.	Can a court order a defendant to produce evidence of his or her financial condition following a determination of liability for punitive damages?
2159	Am. Seal-Kap Corp. v. Smith Lee Co., 154 Misc. 176, 177, 277 N.Y.S. 549, 550–51 (Sup. Ct. 1935)	1	Ordinarily, a defendant is entitled to full particulars of plaintiff's claim, and plaintiff is entitled to examine defendant before trial, particularly in case where many of facts upon which action is grounded are in possession of defendant.	Ordinarily, a defendant is entitled to full particulars of the plaintiff's claim, and a plaintiff is entitled to examine before trial, particularly in a case where many of the facts upon which the action is grounded are in the possession of the defendant.	"Is the defendant entitled to full particulars of plaintiffs claim and is plaintiff entitled to examine before trial, particularly where many facts upon which action is grounded are in defendants possession?"
2160	Bowes v. Nat'l City Bank of New York, 169 Misc. 78, 82, 6 N.Y.S.2d 803, 807–08 (Sup. Ct. 1938)	6	In absence of special circumstances, an examination before trial will not be ordered where its purpose is to compel the defendant to disclose to the plaintiff whether or not there is a cause of action and the party seeking the examination must show some reasonable ground for belief that the result of the examination will be to establish the matters which he seeks to prove which are material and necessary to the cause of action alleged. Rules of Civil Practice, rule 122; Civil Practice Act, SS 288, 289, 296.	Plaintiff cannot succeed without establishing those facts, but in the absence of special circumstances an examination before trial will not be ordered where its purpose is to compel the defendant to disclose to the plaintiff whether or not there is a cause of action, and the party seeking the examination must show some reasonable ground for belief that the result of the examination will be to establish the matters which he seeks to prove which are material and necessary to the cause of action which has been alleged.	"Will a plaintiff be permitted, in the discretion of the court, to examine the defendant before trial?"
2161	Crow-Crimmins-Wolff & Munier v. Westchester Cnty., 126 A.D.2d 696, 697, 511 N.Y.S.2d 117, 119 (1987)	4	Admissions of fact explicitly or implicitly made without prejudice during settlement negotiations are protected from discovery pursuant to public policy of encouraging and facilitating settlement. McKinney's CPLR 3101(b), 5701(c).	Admissions of fact explicitly or implicitly made "without prejudice" during settlement negotiations are protected from discovery pursuant to the public policy of encouraging and facilitating settlement	Are admissions of fact explicitly or implicitly made without prejudice during settlement negotiations protected from discovery pursuant to a public policy of encouraging and facilitating settlement?
2163	Citizens Cas. Co. of New York v. Hackett, 17 Utah 2d 304, 306 (1966)	2	Pretrial order controls issues of case where it is made without objection and no motion is made to change it, unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice. Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 16.	The pretrial order controls the issues of the case where it is made without objection and no motion is made to change it, unless it is modified at the trial to prevent a manifest injustice.	"Does a pretrial order control issues of a case where it is made without objection and no motion is made to change it, unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice?"

2164	People v. Munafo, 50 N.Y.2d 326, 331, 406 N.E.2d 780, 783 (1980)	3	In deciding whether an act carries public ramifications, courts are constrained to assess nature and number of those attracted, taking into account surrounding circumstances including time and place of episode under scrutiny.	In deciding whether an act carries public ramifications, courts are constrained to assess the nature and number of those attracted, taking into account the surrounding circumstances, including, of course, the time and the place of the episode under scrutiny	"In deciding whether an act carries public ramifications with respect to disorderly conduct statute, should the courts consider surrounding circumstances like time and place of the act?"
2165	State ex rel. Rosen v. Smith, 241 S.W.3d 431, 432 (Mo.App. E.D., 2007)	3	In non-jury cases, plaintiff may voluntarily dismiss his suit without a court order at any time prior to the introduction of evidence at trial, and, once plaintiff has done so, it is as if the suit were never brought. V.A.M.R. 67.02(a)(2).	In non-jury cases, a plaintiff may voluntarily dismiss his or her suit without a court order at any time prior to the introduction of evidence at trial. Rule 67.02(a)(2). Once a plaintiff does so, "it is as if the suit were never brought."	Can a plaintiff voluntarily dismiss a suit without court order prior to the introduction of evidence in non-injury cases and is it as if the suit were never brought at trial?
2166	Odaware v. Robertson Aerial-AG, 13 Ark. App. 285, 290 (Ark.App., 1985)	4	Amendments to pleadings should be allowed in nearly all instances without special permission from the court except where on motion of an opposing party the court determines either that prejudice would result or that disposition of the cause would be unduly delayed, and in those instances the court may strike such amended pleadings or grant a continuance of the proceedings. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 15(a).	ARCP Rule 15(a) and the Notes indicate that amendments to pleadings should be allowed in nearly all instances without special permission from the court except where on motion of an opposing party the court determines either that prejudice would result or that disposition of the cause would be unduly delayed. 627 In those instances the court may strike such amended pleadings or grant a continuance of the proceedings.	Should amendments to pleadings be allowed in nearly all instances without special permission from the court?
2170	Haddix v. Am. Zurich Ins. Co., 253 S.W.3d 339, 349 (Tex. App. 2008)	21	If a party has not exhausted its administrative remedies but has pleaded that it has, the trial court would not be bound by this allegation but could still dismiss a claim for lack of jurisdiction; conversely, if a party exhausts its administrative remedies but fails to properly or adequately plead this, the challenge is not to the trial court's jurisdiction but to the adequacy of the plaintiff's pleading.	Consequently, if a party has not exhausted its administrative remedies but has pleaded that it has, the trial court would not be bound by this allegation but could still dismiss a claim for lack of jurisdiction. The opposite is true as well. If a party exhausts its administrative remedies but fails to properly or adequately plead this, the challenge is not to the trial court's jurisdiction but to the adequacy of the plaintiff's pleading.	"If a party has not exhausted its administrative remedies but has pleaded that it has, would the trial court not be bound by this allegation but could still dismiss a claim for lack of jurisdiction?"
2171	U.S. v. Jannotti, 673 F.2d 578, 601 (C.A.Pa., 1982)	14	It is neither material nor a defense to bribery that had there been no bribe, public official might, on the available data, lawfully and properly have made the very recommendation that the briber wanted him to make.	As this court has previously held, it is neither material nor a defense to bribery that "had there been no bribe, the (public official) might, on the available data, lawfully and properly have made the very recommendation that (the briber) wanted him to make..	"Is it a defense against bribery that had there been no bribe, the public official might, on the available data, lawfully and properly have made the very recommendation that the briber wanted him to make?"

2172	U.S. v. Purdy, 144 F.3d 241, 245 (C.A.2 (Conn.),1998)	2	Kickbacks made at any point in government procurement process for purpose of improperly obtaining favorable treatment are prohibited by Anti-Kickback Act, regardless of whether or not offender knew of government involvement. Anti-Kickback Act of 1986, S 1 et seq., 41 U.S.C.A. S 51 et seq.	In short, kickbacks made at any point in the government procurement process for the purpose of improperly obtaining favorable treatment are prohibited by the Act, regardless of whether or not the offender knew of the government involvement.	Is a kickback that's made during the government procurement process for the purpose of obtaining favorable treatment still prohibited by the Anti-Kickback Act if the offender did not know government involvement?
2174	Szczablewski v. Gossett, 342 Ill. App. 3d 344, 349 (2003)	10	A party has a good-faith obligation to make a reasonable effort to secure answers to requests to admit from persons and documents within the responding party's reasonable control. Sup.Ct.Rules, Rule 216.	To ensure that the laudable purpose of Rule 216 is accomplished, a party has a good-faith obligation to make a reasonable effort to secure answers to requests to admit from persons and documents within the responding party's reasonable control.	Should a party have a good-faith obligation to make a reasonable effort to secure answers to requests to admit from persons and documents within the responding party's reasonable control?
2175	F. B. Walker & Sons v. Rose, 223 Miss. 494, 504 (1955)	3	To justify continuance upon ground of absence of party, it is necessary that application set forth with reasonable clearness material facts such party would testify to if present.	To justify a continuance upon that ground it was necessary that the application set forth with reasonable clearness the material facts appellant would testify to, if present.	"To justify continuance upon the ground of absence of a party, is it necessary that an application set forth with reasonable clearness material facts such a party would testify to if present?"
2177	Pritchard v. Pritchard, 92 Conn. App. 327, 339 (2005)	4	"Mootness" is a threshold issue that implicates subject matter jurisdiction, which imposes a duty on the court to dismiss a case if the court can no longer grant practical relief to the parties.	"Mootness is a threshold issue that implicates subject matter jurisdiction, which imposes a duty on the court to dismiss a case if the court can no longer grant practical relief to the parties.	"Is mootness a threshold issue that implicates subject-matter jurisdiction, which imposes a duty on the court to dismiss a case if the court can no longer grant practical relief to the parties?"
2178	Ex parte PT Sols. Holdings, 225 So. 3d 37, 42 (Ala. 2016)	2	An attempt to seek enforcement of an outbound forum-selection clause is properly presented in a motion to dismiss without prejudice for contractually improper venue. Ala. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(3).	"[A]n attempt to seek enforcement of the outbound forum-selection clause is properly presented in a motion to dismiss without prejudice, pursuant to Rule 12(b)(3), Ala. R. Civ. P., for contractually improper venue.	Is an attempt to seek enforcement of an outbound forum-selection clause properly presented in a motion to dismiss without prejudice for contractually improper venue?
2179	Brown Grp. Retail v. State, 155 P.3d 481, 483-84 (Colo. App. 2006)	2	Whether governmental immunity bars a claim is a question of subject matter jurisdiction that, if raised before trial, is properly addressed by the trial court as a motion to dismiss. West's C.R.S.A. S 24-10-108; Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(1).	Whether governmental immunity bars a claim is a question of subject matter jurisdiction that, if raised before trial, is properly addressed by the trial court as a *484 C.R.C.P. 12(b)(1) motion to dismiss.	"Whether governmental immunity bars a claim is a question of subject matter jurisdiction that, if raised before trial, is it properly addressed by the trial court as a motion to dismiss?"

2180	Brown-McKee v. Fiatallis Const. Mach., 587 F. Supp. 38, 39 (N.D. Tex. 1984)	1	Under the intertwining doctrine, where a party asserts several causes of action, of which at least one lies within the federal court's exclusive jurisdiction, the entire case must remain in federal court despite an arbitration agreement.	M/V Warschau, 731 F.2d 1141 (5th Cir.1984), the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals recently held that under the intertwining doctrine, where a party asserts several causes of action, of which at least one lies within the federal court's exclusive jurisdiction, the entire case must remain in federal court despite the presence of an arbitration agreement.	Does the intertwining doctrine require the entire case to remain in federal court despite the presence of an arbitration agreement?
2181	Ex parte PT Sols. Holdings, 225 So. 3d 37, 42 (Ala. 2016)	2	An attempt to seek enforcement of an outbound forum-selection clause is properly presented in a motion to dismiss without prejudice for contractually improper venue. Ala. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(3).	"[A]n attempt to seek enforcement of the outbound forum-selection clause is properly presented in a motion to dismiss without prejudice, pursuant to Rule 12(b)(3), Ala. R. Civ. P., for contractually improper venue.	"In a motion to dismiss without prejudice for contractually improper venue, can an attempt to seek enforcement of an outbound forum-selection clause properly presented?"
2182	Cnty. Hosp. v. Avant, 790 N.E.2d 585, 586 (Ind. App. 2003)	1	In reviewing a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the relevant question is whether the type of claim presented falls within the general scope of the authority conferred upon the court by constitution or statute. Trial Procedure Rule 12(B)(1).	In reviewing a T.R. 12(B)(1) motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the relevant question is whether the type of claim presented falls within the general scope of the authority conferred upon the court by constitution or statute.	Does a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction present a threshold question with respect to a court's power to act?
2183	Hagemann v. Illinois Workers' Comp. Comm'n, 399 Ill. App. 3d 197, 204-205 (2010)	9	An action shall be dismissed with prejudice if the plaintiff fails to exercise reasonable diligence to obtain service on a defendant after the statute of limitations expires. Sup.Ct.Rules, Rule 103(b).	An action "shall" be dismissed "with prejudice" if the plaintiff fails "to exercise *205 reasonable diligence to obtain service on a defendant" after the statute of limitations expires.	Does Rule 103(b) requires a plaintiff to act with reasonable diligence in effecting service of process on a defendant and if the plaintiff fails to act with reasonable diligence after the statute of limitations expires shall the cause of action be dismissed with prejudice?
2184	Parmley v. Pringle, 976 So. 2d 422, 425 (Miss.App., 2008)	6	While failure to serve process within 120 days of filing of complaint, absent proof of good cause, warrants dismissal upon court's initiative or upon motion, such dismissal should be made without prejudice, not with prejudice. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 4(h).	Failure to serve process within 120 days of the filing of a complaint, absent proof of "good cause," shall warrant dismissal upon the court's initiative or upon motion. M.R.C.P. 4(h); Heard v. Remy, 937 So.2d 939, 941 (8) (Miss.2006). However, Rule 4(h) dismissals should be made without prejudice, not with prejudice as the trial court did here.	Should dismissal for failure to serve process within 120 days of filing of complaint have been without prejudice?

2185	Abreu v. City of New York, 657 F. Supp. 2d 357, 361 (E.D.N.Y. 2009)	6	Where no good cause is shown for plaintiff's failure to serve all defendants to an action within 120 days after the filing of the complaint, the Court has the discretion to dismiss the complaint without prejudice or to order that service be made within a specified time. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 4(m), 28 U.S.C.A.	Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 4(m) requires that a plaintiff serve all defendants to an action within 120 days after the filing of the complaint. Where no good cause is shown, the Court has the discretion to dismiss the complaint without prejudice or to order that service be made within a specified time.	Should dismissal for failure to serve process within 120 days of filing of complaint have been without prejudice?
2186	Matthews v. Barrau, 150 A.D.3d 836, 838 (N.Y.A.D. 3 Dept., 2017)	5	If service of a summons and complaint is not made within the time provided, a court, upon motion, must dismiss the action without prejudice, or, upon good cause shown or in the interest of justice, extend the time for service. McKinney's CPLR 306-b.	If service is not made within the time provided, the court, upon motion, must dismiss the action without prejudice, or, "upon good cause shown or in the interest of justice, extend the time for service" (id.).	"If service of a summons and complaint is not made within the time provided, must a court dismiss the action without prejudice?"
2187	Stevens v. Watson, 16 Cal.App.3d 629, 633 (Cal.App. 1971)	1	Power of state to select subjects of taxation or to grant exemptions therefrom is very broad and legislative determination in such field must be sustained if there is any conceivable state of facts which would support it.	The power of the State to select the subjects of taxation or to grant exemptions therefrom is very broad and a legislative determination in this field must be sustained if there is any conceivable state of facts which would support it.	Can the legislative determination in the power of the state to select subjects of taxation or to grant exemptions be sustained if there is any conceivable state of facts which would support it?
2188	Abernathy v. City of Albany, 269 Ga. 88, 89 (Ga. 1998)	5	Recoverability of workers' compensation benefits is strictly matter of statutory construction because there is no common law right to such benefits; Workers' Compensation Act constitutes complete code of laws upon the subject, and ordinary rules of law do not apply. O.C.G.A. § 34-9-1 et seq.	The recoverability of workers' compensation benefits is strictly a matter of statutory construction, because there is no common law right to such benefits. Compare OB- GYN Associates of Albany v. Littleton, supra. "The ordinary rules of law do not apply to actions arising under that statute, but the act itself constitutes a complete code of laws upon the subject."	"Does the Workers Compensation Act constitute a complete code of laws, and is the recovery of workers compensation benefits strictly a matter of statutory construction?"
2190	Potter v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 996 P.2d 781, 783 (Colo.App., 2000)	6	In the context of automobile insurance exclusions, "residence" is determined on a case-by-case basis using factors such as intent and relative permanence; in general, residence denotes a place where a person dwells, and simply requires bodily presence as an inhabitant in a given place.	In the context of automobile insurance exclusions, residence is determined on a case-by-case basis using factors such as intent and relative permanence. In general, residence denotes a place where a person dwells. It "simply requires bodily presence as an inhabitant in a given place."	"Does ""residence"" simply require bodily presence as an inhabitant in a given place?"

2191	Bauer v. Douglas Aquatics, 207 N.C. App. 65, 68-69 (2010)	9	When a defendant supplements its motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction with affidavits or other supporting evidence, the unverified allegations of a plaintiff's complaint can no longer be taken as true or controlling, and a plaintiff cannot rest on the complaint's allegations, even if they meet the initial burden of proving jurisdiction, but must respond by affidavit or otherwise setting forth specific facts showing that the court has jurisdiction; however, a verified complaint may be treated as an affidavit if it (1) is made on personal knowledge, (2) sets forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence, and (3) shows affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein.	Appellant correctly notes that when a defendant supplements its motion with affidavits or other supporting evidence, the unverified allegations of a plaintiff's complaint "can no longer be taken as true or controlling [.] " Id. at 163, 565 S.E.2d at 708 (quoting *69 Bruggeman, 138 N.C.App. at 615-16, 532 S.E.2d at 218). In that case, a plaintiff cannot rest on the complaint's allegations, even if they meet the initial burden of proving jurisdiction, "but must respond 'by affidavit or otherwise ... set[ting] forth specific facts showing that the court has jurisdiction.'" Id. However, "[a] verified complaint may be treated as an affidavit if it (1) is made on personal knowledge, (2) sets forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence, and (3) shows affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein."	"When a defendant supplements its motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction with affidavits or other supporting evidence, can the unverified allegations of a plaintiff's complaint no longer be taken as true or controlling?"
2192	Newell v. TRW/Kelsey-Hayes Co., 145 Ohio App. 3d 198, 200 (Ohio App. 6 Dist., 2001)	1	A court may not dismiss a case for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction if the plaintiff has alleged any cause of action that the court has authority to decide; this determination is generally a question of law that an appellate court reviews independently of the trial court's decision.	A court may not dismiss a case for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction if the plaintiff has alleged any cause of action that the court has authority to decide. McHenry v. Indus. Comm. (1990), 68 Ohio App.3d 56, 62, 587 N.E.2d 414, 418- 419. This determination is generally a question of law that an appellate court reviews independently of the trial court's decision.	Can a court dismiss a case for lack of subject matter jurisdiction if the plaintiff has alleged a cause of action that the court has authority to decide?
2194	Cooperwood v. Farmer, 315 F.R.D. 493, 498 (2016)	4	Under Illinois law, the standard used in resolving a motion to dismiss for lack of diligence in service of process is not based on the subjective intent of the plaintiff but, rather, an objective one of reasonable diligence in effectuating service; this is a fact-intensive inquiry suited to balancing, not bright lines that considers the totality of the circumstances. Ill. Sup. Ct. R. 103(b).	Moreover, "[t]he standard used in resolving a Rule 103(b) motion is not based on the subjective intent of the plaintiff but, rather, an objective one of reasonable diligence in effectuating service." Kole, 325 Ill.App.3d at 950, 259 Ill.Dec. 649, 759 N.E.2d 129. This is a "fact-intensive inquiry suited to balancing, not bright lines" that considers the totality of the circumstances.	Is the trial courts determination of a plaintiffs lack of reasonable diligence in obtaining service on a defendant an objective one?

2195	Vasquez v. New York City Hous. Auth., 51 A.D.3d 781, 782 (N.Y. Sup. Ct., 2nd Dept., 2008)	2	In order to vacate default in appearing at a scheduled court conference, a plaintiff is required to demonstrate both a reasonable excuse for her failure to appear and a meritorious cause of action.	In order to vacate her default in appearing at a scheduled court conference, the plaintiff was required to demonstrate both a reasonable excuse for her failure to appear and a meritorious cause of action	"In order to vacate the default in appearing at a scheduled court conference, is a plaintiff required to demonstrate both a reasonable excuse for her failure to appear and a meritorious cause of action?"
2196	Clark v. Medina Gen. Hosp., 113 Ohio Misc. 2d 13, 15 (1999)	3	When service of process on a defendant has not been effectuated within one year of the filing of a complaint, the proper remedy for a trial court is to dismiss the action as to any such defendant against whom the case has not commenced. Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 3(A), 12(B)(2, 5).	When service of process on a defendant has not been effectuated within one year of the filing of a complaint, the proper remedy for a trial court is to dismiss the action as to any such defendant against whom the case has not commenced.	"When service of process on a defendant has not been effectuated within one year of the filing of a complaint, is the proper remedy for a trial court to dismiss the action as to any such defendant?"
2197	Gautreaux v. Maya, 112 So. 3d 146, 149 (Fla. App. 2013)	6	Because dismissal for fraud on court sounds death knell of lawsuit, courts must reserve such strong medicine for instances where defaulting party's misconduct is correspondingly egregious.	Because dismissal sounds the death knell of the lawsuit, courts must reserve such strong medicine for instances where the defaulting party's misconduct is correspondingly egregious....	"Because dismissal for fraud on court sounds death knell of lawsuit, should courts reserve such strong medicine for instances where a defaulting party's misconduct is correspondingly egregious?"
2198	Rowen v. Le Mars Mut. Ins. Co. of Iowa, 282 N.W.2d 639, 646 (Iowa, 1979)	6	Rule authorizing trial court to enter appropriate orders for the subsequent course of the action includes the inherent power to enforce those orders by appropriate sanctions. Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 138.	Pre-trial procedure is governed by rules 135-39, Iowa R.Civ.P. Rule 138 specifically authorizes the trial court to enter appropriate orders for the "subsequent course" of the action. This includes the inherent power to enforce those orders by appropriate sanctions. Unlike the rules of discovery, there are no specific sanctions established by our pretrial rules.	Does the rule authorizing a trial court to enter appropriate orders for the subsequent course of the action include the inherent power to enforce those orders by appropriate sanctions?
2199	State ex rel. Missouri Coal. for the Env't v. Joint Comm. on Admin. Rules, 519 S.W.3d 805, 810 (Mo., 2017)	5	A trial court properly dismisses a cause of action as moot when the question presented for decision seeks a judgment upon some matter which, if the judgment was rendered, would not have any practical effect upon any then existing controversy.	A trial court properly dismisses a cause of action as moot "when the question presented for decision seeks a judgment upon some matter which, if the judgment was rendered, would not have any practical effect upon any then existing controversy."	Can a court dismiss a cause of action as moot when the question presented for decision seeks a judgment upon some matter?
2201	Professional Firefighters Ass'n of Omaha, Local 385, AFL-CIO CLC v. City of Omaha, 282 Neb. 200, 200 (2011)	8	Unless an exception applies, a court must dismiss a moot case on appeal when changed circumstances have precluded it from providing any meaningful relief because the litigants no longer have a legally cognizable interest in the dispute's resolution.	Unless an exception applies, a court or tribunal must dismiss a moot case when changed circumstances have precluded it from providing any meaningful relief because the litigants no longer have a legally cognizable interest in the dispute's resolution.	Should a court dismiss a moot case if the litigants no longer have a legally cognizable interest in the dispute's resolution?

2203	Underwood v. Alabama State Bd. of Educ., 39 So. 3d 120, 128 (Ala. 2009)	24	If a case has become moot, or if a judgment would not accomplish an end recognized as sufficient in law, there is no necessity for the judgment, the court will decline to consider the merits, and the court will dismiss the case.	[I]f a case has become moot, or [if a] judgment would not accomplish an end recognized as sufficient in law, there is no necessity for the judgment, the court will decline to consider the merits, and [the court will] dismiss the case.'	"When there is no necessity for the judgment because the case has become moot, or if a judgment would not accomplish an end recognized as sufficient in law, will the court decline to consider the merits and dismiss the case?"
2204	Schindler v. Bank of New York Mellon Tr. Co., 190 So. 3d 102, 104 (Fla.App. 4 Dist., 2015)	3	A trial court has the discretion to dismiss an action for an egregious violation of an order requiring that an amended complaint be filed within a certain time frame. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.420(b).	4th DCA 1995), a trial court has the discretion to dismiss an action for an egregious violation of an order requiring that an amended complaint be filed within a certain time frame.	Does a trial court have the discretion to dismiss an action for an egregious violation of an order requiring that an amended complaint be filed within a certain time frame?
2205	Perez v. Astoria Gen. Hosp., Inc., 260 A.D.2d 457, 457, 688 N.Y.S.2d 195, 196 (1999)	1	To vacate dismissal of complaint due to plaintiff's default in appearing at a scheduled pretrial conference, plaintiff must proffer evidence of a reasonable excuse for the default, and a meritorious cause of action. McKinney's CPLR 2005.	To vacate the dismissal of the complaint insofar as asserted against the appellants due to their default in appearing at a scheduled pretrial conference, the plaintiffs had to proffer evidence of a reasonable excuse for the default and a meritorious cause of action	"To vacate the dismissal of complaint due to a plaintiff's default in appearing at a scheduled pretrial conference, must the plaintiff proffer evidence of a reasonable excuse for the default?"
2207	Fisher v. A.G. Becker Paribas Inc., 791 F.2d 691, 698 (9th Cir. 1986)	9	Federal Arbitration Act requires district courts to compel arbitration even where result would be possibly inefficient maintenance of separate proceedings in different forums. 9 U.S.C.A. § 1 et seq.	The Arbitration Act requires district courts to compel arbitration even where the result would be the possibly inefficient maintenance of separate proceedings in different forums.	Does the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) require courts to compel arbitration even where the result would be the possibly inefficient maintenance of separate proceedings in different forums?
2211	Buckner v. Lower Florida Keys Hosp. Dist., 403 So. 2d 1025, 1027 (Fla. App. 1981)	1	Although desirable end of pleading is to create issue and thus dispose of cause of action on merits, when privilege to amend has been abused in violation of orders of court, ultimate sanction of dismissal is sometimes appropriate.	Although the desirable end of pleading is to create an issue and thus dispose of a cause of action on the merits, when the privilege to amend has been abused in violation of orders of court the ultimate sanction of dismissal is sometimes appropriate.	"When the privilege to amend has been abused in violation of orders of court, is the ultimate sanction of dismissal appropriate?"
2212	Sheen v. The Time Inc. Magazine Co., 817 So. 2d 974, 977 (Fla.App. 3 Dist., 2002)	5	Trial court may dismiss an action for failure to prosecute if the only activity within the year is discovery taken in bad faith and without any design to move the case forward toward conclusion on the merits. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.420(e).	The test that emerged from Anthony allows a trial court to dismiss an action if the only activity within the year is discovery taken in bad faith and "without any design 'to move the case forward toward a conclusion on the merits.' "	Can a trial court dismiss an action for failure to prosecute if the only activity within the year is discovery taken in bad faith?

2214	Will v. Frontier Contractors, Inc., 121 Wash. App. 119, 129, 89 P.3d 242, 247 (2004)	10	Dismissal is an appropriate remedy where the record indicates that (1) the party's refusal to obey a court order was willful or deliberate, (2) the party's actions substantially prejudiced the opponent's ability to prepare for trial, and (3) the trial court explicitly considered whether a lesser sanction would probably have sufficed; however, courts do not resort to dismissal lightly. CR 41(b).	Dismissal is an appropriate remedy where the record indicates that "(1) the party's refusal to obey [a court] order was willful or deliberate, (2) the party's actions substantially prejudiced the opponent's ability to prepare for trial, and (3) the trial court explicitly considered whether a lesser sanction would probably have sufficed". But Washington courts do not resort to dismissal lightly.	When is a dismissal an appropriate remedy when indicated on the record?
2215	Fletcher v. Univ. Hosps. of Cleveland, 172 Ohio App. 3d 153, 157 (2007)	4	If the plaintiff fails to comply with an order to provide a more definite statement, the court may strike the pleading to which the motion was directed, or make any other orders as it deems just, which would include involuntary dismissal with prejudice. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(E).	If the plaintiff fails to comply with an order to provide a more definite statement, "the court may strike the pleading to which the motion was directed, or make any other orders as it deems just, which 369 would include involuntary dismissal with prejudice	"If the plaintiff fails to comply with an order to provide a more definite statement, can the court strike the pleading to which the motion was directed?"
2216	Davis v. Byrd Meml. Hosp., 628 So. 2d 1284, 1286-87 (La. App. 1993)	2	Trial judge is vested with much discretion in selecting appropriate sanctions for failure to comply with pretrial and discovery orders, and its choice will not be reversed absent clear showing that it abused that discretion. LSA-C.C.P. arts. 193, 1551.	The law is well settled that, under LSA-C.C.P. art. 193 and art. 1551, the trial *1287 judge is vested with much discretion in selecting appropriate sanctions for failure to comply with pretrial and discovery orders, and its choice will not be reversed absent a clear showing that it abused that discretion.	"As with discovery sanctions, is a trial court vested with much discretion in selecting appropriate sanctions for violation of a statute outlining pretrial procedure?"
2219	Johnson v. Skarvan, 27 So. 3d 178, 179 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2010)	3	While a trial court undoubtedly has discretion after due consideration of the relevant factors to dismiss a complaint for noncompliance with a court order, the dismissal order must contain explicit findings of willful noncompliance.	While a trial court undoubtedly has discretion after due consideration of the Kozel factors to dismiss a complaint for noncompliance with a court order, the dismissal order must contain explicit findings of willful noncompliance.	"While a trial court undoubtedly has discretion after due consideration of the relevant factors to dismiss a complaint for noncompliance with a court order, should the dismissal order contain explicit findings of willful noncompliance?"
2220	Citizens Nat. Bank of Greater St. Louis v. Boatmen's Nat. Bank of St. Louis, 934 S.W.2d 6, 9 (Mo. App. 1996)	10	When facts establish willful, contumacious disregard for court's authority, applying sanctions such as striking pleadings, dismissing counterclaims, or entering judgment by default is within trial court's discretion.	Where the facts establish willful, contumacious disregard for the authority of the court, applying sanctions such as striking the pleadings, dismissing counterclaims, or entering judgment by default is within the trial court's discretion.	"Is applying sanctions such as striking pleadings, dismissing counterclaims, or entering judgment by default within a trial court's discretion?"

2221	Bivona v. Danna & Assocs., P.C., 123 A.D.3d 956, 957, 999 N.Y.S.2d 490, 492 (2014)	2	A motion to dismiss a cause of action based on a defense founded in documentary evidence may be granted only if documentary evidence utterly refutes plaintiff's factual allegations, thereby conclusively establishing a defense as a matter of law. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(1).	"A motion to dismiss a cause of action pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(1) may be granted only if 'documentary evidence utterly refutes [the] plaintiff's factual allegations, thereby conclusively establishing a defense as a matter of law' " (Indymac Venture, LLC v. Nagessar, 121 A.D.3d 945, 945, 995 N.Y.S.2d 145, quoting Whitebox Concentrated Convertible Arbitrage Partners, L.P. v. Superior Well Servs., Inc., 20 N.Y.3d 59, 63, 956 N.Y.S.2d 439, 980 N.E.2d 487).	Will a motion to dismiss a cause of action be granted if documentary evidence refutes plaintiff's factual allegations?
2222	Tech. Chemicals & Prod., Inc. v. Home Diagnostics, Inc, 793 So. 2d 1010, 1012 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2001)	2	Activity of record of any party is sufficient to toll the one-year time period governing dismissals for failure to prosecute when it is an affirmative act directed toward the disposition of the cause. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 1.420(e).	Activity of record of any party is sufficient to toll the one-year time period when it is an affirmative act directed toward the disposition of the cause.	Is an activity of record of any party sufficient to toll the one-year time period governing dismissals for failure to prosecute when it is an affirmative act directed toward the disposition of the cause?
2225	Eisler v. United States, 170 F.2d 273, 279 (1948)	13	Resident alien owes temporary allegiance to government of United States and assumes duties and obligations which do not differ materially from those of native-born or naturalized citizens and is bound to obey all laws of the United States, not immediately relating to citizenship, and is equally amenable with citizens for any infractions of those laws.	Correlatively, an alien resident owes a temporary allegiance to the Government of the United States, and he assumes duties and obligations which do not differ materially from those of native-born or naturalized citizens; he is bound to obey all the laws of the country, not immediately relating to citizenship, and is equally amenable with citizens for any infraction of those laws.	Does an alien domiciled or residing in the United States owe a temporary allegiance to the country?
2226	Chatham Shipping Co. v. Fertex S. S. Corp., 352 F.2d 291, 293 (2d Cir. 1965)	1	Mere filing of action for damages on contract does not preclude subsequent change of mind in favor of arbitration therein provided, and earliest point at which such preclusion may be found is when other party files answer on merits.	The cases are altogether clear that the mere filing of an action for damages on a contract does not preclude a subsequent change of mind in favor of arbitration therein provided, see Richard Nathan Corp. v. Dacon-Zadeh, 101 F.Supp. 428, 430 (S.D.N.Y.1951); Farr & Co. v. Cia. Intercontinental de Navegacion, 243 F.2d 342, 348 (2 Cir. 1957); the earliest point at which such preclusion may be found is when the other party files an answer on the merits.	Can mere filing of an action for damages on a contract preclude a subsequent change of mind in favor of arbitration?

2227	Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Wells, 557 S.W.2d 144, 148 (Tex. App. 1977)	8	Doctrine of judicial estoppel is applicable only when party to suit alleges or admits in his pleadings in a former judicial proceeding, under oath, the contrary of the assertion sought to be made in the case then being tried.	The doctrine of judicial estoppel is applicable only when "a party to a suit alleges or admits in his pleadings in a former judicial proceeding, under oath, the contrary of the assertion sought to be made in the case then being tried."	"Does judicial estoppel apply when a party to a suit alleges or admits in his pleadings in a former judicial proceeding, under oath, the contrary of the assertion sought to be made?"
2228	XXXX, L.P. v. 363 Prospect Place, LLC, 153 A.D.3d 588, 589–90, 60 N.Y.S.3d 84 (2017)	1	A motion to dismiss a complaint on the ground that a defense is founded on documentary evidence may be appropriately granted only where the documentary evidence utterly refutes the plaintiff's factual allegations, conclusively establishing a defense as a matter of law. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(1).	"A motion pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(1) to dismiss a complaint on the ground that a defense is founded on documentary evidence 'may be appropriately granted only where the documentary evidence utterly refutes [the] plaintiff's factual allegations, conclusively establishing a defense as a matter of law' " (*590 Attias v. Costiera, 120 A.D.3d 1281, 1282, 993 N.Y.S.2d 59, quoting Goshen v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of N.Y., 98 N.Y.2d 314, 326, 746 N.Y.S.2d 858, 774 N.E.2d 1190).	Can a motion to dismiss a complaint be granted based on documentary evidence where the evidence refutes plaintiff's factual allegations?
2229	Knoche v. Cox, 282 Md. 447, 452–53 (1978)	1	Aside from the exceptions created by the Workmen's Compensation Act itself, the operation of the law is exclusive of all other remedy and liability, as to both the employer and employee who come within the purview of the Act, with respect to all injury arising out of and in the course of the employment. Code 1957, art. 101, SS 1 et seq., 15.	This Court, long past and to the present day, has uniformly said that, aside 1182 from the exceptions created by the Act itself, *453 the operation of the law is exclusive of all other remedy and liability, as to both the employer and employee who come within the purview of the Act, with respect to all injury arising out of and in the course of the employment.	"Besides the exceptions created by the act itself, does the Workmens Compensation Act provide the exclusive remedy and liability, with respect to all injuries arising out of and in the course of the employment, as to both employers and employees ?"
2230	Wise v. Shinseki, 26 Vet. App. 517, 531 (2014)	14	By requiring only an approximate balance of positive and negative evidence to prove any issue material to a claim for veterans benefits, the nation, in recognition of its debt to veterans, has taken upon itself the risk of error in awarding such benefits. 38 U.S.C.A. S 5107(b).	By requiring only an "approximate balance of positive and negative evidence" to prove any issue material to a claim for veterans benefits, 38 U.S.C. § 5107(b), the nation, "in recognition of our debt to our veterans," has "taken upon itself the risk of error" in awarding such benefits. Id.	Is an approximate balance of positive and negative evidence necessary to prove any issue material to a claim for veterans benefits?
2231	Dolphin Holdings, Ltd. v. Gander & White Shipping, Inc., 122 A.D.3d 901, 902, 998 N.Y.S.2d 107, 109 (2014)	4	On a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action, the court is permitted to consider evidentiary material submitted by the defendant in support of the motion, and if it does so, the criterion then becomes whether the plaintiff has a cause of action, not whether he has stated one. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	"A court is, of course, permitted to consider evidentiary material submitted by a defendant in support of a motion to dismiss pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7)" (Sokol v. Leader, 74 A.D.3d 1180, 1181, 904 N.Y.S.2d 153), and, if it does so, "the criterion then becomes 'whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action, not whether he has stated one' "	Is the court permitted to consider evidentiary material submitted by the defendant in support of the motion on a motion to dismiss for failure pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7)?

2234	Osagie v. Peakload Temp. Services, 91 S.W.3d 326, 329 (Tenn. Ct. App., 2002)	4	Purpose of rule governing dismissal of claim for failure to prosecute is to enable court to manage its own docket, and to protect defendants against plaintiffs who are unwilling to put their claims to the test, but determined to subject them to the continuing threat of an eventual judgment. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41.02.	Osagie's wage claim to be a dismissal for failure to prosecute under rule 41.02 of the Rules of Civil Procedure. This rule is necessary to enable the court to manage its own docket, and to protect defendants against plaintiffs who are unwilling to put their claims to the test, but determined to subject them to the continuing threat of an eventual judgment.	Does the purpose of rules governing dismissal of a claim for failure is to prosecute to enable courts to manage its own docket?
2239	Cassie v. Cassie, 109 A.D.3d 337, 342, 969 N.Y.S.2d 537, 541 (2013)	3	Even where the conduct at issue is alleged to have occurred in a private residence, in order for a petitioner to meet his or her burden of establishing the family offense of disorderly conduct, there must be a prima facie showing that the conduct was either intended to cause, or recklessly created a risk of causing, public inconvenience, annoyance, or alarm. McKinney's Family Court Act § 812.	We similarly hold that, even where the conduct at issue is alleged to have occurred in a private residence, in order for a petitioner to meet his or her burden of establishing the family offense of disorderly conduct, there must be a prima facie showing that the conduct was either intended to cause, or recklessly created a risk of causing, public inconvenience, annoyance, or alarm.	Can a person on private property commit the offence of disorderly conduct?
2240	Helia Healthcare of Belleville v. Norwood, 73 N.E.3d 1185, 1191 (Ill. App. 2017)	1	A motion to dismiss when some affirmative matter, such as a lack of subject matter jurisdiction, admits all well-pleaded facts and reasonable inferences therefrom, and on such a motion all pleadings are construed in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. 735 Ill. Comp. Stat. Ann. § 5/2-619(a)(1).	Section 2-619 of the Code of Civil Procedure permits a motion to dismiss when some affirmative matter, such as a lack of subject matter jurisdiction, avoids or defeats the claims in the complaint. Such a motion admits all well-pleaded facts and reasonable inferences therefrom, and all pleadings are construed in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party.	"Does a motion to dismiss when some affirmative matter, such as a lack of subject matter jurisdiction, admit all well-pleaded facts and reasonable inferences therefrom?"
2241	Griffith & Coe Advert. v. Farmers & Merchants Bank And Tr., 215 W. Va. 428, 428 (2004)	3	In determining whether a party has made a prima facie showing of personal jurisdiction in response to motion to dismiss, the court must view the allegations in the light most favorable to such party, drawing all inferences in favor of jurisdiction. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(2).	In determining whether a party has made a prima facie showing of personal jurisdiction, the court must view the allegations in the light most favorable to such party, drawing all inferences in favor of jurisdiction.	"In determining whether a party has made a prima facie showing of personal jurisdiction, should the court view the allegations in the light most favorable to such party?"
2242	Easterling v. Am. Optical Corp., 207 W. Va. 123, 127 (2000)	3	In determining whether a party has made a prima facie showing of personal jurisdiction, the court must view the allegations in the light most favorable to such party, drawing all inferences in favor of jurisdiction. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(2).	In determining whether a party has made a prima facie showing of personal jurisdiction, the court must view the allegations in the light most favorable to such party, drawing all inferences in favor of jurisdiction.	"In determining whether a party has made a prima facie showing of personal jurisdiction, should the court view the allegations in the light most favorable to such party?"

2245	Matusow v. Zieger, 702 A.2d 1126, 1129 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 1997)	3	Judgment of non pros may be entered where (1) party to proceedings has shown lack of due diligence by failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude, (2) there has been no compelling reason for the delay, and (3) delay has caused some prejudice to adverse party.	129, 247 A.2d 587 (1968) that provided a judgment of non pros may be entered where: (1) a party to the proceedings has shown a lack of due diligence by failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude; (2) there has been no compelling reason for the delay; 6 and (3) the delay has caused some prejudice to the adverse party.	Can judgment of non pros be entered where party to proceedings has shown lack of due diligence by failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude?
2246	Jones v. Halliburton Co., 583 F.3d 228, 240 (5th Cir. 2009)	5	When deciding whether a claim falls within the scope of an arbitration agreement, courts focus on factual allegations in the complaint rather than the legal causes of action asserted.	When deciding whether a claim falls within the scope of an arbitration agreement, courts "focus on factual allegations in the complaint rather than the legal causes of action asserted".	Do the courts focus on factual allegations in the complaint rather than the legal causes of action asserted while deciding the scope of an arbitration agreement?
2247	White Eagle v. City of Fort Pierre, 2002 S.D. 68, ¶ 48 (S.D. 2002)	7	Dismissal of a cause of action for failure to prosecute should be granted when, after considering all the facts and circumstances of the case, the plaintiff can be charged with lack of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptness. SDCL 15-11-11, 15-30-16	Finally, the dismissal of the cause of action for failure to prosecute should be granted when, after considering all the facts and circumstances of the case, the plaintiff can be charged with lack of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude.	When the plaintiff can be charged with lack of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude should dismissal of the cause of action for failure to prosecute be granted?
2248	Blockbuster Inv'rs LP v. Cox Enterprises, 314 Ga. App. 506, 506 (2012)	2	A motion to dismiss should be granted only where a complaint shows with certainty that the plaintiff would not be entitled to relief under any state of facts that could be proven in support of his claim; thus, court construes all the allegations in the complaint in a light most favorable to the complaining party and resolves all doubts in his favor. West's Ga.Code Ann. § 9-11-12(b)(6).	A motion to dismiss "should be granted only where a complaint shows with certainty that the plaintiff would not be entitled to relief under any state of facts that could be proven in support of his claim. We thus construe all the allegations in the complaint in a light most favorable to the complaining party and resolve all doubts in his favor."	Should a motion to dismiss be granted only where a complaint shows with certainty that the plaintiff would not be entitled to relief under any state of facts that could be proven in support of his claim?
2249	Mathews v. Diaz, 426 U.S. 67, 78-79 (1976)	7	The fact that all persons, aliens and citizens alike, are protected by the due process clause does not lead to the further conclusion that all aliens are entitled to enjoy all of the advantages of citizenship or, indeed, to the conclusion that all aliens must be placed in a single homogeneous legal classification. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 5, 14.	The fact that all persons, aliens and citizens alike, are protected by the Due Process Clause does not lead to the further conclusion that all aliens are entitled to enjoy all the advantages of citizenship or, indeed, to the conclusion that all aliens must be placed in a single homogeneous legal classification.	Does the fact that aliens are protected by the Due Process Clause mean that aliens are entitled to enjoy all the advantages of citizenship?

2250	Blon v. Bank One, Akron, N.A., 35 Ohio St. 3d 98, 98 (1988)	7	Creditor and consumer stand at arm's length in negotiating terms and conditions of consumer loan and, absent understanding by both parties that special trust and confidence has been reposed in creditor, creditor has no duty to disclose to consumer the existence and details of finder's fee or similar arrangement with credit arranger.	A creditor and consumer stand at arm's length in negotiating the terms and conditions of a consumer loan and, absent an understanding by both parties that a special trust and confidence has been reposed in the creditor, the creditor has no duty to disclose to the consumer the existence and details of a finder's fee or similar arrangement with a credit arranger.	Do Creditor and consumer stand at arm's length in negotiating terms and conditions of consumer loan?
2251	Wallace v. Dean, 3 So. 3d 1035, 1042-43 (Fla., 2009)	5	For purposes of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action, allegations of the complaint are assumed to be true and all reasonable inferences arising therefrom are allowed in favor of the plaintiff.	"For ... purposes of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action, allegations of the complaint are assumed to be true and all reasonable inferences arising therefrom are allowed in favor of the plaintiff."	"For purposes of a motion to dismiss, are the allegations of the complaint assumed to be true and all reasonable inferences arising therefrom are allowed in favor of the plaintiff?"
2253	J.P. Morgan Sec. Inc. v. Vigilant Ins. Co., 21 N.Y.3d 324, 334, 992 N.E.2d 1076, 1080 (2013)	1	In assessing the adequacy of a complaint on motion to dismiss, court must give the pleading a liberal construction, accept the facts alleged in the complaint to be true and afford the plaintiff the benefit of every possible favorable inference. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	In assessing the adequacy of a complaint under CPLR 3211(a)(7), the court must give the pleading a liberal construction, accept the facts alleged in the complaint to be true and afford the plaintiff "the benefit of every possible favorable inference"	"In assessing the adequacy of a complaint on motion to dismiss, should a court give the pleading a liberal construction?"
2254	Cadet-Duval v. Gursim Holding, 147 A.D.3d 718, 719, 45 N.Y.S.3d 585, 586 (2017)	1	On a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action, the complaint must be construed liberally, the factual allegations deemed to be true, and the nonmoving party must be given the benefit of all favorable inferences. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	" 'On a motion to dismiss pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7) for failure to state a cause of action, the complaint must be construed liberally, the factual allegations deemed to be true, and the nonmoving party must be given the benefit of all favorable inferences' " (Hampshire Props. v. BTA Bldg. & Developing, Inc., 122 A.D.3d 573, 573, 996 N.Y.S.2d 129, quoting Carillo v. Stony Brook Univ., 119 A.D.3d 508, 509, 987 N.Y.S.2d 868).	"In reviewing a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action, are the allegations of the complaint deemed to be true?"
2255	Tapia v. Heavner, 648 N.E.2d 1202, 1205 (Ind.App. 5 Dist., 1995)	5	Unlike ruling on motion for summary judgment, trial court may weigh evidence and resolve factual disputes when ruling on motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Trial Procedure Rules 12(B)(1), 56(C).	Unlike ruling on a motion for summary judgment, the trial court may weigh evidence and resolve factual disputes when ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction.	"When ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, can the trial court weigh evidence and resolve factual disputes?"

2256	Davis v. Cent. Rent-A-Crane, 663 N.E.2d 1177, 1179 (Ind. App. 1996)	3	When determining whether claim should be dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, trial court may weigh evidence to determine existence of requisite jurisdictional facts and resolve factual disputes. Trial Procedure Rule 12(B)(1).	When determining whether the claim should be dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the trial court may consider the pleadings, affidavits, and any other evidence submitted. Perry, supra, at 1287. In addition, the court may weigh the evidence to determine the existence of the requisite jurisdictional facts and resolve factual disputes.	"In determining whether claim should be dismissed for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction, can a trial court weigh evidence to determine if requisite jurisdictional facts exist?"
2258	Carlson v. Reed, 249 F.3d 876, 881 (9th Cir. 2001)	3	A state violates due process where it creates a university tuition rate scheme that purports to be concerned with residency, but then applies an irrebuttable presumption precluding those seeking to meet its test of residency the opportunity to show factors clearly bearing on the issue. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 14.	[A] state violates due process where it creates a university tuition rate scheme that purports to be concerned with residency, but then applies an irrebuttable presumption precluding those "seeking to meet its test of residency the opportunity to show factors clearly bearing on the issue."	Does a University violate due process when applies irrebuttable presumptions?
2259	Coleman v. Lynaugh, 934 S.W.2d 837, 838 (Tex. App. 1996)	2	Judge may dismiss case for want of prosecution on failure of any party seeking affirmative relief to appear for any hearing or trial of which party had notice, or under judge's inherent powers. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a, subd. 1.	A judge may dismiss a case for want of prosecution "on failure of any party seeking affirmative relief to appear for any hearing or trial of which the party had notice," TEX.R. CIV. P. 165a(1), or under his inherent powers.	Can a judge dismiss a case for want of prosecution on failure of any party seeking affirmative relief to appear for any hearing or trial of which party had notice?
2261	Bermudez v. Fulton Auto Depot, 179 Cal. App. 4th 1318, 1323 (2009)	2	Purpose of Automobile Sales Finance Act (ASFA) is to protect motor vehicle purchasers from abusive selling practices and excessive charges by requiring full disclosure of all items of cost. West's Ann.Cal.Civ.Code S 2981 et seq.	"The California Legislature enacted the ASFA to protect motor vehicle purchasers from abusive selling practices and excessive charges by requiring full disclosure of all items of cost.	Does ASFA require full disclosure of all items of cost to protect motor vehicle purchasers from abusive selling practices and excessive charges?
2262	Clark v. Gauntt, 138 Tex. 558, 561 (1942)	2	Generally, a deed purporting to convey fee-simple or lesser definite estate in land, with covenants of general warranty of title or ownership, "estops" grantor from asserting after-acquired title to or interest in land as against grantee and those claiming under him.	It is a general rule, supported by many authorities, that a deed purporting to convey a fee simple or a lesser definite estate in land and containing covenants of general warranty of title or of ownership will operate to estop the grantor from asserting an after-acquired title or interest in the land, or the estate which the deed purports to convey, as against the grantee and those claiming under him.	Does a deed purporting to convey a fee simple in land containing covenants of general warranty operate to estop the grantor from asserting an after-acquired title or interest in the land?
2264	DMK Biodiesel v. McCoy, 285 Neb. 974, 980 (2013)	9	For purposes of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, court generally must ignore materials outside the pleadings, but it may consider some materials that are part of public record or do not contradict complaint, as well as materials that are necessarily embraced by the pleadings. Neb. Ct. R. Pldg. S 6-1112(b)(6).	For purposes of a motion to dismiss, " 'the court generally must ignore materials outside the pleadings, but it may consider some materials that are part of the public record or do not contradict the complaint, as well as materials that are necessarily embraced by the pleadings.' "	"For purposes of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, should a court generally ignore materials outside the pleadings?"

2268	City of Houston v. Thomas, 838 S.W.2d 296, 297 (Tex. App. 1992)	1	Trial court may dismiss case for want of prosecution when party fails to appear at hearing or trial; when case has not been disposed of within Supreme Court's time standard; and by court's inherent power to dismiss when case has not been prosecuted with due diligence. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 165a, 165a, subds. 1, 2, 4; Judicial Administration Rules, V.T.C.A., Government Code Title 2, Subtitle F App., Rule 6b(2).	A trial court may dismiss a case for want of prosecution (1) when a party fails to appear at a hearing or trial, rule 165a(1); (2) when the case has not been disposed of within the supreme court's time standards, rule 165a(2); and (3) by the court's inherent power to dismiss when the case has not been prosecuted with due diligence.	Can court dismiss case for want of prosecution when party fails to appear at hearing or at trial?
2269	Wilson v. Edwards, 202 So. 3d 275, 279 (Miss. Ct. App. 2016)	3	A trial court has the authority to dismiss a claim based on an indisputably meritless legal theory, as well as the unusual power to pierce the veil of the complaint's factual allegations and dismiss those claims whose factual contentions are clearly baseless. Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).	A trial court has the authority to dismiss a claim based on an indisputably meritless legal theory, as well as the unusual power to pierce the veil of the complaint's factual allegations and dismiss those claims whose factual contentions are clearly baseless." Id.	Does a trial court have the authority to dismiss a claim based on an indisputably meritless legal theory?
2270	Dinerman v. Jewish Bd. of Fam. & Children's Servs., Inc., 55 A.D.3d 530, 531, 865 N.Y.S.2d 133, 134 (2008)	2	While the allegations in the complaint are to be accepted as true when considering a motion to dismiss, allegations consisting of bare legal conclusions as well as factual claims flatly contradicted by documentary evidence are not entitled to any such consideration. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(2, 7).	However, while the allegations in the complaint are to be accepted as true when considering a motion to dismiss (see Leon v. Martinez, 84 N.Y.2d 83, 87–88, 614 N.Y.S.2d 972, 638 N.E.2d 511), "allegations consisting of bare legal conclusions as well as factual claims flatly contradicted by documentary evidence are not entitled to any such consideration" (Garber v. Board of Trustees of State Univ. of N.Y., 38 A.D.3d 833, 834, 834 N.Y.S.2d 203, quoting Maas v. Cornell Univ., 94 N.Y.2d 87, 91, 699 N.Y.S.2d 716, 721 N.E.2d 966).	"While considering a motion to dismiss, factual claims flatly contradicted by indisputable documentary evidence are not entitled to accept as true, then can documentary evidence result in dismissal?"
2271	Ray v. Greer, 212 N.C.App. 358, 366–68 (N.C. App., 2011)	12	A trial court may enter sanctions when the plaintiff or his attorney violates a rule of civil procedure or a court order; the sanctions may be entered against either the represented party or the attorney, even when the attorney is solely responsible for the delay or violation.	[A] trial court may enter sanctions when the plaintiff or his attorney violates a rule of civil procedure or a court order. The sanctions may be entered against either the represented party or the attorney, even when the attorney is solely responsible for the delay or violation.	"Can sanctions be entered for delay or violation of court order against either represented party or attorney, even when attorney is solely responsible for the delay or violation?"
2272	Armistead v. A.L.W. Grp., 155 S.W.3d 814, 816 (Mo. App. 2005)	1	A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim is solely a test of the adequacy of the plaintiff's petition; therefore, on appeal, reviewing court accepts as true all well-pled allegations in the petition and liberally grants the plaintiff all reasonable inferences drawn therefrom.	A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim is solely a test of the adequacy of the plaintiff's petition; therefore, on appeal, we accept as true all well-pled allegations in the petition and liberally grant the plaintiff all reasonable inferences drawn therefrom.	Is a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim solely a test of the adequacy of a plaintiff's petition?

2273	Am. Bank & Tr. Co. of Pennsylvania v. Ritter, Todd & Haayen, 274 Pa. Super. 285, 288 (1980)	2	Test governing entry of judgment of non pros encompasses considerations of whether plaintiff's delay indicates that it has not prosecuted the matter with due diligence, and it must be shown that there was no justification or compelling reason for the delay and, the delay must cause prejudice to defendant.	The test governing the entry of a judgment of non pros encompasses three considerations. First, plaintiff's delay must indicate that it has not prosecuted the matter with due diligence. Second, it must be shown there was no justification or compelling reason for the delay. Third, the delay must cause prejudice to defendant.	Does test governing entry of judgment of non pros encompasses considerations of whether plaintiff's delay indicate that it has not prosecuted the matter with due diligence?
2276	PNC Multifamily Capital Institutional Fund XXXIV Ltd. P'ship v. AOH-Regent Ltd. P'ship, 262 Or. App. 503, 513 (2014)	5	A court may consider whether to dismiss a complaint for lack of personal jurisdiction on the basis of facts drawn both from the complaint and matters outside the pleading, including affidavits, declarations and other evidence. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 21.	A court may consider whether to 779 dismiss a complaint for lack of personal jurisdiction under ORCP 21 A(2) "on the basis of facts drawn both from the complaint and 'matters outside the pleading, including affidavits, declarations and other evidence.' "	Can a court consider whether to dismiss a complaint for lack of personal jurisdiction on the basis of facts drawn both from the complaint and matters outside the pleading?
2278	Brown v. Refuel Am., 186 N.C. App. 631, 634 (N.C. App. 2007)	5	Where a nonresident defendant submits an affidavit in support of his motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, the court will look to the uncontroverted allegations in the complaint and the uncontroverted facts in the sworn affidavit in its determination of the issue. West's N.C.G.S.A. S 1-75.4(1)(d).	However, where the defendant submits an affidavit in support of his motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, the court will "look to the uncontroverted allegations in the complaint and the uncontroverted facts in the sworn affidavit" in its determination of the issue.	"Where a defendant submits an affidavit in support of his motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, will the court look to the uncontroverted allegations in the complaint?"
2280	Hornstein v. Wolf, 109 A.D.2d 129, 131, 491 N.Y.S.2d 183, 186 (1985)	1	Unless motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action is converted by court to a motion for summary judgment, affidavits received on motion are not to be valid for purpose of determining whether there is evidentiary support for the pleading.	Initially, we note that unless a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action is converted by the court to a motion for summary judgment, affidavits received on the motion are not to be examined for the purpose of determining whether there is evidentiary support for the pleading	"Unless a motion to dismiss for failure to state cause of action is converted by court to motion for summary judgment, are affidavits submitted in support of or in opposition to motion not to be examined?"
2281	Thacker v. Bartlett, 785 N.E.2d 621, 624 (Ind.App., 2003)	7	A dismissal for failure to state a claim is without prejudice, since the complaining party remains able to file an amended complaint within the parameters of the rule. Trial Procedure Rule 12(B)(6).	Therefore, a Trial Rule 12(B) (6) dismissal is without prejudice, since the complaining party remains able to file an amended complaint within the parameters of the rule.	"Is a dismissal of a complaint for failure to state a claim without prejudice, since the complaining party remains able to file an amended complaint within the parameters of the applicable rule?"
2282	Stein v. Asheville City Bd. of Educ., 168 N.C. App. 243, 249 (2005)	2	The legal import of the words "with prejudice" as applied to a judgment of dismissal is to terminate the action operating as res judicata and barring any further prosecution by the plaintiff of the same cause of action.	"The legal import of the words 'with prejudice' as applied to a judgment of dismissal is to terminate the action operating as res judicata and barring any further prosecution by the plaintiff of the same cause of action."	"Is the legal import of the words ""with prejudice"" as applied to a judgment of dismissal to terminate the action operating as res judicata and barring any further prosecution by the plaintiff of the same cause of action?"

2284	League of United Latin Am. Citizens v. Wilson, 908 F. Supp. 755, 769 (C.D. Cal. 1995)	15	Because federal government bears exclusive responsibility for immigration matters, states can neither add to nor take from conditions lawfully imposed by Congress upon admission, naturalization and residence of aliens in United States.	Because the federal government bears the exclusive responsibility for immigration matters, the states "can neither add to nor take from the conditions lawfully imposed by Congress upon admission, naturalization and residence of aliens in the United States or the several states."	can states add or take from the conditions lawfully imposed by Congress upon the residence of aliens in the United States?
2285	In re Strickland, No. 01-01-00972-CV, 2002 WL 58482, at *1 (Tex. App. Jan. 17, 2002)	5	A verified reinstatement motion filed within 30 days of dismissal extends plenary power for the same amount of time as would a properly filed new trial motion; the same is true of a prematurely filed, verified reinstatement motion. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a(3).	A verified reinstatement motion filed within 30 days of dismissal extends plenary power for the same amount of time as would a properly filed new trial motion. TEX.R. CIV. P. 165a(3); McConnell, 800 S.W.2d at 194; Dardari v. Texas Commerce Nat'l Bank Ass'n, 961 S.W.2d 466, 469 (Tex.App.-Houston [1st Dist.] 1997, no writ). The same is true of a prematurely filed, verified reinstatement motion.	Does a verified reinstatement motion filed within 30 days of dismissal extend plenary power for the same amount of time as would a properly filed new trial motion?
2287	Caracci v. Edgar, 160 Ill. App. 3d 892, 897-98 (1987)	8	Exception to rule, that further proceedings after dismissal are, in general, unauthorized until dismissal is vacated and cause reinstated, arises where parties actively participate in further proceedings or party in whose favor dismissal was entered otherwise conducts himself in manner inconsistent with order of dismissal, thus nullifying order of dismissal and revesting trial court with jurisdiction.	Although further *898 proceedings after a dismissal are, in general, unauthorized until the dismissal is vacated and the cause reinstated, an exception arises where the parties actively participate in further proceedings or the party in whose favor dismissal was entered otherwise conducts himself in a manner inconsistent with the order of dismissal, thus nullifying the order of dismissal and revesting the trial court with jurisdiction.	Are further proceedings unauthorized until the judgment of dismissal is vacated and the cause reinstated?
2288	Lyons v. Pirello, 194 So. 2d 147, 150 (La. Ct. App. 1966)	2	Eligibility for benefits under workmen's compensation statute does not exist unless employee is injured in performance of work of hazardous nature and which forms a part of employer's regular trade, occupation or business. LSA-R.S. 23:1035.	Eligibility for benefits does not exist unless the employee is injured in the performance of work of a hazardous nature and which forms a part of the employer's regular trade, occupation or business. LSA-R.S. 23:1035; Shipp v.	"Can employees get compensation benefits if they are injured while doing work of a hazardous nature which is part of the employers regular trade, occupation, or business?"
2289	In re Y.M., 207 Cal. App. 4th 892, 908 (2012)	7	Federal law imposes requirements on state dependency plans and recognizes the institutional competence of state courts as the appropriate forum for child welfare determinations regarding abuse, neglect, or abandonment, and a child's best interests. Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act, S 106, 42 U.S.C.A. S 5106a.	Federal law imposes requirements on state dependency plans and recognizes "the institutional competence of state courts as the appropriate forum for child welfare determinations regarding abuse, neglect, or abandonment, and a child's best interests."	Are state courts the appropriate forum for child welfare determinations regarding neglect or abandonment of a child?

2291	In re Y.M., 207 Cal. App. 4th 892, 908 (2012)	7	Federal law imposes requirements on state dependency plans and recognizes the institutional competence of state courts as the appropriate forum for child welfare determinations regarding abuse, neglect, or abandonment, and a child's best interests. Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act, S 106, 42 U.S.C.A. S 5106a.	Federal law imposes requirements on state dependency plans and recognizes "the institutional competence of state courts as the appropriate forum for child welfare determinations regarding abuse, neglect, or abandonment, and a child's best interests."	Are state courts as the appropriate forum for child welfare determinations regarding a child's best interest?
2292	In re Mario S., 38 Misc. 3d 444, 448, 954 N.Y.S.2d 843, 847–48 (Fam. Ct. 2012)	1	Federal law provides a path to lawful permanent residency in the United States to resident alien children who qualify for special immigrant juvenile (SIJ) status. Immigration and Nationality Act, S 101(a)(27)(J), 8 U.S.C.A. S 1101(a)(27)(J).	"Federal law provides a path to lawful permanent residency in the United States to resident alien children who qualify for special immigrant juvenile' (SIJ) status" 848 (In the Interest of J.J.X.C., 318 Ga.App. 420, 734 S.E.2d 120 [2012]).	Does Federal law provide a path to lawful permanent residency in the United States to resident alien children who qualify for Special Immigrant Juvenile (SIJ) status?
2293	Arizona v. United States, 567 U.S. 387, 394–95 (2012)	1	Government of United States has broad, undoubted power over subject of immigration and status of aliens, resting, in part, on its constitutional power to "establish an uniform Rule of Naturalization," and its inherent power as sovereign to control and conduct relations with foreign nations. U.S.C.A. Const. Art. 1, S 8, cl. 4.	First, the federal government "has broad, undoubted power over the subject of immigration and the status of aliens," authority that rests on the constitutional power to "establish an uniform Rule of Naturalization," Art. I, 8, cl. 4, and on the national government's "inherent power as sovereign to control and conduct relations with foreign nations."	Does the power of the government over immigration rest on its power to control relations with foreign nations?
2294	Krell v. Silver, 2003 PA Super 27, ¶ 13 (2003)	5	Movant must establish three factors in order to have judgment of non pros opened: (1) petition to open must be promptly filed; (2) there must be reasonable explanation for delay that preceded entry of non pros judgment; and (3) there must exist facts that would support meritorious cause of action. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 3051, 42 Pa.C.S.A.	[T]his Court held that a movant must establish three factors in order to have a judgment of non pros opened. First, the petition to open must be promptly filed; second, there must be a reasonable explanation for the delay that preceded the entry of the judgment of non pros; and third, there must exist facts that would support a meritorious cause of action.	Should a movant establish three factors in order to have a judgment of non-pros opened?
2297	Murrell v. New York City Transit Auth., 260 A.D.2d 307, 307, 689 N.Y.S.2d 67, 68 (1999)	1	Party seeking to restore a case to the trial calendar following dismissal for abandonment must demonstrate that the case has merit, that a reasonable excuse for the delay exists, that there was no intent to abandon, and that there will be no prejudice to the non-moving party in the event the matter is restored. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	Once a case is dismissed pursuant to CPLR 3404, a party seeking to restore it to the trial calendar must demonstrate that the case has merit, that a reasonable excuse for the delay exists, that there was no intent to abandon and that there will be no prejudice to the non-moving party in the event the matter is restored	A party seeking to restore a case to the trial calendar after it has been dismissed as abandoned must demonstrate what?

2298	Rifkin v. Herman, 262 A.D.2d 389, 389–90 (N.Y.S.2d 1999)	2	Court has the discretionary power to restore an abandoned case if the movant establishes the merit of the cause of action, a reasonable excuse for the delay, lack of intent to abandon the action, and a lack of prejudice to the other party. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	The court has the discretionary power to restore the case if the movant establishes the merit of the cause of action, a reasonable excuse for the delay, lack of intent to abandon the action, and a lack of prejudice to the other party	Does a court have the discretionary power to restore an abandoned case if the movant establishes the merit of the cause of action and a reasonable excuse for the delay?
2300	Koch v. Laverne, 699 So. 2d 164, 166 (Ala. Civ. App. 1997)	3	Dismissal of party's case and subsequent refusal to set aside dismissal for want of prosecution rests largely within sound discretion of trial court.	"[T]he dismissal of a party's case and the subsequent refusal to set aside the dismissal for want of prosecution rests largely within the sound discretion of the trial court."	Does the dismissal of a party's case and subsequent refusal to set aside dismissal for want of prosecution rest largely within the sound discretion of a trial court?
2302	Winn v. Armour & Co., 184 Ga. 769, 772, 193 S.E. 447, 449 (1937)	6	The dismissal of an action for want of prosecution does not dismiss issues raised by cross-petition filed by defendant seeking equitable relief, even though relief sought affects codefendants.	Dismissal of an action for want of prosecution, where the defendant has filed a cross-action seeking equitable relief, does not dismiss the issues raised by the cross-petition. This is true where the relief sought affects codefendants in the proceeding.	"Does the dismissal of an action for want of prosecution not dismiss issues raised by cross-petition filed by a defendant seeking equitable relief, even though the relief sought affects codefendants?"
2303	Akinyemi v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, N.A., 391 Ill. App. 3d 334, 336, 908 N.E.2d 163, 167 (2009)	4	While a trial court should not grant a motion to dismiss based on certain defects or defenses unless it is clear that there is no way a plaintiff may recover, dismissing a cause pursuant to such a motion efficiently allows for the disposal of issues of law or easily proved facts early in the litigation process. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-619.	While a trial court should not grant such a motion unless it is clear that there is no way a plaintiff may recover (see Ostendorf v. International Harvester Co., 89 Ill.2d 273, 280, 60 Ill.Dec. 456, 433 N.E.2d 253 (1982)), dismissing a cause pursuant to section 2-619 efficiently allows for the disposal of issues of law or easily proved facts early in the litigation process.	Will a court grant a motion to dismiss based on certain defects or defenses?
2304	Weber v. Mayan Palace Hotel & Resorts, 397 N.J. Super. 257, 262 (N.J. Super. A.D., 2007)	2	The right to reinstatement is ordinarily routinely and freely granted when plaintiff has cured the problem that led to dismissal for lack of prosecution even if the application is made many months later. Rule 1:13-7(a).	Accordingly, the right to "reinstatement is ordinarily routinely and freely granted when plaintiff has cured the problem that led to the dismissal even if the application is made many months later."	Is the right to reinstatement ordinarily routinely and freely granted when a plaintiff has cured the problem that led to the dismissal?
2305	United States v. Fleming, 671 F.2d 1002, 1003 (C.A.7 (Ill.), 1982)	1	Reviewing court may not change or reduce sentence imposed within applicable statutory limits on ground that sentence was too severe unless trial court relied on improper or unreliable information in exercising its discretion or failed to exercise any discretion at all in imposing the sentence.	A reviewing court may not change or reduce a sentence imposed within the applicable statutory limits on the ground that the sentence was too severe unless the trial court relied on improper or unreliable information in exercising its discretion or failed to exercise any discretion at all in imposing the sentence.	Can the court change or reduce a sentence imposed with the applicable statutory limits on the grounds that the sentence was too severe?

2306	U.S. v. Taylor, 569 F.3d 742, 746 (C.A.7 (Ill.),2009)	1	Double Jeopardy Clause of the United States Constitution bars a defendant's retrial unless the district court declared a mistrial either (1) with the defendant's consent, or (2) because the declaration was manifestly necessary. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	The Double Jeopardy Clause of the United States Constitution bars a defendant's retrial unless the district court declared a mistrial either (1) with the defendant's consent, or (2) because the declaration was manifestly necessary.	Does the Double Jeopardy Clause of the United States Constitution bar a defendant's retrial unless the district court declared a mistrial?
2308	Fico v. Health Ins. Plan of Greater New York, 248 A.D.2d 432, 433, 669 N.Y.S.2d 380, 381 (1998)	1	Party seeking to restore case to trial calendar after it has been dismissed as abandoned must demonstrate merits of case, reasonable excuse for delay, absence of intent to abandon matter, and lack of prejudice to nonmoving party in event that case is restored to trial calendar; all four components of test must be satisfied before dismissal can be properly vacated. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	"A party seeking to restore a case to the trial calendar after it has been dismissed pursuant to CPLR 3404 must demonstrate the merits of the case, a reasonable excuse for the delay, the absence of an intent to abandon the matter, and the lack of prejudice to the nonmoving party in the event that the case is restored to the trial calendar" (Civello v. Grossman, 192 A.D.2d 636, 596 N.Y.S.2d 464). The moving party must satisfy all four components of the test before the dismissal can be properly vacated (see, Roland v. Napolitano, 209 A.D.2d 501, 619 N.Y.S.2d 77).	Should a party seeking to restore a case to a trial calendar after it has been dismissed demonstrate the merits of a case?
2310	Town of Micanopy v. Connell, 304 So. 2d 478, 479-480 (Fla.App. 1 Dist., 1974)	1	Rule which provides that leave to amend a pleading shall be freely given when justice so requires is interpreted to allow a plaintiff to at least amend his complaint one time in an attempt to state a cause of action unless it is clear that a plaintiff will not be able to state a cause of action. 30 West's F.S.A. Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 1.190.	Rule 1.190, F.R.C.P., provides that leave to amend a pleading shall be freely given when justice so requires. This is generally interpreted to allow a plaintiff to at least amend his complaint one time in an attempt to state a cause of action unless, of course, it is clear that a plaintiff will not be able to state a cause of action.	Does the rule require leave to amend to be freely given when justice requires?
2311	Nevada Interstate Properties Corp. v. City of West Palm Beach, 747 So.2d 447, 448 (Fla.App. 4 Dist.,1999)	3	Dismissal with prejudice for failure to state a cause of action should not be ordered without giving the party offering the defective pleading an opportunity to amend, unless it is apparent that the pleading cannot be amended so as to state a cause of action.	It is well settled that a dismissal with prejudice for failure to state a cause of action should not be ordered without giving the party offering the defective pleading an opportunity to amend, unless it is apparent that the pleading cannot be amended so as to state a cause of action.	Should a dismissal with prejudice for failure to state a cause of action not be ordered without giving the party offering the defective pleading an opportunity to amend?
2312	People v. Kruger, 2015 IL App (4th) 131080, ¶ 11 (Ill.App. 4 Dist.,2015)	4	A trial court may dismiss a case for want of prosecution when the petitioner has failed to properly serve the opposing party within a reasonable period of time.	Moreover, as previously stated, this court has held a trial court may dismiss a case for want of prosecution when the petitioner has failed to properly serve the opposing party within "a reasonable period of time."	Can a court dismiss a case for want of prosecution when the petitioner has failed to properly serve the opposing party within a reasonable period of time?

2313	Hollander v. Nance, 888 So. 2d 1275, 1277-78 (Ala. Civ. App. 2004)	1	The dismissal of a civil action for want of prosecution because of the plaintiff's failure to appear at trial falls within the judicial discretion of a trial court and will not be reversed upon an appeal except for an abusive use of that discretionary power.	"The dismissal of a civil action for want of prosecution because of the plaintiff's *1278 failure to appear at trial falls within the judicial discretion of a trial court and will not be reversed upon an appeal except for an abusive use of that discretionary power."	Will the dismissal of a civil action for want of prosecution because of the plaintiff's failure to appear at trial be reversed?
2315	State v. Murphy, 545 N.W.2d 909, 916 (Minn., 1996)	3	Interpreting terroristic threats statute to limit reach of statute to oral or written threats would lead to absurd result and allow one to terrorize another if terrorist were clever enough to make threats without recourse to spoken or written word. M.S.A. S 609.713, subd. 1.	We also reject Murphy's interpretation of the terroristic threats statute because limiting the reach of the statute to oral or written threats would lead to an absurd result. It would allow one to terrorize another if the terrorist were clever enough to make threats without recourse to the spoken or written word.	What would limiting the reach of the terroristic threats statute to oral and written threats lead to?
2316	Com. v. Balog, 395 Pa. Super. 158, 168 (1990)	10	If conduct of defense witness is intentionally designed to provoke successful mistrial request by Commonwealth, in order to secure a more favorable outcome, retrial is not barred.	Similarly, if the conduct of a defense witness is intentionally designed to provoke a successful mistrial request by the Commonwealth in order to secure a more favorable outcome, then retrial is not barred.	"If the conduct of a defense witness is intentionally designed to provoke a successful mistrial request by a Commonwealth, in order to secure a more favorable outcome, is retrial not barred?"
2318	U.S. v. Higgins, 75 F.3d 332, 333 (C.A.7 (Ill.),1996)	2	Defendants who request mistrial relinquish their entitlement to verdict by jury then impaneled and may not use double jeopardy clause to avoid second trial; but if prosecutor deliberately introduces error in order to provoke mistrial request and rescue trial going badly, Constitution treats matters as if mistrial had been declared on prosecutor's initiative. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Defendants who request a mistrial relinquish their entitlement to a verdict by the jury then impaneled and may not use the double jeopardy clause to avoid a second trial. United States v. Dinitz, 424 U.S. 600, 96 S.Ct. 1075, 47 L.Ed.2d 267 (1976). But if the prosecutor deliberately introduces error in order to provoke a mistrial request and rescue a trial going badly, the Constitution treats matters as if the mistrial had been declared on the prosecutor's initiative.	Do defendants who request mistrial relinquish their entitlement to a verdict by a jury then impaneled and may not use a double jeopardy clause to avoid a second trial?
2320	Johnson v. State, 138 Md. App. 539, 553 (2001)	3	Neither party has a right to have his case decided by a jury which may be tainted by bias, and in these circumstances, the public's interest in fair trials designed to end in just judgments must prevail over the defendant's valued right to have his trial concluded by the first jury impaneled.	Neither party has a right to have his case decided by a jury which may be tainted by bias; in these circumstances, "the public's interest in fair trials designed to end in just judgments" must prevail over the defendant's "valued right" to have his trial concluded by the first jury impaneled.	Does neither party have a right to have his case decided by a jury which may be tainted by bias?
2322	Com. v. Ellis, 432 Mass. 746, 752 (2000)	6	Absent evidence that the judge acted in bad faith, alleged judicial errors giving rise to a mistrial do not support a claim of double jeopardy. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Absent evidence that the judge acted in bad faith, alleged judicial errors giving rise to a mistrial do not support a claim of double jeopardy.	"Absent evidence that the judge acted in bad faith, do alleged judicial errors giving rise to a mistrial not support a claim of double jeopardy?"

2323	United States v. Gallagher, 743 F. Supp. 745, 746 (D.Or., 1990)	1	Double jeopardy provision of Fifth Amendment bars retrial of criminal defendant after mistrial is granted over objection of defense unless there is "manifest necessity" for mistrial. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	The double jeopardy provision of the fifth amendment bars retrial of a criminal defendant after a mistrial is granted over the objection of the defense, unless there is "manifest necessity" for the mistrial.	"Does the double jeopardy provision of the Fifth Amendment bar retrial of a criminal defendant after a mistrial is granted over objection of a defense unless there is a ""manifest necessity"" for mistrial?"
2324	Jordan v. O'Dwyer, 152 A.D.2d 671, 671 (N.Y.S.2d Sup. Ct. 1989)	1	Unlike situation in which criminal trial has resulted in judgment of acquittal, retrial of indictment is not automatically barred where merits of charge against defendant have not been finally resolved. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Unlike the situation in which a criminal trial has resulted in a judgment of acquittal, retrial of an indictment is not automatically barred where the merits of the charges against the defendant have not been finally resolved	"Unlike situation in which criminal trial has resulted in judgment of acquittal, is retrial of indictment not automatically barred where merits of a charge against defendant have not been finally resolved?"
2325	Deal v. Consumer Programs, 470 F.3d 1225, 1233 (8th Cir. 2006)	14	Under Missouri law, waiver is the intentional relinquishment of a known right; to rise to level of waiver, the conduct must be so manifestly consistent with and indicative of an intention to renounce a particular right or benefit that no other reasonable explanation of the conduct is possible.	Under Missouri law, "[w]aiver is the intentional relinquishment of a known right." Thompson v. Chase Manhattan Mortg. Corp., 90 S.W.3d 194, 207 (Mo.Ct.App.2002) (citation omitted). "To rise to the level of waiver, the conduct must be so manifestly consistent with and indicative of an intention to renounce a particular right or benefit that no other reasonable explanation of the conduct is possible.	"To rise to the level of waiver, should conduct be so manifestly consistent with an intention to renounce a right that no other reasonable explanation is possible?"
2326	Knight v. Chicago Corp., 183 S.W.2d 666, 670 (Tex. Civ. App. 1944)	5	An "undivided interest" in a mineral lease is an undivided percentage of the working interest, which differs from "oil payment" or "overriding royalty" in that it is chargeable with the pro tanto share of the cost of development and production.	The interest commonly spoken of as an 'undivided interest' is an undivided percentage of the working interest, which differs from the oil payment or the overriding royalty in that it is chargeable with its pro tanto share of the cost of development and production.'	"Is an undivided interest an undivided percentage of the working interest, which differs from the oil payment or the overriding royalty in that it is chargeable with its pro tanto share of the cost of development and production?"
2327	Nivens on Behalf of Nivens v. Chestnut Hill Hosp., 373 Pa. Super. 377, 379 (Pa.Super., 1988)	1	Before court may open non pros judgment, party seeking vacation must demonstrate that: petition to open was timely filed, default which occasioned entry of judgment can be reasonably explained, and facts constituting grounds for cause of action are alleged.	However, before a court may open a judgment, the party seeking vacation 366 must demonstrate that: (1) the petition to open was timely filed; (2) the default which occasioned the entry of judgment can be reasonably explained; and (3) the facts constituting grounds for a cause of action are alleged.	"Before a court can open a non pros judgment, what should a party seeking vacation demonstrate?"

2329	Mohiuddin v. Doctors Billing & Mgmt. Sols., 196 Md. App. 439, 453 (2010)	11	Unless the case is being kept alive by some other means, such as other parties or other still unresolved claims, a dismissal of a pleading without the magic words "with leave to amend" closes the case finally and there is, therefore, nothing to amend. Md.Rule 2-322.	By contrast, unless the case is being kept alive by some other means, such as other parties or other still unresolved claims, a dismissal without the magic words "with leave to amend" closes the case finally and there is, therefore, nothing to amend.	"Unless the case is being kept alive by some other means, does a dismissal without the magic words ""with leave to amend"" close the case finally?"
2331	Doctor's Assocs. v. Stuart, 85 F.3d 975, 979 (2d Cir. 1996)	1	When party agrees to arbitrate in state where Federal Arbitration Act makes such agreements specifically enforceable, that party must be deemed to have consented to jurisdiction of court that could compel the arbitration proceeding in that state. 9 U.S.C.A. S 1 et seq.	When a party agrees "to arbitrate in [a state], where the [Federal Arbitration Act] makes such agreements specifically enforceable, [that party] must be deemed to have consented to the jurisdiction of the court that could compel the arbitration proceeding in [that state].	"When a party agrees to arbitrate in a state where Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) makes such an agreement specifically enforceable, can that party be deemed to have consented to the jurisdiction of that court?"
2332	Sunskar Ltd. v. CDII Trading, 828 F. Supp. 2d 604, 615 (S.D.N.Y. 2011)	4	When a party agrees to arbitrate in a state, where the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) makes such agreements specifically enforceable, that party must be deemed to have consented to the jurisdiction of the court that could compel the arbitration proceeding in that state. 9 U.S.C.A. S 1 et seq.	But, "[w]hen a party agrees to arbitrate in a state, where the [FAA] makes such agreements specifically enforceable, that party must be deemed to have consented to the jurisdiction of the court that could compel the arbitration proceeding in that state."	"When a party agrees to arbitrate in a state where Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) makes such an agreement specifically enforceable, can that party be deemed to have consented to the jurisdiction of that court?"
2333	People v. Blue, 207 Ill. 2d 542, 549 (2003)	4	It does not violate double jeopardy principles for a defendant to be convicted and sentenced for a crime even though the conduct underlying that offense has been considered in determining the defendant's sentence for a previous conviction. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; S.H.A. Const. Art. 1, S 10.	This does not mean, however, that "the double jeopardy clause * * * prevent[s] a state from selecting a penalty independently for each crime a person commits." Nor does it violate double jeopardy principles for a defendant to be convicted and sentenced for a crime even though the conduct underlying that offense has been considered in determining the defendant's sentence for a previous conviction.	Does it violate double jeopardy principles for a defendant to be convicted and sentenced for a crime even though the conduct underlying that offense has been considered in determining the defendant sentence for a previous conviction?
2334	State v. McCain, 190 Or. App. 532, 540 (2003)	5	Double jeopardy precludes the multiple use of the same facts to prove an element of an offense and to enhance the defendant's sentence for that offense only if the legislature intended to prohibit such double usage. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; West's Or.Const. Art. 1, S 12.	In other words, double jeopardy precludes the multiple use of the same facts to prove an element of the current offense and to enhance the defendant's sentence for that offense only if the legislature intended to prohibit such double usage.	Does double jeopardy preclude the multiple use of the same facts to prove an element of an offense and to enhance the defendant sentence for that offense only if the legislature intended to prohibit such double usage?

2335	City of Brunswick v. Taylor, 87 Ga. App. 751, 753 (1953)	3	In either workmen's compensation cases or master-and-servant cases generally, the test as to who is the manager or employer is determined by the facts that special master must have complete control and direction of servant for the occasion, that general master must have no such control, and that hirer must have exclusive right to discharge servant and put another in his place, or put him to other work.	The test as to who is the manager or employer is the same in workmen's compensation cases as in master-and-servant cases generally, and is determined by the facts that the special master (1) must have complete control and direction of the servant for the occasion; (2) that the general master must have no such control; (3) that the hirer must have exclusive right to discharge the servant, and (4) to put another in his place, or (5) to put him to other work.	Are the tests for determining who is the employer the same in workmens compensation cases as in master-servant cases?
2336	State v. Michael J., 274 Conn. 321, 344-45 (2005)	9	As a general rule, the double jeopardy clause imposes no limitation upon the power of the government to retry a defendant who has succeeded in persuading the court to declare a mistrial. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	As a general rule, however, the double jeopardy clause imposes no limitation upon the power of the government to retry a defendant who has succeeded in persuading the court to declare a mistrial.	Does the double jeopardy clause impose limitation upon the power of the government to retry a defendant who has succeeded in persuading the court to declare a mistrial?
2337	State v. Liberatore, 4 Ohio St. 3d 13, 14 (1983)	1	Where successive prosecutions are at stake, double jeopardy guarantee serves constitutional policy of finality for defendant's benefit; furthermore, that policy protects accused from attempts to relitigate facts underlying prior acquittal. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5, 14.	Where successive prosecutions are at stake, the double jeopardy guarantee serves "a constitutional policy of finality for the defendant's benefit." United States v. Jorn (1971), 400 U.S. 470, 479, 91 S.Ct. 547, 554, 27 L.Ed.2d 543. That policy protects the accused from attempts to relitigate facts underlying a prior acquittal.	"Where successive prosecutions are at stake, does the guarantee against double jeopardy serve a constitutional policy of finality for the defendant's benefit?"
2338	State v. Musselman, 667 P.2d 1061, 1065 (Utah, 1983)	5	Once a criminal charge has resulted in an acquittal by trier of fact, prohibition against double jeopardy prevents that determination from ever again being challenged; it is of no consequence that determination was made as matter of law by directed verdict of acquittal, or as matter of fact by trier of fact. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; Const. Art. 1, S 12.	Once a criminal charge has resulted in an acquittal by the trier of fact, the prohibition against double jeopardy prevents that determination from ever again being challenged. It is of no consequence that the determination was made as a matter of law by a directed verdict of acquittal, 2 or as a matter of fact by the trier of fact.	"Once a criminal charge has resulted in an acquittal by trier of fact, does prohibition against double jeopardy prevent that determination from ever again being challenged?"
2339	U.S. v. Sanders, 591 F.2d 1293, 1296 (C.A.Mont., 1979)	3	A defendant may not be reprosecuted for the same crime after an acquittal, but in some instances a court may have to discharge a jury before it makes a decision on guilt or innocence; discharge in such cases will not necessarily operate to the defendant's disadvantage, and may even be at his behest. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 5.	A defendant clearly may not be reprosecuted for the same crime after an acquittal. Benton v. Maryland, 395 U.S. 784, 796, 89 S.Ct. 2056, 23 L.Ed.2d 707 (1969). In some instances, however, a court may have to discharge a jury before it makes a decision on guilt or innocence. Discharge in such cases will not necessarily operate to the defendant's disadvantage, and may even be at the defendant's behest.	"Can a defendant not be reprosecuted for the same crime after an acquittal, but in some instances a court may have to discharge a jury before it makes a decision on guilt or innocence?"

2343	Parce v. Byrd, 533 So. 2d 812, 814 (Fla.App. 5 Dist., 1988)	2	If jury is discharged before reaching verdict for legally insufficient reasons and without defendant's consent, such discharge is equivalent to acquittal and precludes subsequent trial for same offense. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	If a jury is discharged before reaching a verdict for legally insufficient reasons and without the defendant's consent, such discharge is equivalent to an acquittal and precludes a subsequent trial for the same offense.	"If jury is discharged before reaching verdict for legally insufficient reasons and without defendant's consent, is such discharge equivalent to acquittal and precludes subsequent trial for a same offense?"
2345	Clukey v. State, 160 Me. 198, 199-200 (1964)	1	Conditions which will warrant discharge of jury and which, if they appear of record, will bar plea of former jeopardy are: (1) consent of respondent; (2) illness of court, member of jury, or respondent; (3) absention from trial of member of panel or respondent; (4) where term of court is fixed in duration and ends before verdict; and (5) where jury cannot agree.	Certain conditions, if arising in the trial of a case, have come to be well recognized as constituting that 'urgent necessity' which will warrant the discharge of a jury, and, if they appear of record, *200 will bar a plea of former jeopardy: (1) The consent of the respondent; (2) illness of the court, a member of the jury, or the respondent, (3) the absention from the trial of a member of the panel or of the respondent; (4) where the term of court is fixed in duration and ends before verdict (5) where the jury cannot agree.	What are conditions which will warrant discharge of a jury and bar a plea of former jeopardy?
2346	U.S. v. King, 713 F.Supp.2d 1207, 1218 (D.Hawai i,2010)	8	Although the Fifth Amendment's Double Jeopardy Clause protects against being punished twice for a single offense, where there has been no prior conviction or acquittal, it does not protect against simultaneous prosecutions for the same offense, so long as no more than one punishment is eventually imposed. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	However, the Fifth Amendment's Double Jeopardy Clause protects against being punished twice for a single offense, Davenport, 519 F.3d at 943, "[w]here there has been no prior conviction or acquittal, the Double Jeopardy Clause does not protect against simultaneous prosecutions for the same offense, so long as no more than one punishment is eventually imposed."	"Although the Fifth Amendment's Double Jeopardy Clause protects against being punished twice for a single offense, does it not protect against simultaneous prosecutions for the same offense?"
2348	Tyska by Tyska v. Bd. of Educ. Twp. High Sch. Dist. 214, Cook Cty., 117 Ill. App. 3d 917, 927 (1983)	20	Board of education in exercise of its discretionary powers may discontinue or abandon use of public school within boundaries of its jurisdiction and assign students thereof to other schools in school system; board must be able to act in reasonable manner consistent with public interest.	A board of education in the exercise of its discretionary powers may discontinue 1354 219 or abandon the use of a public school within the boundaries of its jurisdiction and assign the students thereof to other schools in the school system; the board must be able to act in a reasonable manner consistent with the public interest.	Does a board of education have the power to discontinue the use of a public school?

2349	In re Frankum, 399 B.R. 498, 505 (E.D. Ark. 2009)	15	To invoke the doctrine of equitable subrogation, five criteria must be met: (1) the party seeking subrogation must have made the payment to protect his own interest, (2) the party seeking subrogation must not have acted as a volunteer, (3) the party seeking subrogation must not have been primarily liable for the debt, (4) the party seeking subrogation must have paid off the entire debt, and (5) subrogation must not work injustice to the rights of others.	To invoke the doctrine of equitable subrogation, five criteria must be met: (1) the party seeking subrogation must have made the payment to protect his own interest; (2) the party seeking subrogation must not have acted as a volunteer; (3) the party seeking subrogation must not have been primarily liable for the debt; (4) the party seeking subrogation must have paid off the entire debt; and (5) subrogation must not work injustice to the rights of others.	What criteria must be met to invoke the doctrine of equitable subrogation?
2351	Endless Ocean, LLC v. Twomey, Latham, Shea, Kelley, Dubin & Quartararo, 113 A.D.3d 587, 588, 979 N.Y.S.2d 84, 87 (2014)	2	A motion to dismiss a complaint based on documentary evidence may be granted only if the documentary evidence submitted by the moving party utterly refutes the factual allegations of the complaint, conclusively establishing a defense as a matter of law. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(1).	A motion to dismiss a complaint pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(1) may be granted only if the documentary evidence submitted by the moving party utterly refutes the factual allegations of the complaint, "conclusively establishing a defense as a matter of law"	Can a motion to dismiss a complaint on the ground of payment be granted where the documentary evidence establishes the defense of payment as a matter of law?
2352	Casstevens v. Smith, 269 S.W.3d 222, 227 (Tex. App. 2008)	2	Equitable subrogation applies in every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, has paid a debt for which another was primarily liable and which in equity should have been paid by the latter.	Equitable subrogation applies "in every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, has paid a debt for which another was primarily liable and which in equity should have been paid by the latter."	"Does equitable subrogation apply in every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, has paid a debt for which another was primarily liable and which in equity should have been paid by the latter?"
2353	RLI Ins. Co. v. New York State Dep't of Lab., 97 N.Y.2d 256, 265 (2002)	13	A surety who completes work on a construction project after a default by the contractor succeeds under equitable subrogation principles to all rights that the obligee/owner has against the contractor, including the right to use the unpaid contract balance to complete the project or satisfy outstanding claims for labor and materials furnished.	Further, this Court has long held that a completing surety succeeds under equitable subrogation principles to all rights that the obligee/owner has against the contractor, including the right to use the unpaid contract balance to complete the project or satisfy outstanding claims for labor and materials furnished	Does a surety who completes work on a construction project after a default by the contractor succeed under equitable subrogation principles to all rights that the obligee or owner against the contractor?
2355	People v. Peace, 48 Mich. App. 79, 83 (1973)	3	Statutory scheme of imposing different maximum sentences for crime of forging or uttering and publishing different classes of documents or instruments does not violate equal protection of the law. M.C.L.A. SS 750.248, 750.253; U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 14; M.C.L.A.Const.1963, art. 1, S 2.	We find Brooks decisional and likewise hold that the statutory scheme of imposing different maximum sentences for the crime of forging or uttering and publishing different classes of documents or instruments does not violate the equal protection of the law.	Does the statutory scheme of imposing different maximum sentences for the crime of forging or uttering and publishing a forged instrument violate equal protection of the law?

2356	State Bar of California v. Statile, 168 Cal. App. 4th 650, 662 (2008)	5	Subrogation is a substitution of one person in place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand, or right, so that he who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relation to a debt or claim, and its rights, remedies, or securities.	Stated another way, it is a substitution of one person in place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand or right, so that he who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relation to a debt or claim, and its rights, remedies, or securities."	"Is subrogation a substitution of one person in place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand, or right, so that he who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relation to a debt or claim, and its rights, remedies, or securities?"
2357	Erie Ins. Co. v. George, 681 N.E.2d 183, 186 (1997)	2	"Subrogation " is doctrine of equity that applies whenever party, not acting as volunteer, pays debt of another that, in good conscience, should have been paid by one primarily liable.	Subrogation is a doctrine of equity long recognized in Indiana. It applies whenever a party, not acting as a volunteer, pays the debt of another that, in good conscience, should have been paid by the one primarily liable.	"Does subrogation apply whenever a party, not acting as a volunteer, pays the debt of another that, in good conscience, should have been paid by the one primarily liable?"
2358	Thompson v. Int'l Bus. Machines Corp., 870 F. Supp. 541, 542 (S.D.N.Y., 1994)	1	Under New York law, employer responsibility for industrial accidents is basically governed by no-fault workers' compensation system providing automatic benefits of limited amount in return for elimination of risk of tort damage suits.	Employer responsibility for industrial accidents in New York as in virtually all other states is basically governed by a no-fault workers' compensation system providing automatic benefits of limited amount in return for elimination of the risk of tort damage suits.	Is an employer's responsibility for industrial accidents governed by the no-fault workers' compensation system?
2361	Kedzie & 103rd Currency Exch., Inc. v. Hodge, 156 Ill. 2d 112, 115, 619 N.E.2d 732, 735 (1993)	2	Phrase "affirmative matter" in statute, permitting dismissal on ground that claim asserted against defendant is barred by other "affirmative matter" avoiding the legal effect of or defeating the claim, encompasses any defense other than negation of essential allegations of plaintiff's cause of action and for this reason, such a motion admits legal sufficiency of plaintiff's cause of action much in the same way that motion to dismiss based upon defects in pleadings admits complaint's well-pleaded facts. Ill.Rev.Stat.1989, ch. 110, P 2-615, 2-619(a)(9).	Subsection (a)(9), upon which Hodge's motion specifically was based, permits dismissal where "the claim asserted * * * is barred by other affirmative matter avoiding the legal effect of or defeating the claim." Ill.Rev.Stat.1989, ch. 110, par. 2-619(a)(9). The phrase "affirmative matter" encompasses any defense other than a negation of the essential allegations of the plaintiff's cause of action. (See 4 R. Michael, Illinois Practice § 41.7 (1989).) For that reason, it is recognized that a section 2-619(a)(9) motion to dismiss admits the legal sufficiency of the plaintiff's cause of action much in the same way that a section 2-615 motion to dismiss admits a complaint's well-pleaded facts.	Will an affirmative matter encompass any defense other than a negation of the essential allegation of the plaintiff cause of action?

2363	United States v. Aguiar, 610 F.2d 1296, 1301 (5th Cir. 1980)	1	Once jeopardy attaches, criminal defendant normally will not lose the opportunity to seek a favorable verdict from the jury and will not be required to stand trial a second time; exception to that rule is made if defendant consents to a retrial or if retrial before new jury is mandated by some form of manifest necessity.	Once jeopardy attaches, as it did for Virgen Palenzuela when the jury was sworn to try this case, Illinois v. Somerville, 410 U.S. 458, 467-68, 93 S.Ct. 1066, 35 L.Ed.2d 425 (1973), a criminal defendant normally will not lose the opportunity to seek a favorable verdict from the jury and will not be required to stand trial a second time, Arizona v. Washington, 434 U.S. 497, 503, 504, 98 S.Ct. 824, 829-30, 54 L.Ed.2d 717 (1978); Wade v. Hunter, 336 U.S. 684, 688-90, 69 S.Ct. 834, 93 L.Ed. 974 (1949). An exception to this rule is made if the defendant consents to a retrial, United States v. Kessler, 530 F.2d 1246, 1255 (5th Cir. 1976) or if a retrial before a new jury is mandated by some form of manifest necessity, United States v. Kin Ping Cheung, 485 F.2d 689, 690-91 (5th Cir. 1973)	"Once jeopardy attaches, will a criminal defendant normally not lose the opportunity to seek a favorable verdict from the jury and will not be required to stand trial a second time? "
2364	Green Tree Servicing v. U.S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n, N.D., 192 P.3d 1014, 1020 (Colo. App. 2007)	8	Five factors are conditions precedent to the application of equitable subrogation in the mortgage context: (1) the subrogee made the payment to protect his or her own interest, (2) the subrogee did not act as a volunteer, (3) the subrogee was not primarily liable for the debt paid, (4) the subrogee paid off the entire encumbrance, and (5) subrogation would not work any injustice to the rights of the junior lienholder; those five factors are, however, invoked only within the overall context of equity and the specific facts of each case such that, even if they are satisfied, the court then considers whether the party seeking subrogation acted with knowledge, negligence, or a degree of sophistication such that application of the doctrine would be inequitable.	Five factors are conditions precedent to the application of equitable subrogation: (1) the subrogee made the payment to protect his or her own interest; (2) the subrogee did not act as a volunteer; (3) the subrogee was not primarily liable for the debt paid; (4) the subrogee paid off the entire encumbrance; and (5) subrogation would not work any injustice to the rights of the junior lienholder. These five factors are, however, "invoked only within the overall context of equity and the specific facts of each case." Thus, even if these elements are satisfied, the court then considers whether the party seeking subrogation acted with knowledge, negligence, or a degree of sophistication such that application of the doctrine would be inequitable.	What are the five conditions precedent to the application of equitable subrogation?

2365	Parisi v. Goldman, Sachs & Co., 710 F.3d 483, 487 (C.A.2 (N.Y.), 2013)	6	Even claims arising under a statute designed to further important social policies may be arbitrated, because so long as the prospective litigant effectively may vindicate its statutory cause of action in the arbitral forum, the statute will continue to serve both its remedial and deterrent function.	Moreover, even claims arising under a statute designed to further important social policies may be arbitrated because "so long as the prospective litigant effectively may vindicate its statutory cause of action in the arbitral forum, the statute will continue to serve both its remedial and deterrent function." Gilmer, 500 U.S.	Can claims arising under a statute designed to further important social policies be arbitrated?
2366	Home Ins. Co. v. Mississippi Ins. Guar. Ass'n., 904 So. 2d 95, 96 (Miss. 2004)	4	"Subrogation" is the substitution of one party for another whose debt the party pays, entitling the paying party to rights, remedies, or securities that would otherwise belong to the debtor.	Black's Law Dictionary defines "subrogation" as: "The substitution of one party for another whose debt the party pays, entitling the paying party to rights, remedies, or securities that would otherwise belong to the debtor."	"Is subrogation the substitution of one party for another whose debt the party pays, entitling the paying party to rights, remedies, or securities that would otherwise belong to the debtor?"
2368	Shams v. Hassan, 829 N.W.2d 848, 853 (Iowa, 2013)	3	Unlike other grounds for dismissal, a court considering a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction must make factual findings to determine whether it has personal jurisdiction over the defendant.	Unlike other grounds for dismissal, however, a court considering a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction must make factual findings to determine whether it has personal jurisdiction over the defendant.	"Unlike other grounds for dismissal, must a court considering a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction make factual findings to determine whether it has personal jurisdiction over the defendant?"
2369	Rinn v. First Union Nat. Bank of Maryland, 176 B.R. 401, 407 (D.Md., 1995)	6	Subrogation is intended to provide relief against loss to meritorious creditor who had paid debt of another, and to obtain equitable adjustment between parties by securing ultimate discharge of debt by person who in equity ought to pay it.	Subrogation is intended to provide relief against loss to a meritorious creditor who has paid the debt of another, Bachmann v. Glazer, 316 Md. 405, 559 A.2d 365, 368 (1989), and to obtain an equitable adjustment between parties "by securing the ultimate discharge of a debt by the person who in equity ought to pay it."	Is the doctrine of equitable subrogation intended to provide relief against loss to a meritorious creditor who has paid debt of another?
2370	Baker v. Felker, 952 S.W.2d 743, 745 (Mo. App. 1997)	1	Trial court has inherent power, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss case for failure to prosecute with due diligence, and dismissal on that ground will not be disturbed on appeal unless such discretion is abused.	A trial court has the inherent power, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss a case for failure to prosecute with due diligence, and a dismissal on that ground will not be disturbed on appeal unless such discretion is abused.	"Does the court have inherent power, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion; to dismiss case for failure to prosecute with due diligence? "
2371	Williams v. Curtiss-Wright Corp., 694 F.2d 300, 304 (3d Cir. 1982)	4	Act of state doctrine should not be applied to thwart legitimate American regulatory goals in absence of showing that adjudication may hinder international relations. ¹	The act of state doctrine should not be applied to thwart legitimate American regulatory goals in the absence of a showing that adjudication may hinder international relations.	Should the act of state doctrine be applied to thwart legitimate American regulatory goals in absence of showing that adjudication may hinder international relations?

2374	In re Hutchins, 400 B.R. 403, 413 (D.Vt. 2009)	10	Equitable subrogation arises in equity to prevent fraud or injustice and usually arises when (1) the paying party has a liability, claim, or fiduciary relationship with the debtor, (2) the party pays to fulfill a legal duty or because of public policy, (3) the paying party is a secondary debtor, (4) the paying party is a surety, or (5) the party pays to protect its own rights or property.	This Court has had occasion to address this principle and explained it as follows: Equitable subrogation arises in equity to prevent fraud or injustice and usually arises when (1) the paying party has a liability, claim or fiduciary relationship with the debtor; (2) the party pays to fulfill a legal duty or because of public policy; (3) the paying party is a secondary debtor; (4) the paying party is a surety; or (5) the party pays to protect its own rights or property.	When does equitable subrogation arise in equity to prevent fraud or injustice?
2375	U.S. v. Lazarenko, 504 F.Supp.2d 791, 801 (N.D.Cal.,2007)	9	"Act of state doctrine," which is rooted in separation of powers principles, prevents courts of one country from sitting in judgment on acts of government of another, done within its own territory.	The act of state doctrine, which is rooted in separation of powers principles, prevents the courts of one country from sitting in judgment on the acts of the government of another, done within its own territory.	"Does the act of state doctrine prevent courts of one country from sitting in judgment on acts of government of another, done within its own territory?"
2376	Greenberg Traurig of New York, P.C. v. Moody, 161 S.W.3d 56, 91 (Tex. App. 2004)	40	A "motion in limine" is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, prior to trial, certain evidentiary rulings the trial court may be asked to make; the purpose of the motion in limine is to prevent the other party from asking prejudicial questions or introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first asking the trial court's permission.	A motion in limine is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, prior to trial, certain evidentiary rulings the trial court may be asked to make. The purpose of the motion in limine is to prevent the other party from asking prejudicial questions or introducing prejudicial evidence in front of the jury without first asking the trial court's permission.	"Is a motion in limine a procedural device that permits a party to identify, prior to trial, certain evidentiary rulings the trial court may be asked to make?"
2377	Jackson v. Joyner, 309 S.W.3d 910, 915 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2009)	2	A motion in limine provides a means by which a party may seek guidance from the trial court regarding an evidentiary question in order to formulate their trial strategy; it essentially substitutes for an evidentiary objection which may be made at trial.	Rather, a motion in limine provides a means by which a party may seek guidance from the trial court regarding an evidentiary question in order to formulate their trial strategy. Id. It essentially substitutes for an evidentiary objection which may be made at trial. Id. A motion in limine is not subject to the same safeguards as a motion for summary judgment or for partial summary judgment.	Does a motion in limine provide a means by which a party may seek guidance from the trial court regarding an evidentiary question in order to formulate their trial strategy?
2378	Swarey v. Stephenson, 222 Md. App. 65, 104-105 (2015)	37	When a motion to dismiss is based upon lack of jurisdiction, the court can consider affidavits or hold an evidentiary hearing on the motion to dismiss without converting the motion into a motion for summary judgment.	Indeed, "[w]hen a motion to dismiss is based upon lack of jurisdiction, the court can consider affidavits or *105 hold an evidentiary hearing on the motion to dismiss without converting the motion into a motion for summary judgment."	"When a motion to dismiss is based upon lack of jurisdiction, can the court consider affidavits or hold an evidentiary hearing on the motion to dismiss without converting the motion into a motion for summary judgment?"

2379	Norcon Builders, LLC v. GMP Homes VG, LLC, 161 Wash.App. 474, 494 (Wash.App. Div. 1, 2011)	18	As an equitable remedy, subrogation is designed to avoid one person receiving an unearned windfall, i.e., the intervening lienholder through an advancement in priority, at the expense of another, i.e., the new mortgagee who paid the prior debt. Restatement (Third) of Property (Mortgages) § 7.6.	Prestance, 160 Wash.2d at 564-65, 160 P.3d 17. "As an equitable remedy, subrogation is designed to avoid one person receiving an unearned windfall, i.e., the intervening lienholder through an advancement in priority, at the expense of another, i.e., the new mortgagee who paid the prior debt." Bank of America, 126 Wash.App. at 714, 109 P.3d 863. In Prestance, our Supreme Court adopted the definition of "equitable subrogation" from 847 Restatement (Third) of Property: Mortgages 7.6 (1997).	Is subrogation an equitable remedy designed to avoid one person receiving an unearned windfall?
2380	State v. Thrunk, 157 N.J. Super. 265, 272 (1978)	5	In order that an alteration may constitute forgery it is essential that it be material; a "material alteration" of an instrument within meaning of rule is one which makes it speak a language different in legal effect from that which it originally spoke, or which carries with it some change in rights, interests or obligations of parties to the writing.	In order that an alteration may constitute forgery it is essential that it be material. A material alteration of an instrument within the meaning of the rule is one which makes it speak a language different in legal effect from that which it originally spoke, or which carries with it some change in the rights, interests, or obligations of the parties to the writing.	What is a material alteration that constitute forgery?
2381	Dean Witter Reynolds v. McCoy, 995 F.2d 649, 650 (6th Cir. 1993)	1	Where parties agree to submit any conflicts, breaches or other grievances arising under contract to arbitrator, they are bound by that agreement, and party may not unilaterally decide, at the last minute, that it would prefer to take the disputed matter to court.	Where parties agree to submit any conflicts, breaches or other grievances arising under a contract to an arbitrator, they are, naturally enough, bound by that agreement, and a party may not unilaterally decide, at the last minute, that it would prefer to take the disputed matter to court.	"Can a party who has agreed to arbitration, unilaterally decide to take the disputed matter to court?"
2382	Gilliam v. Ordiway, 147 F.Supp.3d 664, 668 (Mich. 2015)	1	Under Michigan law, the elements of a defamation claim are: (1) a false and defamatory statement concerning the plaintiff; (2) an unprivileged communication to a third party; (3) fault amounting at least to negligence on the part of the publisher; and (4) either actionability of the statement irrespective of special harm, which is defamation per se, or the existence of special harm caused by publication.	Under Michigan law, the elements of a defamation claim are: (1) a false and defamatory statement concerning the plaintiff; (2) an unprivileged communication to a third party; (3) fault amounting at least to negligence on the part of the publisher; and (4) either actionability of the statement irrespective of special harm (defamation per se) or the existence of special harm caused by publication.	What are the essential elements of a defamation?

2383	Farmers Co-op. Exch. v. Trull, 255 N.C. 202, 204 (1961)	2	A motion by a defendant for removal of case from superior court of one county to superior court of another county for trial to promote convenience of witnesses and ends of justice, presents a question of venue, not jurisdiction, and is within sound discretion of trial judge, and is not subject to review except for manifest abuse of discretion. G.S. § 1-83, subd. 2.	Defendant's motion for the removal of the case from Wake County superior court to the superior court of Union County for trial to promote the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice, made pursuant to the provisions of G.S. § 1-83, subd. 2, presents a question of venue, not jurisdiction, is within the sound discretion of the trial judge, and is not subject to review except for manifest abuse of such discretion.	Who decides questions of venue?
2384	Bd. of Sup'rs of Middle Paxton Twp. v. Dep't of Env'tl. Res., 669 A.2d 418, 421 (Pa. 1995)	2	In order for result of deemed approval to occur from failure of Department of Environmental Resources (DER) to act within statutorily prescribed time period, there must be explicit language in statute providing for deemed approval.	In order for the result of deemed approval to occur from the Department's failure to act within a statutorily prescribed time period, there must be explicit language in the statute providing for deemed approval.	When can the Department of Environmental Resources (DER)'s failure to act within a statutorily prescribed time period be considered a deemed approval?
2385	Drager by Gutzman v. Aluminum Indus. Corp., 495 N.W.2d 879, 887 (Minn. App. 1993)	15	To determine whether manufacturer has duty to warn, court goes to event causing damage and looks back to alleged negligent act; if connection is too remote to impose liability as matter of public policy, courts then hold there is no duty and consequently no liability, but if consequence is direct and is type of occurrence that was or should have been reasonably foreseeable, courts then hold as matter of law duty exists.	To determine whether a manufacturer has a duty to warn, this court goes to the event causing the damage and looks back to the alleged negligent act. If the connection is too remote to impose liability as a matter of public policy, the courts then hold there is no duty, and consequently no liability. On the other hand, if the consequence is direct and is the type of occurrence that was or should have been reasonably foreseeable, the courts then hold as a matter of law a duty exists.	Is the manufacturer held liable in a product liability action if the connection between the danger and the alleged negligent act is too remote?
2386	CECOS Internatl., Inc. v. Shank, 79 Ohio App. 3d 1, 6, 606 N.E.2d 973, 977 (1992)	1	In de novo hearing, Environmental Board of Review (EBR) does not stand in place of Director of Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and may not substitute its judgment for that of director as to factual issues, but may consider only whether director's actions were unreasonable or unlawful.	In the de novo hearing, the EBR does not stand in the place of the Director of the EPA and may not substitute its judgment for that of the director as to factual issues, but may consider only whether the director's actions were unreasonable or unlawful.	Can the Environmental Board of Review (EBR) substitute its judgment for that of the Director of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) as to factual issues in de novo hearings?
2387	Redevelopment Auth. of Oil City v. Woodring, 498 Pa. 180, 186 (Pa., 1982)	2	Police power involves regulation of property to promote health, safety and general welfare, and its exercise requires no compensation to property owner even if there is actual taking or destruction of property, while "eminent domain" is power to take property for public use, and compensation must be given for property taken, injured or destroyed.	Police power involves the regulation of property to promote health, safety and general welfare and its exercise requires no compensation to the property owner, even if there is an actual taking or destruction of property, while eminent domain is the power to take property for public use, and compensation must be given for property taken, injured or destroyed.	How is police power different from the power of eminent domain?

2388	Nat'l Labor Relations Bd. v. Little River Band of Ottawa Indians Tribal Gov't, 788 F.3d 537, 548 (C.A.6, 2015)	13	Federal statute of general applicability that is silent on issue of applicability to Indian tribes will not apply to them if: (1) law touches exclusive rights of self-governance in purely intramural matters; (2) application of law to tribe would abrogate rights guaranteed by Indian treaties; or (3) there is proof by legislative history or some other means that Congress intended law not to apply to Indians on their reservations.	A federal statute of general applicability that is silent on the issue of applicability to Indian tribes will not apply to them if: (1) the law touches exclusive rights of self-governance in purely intramural matters; (2) the application of the law to the tribe would abrogate rights guaranteed by Indian treaties; or (3) there is proof by legislative history or some other means that Congress intended [the law] not to apply to Indians on their reservations.	When will a statute of general applicability be held to be inapplicable to Indians?
2390	Maumee v. Pub. Util. Comm., 101 Ohio St. 3d 54, 56 (2004)	3	A "public utility" is an enterprise with the following characteristics and functions: (1) it provides essential goods or services that the general public has a right to demand from the utility, (2) it conducts its operation in such a manner as to be a matter of public concern, and (3) it occupies a monopolistic or oligopolistic position in the marketplace (by definition, a noncompetitive position).	A public utility is an enterprise with the following characteristics and functions: (1) it provides essential goods or services that the general public has a right to demand from the utility, (2) it conducts its operation in such a manner as to be a matter of public concern, and (3) it occupies a monopolistic or oligopolistic position in the marketplace (by definition, a noncompetitive position).	Should a public utility conduct its operations in a manner to be of public concern?
2391	State v. Posenjak, 127 Wash. App. 41, 49, 111 P.3d 1206, 1211 (2005)	8	The signatory tribe has to establish two separate factors to establish their group has preserved its tribal status for purposes of treaty rights: (1) it must show that it has maintained an organized tribal structure, and (2) it must show that a group of citizens of Indian ancestry is descended from a treaty signatory.	"Indians later asserting treaty rights must establish that their group has preserved its tribal status." United States v. Oregon, 29 F.3d 481, 484 (9th Cir.1994). The signatory tribe has to establish two separate factors. First, it must show that it has maintained an " 'organized tribal structure.' " Id. (quoting Washington II, 641 F.2d at 1372). This can be "shown by establishing that 'some defining characteristic of the original tribe persists in an evolving tribal community.' " Id. (quoting Washington II, 641 F.2d at 1372-73). Second, it must show that "a group of citizens of Indian ancestry is descended from a treaty signatory."	What are the factors to be established by a signatory tribe group to preserve their tribal status for treaty rights?

2393	Goff Grp., Inc. v. Greenwich Ins. Co., 231 F. Supp. 2d 1147, 1150 (M.D. Ala. 2002)	4	Federal Arbitration Act's (FAA) proarbitration policy does not operate without regard to the wishes of the contracting parties, and thus, the FAA does not prevent the enforcement of agreements to arbitrate under different rules than those set forth in the Act itself. 9 U.S.C.A. SS 1-16.	However, "the FAA's proarbitration policy does not operate without regard to the wishes of the contracting parties." Mastrobuono v. Shearson Lehman Hutton, Inc., 514 U.S. 52, 115 S.Ct. 1212, 131 L.Ed.2d 76 (1995). Thus, the FAA does not "prevent[] the enforcement of agreements to arbitrate under different rules than those set forth in the Act itself.	Does the Federal Arbitration Acts (FAAs) proarbitration policy operate without regard to the wishes of the contracting parties?
2394	People v. Eulo, 63 N.Y.2d 341, 346, 472 N.E.2d 286, 288 (1984)	1	Term "death" as used in New York statutes may be construed to embrace a determination, made according to accepted medical standards, that a person has suffered an irreversible cessation of breathing and heartbeat or, when those functions are artificially maintained, an irreversible cessation of the functioning of the entire brain, including the brain stem. McKinney's EPTL 2-1.6, 2-1.7, subd. a, 3-1.1 et seq., 4-1.1 et seq., 5-1.1 et seq., 5-4.1, 6-1.1 et seq.; McKinney's Partnership Law S 62, subd. 4; McKinney's CPLR 210; McKinney's Public Health Law SS 4300 et seq., 4301, subd. 1; McKinney's Penal Law S 125.00.	The term "death", as used in this State's statutes, may be construed to embrace a determination, made according to accepted medical standards, that a person has suffered an irreversible cessation of breathing and heartbeat or, when these functions are artificially maintained, an irreversible cessation of the functioning of the entire brain, including the brain stem.	"Is death considered as an irreversible cessation of circulatory and respiratory functions, or irreversible cessation of total brain functions?"
2395	Nickerson v. Ribicoff, 206 F.Supp. 232, 236-237 (D.Mass., 1962)	9	Where issue is raised as to whether family relationship is bona fide partnership, courts will scrutinize it and determine if parties really intended in good faith to join together their money, labor or skill for purpose of carrying on business as bona fide partnership.	Where the issue is raised as to whether a family relationship is a bona fide partnership, courts will scrutinize the same and determine if the parties really intended in good faith to join together their money, labor, skill for the purpose of carrying on a business as a bona fide partnership.	How do courts determine that a family relationship is a bona fide partnership?
2396	Advanced Bodycare Sols., LLC v. Thione Int'l, Inc., 524 F.3d 1235, 1239-40 (11th Cir. 2008)	7	The laudatory goals of the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA), to relieve congestion in the courts and to provide parties with an alternative method of dispute resolution that is speedier and less costly than litigation, will be achieved only to the extent that courts ensure arbitration is an alternative to litigation, not an additional layer in a protracted contest. 9 U.S.C.A. S 1 et seq.	The purpose of the FAA is to "relieve *1240 congestion in the courts and to provide parties with an alternative method of dispute resolution that is speedier and less costly than litigation." AIG Baker Sterling Heights LLC v. Am. Multi-Cinema Inc., 508 F.3d 995, 1001 (11th Cir.2007). But "[t]he laudatory goals of the FAA will be achieved only to the extent that courts ensure arbitration is an alternative to litigation, not an additional layer in a protracted contest."	How do the courts ensure that the goals of the Federal Arbitration Act are achieved?

2397	Bucher v. Staley, 297 N.W.2d 802, 805 (S.D. 1980)	2	For advice of counsel to constitute a good defense to a malicious prosecution action, the advice must have been sought in good faith, from honest motives, and for good purposes, after a full and fair disclosure of all facts within the accuser's knowledge and information, and the advice received must have been followed in good faith.	Advice of counsel does not necessarily shield a person against a charge of malicious prosecution. Huntley v. Harberts, supra. To constitute a good defense, the advice of counsel must have been sought in good faith, from honest motives, and for good purposes, after a full and fair disclosure of all facts within the accuser's knowledge and information, and the advice received must have been followed in good faith.	When does the advice of counsel constitute a good defense to a malicious prosecution action?
2398	Lee v. United States Agency for Int'l Dev., 859 F.3d 74, 77-78 (D.C. Cir. 2017)	4	Although the express provision of a criminal penalty does not necessarily preclude implication of a private cause of action for damages, such a provision in a bare criminal statute, with no other statutory basis for inferring that a civil cause of action exists, is insufficient to imply Congress intended to create a concomitant civil remedy.	Although the express "provision of a criminal penalty does not necessarily preclude implication of a private cause of action for damages," such a provision in a "bare criminal statute," with no other statutory basis for inferring that a civil cause of action exists, is insufficient to imply Congress intended to create *78 325 a concomitant civil remedy.	Will the Supreme Court imply a private right of action under a criminal statute?
2399	Dixie Nat. Bank of Dade Cnty. v. Emps. Com. Union Ins. Co. of Am., 463 So. 2d 1147, 1151 (Fla. 1985)	2	An insurer is entitled to subrogation to recover from any third party who is legally obligated for the actual loss sustained by its insurer; however, the right to subrogation is not absolute but depends upon the equities and attending facts and circumstances of each case; in order to state a cause of action, the subrogation claimant must affirmatively establish superior equities in himself over the one against whom subrogation is sought to be enforced.	Florida adheres to the general rule that an insurer is entitled to subrogation to recover from any third party who is legally liable for the actual loss sustained by its insurer. Miami National Bank v. Pennsylvania Insurance Company, 314 F.Supp. 858 (S.D.Fla.1970); 18A Fla.Jur. § 945; 11 Appleman, Insurance Law and Practice § 6564 (rev.ed.1972). The right to subrogation, however, is not absolute, but depends upon the equities and attending facts and circumstances of each case. Compania Anonima Venezolana de Nav. v. A.J. Perez Exp. Co., 303 F.2d 692 (5th Cir.1962). In order to state a cause of action, the subrogation claimant must affirmatively establish superior equities in himself over the one against whom subrogation is sought to be enforced.	What must a subrogation claimant establish in order to state a cause of action?

2400	State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Weiss, 194 P.3d 1063, 1067 (Colo. App. 2008)	9	The pertinent differences between assignment and subrogation include the following: (1) assignment transfers the entire value of the claim, whereas subrogation transfers the claim only to the extent necessary to reimburse the subrogee, (2) assignees are typically voluntary investors, whereas subrogees, usually insurers, are obligated to pay the insured's obligation to a third party, and (3) assignment is an outright transfer of the claim, whereas subrogation entails a substitution of the subrogee for the subrogor.	The pertinent differences between assignment and subrogation include the following: (1) assignment transfers the entire value of the claim, whereas subrogation transfers the claim only to the extent necessary to reimburse the subrogee; (2) assignees are typically voluntary investors, whereas subrogees, usually insurers, are obligated to pay the insured's obligation to a third party; and (3) assignment is an outright transfer of the claim, whereas subrogation entails a substitution of the subrogee for the subrogor.	What does subrogation entail?
2401	Litman v. Cellco P'ship, 655 F.3d 225, 231 (3d Cir. 2011)	4	A state law that seeks to impose class arbitration despite a contractual agreement for individualized arbitration is inconsistent with, and therefore preempted by, the Federal Arbitration Act, irrespective of whether class arbitration is desirable for unrelated reasons. 9 U.S.C.A. § 1 et seq.	We understand the holding of Concepcion to be both broad and clear: a state law that seeks to impose class arbitration despite a contractual agreement for individualized arbitration is inconsistent with, and therefore preempted by, the FAA, irrespective of whether class arbitration "is desirable for unrelated reasons.	Does the Federal Arbitration Act preempt a state law that seeks to impose class arbitration despite a contractual agreement for individualized arbitration?
2403	Gibson v. Am. Cyanamid Co., 760 F.3d 600, 626 (7th Cir. 2014)	27	Congress may set minimum wages, control prices, or create causes of action that did not previously exist, all without implicating the Takings Clause. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Instead, the Supreme Court has recognized that Congress, for example, "may set minimum wages, control prices, or create causes of action that did not previously exist," all without implicating the Takings Clause.	"Can Congress set minimum wages, control prices, or create causes of action that did not previously exist without implicating the Takings Clause?"
2405	Reese v. State, 190 Misc. 316, 323, (Ct. Cl. 1947)	4	Where realty is actually invaded by superinduced additions of water, earth, sand, or other materials, or by having other artificial structures placed thereon by the state, so as to destroy effectually or impair its usefulness, it is a "taking" within meaning of the constitution for which compensation must be made by the state.	Where real estate is actually invaded by superinduced additions of water, earth, sand, or other materials, or by having other artificial structures placed thereon so as to effectually destroy or impair its usefulness, it is a taking within the meaning of the Constitution for which compensation must be made.	"Can it be a taking, when real estate is invaded by super-induced additions of material so as to effectually destroy or impair its usefulness?"
2407	Heflin v. Merrill, 154 So. 3d 887, 890 (Miss. App. 2013)	2	When granting a motion in limine, the circuit court must first find the following two factors present: (1) the material or evidence in question will be inadmissible at a trial under the rules of evidence; and (2) the mere offer, reference, or statements made during trial concerning the material will tend to prejudice the jury. (Per James, J., with one judge concurring and three judges concurring in part and in the result.)	When granting a motion in limine, the circuit court must first find the following two factors present: "(1) the material or evidence in question will be inadmissible at a trial under the rules of evidence; and (2) the mere offer, reference, or statements made during trial concerning the material will tend to prejudice the jury."	"In considering the merits of a motion in limine, does a trial judge apply a two-step analysis?"

2410	Weishaupt v. Com., 227 Va. 389	3	Wife unilaterally revoked her implied consent to marital sex where she had made manifest her intent to terminate the marital relationship by living separate and apart from her husband, refrained from voluntary sexual intercourse with her husband, and, in light of all circumstances, conducted herself in a manner that established a de facto end to the marriage and, once implied consent was revoked, even though the parties had not yet obtained a divorce, husband could be found guilty of raping wife. Code 1950, § 18.2-61.	We hold, on the basis of all the foregoing considerations, that a wife can unilaterally revoke her implied consent to marital sex where, as here, she has made manifest her intent to terminate the marital relationship by living separate and apart from her husband; refraining from voluntary sexual intercourse with her husband; and, in light of all the circumstances, conducting herself in a manner that establishes a de facto end to the marriage. And, once the implied consent is revoked, even though the parties have not yet obtained a divorce, the husband can be found guilty of raping his wife, if the evidence against him establishes a violation of Code § 18.2-61.	Can a married woman withdraw her consent to marital sex?
2411	Wolf v. Spariosu, 706 So. 2d 881, 883 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1998)	4	Conventional subrogation arises by virtue of an agreement, express or implied, that third person or one having no previous interest in matter involved shall, upon discharging obligation or paying debt, be substituted in place of creditor with respect to such rights, remedies, or securities as creditor may have against debtor.	" 'Conventional subrogation[, however,] arises by virtue of an agreement, express or implied, that a third person or one having no previous interest in the matter involved shall, upon discharging an obligation or paying a debt, be substituted in the place of the creditor with respect to such rights, remedies, or securities as [the creditor] may have against the debtor.' " Forman v. First Nat'l Bank, 76 Fla. 48, 53, 79 So. 742, 744 (1918) (quoting Kent v. Bailey, 181 Iowa 489, 164 N.W. 852, 853 (1917))	"Is equitable subrogation distinct from conventional subrogation, which is premised on the contractual obligations of the parties?"
2412	Hubble v. Dyer Nursing Home, 188 S.W.3d 525, 538 (Tenn. 2006)	19	Subrogation is a right which is founded upon equity and justice and accrues when one person for the protection of his own interests, pays a debt for which another is primarily liable.	" 'Subrogation is a right which is founded upon equity and justice and accrues when one person for the protection of his own interests, pays a debt for which another is primarily liable.' "	"Is subrogation a right which is founded upon equity and justice and accrues when one person for the protection of his own interests, pays a debt for which another is primarily liable?"
2413	Fin. Sec. Assur. v. Stephens, 500 F.3d 1276, 1287 (11th Cir. 2007)	13	"Subrogation" is the substitution of one person in the place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand or right, so that he who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relation to the debt or claim, and its rights, remedies, or securities.	Subrogation is '[t]he substitution of one person in the place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand or right, so that he who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relation to the debt or claim, and its rights, remedies, or securities.' "	"s subrogation the substitution of one person in the place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand or right, so that he who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relation to the debt or claim, and its rights, remedies, or securities?"

2414	In re Crawley, 318 B.R. 512, 514 (W.D. Wis. 2004)	4	Under Wisconsin law, subrogation may properly be applied whenever a person other than mere volunteer pays debt which in equity and good conscience should be satisfied by another.	In Wisconsin, Subrogation is an equitable doctrine invoked to avoid unjust enrichment, and may properly be applied whenever a person other than a mere volunteer pays a debt which in equity and good conscience should be satisfied by another.	Can subrogation properly be applied whenever a person other than a mere volunteer pays debt which in equity and good conscience should be satisfied by another?
2415	In re Constr. Alternatives, 2 F.3d 670, 675 (6th Cir. 1993)	5	Under Ohio law, surety that pays amounts owed to subcontractor, laborer, or supplier is subrogated to rights of those it has paid and to rights of those persons whose obligations the surety has discharged, in other words, owner and contractor.	Under Ohio law, a surety that pays amounts owed to a subcontractor, laborer, or supplier is subrogated to the rights of those it has paid and to the rights of those persons whose obligations the surety has discharged, i.e., the owner and the contractor.	Is a surety that pays amounts owed to a subcontractor or laborer subrogated to the rights of those it has paid and to the rights of those persons whose obligations the surety has discharged?
2416	Feigenbaum v. Guaracini, 402 N.J. Super. 7, 19 (2008)	10	"Subrogation" is the substitution of one person in the place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand, or right, so that he who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relation to the debt or claim, and its rights, remedies, or securities.	Subrogation is " '[t]he substitution of one person in the place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand or right, so that he who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relation to the debt or claim, and its rights, remedies or securities.' "	"Is subrogation the substitution of one person in the place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand, or right, so that he who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relation to the debt or claim, and its rights, remedies, or securities?"
2418	Reilly v. Meffe, 6 F.Supp.3d 760, 770 (S.D. Ohio, 2014)	8	Under Ohio law, courts consider a number of factors in determining the existence of a partnership, including the sharing of profits, the existence of a written or oral partnership agreement; the joint ownership and control of property; the ability of members to bind the business entity; and the nature of the tax returns filed by the business entity.	Courts consider a number of factors in determining the existence of a partnership, including: the sharing of profits, "the existence of a written or oral partnership agreement; the joint ownership and control of property; the ability of members to bind the business entity; and the nature of the tax returns filed by the business entity."	Is a partners ability to bind the partnership one of the key factors of partnership?
2420	Allied Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Good, 919 N.E.2d 144, 151 (Ind. App. 2009)	4	Sanction for violation of motion in limine is within the discretion of the trial court and under appropriate circumstances might extend to declaration of a mistrial and or punishment for contempt.	That is not to say that a party who violates an order in limine may do so with impunity. Id. The sanction is within the discretion of the trial court and under appropriate circumstances might extend to declaration of a mistrial and/or punishment for contempt.	Is a sanction for violation of motion in limine within the discretion of the trial court and under appropriate circumstances might extend to declaration of a mistrial and or punishment for contempt?

2422	Builders Supply Co. v. Czerwinski, 275 Neb. 622, 637 (2008)	16	The general rule is that a surety or guarantor is entitled to be subrogated to the benefit of all the security and means of payment under the creditor's control and, therefore, in the absence of assent, waiver, or estoppel, he is generally released by an act of the creditor which deprives him of such right.	This court has noted that regardless of whether a guaranty is absolute or conditional, [t]he general rule is that a surety or guarantor is entitled to be subrogated to the benefit of all the security and means of payment under the creditor's control and, therefore, in the absence of assent, waiver, or estoppel, he is generally released by an act of the creditor which deprives him of such right.	Is a surety or guarantor entitled to be subrogated to benefit of all security and means of payment under a creditor's control?
2423	In re Fresh & Process Potatoes Antitrust Litig., 834 F. Supp. 2d 1141, 1180 (D.Idaho 2011)	45	The act of state doctrine bars judicial review of claim if (1) there is official act of foreign sovereign performed within its own territory and (2) relief sought or defense interposed in action would require court in United States to declare invalid foreign sovereign's official act.	The Act of State Doctrine bars judicial review of a claim if "(1) there is an official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory; and (2) the relief sought or the defense interposed in the action would require a court in the United States to declare invalid the foreign sovereign's official act."	When does the act of state doctrine bar judicial review of action?
2425	Gross v. German Found. Indus. Initiative, 456 F.3d 363, 391 (3d Cir. 2006)	10	Under the "act of state doctrine," American courts are precluded from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory.	Under the act of state doctrine, American courts are precluded from "inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory." Banco Nacional de Cuba v.	"Under the act of state doctrine, are American courts precluded from inquiring into the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory?"
2426	Republic of Ecuador v. Dassum, 146 So. 3d 58, 61 (Fla.App. 3 Dist., 2014)	1	The "act of state doctrine" is a judicially-created principle of international comity; the courts of Florida and the United States will presumptively defer to governmental acts, whether characterized as executive, legislative, or judicial, taken within the territory of another sovereign nation.	The act of state doctrine is a judicially-created principle of international comity; the courts of Florida and the United States will presumptively defer to governmental acts (whether we might characterize them as executive, legislative, or judicial) taken within the territory of another sovereign nation.	Is the act of state doctrine a judicially-created principle of international comity?
2427	Hourani v. Mirtchev, 796 F.3d 1, 13 (D.C. Cir. 2015)	17	As a general rule, the act of state doctrine applies to foreign government activities undertaken within its own territory, although that factor is not so inflexible as to overlook the quintessentially sovereign nature of foreign governmental action.	It is certainly true that, as a general rule, the Act of State doctrine applies to foreign government activities undertaken "within its own territory," Banco Nacional, 376 U.S. at 401, 84 S.Ct. 923, although that factor is not so inflexible as to overlook the quintessentially sovereign nature of foreign governmental action	Does the act of state doctrine apply to foreign government activities undertaken within its own territory?

2428	Glen v. Club Mediterranee S.A., 365 F. Supp. 2d 1263, 1267 (Fla. 2005)	1	"Act of state doctrine" is not a jurisdictional doctrine; rather, it is a doctrine of judicial restraint that prohibits a United States court from passing judgment on the validity of an act of a foreign sovereign taken within its own territory.	The act of state doctrine is not a jurisdictional doctrine. Rather, it is a doctrine of judicial restraint that prohibits a United States court from passing judgment on the validity of an act of a foreign sovereign taken within its own territory.	Does the act of state doctrine prohibit a United States court from passing judgment on the validity of an act of a foreign sovereign taken within its own territory?
2429	Beanal v. Freeport-McMoran, 197 F.3d 161, 167 (5th Cir. 1999)	10	It is only when nations of world have demonstrated that the wrong is of mutual and not merely several concern, by means of express international accords, that a wrong generally recognized becomes international law violation within meaning of Alien Tort Statute (ATS). 28 U.S.C.A. S 1350.	"It is only where the nations of the world have demonstrated that the wrong is of mutual, and not merely several, concern, by means of express international accords, that a wrong generally recognized becomes an international law violation."	Does a wrong generally recognized become an international law violation within the meaning of the Alien Tort Statute (ATS)?
2430	Virgin Atl. Airways Ltd. v. British Airways PLC, 872 F. Supp. 52, 59 (S.D.N.Y., 1994)	3	The "act of state doctrine" precludes courts of this country from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory.	The act of state doctrine "precludes the courts of this country from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory." Banco Nacional de Cuba v. Sabbatino, 376 U.S. 398, 401, 84 S.Ct. 923, 926, 11 L.Ed.2d 804 (1964).	Does the act of state doctrine preclude courts of the US from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory?
2433	State, Dep't of Transp. v. Douglas Asphalt Co., 297 Ga. App. 470, 471 (2009)	2	By its very nature, the grant of a motion in limine excluding evidence suggests that there is no circumstance under which the evidence under scrutiny is likely to be admissible at trial; in light of that absolute, the grant of a motion in limine excluding evidence is a judicial power which must be exercised with great care.	[B]y its very nature, the grant of a motion in limine excluding evidence suggests that there is no circumstance under which the evidence under scrutiny is likely to be admissible at trial. In light of that absolute, the grant of a motion in limine excluding evidence is a judicial power which must be exercised with great care.	Does the granting of a motion in limine excluding evidence suggest that there is no circumstance under which the evidence under scrutiny is likely to be admissible at trial?
2435	Paraschos v. YBM Magnex Int'l, 130 F. Supp. 2d 642, 644 (E.D.Pa., 2000)	1	Principle of international comity, also known as "comity of nations doctrine," permits recognition of foreign proceedings to extent that such proceedings are determined to be orderly, fair, and not detrimental to nation's interests.	As previously outlined in this Court's Order of March 28, 2000, the principle of international comity, also known as the "comity of nations doctrine," permits the "recognition of foreign proceedings to the extent that such proceedings are determined to be orderly, fair and not detrimental to the nation's interests.	"Does the principle of international comity permit recognition of foreign proceedings to the extent that such proceedings are determined to be orderly, fair, and not detrimental to nation's interests?"
2437	Manhattan Ice & Cold Storage v. City of Manhattan, 294 Kan. 60, 69 (2012)	6	In determining if a pretrial ruling on a motion in limine is justified, a district court should weigh whether the court will be in a better position during trial to assess the value and utility of evidence and its potential prejudice.	In determining if a pretrial ruling is justified a district court should weigh whether the court will be in a better position during trial to assess the value and utility of evidence and its potential prejudice.	"In determining if a pretrial ruling is justified, should a district court weigh whether the court will be in a better position during trial to assess the utility of the evidence?"

2438	Kennecott Copper Corp., Nevada Mines Div., McGill, Nev. v. Train, 424 F. Supp. 1217, 1225 (D. Nev. 1976)	2	The ripeness doctrine involves a twofold aspect, requiring evaluation of both the fitness of the issues for judicial decision, and the hardship to the parties of withholding court consideration.	It is well recognized that the ripeness doctrine involves a twofold aspect, requiring evaluation of both (1) the fitness of the issues for judicial decision, and (2) the hardship to the parties of withholding court consideration.	"Does the ripeness doctrine involve aspects requiring evaluation of both the fitness of the issues for judicial decision, and the hardship to the parties of withholding court consideration?"
2439	Abington Elec. Co. v. Pennsylvania Pub. Util. Comm'n, 131 Pa. Super. 200, 205 (1938)	3	The Legislature did not contemplate to restrict utility activities, so that a utility may not conduct and control its affairs to its best interests, but utility may fully enjoy and exercise all rights, powers, and privileges which it possesses, keeping in mind public welfare, so that there is a proper service, accommodation, convenience, or safety, and it is only as to matters in which public may be interested, and then only for such special purposes as are mentioned in statute, that commission has jurisdiction. 66 P.S. SS 1122(e) 1123(a).	It was not within the contemplation of the Legislature to restrict utility activities, so that a company may not conduct and control its affairs to its best interests, but that it may fully enjoy and exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges which it lawfully possesses, keeping in mind always the public welfare, so that there is a proper service, accommodation, convenience, or safety. It is only as to matters in which the public may be interested, and then only for such special purpose as are mentioned in the act, that the commission has jurisdiction.	Does a company have a right to manage its own affairs to the fullest extent consistent with the public interest?
2440	Penn v. Carolina Virginia Coastal Corp., 231 N.C. 481, 484 (N.C., 1950)	1	A "taking" under power of eminent domain is an entering upon private property for more than a momentary period and, under warrant of color of legal authority, devoting it to a public use, or otherwise informally appropriating or injuriously affecting it in such a way as substantially to oust owner and deprive him of all beneficial enjoyment thereof.	And 'taking' under the power of eminent domain may be defined as entering upon private property for more than a momentary period, and, under warrant or color of legal authority, devoting it to a public use, or otherwise informally appropriating or injuriously affecting it in such a way as substantially to oust the owner and deprive him of all beneficial enjoyment thereof'.	What does the term taking encompass under the law?
2441	City of Bisbee v. Arizona Water Co., 214 Ariz. 368, 377 (2007)	14	Once granted, a certificate of convenience and necessity confers upon its holder an exclusive right to provide the relevant service for as long as the grantee can provide adequate service at a reasonable rate. A.R.S. SS 40-281(A), 40-282.	Section 40-282, on which AWC relies, merely addresses the prerequisites for obtaining a "certificate of convenience and necessity." Such certificate must be "obtained from the commission" before the construction of a public utility. A.R.S. 40-281(A). "Once granted, the certificate confers upon its holder an exclusive right to provide the relevant service for as long as the grantee can provide adequate service at a reasonable rate."	Does the granted certificate of convenience and necessity confer upon its holder an exclusive right to provide services at reasonable rates?

2443	Beverage Capital Corp. v. Martin, 119 Md. App. 662, 674 (1998)	6	Workers' compensation benefits constitute employment-related benefit which replaces common-law right of employees to bring tort actions against their employers for job-related personal injuries.	Workers' Compensation benefits constitute an "employment-related benefit which replaces the common law right of employees to bring tort actions against their employers for job-related personal injuries."	Do workers compensation benefits constitute employment-related benefits which replace common-law right of employees to bring tort actions against their employers for job-related personal injuries?
2444	Dukakis v. U.S. Dep't of Def., 686 F. Supp. 30, 37 (D.Mass. 1988)	3	Reservation of power to the states over the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress, expressed in the militia clause of the Constitution, does not override the legitimately exercised power of Congress to raise and support armies. U.S.C.A. Const. Art. 1, S 8, cls. 12, 16.	Nevertheless, guided by the decisions in the dual-enlistment cases as well as Selective Draft Law Cases, I conclude that the reservation of power to the states over "the Authority of training the Militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress," expressed in the Militia Clause, does not override the legitimately exercised power of Congress "[t]o raise and support Armies."	Does the reservation of power to the states over the authority of training the militia override the legitimately exercised power of Congress to raise and support armies?
2446	State Farm Ins. Co. v. J.P. Spano Const., 55 A.D.3d 824, 825 (2008)	3	While parties to an agreement may waive their insurer's right of subrogation, waiver-of-subrogation clauses, which reflect the parties' allocation of the risk of liability between themselves to third parties through the device of insurance, are to be strictly construed and cannot be enforced beyond the scope of the specific context in which they appear.	While parties to an agreement may waive their insurer's right of subrogation, waiver-of-subrogation clauses, which "reflect the parties' allocation of the risk of liability between themselves to third parties through the device of insurance" (Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Perfect Knowledge, 299 A.D.2d 524, 526, 752 N.Y.S.2d 677), are to be strictly construed and cannot be enforced beyond the scope of the specific context in which they appear.	"Are waiver of subrogation provisions, which reflect the parties' allocation of the risk of liability between themselves to third parties, generally valid and enforceable?"
2454	Publix Super Markets v. Cheesbro Roofing, 502 So. 2d 484, 486-487 (Fla.App. 5 Dist., 1987)	6	In rem actions where the res is real property must be brought in county in which land lies because the court must have direct control, i.e., geographical jurisdiction, over the res in order to exercise its jurisdiction and grant the relief sought.	All such in rem actions, where the res is real *487 property, must be brought in the county in which the land lies because the court must have direct control (geographical jurisdiction) over the res in order to exercise its jurisdiction and grant the relief sought.	Must all in rem actions regarding real property be brought in the county where the court has direct control over the res?
2455	Detox Indus. v. Leeds, 770 S.W.2d 912, 915 (Tex. App. 1989)	3	Right of plaintiff to take nonsuit is absolute and unqualified when motion therefor is timely made, and adverse party has not filed claim for affirmative relief.	The right of a plaintiff to take a nonsuit is absolute and unqualified when the motion therefor is timely made, State v. Gary, 163 Tex. 565, 359 S.W.2d 456, 459 (1962), and the adverse party has not filed a claim for affirmative relief.	Is a right of a plaintiff to take nonsuit absolute and unqualified when a motion therefore is timely made and the adverse party has not filed a claim for relief?

2457	Gutierrez v. Baldrige, 2010-1528 (La. App. 3 Cir. 5/11/11), 65 So.3d 251, 254 (La. App. 2011)	3	A court that holds a pretrial conference must render an order memorializing the actions taken at the conference; that order controls the subsequent course of the action, unless modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice. LSA-C.C.P. art. 1551.	The availability of workers compensation benefits to injured employees arises under statutes, not under the court- made common law.	Must a court that holds a pretrial conference render an order memorializing the actions taken at the conference and does that order controls the subsequent course of the action?
2458	Polis v. Fratkin, 188 Pa. Super. 586, 587 (1959)	2	Where legal firm and accounting firm was each seeking the return of papers allegedly belonging to the other firm and each was asking a money verdict against the other, such matters should be disposed of at a pretrial conference where professional men involved would be able to discuss their differences intelligently, and, under supervision of judge, arrive at a just solution of controversy without resorting to prolonged litigation.	This is a replevin action which, with another replevin action brought by the defendant in this action against the plaintiff, grew out of services rendered by a firm of accountants to a firm of lawyers. Each firm is seeking the return of papers allegedly belonging to the other firm, and each asks a money verdict against the other. These matters should be disposed of at a pretrial conference where professional men of the type here involved would be able to discuss their differences intelligently, and, under the supervision of the judge, arrive at a just solution of the controversy without resorting to prolonged litigation hardly merited by the circumstances of this case.	How should matters involving professional men who would be able to discuss their differences intelligently be disposed of?
2459	Rice v. Perl, 320 N.W.2d 407, 412 (Minn., 1982)	5	While it is true that trial judge has great discretion to determine procedural calendar of a case, under certain rules continuances should be liberally granted, especially when party seeking a continuance is doing so because of a claim of insufficient time to conduct discovery. 48 M.S.A., Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 56.06; Fed.Rules Civ.Proc. Rule 56(f), 28 U.S.C.A.	While it is true that the trial judge has great discretion to determine the procedural calendar of a case, under rule 56.06 (and Federal rule 56(f) after which it is patterned) such continuances should be liberally granted. This is especially true when the party seeking the continuance is doing so because of a claim of insufficient time to conduct discovery.	"Should continuances be liberally granted, especially when the continuance is sought because of a claim of insufficient time to conduct discovery?"
2460	Pulse v. Hill, 217 Cal. App. 2d 301, 304(Ct. App. 1963)	3	Pretrial conference order carries over issues remaining in dispute between parties, and order controls subsequent proceedings unless modified at or before trial. Cal.Rules of Court, rules 210(c), 214(1), 216	The factual and legal contentions of the parties and the issues remaining in dispute are then carried over into the pretrial conference order, and the order controls subsequent proceedings unless modified at or before trial.	"Does a pretrial conference order carry over issues remaining in dispute between parties, and order controls subsequent proceedings unless modified at or before trial?"
2461	Jones v. Crow, 633 So. 2d 247, 249 (La. Ct. App. 1993)	1	"Prematurity" contemplates that the action taken by the petitioner occurs prior to some procedure or assigned time; it is usually utilized in cases wherein the law or a contract has provided a procedure for one aggrieved of a decision to seek relief before resorting to judicial action. LSA-C.C.P. art. 926(1).	Prematurity contemplates that the action taken by the petitioner occurs prior to some procedure or assigned time. It is usually utilized in cases wherein the law or contract has provided a procedure for one aggrieved of a decision to seek relief before resorting to judicial action.	Does the exception to the objection of prematurity contemplate that the plaintiff has filed his action prior to some procedure or assigned time?

2462	Dykeman v. Ashton, 8 Ariz. App. 327, 330 (1968)	6	Where party seeks continuance due to absence of witness, there must be showing that witness' testimony would be material were he allowed to testify, and that moving party has used due diligence to procure attendance of witness.	Where a party seeks a continuance due to the absence of a witness, there must be a showing that the witness's testimony would be material, were he allowed to testify, and that the moving party has used due diligence to procure the attendance of the witness.	"Where party seeks continuance due to absence of witness, must there be a showing that a witness' testimony would be material were he allowed to testify?"
2463	Heatherly v. State, 189 N.C. App. 213, 221 (2008)	5	A "tax" is a charge levied and collected as a contribution to the maintenance of the general government; it is imposed upon the citizens in common at regularly recurring periods for the purpose of providing a continuous revenue.	"A TAX [I]S 'A CHARGE' LEVIED and collected as a contribution to the maintenance of the general government ... [It is] imposed upon the citizens in common at regularly recurring periods for the purpose of providing a continuous revenue."	Is a tax imposed upon the citizens in common at regularly recurring periods for the purpose of providing continuous revenue?
2464	Wenger v. Monroe, 282 F.3d 1068, 1072 (C.A.9 (Cal.),2002)	1	Before a court can determine whether review of his claims is appropriate, a person challenging a military decision generally must allege (a) a violation of a recognized constitutional right, a federal statute, or military regulations, and (b) exhaustion of available intraservice remedies.	Under the Mindes test as modified by this Circuit, a person challenging a military decision generally must satisfy two threshold elements before a court can determine whether review of his claims is appropriate. "An internal military decision is unreviewable unless the plaintiff alleges (a) a violation of [a recognized constitutional right], a federal statute, or military regulations; and (b) exhaustion of available intraservice remedies." Khalsa v. Weinberger, 779 F.2d 1393, 1398 (9th Cir.), reaff'd, 787 F.2d 1288 (1985).	What two threshold elements do courts use to determine whether review of military decisions are appropriate?
2465	State v. Vogel, 247 Neb. 209, 215-216 (1995)	8	Defense may offer evidence on any trait reasonably related to elements of charged offense; however, trial court has responsibility to determine competence of proffered character evidence and to prevent trial from straying into collateral matters. Neb.Rev.Stat. S 27-404(1)(a).	The defense may offer evidence on any trait reasonably related to the elements of the charged offense; however, the trial court has the responsibility to determine the competence of the proffered character evidence and to prevent the trial from straying into collateral matters.	Can the defense offer evidence on any trait reasonably related to the elements of the charged offense?
2466	U.S. v. Sun-Diamond Growers of California, 119 S.Ct. 1402, 1406, 526 U.S. 398, 404-05 (U.S.Dist.Col.,1999)	1	To convict under federal bribery statute, there must be a quid pro quo, a specific intent to give or receive something of value in exchange for an official act, while illegal gratuity may constitute merely a reward for some future act that public official will take and may already have determined to take, or for a past act that he has already taken. 18 U.S.C.A. S 201(b)(1, 2), (c).	In other words, for bribery there must be a quid pro quo-a specific intent to give or receive something of value in exchange for an official *405 act. An illegal gratuity, on the other hand, may constitute merely a reward for some future act that the public official will take (and may already have determined to take), or for a past act that he has already taken.	"Under federal criminal statutes, what is the distinction between bribery and illegal gratuities?"

2468	United States v. Menendez, 137 F.Supp.3d 709, 724 (D.N.J., 2015)	22	Honest services fraud based on bribery does not require that each quid, or item of value, be linked to a specific quo, or official act; rather, a bribe may come in the form of a stream of benefits.	Honest services fraud based on bribery "does not require that each quid, or item of value, be linked to a specific quo, or official act. Rather, a bribe may come in the form of a 'stream of benefits."	Does each item of value need to be linked to a specific official act for honest services fraud based on bribery?
2469	Denil v. Integrity Mut. Ins. Co., 135 Wis. 2d 373, 378 (1986)	2	A trial court may entertain a motion to exclude evidence during trial, and may, in its discretion, accept motions outside the time parameters set forth in a pretrial order.	A trial court may entertain a motion to exclude evidence during trial and may in its discretion accept motions outside the time parameters set forth in a pretrial order.	"Could a trial court entertain a motion to exclude evidence during trial, and in its discretion accept motions outside the time parameters set forth in a pretrial order?"
2470	Sibley v. Menard, 398 So. 2d 590, 597 (La. Ct. App. 1980), on reh'g, 404 So. 2d 980 (La. Ct. App. 1981), writ denied, 400 So. 2d 211 (La. 1981)	5	Pretrial order allowing issues and listing witnesses controls subsequent course of action unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice.	The trial court had issued a pretrial order in this case, narrowing the issues and listing the witnesses. That order controls the subsequent course of action unless modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice.	Does a pretrial order allowing issues and listing witnesses control a subsequent course of action unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice?
2471	Zinke v. Orskog, 422 S.W.3d 422, 427 (Mo. Ct. App. 2013)	9	Once a permitted voluntary dismissal is filed, there is nothing pending before the trial court on which it is permitted to act, though the court may enter administrative orders such as those with regard to the assessment of costs. V.A.M.S. § 516.230; V.A.M.R. 67.02.	Once a permitted voluntary dismissal is filed, there is nothing pending before the trial court on which it is permitted to act, though the court may enter administrative orders such as those with regard to the assessment of costs.	"Once a permitted voluntary dismissal is filed, is there anything pending before the trial court on which it is permitted to act, other than to enter administrative orders such as those with regard to the assessment of costs?"
2472	City Nat. Bank v. Anlage, 448 So. 2d 199, 200 (1984)	1	Trial court may not dismiss a suit without prejudice, after defendant has made a general appearance, if substantive rights acquired by defendant would thereby be lost or if the dismissal would deprive defendant of a just defense. LSA-C.C.P. arts. 1671, 1671 comment.	However, the trial court may not dismiss a suit without prejudice if substantive rights acquired by the defendant would thereby be lost or if the dismissal would deprive the defendant of a just defense.	"Can a trial court dismiss a suit without prejudice, upon application of plaintiff, if substantive rights acquired by the defendant would thereby be lost or if the dismissal would deprive the defendant of a just defense?"
2473	Eanes v. McKnight, 262 La. 915, 933 (1972)	3	An orderly disposition of each case and of entire docket and avoidance of surprise are inherent in theory of pretrial procedure and are sufficient reasons for allowing trial judge to require adherence to pretrial order in conduct of an action.	An orderly disposition of each case and of the entire docket and the avoidance of surprise are inherent in the theory of pre-trial procedure and are sufficient reasons for allowing the trial judge to require adherence to the pre-trial order in the conduct of an action.	Are an orderly disposition of each case and of entire docket and avoidance of surprise inherent in a theory of pretrial procedure?

2474	Sch. Dist. of City of Scranton v. Dale & Dale Design & Dev., 559 Pa. 398, 406 (1999)	7	In determining whether a tax duplicates another tax and results in double taxation prohibited to local taxing authorities, the operation or incidence of the two taxes is controlling as against mere differences in terminology from time to time employed in describing taxes in various cases; the incidence of a tax embraces the subject matter thereof and, more important, the measure of the tax, i.e., the base or yardstick by which the tax is applied.	It is well-established that [i]n determining whether a tax duplicates another tax and results in double taxation prohibited to local taxing authorities, the operation or incidence of the two taxes is controlling as against mere differences in terminology from time to time employed in describing taxes in various cases. The incidence of a tax embraces the subject matter thereof and, more important, the measure of the tax, i.e., the base or yardstick by which the tax is applied.	Is the operation or incidence of the two taxes controlling to determine double taxation?
2475	Rho Co., Inc. v. Department of Revenue, 52 Wash.App. 196, 204 (Wash.App.,1988)	1	While it is not established rule that principles of tort and agency law necessarily apply to taxation situations, whether or not principle from one area of law will be applied to another depends on facts and circumstances of transaction and context or purpose in which they are considered.	*204 While it is not an established rule that principles of tort and agency law necessarily apply to taxation situations, whether or not a principle from one area of the law will be applied to another depends on the facts and circumstances of the transaction and on the context or purpose in which they are considered.	Is it an established rule that principles of tort and agency law necessarily apply to taxation situations?
2478	Clarke v. D.C., 311 A.2d 508, 510-11 (D.C. App. 1973)	1	Rule pertaining to pretrial order is intended to remove cases from realm of surprise, but does not contemplate or require that rigid adherence to pretrial order must always be exacted. D.C.C.E. SCR, Civil Rule 16.	While this rule is intended to remove cases from the 'realm of surprise,' it does not contemplate or require that rigid adherence to the pretrial order must always be exacted.	"Is a rule pertaining to pretrial order intended to remove cases from a realm of surprise, but does not contemplate or require that rigid adherence to pretrial order must always be exacted?"
2480	U.S. Bank Nat. Ass'n v. Peterson, 284 Neb. 820, 832 (2012)	13	An admission that is not withdrawn or amended cannot be rebutted by contrary evidence or ignored by the district court simply because it finds the evidence presented by the party against whom the admission operates more credible. Neb. Ct. R. Disc. S 6-336.	AAA Legal Clinic, 930 F.2d 1117, 1120 (5th Cir.1991), in which it was stated that "[a]n admission that is not withdrawn or amended cannot be rebutted by contrary [evidence] or ignored by the district court simply because it finds the evidence presented by the party against whom the admission operates more credible."	Can an admission that is not withdrawn or amended be rebutted by contrary evidence or ignored by the district court simply because it finds the evidence presented by the party against whom the admission operates more credible?
2481	VSD Commc'ns v. Lone Wolf Pub. Grp., 124 N.C. App. 642, 643-44 (N.C.App.,1996)	1	Filing of voluntary dismissal strips trial court of its authority to enter further orders in adversary proceedings, except as provided by rule of civil procedure which authorizes court to enter specific orders apportioning and taxing costs. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(a, d), G.S. S 1A-1.	The filing of a voluntary dismissal strips the trial court of its authority to enter further orders in the adversary proceedings, "except as provided by Rule 41(d) which authorizes the court to enter specific orders apportioning and taxing costs." Id. (citing Fields v. *644 Whitehouse & Sons Co., 98 N.C.App. 395, 397-98, 390 S.E.2d 725, 726-27, disc. review denied, 327 N.C. 427, 395 S.E.2d 676 (1990)).	"Does a voluntary dismissal strip the trial court of authority to enter further orders in the case, except specific orders apportioning and taxing costs?"

2482	Gauthier v. Florida Int'l Univ., 38 So. 3d 221, 224 (Fla. App. 2010)	2	Under the Workers' Compensation Act, an employer is under a continuing obligation, once it has knowledge of an employee's injury, to place needed benefits in the hands of the injured worker, and this obligation requires an employer to offer or furnish benefits when the employer knows, or reasonably should know from facts properly and diligently investigated, that such benefits are due. West's F.S.A. S 440.015.	Thus, "an employer is under a continuing obligation, once it has knowledge of an employee's injury, to place needed benefits in the hands of the injured worker." This requires an employer to "offer or furnish benefits when the employer knows, or reasonably should know from facts properly and diligently investigated, that such benefits are due."	Is an employer under a continuing obligation to place needed benefits in the hands of the injured worker?
2483	Berkeley Fed. Sav. Bank v. Terra Del Sol, Inc., 119 N.C. App. 249, 251, 457 S.E.2d 736, 737 (1995)	1	Voluntary dismissal taken without court order, unless otherwise stated, is without prejudice and may be refiled within one year of dismissal. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(a)(1), G.S. S 1A-1.	Rule 41(a)(1) of the North Carolina Rules of Civil Procedure provides that any action or any claim therein may be dismissed by the plaintiff without a court order at any time before plaintiff rests his case. G.S. 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(1). Unless otherwise stated, the dismissal is without prejudice and may be refiled within one year of the dismissal.	"Is voluntary dismissal taken without a court order, unless otherwise stated, without prejudice and may be refiled within one year of dismissal?"
2484	Medina v. Raven, 492 S.W.3d 53, 58 (Tex. App. 2016)	1	The standard for withdrawing deemed admissions and for allowing a late summary-judgment response are the same: either is proper upon a showing of (1) good cause, and (2) no undue prejudice.	The supreme court has held that the standards for withdrawing deemed admissions and for allowing a late summary-judgment response are the same. "Either is proper upon a showing of (1) good cause, and (2) no undue prejudice."	"Are the standard for withdrawing deemed admissions and for allowing a late summary-judgment response the same: either is proper upon a showing of (1) good cause, and (2) no undue prejudice?"
2488	Stelly v. Papania, 927 S.W.2d 620, 622 (Tex., 1996)	3	Good cause is threshold standard for withdrawal of deemed admissions; party can establish good cause by showing that its failure to answer was accidental or the result of a mistake, rather than intentional or the result of conscious indifference. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 169, subd. 2.	After the rule was amended in 1988, "good cause" became the threshold standard for withdrawal of deemed admissions. Halton, 792 S.W.2d at 465. A party can establish good cause by showing that its failure to answer was accidental or the result of a mistake, rather than intentional or the result of conscious indifference.	"Can a party establish good cause for withdrawing deemed admissions by showing that its failure to answer was accidental or result of mistake, rather than intentional or result of conscious indifference?"
2489	Morgan v. Timmers Chevrolet, 1 S.W.3d 803, 807 (Tex. App. 1999)	3	Before court can properly allow withdrawal of deemed admissions it must find that good cause exists for failure to make timely answers to requested admissions, that withdrawal can be ordered without causing undue prejudice to party relying on admissions, and that presentation of merits will be subverted by withdrawal. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 169(2) (Repealed).	Thus, before a court can properly allow withdrawal of deemed admissions, it must find not only that good cause exists for the failure to make timely answers to the requested admissions, but also that the withdrawal can be ordered without causing undue prejudice to the party relying on the admissions and that the presentation of the merits will be subverted by the withdrawal.	When can a court properly allow withdrawal of deemed admissions?

2490	Shwe v. Jaber, 147 N.C. App. 148, 151 (2001)	5	Once a matter is admitted by failure to respond to request for admissions, matter is conclusively established for purposes of pending action unless court, upon motion, allows withdrawal or amendment of admission. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 36, G.S. S 1A-1.	Once a matter is admitted by failure to respond, the matter is conclusively established for purposes of the pending action unless the court, upon motion, allows withdrawal or amendment of the admission. N.C. Gen.Stat. 1A-1, Rule 36.	"Is a matter conclusively established for purposes of pending action unless court, upon motion, allows withdrawal or amendment of admission?"
2491	Massachusetts Highway Dep't v. Smith, 51 Mass. App. Ct. 614, 618-19 (2001)	3	A party requesting an admission may, if he feels the requirements of admissions rule have not been met, move to determine the sufficiency of the answer, to compel a proper response, or to have the matter ordered admitted. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 36(a), 43A M.G.L.A.	"A party requesting an admission may, if he feels [the] requirements [of rule 36(a)] have not *619 been met, move to determine the sufficiency of the answer, to compel a proper response, or to have the matter ordered admitted." .	"Can a party requesting an admission, move to determine the sufficiency of the answer, to compel a proper response, or to have the matter ordered admitted?"
2492	United States v. Rosen, 716 F.3d 691, 700 (2d Cir. 2013)	4	To establish the corrupt intent necessary to support a federal bribery conviction, the government must prove that the defendant had a specific intent to give something of value in exchange for an official act, which generally includes any act taken under color of official authority. 18 U.S.C.A. S 666(a)(2).	To establish the " 'corrupt' intent necessary to a bribery conviction," the Government must prove that the defendant had " 'a specific intent to give ... something of value in exchange for an official act,' " United States v. Alfisi, 308 F.3d 144, 149 (2d Cir.2002) (emphasis in original) (quoting United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers of Cal., 526 U.S. 398, 404-05, 119 S.Ct. 1402, 143 L.Ed.2d 576 (1999)), which generally includes any act taken "under color of official authority," Ganim, 510 F.3d at 142 n. 4.	Does bribery require the specific intent to give something of value in exchange for an official act?
2493	J. Zeevi & Sons, Ltd. v. Grindlays Bank (Uganda) Ltd., 37 N.Y.2d 220, 228, 333 N.E.2d 168, 173 (1975)	7	Principle which determines whether New York will give effect to foreign legislation is that of public policy and, where there is a conflict between New York's public policy and the application of comity, the New York courts' own sense of justice and equity as embodied in its public policy must prevail.	The principle which determines whether we shall give effect to foreign legislation is that of public policy and, where there is a conflict between our public policy and application of comity, our own sense of justice and equity as embodied in our public policy must prevail	"What principle determines whether the court shall give effect to foreign legislation and when there is a conflict, what must prevail?"
2494	Kapoor v. Dybwad, 49 N.E.3d 108, 132 (Ind. Ct. App. 2015)	39	In order to meet the burden of pleading fraud with specificity, the party alleging fraud must specifically allege the elements of fraud, the time, place, and substance of false reports, and any facts that were misrepresented, as well as the identity of what was procured by fraud. Trial Procedure Rule 9(B).	In order to meet this burden, the party alleging fraud must specifically allege the elements of fraud, the time, place, and substance of false reports, and any facts that were misrepresented, as well as the identity of what was procured by fraud.	"Should the party asserting fraud specifically allege the elements of fraud, the time, place, and substance of false reports?"
2496	Villegas v. Carter, 711 S.W.2d 624, 626 (Tex.,1986)	4	Trial court that allows attorney voluntarily to withdraw must give party time to secure new counsel and time for new counsel to investigate case and prepare for trial. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 251, 253.	Therefore, when a trial court allows an attorney to voluntarily withdraw, it must give the party time to secure new counsel and time for the new counsel to investigate the case and prepare for trial.	"When a trial court allows an attorney to voluntarily withdraw, will it give the party time to secure new counsel and time for the new counsel to investigate the case and prepare for trial?"

2497	In re Zhang, 135 Ohio App. 3d 350, 355 (1999)	3	Court need not grant a continuance for purposes of securing new counsel where the request plausibly can be viewed as simply a delaying tactic or as otherwise unreasonable.	A court need not grant a continuance for purposes of securing new counsel where the request plausibly can be viewed as simply a delaying tactic or as otherwise unreasonable.	Should a court grant a continuance for purposes of securing new counsel where the request plausibly can be viewed as simply a delaying tactic or as otherwise unreasonable?
2498	Booth v. Blueberry Hill Restaurants, 245 Neb. 490, 490 (1994)	1	Determination of appropriate sanction for failure to comply with proper discovery order initially rests with discretion of trial court, and its rulings on appropriate sanction will not be disturbed on appeal absent a showing of an abuse of that discretion.	Determination of an appropriate sanction for failure to comply with a proper discovery order initially rests with the discretion 868 of the trial court, and its rulings with respect thereto will not be disturbed on appeal absent a showing of an abuse of that discretion.	Does the determination of an appropriate sanction for a party's failure to admit rest within the discretion of the trial court and will it be disturbed on appeal absent an abuse of discretion?
2499	Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Whirlpool Corp., No. B145197, 2002 WL 228208, at *11 (Cal. Ct. App. Feb. 15, 2002)	8	Unlike other discovery sanctions, an award of expenses for failure to respond to request for admission is not a penalty; instead, it is designed to reimburse reasonable expenses incurred by a party in proving the truth of a requested admission when any trial would have been expedited or shortened if the request had been admitted. West's Ann.Code Civ.Proc. S 2033(o).	Unlike other discovery sanctions, an award of expenses under section 2033, subdivision (o) is not a penalty. Instead, it is designed to reimburse reasonable expenses incurred by a party in proving the truth of a requested admission when any trial would have been expedited or shortened if the request had been admitted.	Is it designed to reimburse reasonable expenses incurred by a party in proving the truth of a requested admission such that trial would have been expedited or shortened if the request had been admitted?
2500	Brodtmann v. Duke, 1998-1518 (La. App. 4 Cir. 3/21/01), 803 So.2d 41, 44-45 (2001)	2	Attorney fees awarded for party's failure to admit genuineness of document or truth of any matter would be the reasonable expense incurred in proving the truth of the requested admission. LSA-C.C.P. art. 1472.	Attorney's fees awarded for a party's failure to admit genuineness of documents or truth of any matter is the reasonable expense incurring in proving the truth of the requested admission.	"Is an attorney fee awarded for party's failure to admit genuineness of document or truth of any matter be, the reasonable expense incurred in proving the truth of the requested admission?"
2501	Hess v. Hess, 679 N.E.2d 153, 154 (Ind. App. 1997)	5	Unexpected and untimely withdrawal of counsel does not necessarily entitle a party to a continuance, but denial of continuance based on withdrawal of counsel may be error when the moving party is free from fault and his rights are likely to be prejudiced by the denial. Trial Procedure Rule 53.5.	The unexpected and untimely withdrawal of counsel does not necessarily entitle a party to a continuance. However, the denial of a continuance based on the withdrawal of counsel may be error when the moving party is free from fault and his rights are likely to be prejudiced by the denial.	"Under some circumstances, can denial of a continuance based on the withdrawal of counsel be error when the moving party is free from fault and her rights are likely to be prejudiced by the denial?"
2502	Hodge v. Hodge, 507 F.2d 87, 90 (3d Cir. 1975)	2	Refusal to grant continuance is not alone denial of right to counsel even though refusal prevents party from being represented by particular attorney because of that attorney's other professional commitments.	The refusal to grant a continuance is not, without more, a denial of the right to counsel even though the refusal prevents a party from being represented by a particular attorney because of that attorney's other professional commitments.	Is refusal to grant a continuance not alone a denial of right to counsel even though refusal prevents a party from being represented by a particular attorney because of that attorney's other professional commitments?

2505	Villegas v. Carter, 711 S.W.2d 624, 626 (Tex.,1986)	4	Trial court that allows attorney voluntarily to withdraw must give party time to secure new counsel and time for new counsel to investigate case and prepare for trial. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 251, 253.	Therefore, when a trial court allows an attorney to voluntarily withdraw, it must give the party time to secure new counsel and time for the new counsel to investigate the case and prepare for trial.	"When a trial court allows an attorney to withdraw, must it give the party time to secure new counsel and time for the new counsel to investigate the case and prepare for trial?"
2506	Post-Tensioned Const. v. VSL Corp., 143 Ga. App. 148, 151 (1977)	11	Since failure to make motion to have admissions withdrawn or amended foreclosed remedial action under code, requests for admissions which were not answered or objected to, in suit based on breach of contract, were deemed admitted. Code, SS 81A-136, 81A-136(b).	Since the failure to make a motion to have admissions withdrawn or amended forecloses remedial action under Code Ann. s 81A-136(b), the requests for admissions which were not answered or objected to are deemed admitted.	"Failure to make a motion to have admissions withdrawn or amended forecloses remedial action, and therefore are the requests for admissions which were not answered or objected to deemed admitted?"
2507	State ex rel. Grimm v. Ashmanskas, 298 Or. 206, 211-212 (1984)	3	A "deposition to perpetuate testimony" is arranged by litigants when it becomes known that a witness will be unavailable to testify at trial, and such depositions usually follow routine of the trial with objections to all matters being made at time of the deposition but with the ruling on the objections reserved for trial judge; such depositions are usually restricted to nonleading questions on direct examination and follow standard cross-examination techniques.	In contrast, a deposition to perpetuate testimony is arranged by the litigants when it becomes known that a witness will be unavailable to testify at trial. "Perpetuation" *212 depositions usually follow the routine of a trial with objections to all matters being made at the time of the deposition but reserving the ruling on the objection for the trial judge. Perpetuation depositions are usually restricted to non-leading questions on direct examination and follow standard cross-examination techniques.	Are perpetuation depositions arranged by the litigants when it becomes known that a witness will be unavailable to testify at trial?
2508	Fibreboard Corp. v. Pool, 813 S.W.2d 658, 682 (Tex. App. 1991)	43	After expiration of 30 days from date of service of request for admissions and in absence of motion to extend time for filing response, admissions are automatically deemed admitted, and trial court has no discretion to deem or to refuse to deem admissions admitted. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 169.	After the expiration of thirty days from the date of service, and in the absence of a motion to extend time for filing a response, the admissions are automatically deemed admitted and the trial court has no discretion to deem, or refuse to deem, the admissions admitted.	"After expiration of 30 days from the date of service of a request for admissions, are admissions automatically deemed admitted, and a trial court has no discretion to deem or to refuse to deem admissions admitted?"
2509	In re Marriage of Chesrow, 255 Ill. App. 3d 613, 618 (1994)	4	Party seeking continuance must provide court with especially grave reasons for continuance once case has reached trial stage because of potential inconvenience to witnesses, parties, and court. Sup.Ct.Rules, Rule 231(f).	The party seeking a continuance must provide the court with especially grave reasons for a continuance once the case has reached the trial stage because of the potential inconvenience to the witnesses, the parties, and the court.	"Should the party seeking continuance provide a trial court with especially grave reasons for continuance once a case has reached the trial stage because of potential inconvenience to witnesses, parties, and court?"

2510	In re Marriage of Gallagher, 256 Ill. App. 3d 439, 442-43 (1993)	4	When continuance is not requested until the day of trial, especially persuasive reason must be given by the moving party because of the potential inconvenience to the witnesses, the parties, and the court. Sup.Ct.Rules, Rule 231(f).	When a continuance is not requested until the day of the trial, Supreme Court Rule 231(f) (134 Ill.2d R. 231(f)) requires that an especially persuasive reason be given by the moving party because of the potential inconvenience to the witnesses, the parties and the court.	"When continuance is not requested until the day of trial, must an especially persuasive reason be given by the moving party because of the potential inconvenience to the witnesses, the parties, and the court?"
2511	Peagler v. Skyline Shopping Ctr., 662 So. 2d 282, 283 (Ala.Civ.App., 1995)	1	Trial court's denial of motion for continuance on ground attorney is involved in trial of another case will generally be affirmed in exercise of trial court's broad discretion; in order for denial to be abuse of discretion, it must be shown that: attorney is actually engaged in trial of other cause at the time set for trial; other professional advice is unavailable; and meritorious cause of action or defense cannot be competently offered in absence of the attorney.	Our supreme court stated that the mere fact that an attorney is involved in the trial of another case elsewhere does not confer an absolute right to a continuance. A trial court's denial of a motion for a continuance under such circumstances will generally be affirmed as exercise of the trial court's broad discretion in such matters. Our supreme court further recognized that there may be cases where the denial of a motion for a continuance under such circumstances might be considered an abuse of the trial court's discretion. Our supreme court emphasized that in order for the denial of a motion for a continuance to be considered an abuse of discretion, it must be shown that (1) the attorney is actually engaged in the trial of the other cause at the time set for trial, (2) other professional advice is unavailable, and (3) a meritorious cause of action or defense cannot be competently offered in the absence of the attorney.	When do courts consider the denial of motion for continuance an abuse of discretion of the court?
2512	Pitcher v. Laird, 421 F.2d 1272, 1281 (C.A.5 (Tex.), 1970)	6	Since sole basis of serviceman's conscientious objection claim was not a personal moral code, his request for discharge could not be denied on grounds that his beliefs were based upon philosophical views or personal moral code.	Since the sole basis of Pitcher's conscientious objection claim is not a personal moral code, his request for discharge cannot be denied on grounds that his beliefs are based upon philosophical views or a personal moral code.	Can a serviceman's request for discharge be denied on grounds that his beliefs were based upon philosophical views or personal moral code?
2513	United States v. Ganim, 510 F.3d 134, 149 (C.A.2 (Conn.), 2007)	10	Bribery can be accomplished through an ongoing course of conduct, so long as evidence shows that the favors and gifts flowing to a public official are in exchange for a pattern of official actions favorable to the donor.	Thus, bribery can be accomplished through an ongoing course of conduct, so long as evidence shows that the "favors and gifts flowing to a public official [are] in exchange for a pattern of official actions favorable to the donor.	"If favors and gifts flowing to a public official are in exchange for a pattern of official actions favorable to the donor, can bribery be accomplished through an ongoing course of conduct?"

2515	Laino v. Cuprum S.A. de C.V., 235 A.D.2d 25, 29, 663 (N.Y.S.2d Sup. Ct. 1997)	2	Letters rogatory are but one of several procedural devices by which court in one country may request authorities in another country to assist requesting court in the administration of justice. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rules 4(f), 28(b), 28 U.S.C.A.; McKinney's CPLR 3108, 3113(a), par. 3.	Letters rogatory are but one of several procedural devices by which a court in one country may request authorities in another country to assist the requesting court in the administration of justice	Are letters rogatory one of several procedural devices by which a court in one country may request authorities in another country to assist?
2516	J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-S. Aviation, 88 N.C. App. 1, 17 (1987)	10	Since judgment without necessary joinder is void, trial court should, on its own motion, order continuance to provide reasonable time for necessary parties to be joined.	Since a judgment without such necessary joinder is void, a trial court should, on its own motion, order a continuance to provide a reasonable time for necessary parties to be joined.	"Since judgment without necessary joinder is void, should a trial court order continuance to provide reasonable time for necessary parties to be joined?"
2517	Dolman v. Saltzman, 100 R.I. 327, 330 (1965)	4	Superior Court under rules may grant continuance upon terms or conditions and withhold execution thereof until subsequent determination that ground upon which continuance was sought is meritorious.	It is our opinion that the superior court under Rule 15 may grant a continuance upon terms or conditions and withhold the execution thereof until a subsequent determination that the ground upon which the continuance was sought is meritorious.	Can a court grant a continuance upon terms or conditions and withhold the execution thereof until a subsequent determination that the ground upon which the continuance was sought is meritorious?
2520	Hardcastle v. Harris, 170 S.W.3d 67, 83-84 (Tenn. App. 2004)	23	While a trial court may grant a continuance to enable a party to respond effectively to an amended pleading, such decisions are discretionary, and appellate courts will not second-guess a trial court's decision regarding a continuance unless the record, reviewed as a whole, shows a clear abuse of discretion or that a clear prejudicial error has been committed. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 15.01.	While a trial *84 court may grant a continuance to enable a party to respond effectively to an amended pleading, Gardiner v. Word, 731 S.W.2d at 890; Walden v. Wylie, 645 S.W.2d 247, 250 (Tenn.Ct.App.1982), these decisions are discretionary. Appellate courts will not second-guess a trial court's decision regarding a continuance unless the record, reviewed as a whole, shows a clear abuse of discretion or that a clear prejudicial error has been committed.	Will appellate courts not second-guess a trial court's decision regarding a continuance unless the record shows a clear abuse of discretion?
2521	Sullivan v. Hopkins, 40 Conn. Supp. 183, 184 (1984)	1	Where punitive damages are sought, party's financial status becomes relevant consideration and may be discovered since penal nature of damages requested requires jury to levy fine sufficient to punish defendant for his actions. Practice Book 1978, S 218.	Where punitive damages are sought, a party's financial status becomes a relevant consideration and may be discovered since the penal nature of the damages requested requires the jury to levy a fine sufficient to punish the defendant for his actions.	"Where punitive damages are sought, does financial status become a relevant consideration?"
2522	Oryx Capital Int'l v. Sage Apartments, 167 S.W.3d 432, 438 (Tex. App. 2005)	2	Plaintiffs generally have an absolute, unqualified right to take a non-suit upon timely motion as long as the defendant has not made a claim for affirmative relief.	We recognize that plaintiffs, like Sage, generally have "an absolute, unqualified right to take a non-suit upon timely motion as long as [the] defendant has not made a claim for affirmative relief.	"Do plaintiffs generally have an absolute, unqualified right to take a non-suit upon timely motion as long as the defendant has not made a claim for affirmative relief?"

2523	In re Estate of Simmons, 362 Ill. App. 3d 944, 946-47 (2005)	5	A client has a right to dismiss his suit at will, even if he had a contingent-fee agreement with his lawyer and the lawyer had served notice of his attorney's lien; the lawyer may not compel the continuation of the lawsuit to protect his lien because the lien is inferior to the client's right to dismiss the action.	A client has a *947 right to dismiss his suit at will, even if he had a contingent-fee agreement with his lawyer and the lawyer had served notice of his attorney's lien; and the lawyer may not compel the continuation of the lawsuit to protect his lien because the lien is inferior to the client's right to dismiss the action.	"Does a client have a right to dismiss his suit at will, even if he had a contingent-fee agreement with his lawyer and the lawyer had served notice of his attorney's lien?"
2525	Salz v. State House Commission, 18 N.J. 106, 111-13 (1955)	5	A public "pension", while not contractual in nature, is akin to wages and salary in that it is payable in stated installments for the maintenance of servant after productive years have ended, and is basically recompense for past services or allowance in consideration of surrender of rights or emoluments to one retired from service.	A public pension, while not contractual in nature, is akin to wages and salaries in that it is payable in stated *112 installments for the maintenance of the servant after his productive years have ended, and is basically a recompense for past services. Passaic National Bank & Trust Co. v. Eelman, 116 A 'pension' is a stated allowance or stipend in consideration of past services or of the surrender of rights or emoluments to one retired from service.	Is a public pension akin to wages and salary?
2528	Town of Rocky Hill v. SecureCare Realty, 315 Conn. 265, 278 (Conn., 2015)	8	If the question of jurisdiction is intertwined with the merits of the case, a court cannot resolve the jurisdictional question without a hearing to evaluate those merits; an evidentiary hearing is necessary because a court cannot make a critical factual jurisdictional finding based on memoranda and documents submitted by the parties.	Likewise, if the question of jurisdiction is intertwined with the merits of the case, a court cannot resolve the jurisdictional question without a hearing to evaluate those merits.... An evidentiary hearing is necessary because a court cannot make a critical factual [jurisdictional] finding based on memoranda and documents submitted by the parties.	"If the question of jurisdiction is intertwined with the merits of the case, can a court resolve the jurisdictional question on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction without a hearing to evaluate those merits?"
2529	Eaker v. Gower, 189 N.C. App. 770, 772-73 (2008)	2	Typically, the parties will present personal jurisdiction issues in one of three procedural postures: (1) the defendant makes a motion to dismiss without submitting any opposing evidence; (2) the defendant supports its motion to dismiss with affidavits, but the plaintiff does not file any opposing evidence; or (3) both the defendant and the plaintiff submit affidavits addressing the personal jurisdiction issues. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(2), West's N.C.G.S.A. S 1A-1.	Typically, the parties will present personal jurisdiction issues in one of three procedural postures: (1) the defendant makes a motion to dismiss without submitting any opposing evidence; (2) the defendant supports its motion to *773 dismiss with affidavits, but the plaintiff does not file any opposing evidence; or (3) both the defendant and the plaintiff submit affidavits addressing the personal jurisdiction issues.	Are three procedural postures for a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction typical?

2530	2nd Roc-Jersey Assocs. v. Town of Morristown, 158 N.J. 581, 595-96 (1999)	6	Core of definition of special assessment that makes imposition special assessment rather than general tax is not that benefit necessarily or primarily consists of physical improvements that are permanent in nature and are local in that they are adherent to or identified with specific individual properties that are directly and tangibly benefitted thereby, rather special assessment is used to provide combination of services and improvements that are intended and designed to benefit particular properties and demonstrably enhance the value and/or use or function of properties that are subject to special assessment.	We conclude that the core of the definition of a special assessment that makes the imposition a special assessment rather than a general tax is not that the benefit necessarily or primarily consists of physical improvements that are permanent in nature and are local in that they are adherent to or identified with specific individual properties that are directly and tangibly benefitted thereby. Rather, the special assessment is used to provide a combination of services and improvements that are intended and designed to benefit particular properties and demonstrably enhance *596 the value and/or the use or function of the properties that are subject to the special assessment.	Is special assessment used to provide combination of services and improvements that are intended and designed to benefit particular properties?
2531	Am. Bible Soc. v. Lewisohn, 48 A.D.2d 308, 310, 369 N.Y.S.2d 725, 728 (App. Div. 1975)	7	State has great freedom in selecting subjects of taxation and in granting exemptions and neither due process clause nor equal protection clause imposes any rigid limitations upon state's power to devise reasonable tax policies.	However, as indicated earlier, '(t)he State has great freedom in selecting the subjects of taxation and in granting exemptions and neither the due process clause nor the equal protection clause imposes any rigid limitations upon the State's power to devise reasonable tax policies.'	Does the state have great freedom in selecting subjects of taxation and in granting exemptions?
2532	State v. Schenkolewski, 301 N.J. Super. 115, 138-139 (1997)	4	Neither offeror nor the recipient of bribe need be public official to prove bribery, and it is sufficient if recipient created understanding with offeror that he could influence matters in connection with official duty, whether or not he was capable of actually effecting such an act. N.J.S.A. 2C:27-2.	Under N.J.S.A. 2C:27-2, neither the offeror nor the recipient of the bribe need be a public official to prove bribery. Rather, it is sufficient if the recipient created the understanding with the briber that he could influence matters in connection with an official duty, whether or not he was capable of actually effecting *139 such an act.	Does the offeror or recipient of a bribe need to be a public official in order to prove bribery?
2539	Davis v. Solondz, 122 A.D.2d 401, 401, 504 N.Y.S.2d 804, 805 (App. Div. 1986)	2	Where unlawful intent is issue, evidence of other similar acts would be admissible at trial to negate existence of innocent state of mind and would likewise be relevant and hence discoverable.	Thus, where unlawful intent is an issue, evidence of other similar acts would be admissible at trial to negate the existence of an innocent state of mind (id.), and would likewise be relevant and, hence, discoverable.	"Where unlawful intent is an issue, will evidence of other similar acts be admissible at trial to negate the existence of an innocent state of mind?"

2542	Posey v. Proper Mold & Eng'g, 378 S.C. 210, 217 (Ct. App. 2008)	8	The proper procedure for raising lack of subject matter jurisdiction prior to trial is to file a motion to dismiss, rather than a motion for summary judgment. Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 12(b)(1), 56.	The proper procedure for raising lack of subject matter jurisdiction prior to trial is to file a motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(1), SCRCP, rather than a motion for summary judgment pursuant to Rule 56, SCRCP. Woodard v. Westvaco Corp., 319 S.C. 240, 460 S.E.2d 392(1995), overruled on other grounds by Sabb v. *441 South Carolina State Univ., 350 S.C. 416, 567 S.E.2d 231 (2002).	"Is the proper procedure for raising lack of subject matter jurisdiction prior to trial to file a motion to dismiss, rather than a motion for summary judgment?"
2543	Woodard v. Westvaco Corp., 315 S.C. 329, 332, 433 S.E.2d 890, 891-92 (Ct. App. 1993)	2	Proper procedure for raising lack of subject matter jurisdiction prior to trial is to file motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, rather than motion for summary judgment. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(1), 56.	The proper procedure for raising lack of subject matter jurisdiction prior to trial is to file a motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(1), SCRCP, rather than a motion for summary judgment pursuant to Rule 56, SCRCP.	"Is the proper procedure for raising lack of subject matter jurisdiction prior to trial to file a motion to dismiss, rather than a motion for summary judgment?"
2544	Parris v. Douthit, 287 Ga. 119, 119 (2010)	1	Under pleading rule, the trial court may hear and determine a defense in abatement based upon improper venue prior to trial without submitting it to a jury, or may defer such hearing and determination until trial. West's Ga.Code Ann. S 9-11-12(d).	Under OCGA 9-11-12(d), the trial court may hear and determine a defense in abatement such as improper venue prior to trial without submitting it to a jury, or may defer such hearing and determination until trial.	"Under pleading rule, may the trial court hear and determine a defense in abatement based upon improper venue prior to trial without submitting it to a jury?"
2545	Com. v. Cent. Realty Co., 338 Pa. 172, 180-81, 12 A.2d 312, 316 (1940)	2	State taxes are essential to very preservation of state itself, while local levies are authorized or permitted by state merely to maintain machinery of local government, and commonwealth's direct revenues must be so guarded that no lien for state taxes shall be disturbed except by payment, unless some constitutional or statutory rule dictates otherwise.	'State taxes stand on a different basis from local levies; the former are essential to the very 'preservation' of the state itself (Schoyer v. Comet O. & R. Co., 284 Pa. 189, 193, 130 A. 413), while the latter are authorized or permitted by the state, not for its actual preservation, but merely to maintain the machinery of local government. So far as general principles enter into the matter, the basic interest of the sovereign authority requires the direct revenues of the commonwealth *181 to be so guarded that no lien for state taxes shall be disturbed except by payment, unless some constitutional or statutory rule dictates otherwise.' See also Harper v.	Are state taxes essential to the very preservation of a state itself?

2546	Penn Dairies v. Milk Control Comm'n of Pennsylvania, 318 U.S. 261, 270-271 (U.S.Pa., 1943)	5	The constitution presupposes continued existence of states functioning in coordination with federal government, with authority in states to lay taxes and to regulate their internal affairs and policy, and that state regulation like state taxation imposes some burdens on federal government. U.S.C.A.Const. art. 6, cl. 2.	We have recognized that the Constitution presupposes the continued existence of the states functioning in coordination with the national government, with authority in the states to lay *271 taxes and to regulate their internal affairs and policy, and that state regulation like state taxation inevitably imposes some burdens on the national government of the same kind as those imposed on citizens of the United States within the state's borders.	"Does the constitution presupposes continued existence of states functioning in coordination with federal government, with authority in states to lay taxes?"
2548	Bame v. Lipsett, 172 Neb. 623, 628, 111 N.W.2d 380, 383 (1961)	6	Where a right has been created by statute which did not exist at common law, Legislature may impose restrictions thereon, and conditions so imposed qualify and are integral part of act and must be fully complied with in manner therein prescribed.	At any rate in Ray v. Sanitary Garbage Co., 134 Neb. 178, 278 N.W. 139, 140, this court, in construing this Workmen's Compensation Act in regard to the statute of limitations, therein said: "Where a right has been created by statute which did not exist at the common law, the legislature may impose restrictions thereon, and the conditions so imposed qualify and are an integral part of the act and must be fully complied with in the manner therein prescribed."	"Did the workers compensation act create rights which did not exist at common law, and can the legislature place such restrictions thereon, as it sees fit?"
2551	McKown v. United States, 908 F. Supp. 2d 1122, 1125 (E.D. Cal. 2012), aff'd, 613 F. App'x 656 (9th Cir. 2015)	3	Where a mining claim is located on federal land withdrawn from mineral entry under the Wilderness Act, the claimant must prove discovery of a valuable mineral deposit at the time of a withdrawal; claimant must also demonstrate that the mining claim is valid at the time of the contest hearing. Wilderness Act, S 2 et seq., 16 U.S.C.A. S 1131 et seq.	Where a mining claim is located on land withdrawn from mineral entry under the Wilderness Act, 16 U.S.C. §§ 1131–36, the claimant must prove discovery of a valuable mineral deposit at the time of a withdrawal. See Wilderness Soc'y v. Dombeck, 168 F.3d 367, 375 (9th Cir.1999); United States v. Mavros, 122 IBLA 297, 301 (1992) ("When land is withdrawn from the operation of the mining laws the existence of a discovery on the date of withdrawal is critical to a validity determination.") (citing Cameron v. United States, 252 U.S. 450, 456, 40 S.Ct. 410, 64 L.Ed. 659 (1920)). The claimant must also demonstrate that the mining claim is valid at the time of the contest hearing.	"Where a claim is located on land withdrawn from mineral entry pursuant to the Wilderness Act, must a claim be supported by a discovery of a valuable mineral deposit at the time of withdrawal?"

2553	Alex N. Sill Co. v. Fazio, 2 Ohio App. 3d 65, 65 (1981)	3	Party has duty to move for continuance due to conflicting trial assignment dates of counsel within reasonable time after such party's case is set for trial and the conflict thus created; motion for a continuance not made within a reasonable time is untimely, and court does not abuse its discretion in overruling an untimely motion for a continuance. Municipal and County Courts Superintendence Rule 16(B).	A party has a duty to move for a continuance due to conflicting trial assignment dates of counsel within a reasonable time after such party's case is set for trial and the conflict thus created. A motion for continuance not made within a reasonable time is untimely, and the court does not abuse its discretion in overruling an untimely motion for continuance.	Are granting or refusal of continuance or time to prepare matters within the discretion of the trial court and will not be disturbed absence a showing of clear abuse of such discretion?
2554	Poteat v. St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co., 277 Mont. 117, 119 (1996)	1	When deciding motion to dismiss based on lack of subject matter jurisdiction, district court must determine whether complaint states facts that, if true, would vest district court with subject matter jurisdiction.	When deciding a motion to dismiss based on lack of subject matter jurisdiction, a district court must determine whether the complaint states facts that, if true, would vest the district court with subject matter jurisdiction.	"Is the inquiry, whether a complaint states facts that would grant the district court subject matter jurisdiction on a motion to dismiss?"
2556	State v. NV Sumatra Tobacco Trading Co., 403 S.W.3d 726, 739 (Tenn., 2013)	3	A motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, which challenges the trial court's authority to hear the case, is ideally addressed as a threshold issue. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12.02(2).	A Tenn. R. Civ. P. 12.02(2) motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, which challenges the trial court's authority to hear the case, is ideally addressed as a threshold issue.	Is a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction which challenges the trial court's authority to hear the case ideally addressed as a threshold issue?
2558	Robinson v. Williams ex rel. Estate of Dunn, 280 Ga. 877, 878 (Ga., 2006)	2	The trial court has the power to impose appropriate sanctions to make effective its pre-trial orders and appellate courts review the action taken for abuse of discretion.	The trial court has the power to impose appropriate sanctions to make effective its pretrial orders and appellate courts review the action taken for abuse of discretion.	Does the trial court have the power to impose appropriate sanctions to make effective its pre-trial orders and appellate courts review the action taken for abuse of discretion?
2560	Holland v. Lefler, 80 Ark. App. 316, 321 (2003)	6	Service of process under civil procedure rule governing summons must be accomplished within 120 days after the filing of complaint unless plaintiff has filed a motion to extend time prior to the expiration of the deadline; if service is not obtained within that time and no timely motion to extend is made, dismissal of the action is mandatory. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 4(i).	Service of process under Rule 4(i) must be accomplished within 120 days after the filing of the complaint unless the plaintiff has filed a motion to extend time prior to the expiration of the deadline. Id. If service is not obtained within that time and no timely motion to extend is made, dismissal of the action is mandatory.	"Should service of process be accomplished within 120 days after the filing of the complaint, unless the plaintiff has timely filed a motion to extend?"
2561	Crandall Pub. Libr. v. City of Glens Falls, 216 A.D.2d 814, 815, 629 N.Y.S.2d 100, 102 (1995)	2	"Taxes" are public burdens imposed generally for governmental purposes benefiting entire community, whereas "ad valorem levy" is assessment imposed for specific municipal improvements which confer special benefit on property assessed beyond that conferred generally.	Taxes are public burdens imposed generally for governmental purposes benefiting the entire community, whereas an ad valorem levy is an assessment imposed for specific municipal improvements which confer a special benefit on the property assessed beyond that conferred generally	"Are ""taxes"" public burdens imposed generally for governmental purposes benefiting entire community?"

2562	U. S. v. O'Neill, 476 F.2d 295, 297 (C.A.9, 1973)	2	In order to properly perform their classification function, local selective service board members must receive and consider all relevant communications from or concerning registrants.	In order to properly perform their classification function, the local board members must receive and consider all relevant communications from or concerning registrants.	Should local selective service board members receive and consider all relevant communications from or concerning registrants in order to properly perform their classification function?
2563	Gray v. City of Opelika, 216 So. 3d 431, 435 (Ala. App. 2015)	5	If the party moving to dismiss presents a prima facie showing of the court's lack of in rem jurisdiction, the nonmoving party's jurisdictional allegations carry no presumptive weight; the nonmoving party must then rely on more than the allegations in the complaint by substantiating the jurisdictional allegations with competent proof. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12.	We must construe any allegations in the complaint not controverted by the moving party's evidence as true. If the moving party presents a prima facie showing of the court's lack of in rem jurisdiction, the nonmoving party's jurisdictional allegations carry no presumptive weight. The nonmoving party must then rely on more than the allegations in the complaint by substantiating the jurisdictional allegations with competent proof.	"If the party moving to dismiss presents a prima facie showing of the court's lack of in rem jurisdiction, do the nonmoving party's jurisdictional allegations carry no presumptive weight?"
2564	Scovill Fasteners, Inc. v. Sure-Snap Corp., 207 Ga. App. 539, 539, 428 S.E.2d 435, 436 (1993)	4	When outcome of motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction depends on unstipulated facts, it must be accompanied by supporting affidavits or citations to evidentiary material in the record, and to the extent that defendant's evidence controverts complaint's allegations, plaintiff may not rely on mere allegations, but must also submit supporting affidavits or documentary evidence. Uniform Superior Court Rule 6.1.	However, when the outcome of the motion depends on unstipulated facts, it must be accompanied by supporting affidavits or citations to evidentiary material in the record. See Uniform Superior Court Rule 6.1. See also Behar v. Aero Med Intl., 185 Ga.App. 845, 846 (366 SE2d 223) (1988). Further, to the extent that defendant's evidence controverts the allegations of the complaint, plaintiff may not rely on mere allegations, but must also submit supporting affidavits or documentary evidence. Id. at 846 [, 366 SE2d 223].	"When moving to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, can the plaintiff not rely on mere allegations?"
2568	Cronin v. Kottke Assocs., 2012 IL App (1st) 111632, 975 N.E.2d 680, 691 (2012)	7	An order of dismissal with prejudice is a drastic sanction to be entered only where the party's actions show a deliberate, contumacious or unwarranted disregard of the trial court's authority.	An order of dismissal with prejudice is a "drastic sanction" to be entered only "where the party's actions show a deliberate, contumacious or unwarranted disregard of the court's authority.	"Is an order of dismissal with prejudice a drastic sanction to be entered only where the party's actions show a deliberate, contumacious or unwarranted disregard of the trial court's authority?"
2569	Coppola v. Coppola, 243 Conn. 657, 662 (1998)	2	Once action has been brought by service of process on defendant, trial court may thereafter dismiss action for failure to return service of process within mandated time period. C.G.S.A. S 52-46a.	[O]nce an action has been brought by service of process on the defendant, a trial court may thereafter dismiss the action for failure to return the service of process within the mandated time period.	"Once action has been brought by service of process on defendant, can a trial court thereafter dismiss the action for failure to return service of process within the mandated time period?"

2570	In re Gosnell, 234 Mich. App. 326, 344 (1999)	22	Defects in service of process will generally not warrant dismissal unless the service failed to inform the defendant of the action within the time provided in court rules for service. MCR 2.105(J)(3).	Defects in service of process will generally not warrant dismissal "unless the service failed to inform the defendant of the action within the time provided in these rules for service." MCR 2.105(J)(3); 100 In re Gordon Estate, 222 Mich.App.	Will defects in service of process generally not warrant dismissal unless the service failed to inform the defendant of the action within the time provided in court rules for service?
2571	Norma Faye Pyles Lynch Family Purpose LLC v. Putnam Cnty., 301 S.W.3d 196, 206–07 (Tenn.,2009)	8	When the party asserting that the case has become moot based on the cessation of its own conduct is a government entity or official, the court may, if justified by the circumstances of the case, require the opposing party to demonstrate why the proceeding should not be dismissed for mootness.	However, when the party asserting that the case has become moot based on the cessation of its own conduct is a government entity or official, the court may, if justified by the circumstances of the case, require the opposing party to demonstrate why the proceeding should not be dismissed for mootness.	Can court require the opposing party to demonstrate why the proceeding should not be dismissed for mootness when the party asserting that the case has become moot?
2573	Perotti v. Ferguson, 454 N.E.2d 951, 952 (Ohio, 1983)	2	Before trial court may dismiss case with prejudice for failure to appear at pretrial conference in accordance with local court rule, notice of dismissal must be given to plaintiff's counsel, and if plaintiff is appearing pro se, to plaintiff himself. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(B)(1).	This court's holding today, that before a trial court may dismiss a case with prejudice for failure to appear at a pre-trial conference in accordance with a local court rule, notice of the dismissal must be given to plaintiff's counsel pursuant to the provisions of Civ.R. 41(B)(1), is in accordance with the spirit of Civ.R.	"Before a trial court can dismiss a case with prejudice for failure to appear at a pretrial conference, must notice of dismissal be given to the plaintiff's counsel?"
2574	Tliche v. Van Quathem, 66 Cal. App. 4th 1054, 1061–62, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 458, 462–63 (1998), as modified (Oct. 6, 1998)	3	There are at least two limitations or restrictions on trial court's power to dismiss action for noncompliance with local fast track rules: (1) dismissal is inappropriate if noncompliance was responsibility of counsel alone, rather than the party, and (2) dismissal is appropriate only if less severe sanctions would be ineffective. West's Ann.Cal.C.C.P. S 575.2(b); West's Ann.Cal.Gov.Code S 68608(b)	Therefore, there are at least two limitations or restrictions on the trial court's power to dismiss an action for noncompliance with local rules: (1) dismissal is inappropriate if the noncompliance was the responsibility of counsel alone, rather than the party (Code Civ. Proc., § 575.2, subd. (b); Garcia v. McCutchen, supra, 16 Cal.4th at p. 481, 66 Cal.Rptr.2d 319, 940 P.2d 906);and (2) dismissal is appropriate only if less severe sanctions would be ineffective (Gov.Code, § 68608, subd. (b)).	Can the trial court strike out a pleading or dismiss an action as a penalty for noncompliance with its order?
2575	Healer v. Kansas City Pub. Serv. Co., 251 S.W.2d 66, 68 (Mo. 1952)	5	Jurisdiction to dismiss for failure to comply with an order of the court, whether by inherent power or by authority conferred by statute presupposes an order lawfully made. Section 510.140 RSMo 1949, V.A.M.S.	But jurisdiction to dismiss for failure to comply with an order of the court, whether by inherent power or by authority conferred by Section 510.140, presupposes an order lawfully made, one which was within the judicial power of the court to enter.	"Does jurisdiction to dismiss for failure to comply with an order of the court, whether by inherent power or by authority conferred by statute, presuppose an order lawfully made?"

2577	D. Corso Excavating v. Poulin, 747 A.2d 994, 1000 (R.I. 2000)	8	Absent inclusion of unambiguous language that would support contrary conclusion, legislature's enactment of benefits scheme, such as workers' compensation reimbursement benefits, does not rise to level of creating protected property interests, substantive vested rights, or enforceable contractual obligations in prospective recipients until and unless government has accepted liability or has been adjudged liable therefor, and thus, retroactive repeal of scheme cannot be subject of successful due process, just compensation, or contract impairment challenge. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 14; Gen.Laws 1956, S 28-37-4 (Repealed).	Absent the inclusion of unambiguous statutory language that would support a contrary conclusion, the General Assembly's mere enactment of a statutory-benefit scheme does not rise to the level of creating protected-property interests, substantive- vested rights, or enforceable- contractual obligations in the prospective recipients of such benefits until and unless the government has accepted liability for such a claim or has been adjudged liable therefor. Hence, such a retroactive repeal cannot be the subject of a successful due-process, just- compensation, or contract-impairment challenge. .	Is a statutory benefit a property interest or a vested right?
2578	United States v. Andrews, 681 F.3d 509, 527 (3d Cir. 2012)	17	An honest services fraud prosecution for bribery after Skilling requires the government to prove: (1) that the payor provided a benefit to a public official intending that he would thereby take favorable official acts that he would not otherwise take, and (2) that the official accepted those benefits intending, in exchange for the benefits, to take official acts to benefit the payor. 18 U.S.C.A. S 1346.	An honest services fraud prosecution for bribery after Skilling thus requires the Government to prove: (1) that "the payor provided a benefit to a public official intending that he w[ould] thereby take favorable official acts that he would not otherwise take," and (2) that "the official accepted those benefits intending, in exchange for the benefits, to take official acts to benefit the payor.	What does an honest services fraud prosecution for bribery require the government to prove?
2580	Leach v. BB & T Corp., 232 F.R.D. 545, 548 (N.D.W. Va. 2005)	1	Under West Virginia law, plaintiff whose claim is subject to dismissal for failure to timely serve has two options to avoid dismissal: (1) timely show good cause for not having effected service of summons and complaint, or (2) refile the claim before any time defenses arise and timely effect service under new complaint; showing of good cause must be substantial and not just a ruse. W.Va.Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 4(k).	A plaintiff whose claim is subject to dismissal for failure to timely serve has two options to avoid dismissal: (1) to timely show good cause for not having effected service of summons and complaint; or (2) to refile the claim before any time defenses arise and timely effect service under a new complaint.	"Does the court rule providing for dismissal of action for untimely service of summons give the court the option of setting an extended time for service even absent a showing of good cause, rather than dismissing outright?"
2581	Flores v. Georgeson, 191 Cal. App. 4th 881, 887 (2011)	3	A court has inherent power, upon a sufficient factual showing, to dismiss an action shown to be sham, fictitious or without merit in order to prevent abuse of the judicial process.	A court has inherent power, upon a sufficient factual showing, to dismiss an action "shown to be sham, fictitious or without merit in order to prevent abuse of the judicial process."	"Does court have inherent power, to dismiss an action shown to be sham, in order to prevent abuse of the judicial process?"

2584	Turner v. Marine Inland Transp. Co., 08-594 (La. App. 5 Cir. 1/13/09), 7 So. 3d 756, 757, writ denied, 2009-0335 (La. 4/3/09), 6 So. 3d 777	1	Three things are necessary to defeat a motion to dismiss based on abandonment; a party must take some "step" in the prosecution or defense of the action, the step must be done on the record of the suit except for formal discovery, and the "step" must be made within three years of the last "step." LSA-C.C. art. 591.	As discussed in Turner, supra, La.Code Civ. Pro. Art. 591 requires three things to defeat a motion to dismiss based on abandonment. First, a party must take some "step" in the prosecution or defense of the action; second, this step must be done on the record of the suit except for formal discovery; and third, the "step" must be made within three years of the last "step."	What are the requirements to defeat a motion to dismiss based on abandonment?
2585	Hinds v. Glob. Int'l Marine, 57 So. 3d 1181, 1183-84 (La. App. 2011)	6	Any action or step taken in a case to move the case toward judgment should be considered before granting a motion for dismissal for abandonment; dismissal of those cases in which the plaintiff has clearly demonstrated before the court during the prescribed period that he does not intend to abandon his lawsuit is not warranted. LSA-C.C.P. art. 561.	Any *1184 action or step taken in a case to move the case toward judgment should be considered. Dismissal of those cases in which the plaintiff has clearly demonstrated before the court during the prescribed period that he does not intend to abandon his lawsuit is not warranted.	Should any action or step taken in a case to move the case toward judgment be considered before granting a motion for dismissal for abandonment?
2586	Oltmanns v. Oltmanns, 241 N.C. App. 326, 331 (N.C.App., 2015)	12	Unlike the question of jurisdiction, the issue of mootness is not determined solely by examining facts in existence at the commencement of an action; accordingly, if the issues before a court or administrative body become moot at any time during the course of the proceedings, the usual response should be to dismiss the action.	Unlike the question of jurisdiction, the issue of mootness is not determined solely by examining facts in existence at the commencement of the action. If the issues before a court or administrative body become moot at any time during the course of the proceedings, the usual response should be to dismiss the action.	Is the issue of mootness determined solely by examining facts in existence at the commencement of the action?
2587	Andrews v. Palmas De Majorca Condo., 898 So. 2d 1066, 1070 (Fla. 2005)	4	Trial court has inherent authority, within exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss action when party perpetrates fraud on court or willfully refuses to comply with court order.	A trial court has the inherent authority, within the exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss an action when a party perpetrates a fraud on the court or willfully refuses to comply with a court order.	Does a trial court have inherent authority to dismiss action when a party perpetrates fraud on court or willfully refuses to comply with court order?
2594	Util. Workers Union of Am., Loc. 69, AFL-CIO v. Pub. Util. Comm'n, 859 A.2d 847, 850 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 2004)	4	A moot case will be dismissed unless at least one of the following exceptions exists: (1) the conduct at issue is likely to be repeated but will necessarily escape judicial review, (2) there is a great public interest in the resolution of the controversy, or (3) one party will suffer a substantial detriment if the controversy is not judicially resolved.	A moot case will be dismissed unless at least one of the following exceptions exists. First, the conduct at issue is likely to be repeated but will necessarily escape judicial review. Second, there is a great public interest in the resolution of the controversy. Third, one party will suffer a substantial detriment if the controversy is not judicially resolved.	Under what exceptions will a moot case not be dismissed?
2595	Cannon v. United States, 45 F. Supp. 106, 108 (Pa. 1941)	3	Congress alone can prescribe the terms on which a claim for benefits under the War Risk Insurance Act may be recovered, and it is not within the province of the court to extend or limit a clear expression of those terms. World War Veterans' Act of 1924, S 19, as amended, 38 U.S.C.A. S 445.	Congress alone can prescribe the terms on which the claim for benefits under the World War Veterans' Act 1924 may be recovered, and it is not within the province of the courts to extend or limit a clear expression of these terms.	Can congress prescribe the terms by which a claim for benefits under the World War Veterans' Act 1924 can be recovered?

2597	Wallace v. Jones, 572 So. 2d 371, 376 (Miss. 1990)	3	Dismissal for failure to comply with order of district court is appropriate only when there is clear record of delay or contumacious conduct and lesser sanctions would not serve best interest of justice. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	Moreover, dismissal for failure to comply with an order of the district court is appropriate only where there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct and lesser sanctions would not serve the best interests of justice.	Is a dismissal for failure to comply with an order of a district court appropriate only when there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct?
2598	Scallan v. Marriott Intl, 995 So. 2d 1066, 1068 (Fla.App. 5 Dist., 2008)	3	Although a trial court has discretion to dismiss a complaint for noncompliance with a court's discovery order, it is for the very reason that the trial judge is granted so much discretion to impose this severe sanction that it has been determined that an order for dismissal should contain an explicit finding of willful noncompliance.	Although a trial court has discretion to dismiss a complaint for noncompliance with a court order, "it is for the very reason that the trial judge is granted so much discretion to impose this severe sanction that we have determined that [an order for dismissal] should contain an explicit finding of willful noncompliance."	"While a trial court undoubtedly has discretion after due consideration of the relevant factors to dismiss a complaint for noncompliance with a court order, should the dismissal order contain explicit findings of willful noncompliance?"
2599	D.C. v. Serafin, 617 A.2d 516, 519 (D.C. App. 1992)	4	Because dismissal for failure to comply with court order is such an extreme sanction and because of principle preferring trial on merits, trial court's exercise of discretion must be undertaken with care and consistent with well-established standards. Civil Rule 41(b).	Because dismissal is such an extreme sanction and because of the principle preferring trial on the merits, the trial court's exercise of discretion must be undertaken with care and consistent with well-established standards.	"Because dismissal for failure to comply with court order is such an extreme sanction, should a trial court's exercise of discretion be undertaken with care and consistent with well-established standards?"
2600	Cotten v. Briley, 517 S.W.3d 177, 183 (Tex. App. 2017)	4	Under its inherent power to dismiss a case for want of prosecution, the trial court may look at the entire history of the case, including the length of time the case has been on file, the extent of activity or inactivity, whether a trial setting has been requested, and the reasons for not prosecuting the case.	Under its inherent power to dismiss a case, the trial court may look at the entire history of the case, including the length of time the case has been on file, the extent of activity or inactivity, whether a trial setting has been requested, and the reasons for not prosecuting the case.	"Can the court look at the entire history of the case, under its power to dismiss a case for want of prosecution?"
2603	People v. Patterson, 2012 IL App (1st) 101573, ¶¶ 42-43 (2012)	12	Rape shield law bars evidence of the past sexual history of an alleged sexual assault victim, except (1) as evidence of the alleged victim's prior consent to sexual conduct with the defendant, offered to show consent, or (2) when the constitution requires the court to admit the evidence. S.H.A. 725 ILCS 5/115-7(a).	Rape Shield Law [12] [13] 43 Illinois's rape shield law (725 ILCS 5/115- 7(a) (West 2008)) bars evidence of the past sexual history of an alleged sexual assault victim, except (1) as evidence of the alleged victim's prior consent to sexual conduct with the defendant, offered to show consent, or (2) when the constitution requires the court to admit the evidence.	Will rape shield laws bar the admission of a victim's sexual history?
2606	Cabinetree of Wisconsin v. Kraftmaid Cabinetry, 50 F.3d 388, 391 (7th Cir. 1995)	8	While normally decision to proceed in judicial forum is waiver of arbitration, variety of circumstances may make case abnormal, and then district court should find no waiver or should permit previous waiver to be rescinded.	It is enough to hold that while normally the decision to proceed in a judicial forum is a waiver of arbitration, a variety of circumstances may make the case abnormal, and then the district court should find no waiver or should permit a previous waiver to be rescinded.	Should the court find no waiver or permit a previous waiver to be rescinded when a variety of circumstances may make the case abnormal?

2610	Rodolico v. Rubin & Licatesi, P.C., 114 A.D.3d 923, 924, 981 N.Y.S.2d 144, 146 (2014)	2	A motion to dismiss a complaint on the ground that a defense is founded on documentary evidence may be appropriately granted only where the documentary evidence utterly refutes the plaintiff's factual allegations, conclusively establishing a defense as a matter of law. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(1).	A motion pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(1) to dismiss a complaint on the ground that a defense is founded on documentary evidence "may be appropriately granted only where the documentary evidence utterly refutes [the] plaintiff's factual allegations, conclusively establishing a defense as a matter of law"	Will a motion to dismiss a complaint be granted on the ground that a defense is found on documentary evidence?
2613	Jones v. Multi-Color Corp., 108 Ohio App. 3d 388, 394 (1995)	4	Workers' Compensation Act operates as a balance of mutual compromise between interests of employers and employees whereby employees relinquish their common-law remedy and accept lower benefit levels coupled with the greater assurance of recovery and employers give up their common-law defenses and are protected from unlimited liability. R.C. S 4123.01 et seq.	The Act [R.C. Chapter 4123] operates as a balance of mutual compromise between the interests of the employer and the employee whereby employees relinquish their common law remedy and accept lower benefit levels coupled with the greater assurance of recovery and employers give up their common law defenses and are protected from unlimited liability.	What do the employees relinquish so the employer can be protected from unlimited liability?
2614	Eisler v. United States, 170 F.2d 273, 279 (1948)	13	Resident alien owes temporary allegiance to government of United States and assumes duties and obligations which do not differ materially from those of native-born or naturalized citizens and is bound to obey all laws of the United States, not immediately relating to citizenship, and is equally amenable with citizens for any infractions of those laws.	Correlatively, an alien resident owes a temporary allegiance to the Government of the United States, and he assumes duties and obligations which do not differ materially from those of native-born or naturalized citizens; he is bound to obey all the laws of the country, not immediately relating to citizenship, and is equally amenable with citizens for any infraction of those laws.	Are aliens in the United States bound to obey all the laws of the country?
2615	Jarecki Mfg. Co. v. Merriam, 104 Kan. 646, 180 P. 224, 225 (1919)	3	State may not maintain educational establishment providing secular classes closely integrated with religious instruction, symbols, and observances, even if latter are sole responsibility of private groups, in same buildings during regular school hours. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 1.	The State could not itself maintain an educational establishment providing secular classes closely integrated with religious instruction, symbols, and observances- even if the latter were the sole responsibility of private groups- in the same buildings during regular school hours.	Can a state provide secular classes during regular school hours?
2616	Hillman v. Weatherly, 14 So. 3d 721, 726 (Miss. 2009)	6	The propriety of a dismissal with prejudice is bolstered by the presence of aggravating factors, including: (1) the extent to which the plaintiff, as distinguished from his counsel, was personally responsible for the delay, (2) the degree of actual prejudice to the defendant, and (3) whether the delay was the result of intentional conduct. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	The propriety of a dismissal with prejudice is bolstered by the presence of aggravating factors, including: (1) "the extent to which the plaintiff, as distinguished from his counsel, was personally responsible for the delay," (2) "the degree of actual prejudice to the defendant," and (3) "whether the delay was the result of intentional conduct."	"Is the propriety of a dismissal with prejudice, bolstered by whether the delay was the result of intentional conduct?"

2617	United Broth. of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Local Union No. 2371 v. Merchandising Equipment Group, Div. of MEG Mfg. Corp., 963 N.E.2d 602, 607 (Ind.App.,2012)	7	Although dismissals for failure to prosecute are generally viewed in disfavor and considered extreme remedies that should be granted only under limited circumstances, the court need not impose a sanction less severe than dismissal where the record of dilatory conduct is clear. Trial Procedure Rule 41(E).	Although dismissals are generally viewed in disfavor and considered extreme remedies that should be granted only under limited circumstances, the court need not impose a sanction less severe than dismissal where the record of dilatory conduct is clear.	Are dismissals generally viewed in disfavor and considered extreme remedies that should be granted only under limited circumstances?
2618	Jones v. Rochdale Vill., 96 A.D.3d 1014, 1017 (2012)	7	Motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action must be denied unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the pleader to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	However, "a motion to dismiss pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7) must be denied 'unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the pleader to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it' " (Sokol v. Leader, 74 A.D.3d at 1182, 904 N.Y.S.2d 153, quoting Guggenheimer v.	Should a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action be denied unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it?
2619	Moses v. Dirghangi, 430 S.W.3d 371, 376 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2013)	9	A motion to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted seeks only to determine whether the pleadings state a claim upon which relief can be granted, and challenges the legal sufficiency of the complaint, not the strength of the plaintiff's proof. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12.02(6).	In short, a Tennessee Rule of Civil Procedure 12.02(6) motion to dismiss seeks only to determine whether the pleadings state a claim upon which relief can be granted, and such a motion challenges the legal sufficiency of the complaint, not the strength of the plaintiff's proof.	Does a motion to dismiss based upon the rule governing motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim require a court to determine if the pleadings state a claim upon which relief can be granted?
2620	Professional Executive Center v. LaSalle Nat. Bank, 211 Ill. App. 3d 368, 377 (1991)	1	To state cause of action, complaint must be both legally and factually sufficient; complaint must set forth legally recognized claim as its basis for recovery and must plead facts which bring claim within legally recognized cause of action alleged, and failure to meet both requirements mandates dismissal of complaint.	To state a cause of action, a complaint must be both legally and factually sufficient; it must set forth a legally recognized claim as its basis for recovery and must plead facts which bring the claim within the legally recognized cause of action alleged. Failure to meet both requirements mandates dismissal of the complaint.	"To survive a motion to dismiss for the failure to state a cause of action, should a complaint be both legally and factually sufficient?"
2621	Glynne v. Wilson Med. Ctr., 236 N.C. App. 42, 47 (2014)	3	A complaint is properly subject to dismissal for failure to state a claim when one of the following three conditions is satisfied: (1) the complaint reveals that no law supports the plaintiff's claim; (2) the complaint reveals the absence of facts sufficient to make a good claim; or (3) the complaint discloses some fact that necessarily defeats the plaintiff's claim. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(6), West's N.C.G.S.A. S 1A-1.	A complaint is properly subject to dismissal pursuant to N.C. Gen.Stat. 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) when "one of the following three conditions is satisfied: (1) the complaint ... reveals that no law supports the plaintiff's claim; (2) the complaint ... reveals the absence of facts sufficient to make a good claim; or (3) the complaint discloses some fact that necessarily defeats the plaintiff's claim.' "	Is a complaint properly subject to dismissal when one of the three conditions is satisfied?

2622	Kyocera Corp. v. Hemlock Semiconductor, 313 Mich. App. 437, 445 (2015)	3	Summary disposition tests the legal sufficiency of the claim on the pleadings alone to determine whether the plaintiff has stated a claim on which relief may be granted. MCR 2.116(C)(8).	"MCR 2.116(C)(8) tests the legal sufficiency of the claim on the pleadings alone to determine whether the plaintiff has stated a claim on which relief may be granted."	Does a summary disposition under MCR 2.116(C)(8) test the legal sufficiency of the claim on the pleadings alone to determine whether the plaintiff has stated a claim on which relief can be granted?
2623	Highland Paving Co. v. First Bank, 227 N.C. App. 36, 44 (2013)	11	While concept of notice pleading is liberal in nature, complaint must nonetheless state enough to give substantive elements of legally-recognized claim, or it may be dismissed for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 8(e)(1), 12(b)(6), West's N.C.G.S.A. S 1A-1.	"While the concept of notice pleading is liberal in nature, a complaint must nonetheless state enough to give the substantive elements of a legally recognized claim or it may be dismissed under Rule 12(b)(6)."	"While concept of notice pleading is liberal in nature, should a complaint nonetheless state enough to give substantive elements of a legally-recognized claim?"
2624	Rainbow Home Health v. Schmidt, 76 S.W.3d 53, 56 (Tex. App. 2002)	5	There are three grounds upon which a trial court may dismiss a case: (1) when a party fails to appear at a hearing or trial; (2) when the case has not been disposed of within the Supreme Court's time standard; and (3) by the trial court's inherent power to dismiss when the case has not been prosecuted with due diligence. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a(1, 2).	There are three grounds upon which a trial court may dismiss a case: (1) when a party fails to appear at a hearing or trial pursuant to TEX.R. CIV. P. 165a(1); (2) when the case has not been disposed of within the Supreme Court's time standard pursuant to TEX.R. CIV. P. 165a(2); and (3) by the trial court's inherent power to dismiss when the case has not been prosecuted with due diligence.	Can court dismiss a case when a party fails to appear at a hearing or trial?
2625	Jenkins v. Tucker, 18 So. 3d 265, 270 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009)	3	Dismissals for want of prosecution should be employed reluctantly, and while there is no set time limit for the prosecution of an action where the record shows that a plaintiff has been guilty of dilatory or contumacious conduct, or has repeatedly disregarded the procedural directives of the court, such a dismissal is likely to be upheld. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	Dismissals for want of prosecution should be employed reluctantly, and while "[t]here is no set time limit for the prosecution of an action ... where the record shows that a plaintiff has been guilty of dilatory or contumacious conduct, or has repeatedly disregarded the procedural directives of the court, such a dismissal is likely to be upheld."	"Should the court first look to see if there is a record of dilatory or contumacious conduct by the plaintiff, in analyzing the dismissal of a case for lack of prosecution?"
2626	Harvard Crimson, Inc. v. President And Fellows Of Harvard Coll., 445 Mass. 745, 748, 840 N.E.2d 518, 521 (2006)	2	Purpose of motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is to permit prompt resolution of a case where the allegations in the complaint clearly demonstrate that the plaintiff's claim is legally insufficient. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12, 43A M.G.L.A.(b)(6).	[2] [3] [4] The purpose of rule 12(b)(6) is to permit prompt resolution of a case where the allegations in the complaint clearly demonstrate that the plaintiff's claim is legally insufficient.	Is dismissal for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted appropriate where the allegations in the complaint clearly demonstrate that the plaintiff's claim is legally insufficient?
2628	Maxum Foundations v. Salus Corp., 779 F.2d 974, 982 (4th Cir. 1985)	6	Where a third-party action does not involve additional discovery or procedural burdens for the original plaintiff, mere filing of a third-party complaint by a party that seeks arbitration will not permit a court to find that the right to arbitrate has been waived.	When, as here, the third-party action does not involve additional discovery or procedural burdens for the original plaintiff, the mere filing of a third-party complaint by a party that seeks arbitration will not permit a court to find that the right to arbitrate has been waived.	Does the filing of a third-party complaint by a party that seeks arbitration permit a court to find that the right to arbitrate has been waived?

2630	Dixon v. 105 W. 75th St. LLC, 148 A.D.3d 623, 626–27, 53 N.Y.S.3d 1, 6 (2017)	2	In considering the documents offered by the movant to negate the claims in the complaint, a court must adhere to the concept that the allegations in the complaint are presumed to be true, and that the pleading is entitled to all reasonable inferences; however, while the pleading is to be liberally construed, the court is not required to accept as true factual allegations that are plainly contradicted by documentary evidence. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(1).	In considering the documents offered by the movant to negate the claims in the complaint, a court must adhere to the concept that the allegations in the complaint are presumed to be true, and that the pleading is entitled to all reasonable inferences (see Leon, 84 N.Y.2d at 87–88, 614 N.Y.S.2d 972, 638 N.E.2d 511). However, while the pleading is to be liberally construed, the court is not required to accept as true factual allegations that are plainly contradicted by documentary evidence (Robinson v. Robinson, 303 A.D.2d 234, 235, 757 N.Y.S.2d 13 [1st Dept. 2003]).	"In considering the documents offered by the movant to negate the claims in the complaint, should a court adhere to the concept that the allegations in the complaint are presumed to be true?"
2631	Guinn v. Hoskins Chevrolet, 361 Ill. App. 3d 575, 586 (2005)	4	On motion to dismiss, it is the court's duty to determine, considering the allegations of the complaint in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs, whether the allegations are sufficient to state a cause of action upon which relief may be granted.	It is the court's duty to determine, considering the allegations of the complaint in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs, whether the allegations are sufficient to state a cause of action upon which relief may be granted.	In determining whether allegations of complaint are sufficient to state a cause of action should a court view allegations of a complaint in light most favorable to a plaintiff?
2633	THI of New Mexico at Vida Encantada v. Lovato, 848 F. Supp. 2d 1309, 1332 (D.N.M., 2012)	36	An important consideration in assessing waiver of the right to arbitration is whether the party now seeking arbitration is improperly manipulating the judicial process; evidence of such manipulation includes a delay in suggesting arbitration until substantial discovery has been completed, or until the eve of trial.	Further, "[a]n important consideration in assessing waiver is whether the party now seeking arbitration is improperly manipulating the judicial process." Id. Evidence of such manipulation includes "a delay in suggesting arbitration until substantial discovery has been completed, ... or until the eve of trial."	Is a delay in suggesting arbitration until substantial discovery has been completed evidence of manipulation of the judicial process?
2634	Hopkins Auto. Equip. Co. v. Lyon, 59 Ga. App. 468, 1 S.E.2d 460, 462 (Ga. App. 1939)	4	Prior to adoption of Negotiable Instruments Law "irregular indorser" or "accommodation indorser" who merely wrote name on note to guarantee payment and whose signature was not necessary to transfer title was "surety" not liable as "indorser," and liability was barred after lapse of 6 years unless signature was under seal. Code 1933, SS 14-604, 14-605.	Prior to the adoption of the uniform negotiable instruments law, an irregular indorser, or an accommodation indorser, who merely wrote his name thereon to guarantee payment and whose signature was not necessary to transfer title, was surety and not liable on the paper as indorser and unless such signature was under seal his liability thereunder was barred after the lapse of six years.	What was the situation prior to the adoption of the uniform negotiable instruments law?

2635	Mazzei v. Kyriacou, 98 A.D.3d 1088, 1089, 951 N.Y.S.2d 557, 559 (2012)	2	In reviewing a motion to dismiss an affirmative defense as meritless, the court must liberally construe the pleadings in favor of the party asserting the defense and give that party the benefit of every reasonable inference. McKinney's CPLR 3211(b).	"In reviewing a motion to dismiss an affirmative defense, the court must liberally construe the pleadings in favor of the party asserting the defense and give that party the benefit of every reasonable inference" (Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Farrell, 57 A.D.3d 721, 723, 869 N.Y.S.2d 597).	"In reviewing a motion to dismiss an affirmative defense as meritless, should the court liberally construe the pleadings in favor of the party asserting the defense?"
2636	Fleischmann v. Wausau Bus. Ins. Co., 671 N.E.2d 473, 475 (Ind. App. 1996)	4	In determining whether claim should be dismissed for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction, trial court may weigh evidence to determine if requisite jurisdictional facts exist and to resolve factual disputes.	When determining whether an on-the-job injury claim should be dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the trial court may consider the pleadings, affidavits, and any other evidence submitted. In addition, the court may weigh the evidence to determine the existence of the requisite jurisdictional facts and resolve factual disputes.	"In determining whether claim should be dismissed for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction, can a trial court weigh evidence to determine if requisite jurisdictional facts exist?"
2637	Lumry v. State, 49 Kan. App. 2d 276, 296, 307 P.3d 232, 246 (2013)	18	When faced with a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the court must decide whether facts state a claim as espoused by the plaintiff or on any other possible theory the court can divine. West's K.S.A. 44-1202(a), 44-1210(b).	In fact, when faced with a motion to dismiss for failure to *297 state a claim, the court must decide whether facts state a claim as espoused by the plaintiff or on any other possible theory the court can divine.	"When faced with a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, should the court decide whether facts state a claim as espoused by the plaintiff or on any other possible theory the court can divine?"
2638	Collura v. L & E Concrete Pumping, Inc., 454 Pa. Super. 572, 579, 686 A.2d 392, 396 (1996)	8	Doctrine of non pros has developed in order to ensure that plaintiffs do not take advantage of defendants through dilatory tactics; by same respect, however, defendant will not be allowed to intentionally prejudice plaintiff in prosecution of case.	[8] The doctrine of non pros has developed in order to ensure that plaintiffs do not take advantage of defendants through dilatory tactics. Mudd v. Nosker Lumber, Inc., 443 Pa.Super. 483, 662 A.2d 660 (1995) (citation omitted). By the same respect, however, a defendant will not be allowed to intentionally prejudice a plaintiff in the prosecution of a case.	Has doctrine of non pros developed in order to ensure that plaintiffs do not take advantage of defendants through dilatory tactics?
2639	City of Houston v. Thomas, 838 S.W.2d 296, 297 (Tex. App. 1992)	1	Trial court may dismiss case for want of prosecution when party fails to appear at hearing or trial; when case has not been disposed of within Supreme Court's time standard; and by court's inherent power to dismiss when case has not been prosecuted with due diligence. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 165a, 165a, subds. 1, 2, 4; Judicial Administration Rules, V.T.C.A., Government Code Title 2, Subtitle F App., Rule 6b(2).	A trial court may dismiss a case for want of prosecution (1) when a party fails to appear at a hearing or trial, rule 165a(1); (2) when the case has not been disposed of within the supreme court's time standards, rule 165a(2); and (3) by the court's inherent power to dismiss when the case has not been prosecuted with due diligence.	Can the court dismiss a case for want of prosecution by court's inherent power to dismiss when the case has not been prosecuted with due diligence?

2644	Bond v. Messerman, 391 Md. 706, 718 (2006)	2	If additional facts are necessary to decide a motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, the court may consider affidavits or other evidence adduced during an evidentiary hearing, without transforming the motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment. Md.Rule 322(a).	If additional facts are necessary to decide the motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, the court may consider affidavits or other 998 evidence adduced during an evidentiary hearing, without transforming the motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment.	"When a motion to dismiss is based upon lack of jurisdiction, can the court consider affidavits on the motion to dismiss without converting the motion into a motion for summary judgment?"
2645	People v. Gagnon, 21 Misc. 3d 594	2	Specific intent to cause fear of serious bodily injury is gravamen of offense of felony menacing, C.R.S. 18-3-206; while it is not necessary to prove actual subjective fear on the part of the victim as an element of the offense, what the victim saw or heard and his reactions thereto are relevant considerations in determining whether defendant had the requisite intent to place victim in fear.	The specific intent to cause fear of serious bodily injury is the gravamen of this offense. People v. McPherson, 200 Colo. 429, 619 P.2d 38 (1980); § 18-3-206, C.R.S. (1978 Repl.Vol. 8). While it is not necessary to prove actual subjective fear on the part of the victim as an element of the offense, People v. Stout, 193 Colo. 466, 568 P.2d 52 (1977), nonetheless what the victim saw or heard, and his reactions thereto, are relevant considerations in determining whether defendant had the requisite intent to place him in fear.	What are relevant considerations in determining whether defendant had the requisite intent to place the victim in fear?
2647	O'Callaghan v. Satherlie, 2015 IL App (1st) 142152, ¶ 19, 36 N.E.3d 999, 1006	11	Although the rule providing for dismissal based on defects or defenses, like the rule providing for dismissal on the pleadings, permits attack based on defects on the complaint's face, those defects should be coupled with grounds not appearing of record; however, courts allow some overlap between motions filed under these rules and a confluence between the two rules exists where an affirmative matter is apparent on the face of the complaint. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-615, 5/2-619.	In addition, although section 2-619, like section 2-615, permits attack based on defects on the complaint's face, those defects should be coupled with grounds not appearing of record. Illinois Graphics Co., 159 Ill.2d at 485, 203 Ill.Dec. 463, 639 N.E.2d 1282. With that said, courts have allowed section 2-619 motions even though the only grounds for dismissal may be a defect on the face of the pleadings. Id. Accordingly, courts allow some overlap between motions filed under section 2-615 and section 2-619. Id.; Murcia v. Textron, Inc., 342 Ill.App.3d 433, 437, 277 Ill.Dec. 105, 795 N.E.2d 773 (2003). A confluence between the two sections exists where an affirmative matter is apparent on the face of the complaint.	Do courts allow some overlap between motions filed under rules and a confluence between the two rules exists where an affirmative matter is apparent on the face of the complaint?
2649	US Chem. Storage, LLC v. Berto Constr., Inc., 253 N.C. App. 378, 382, 800 S.E.2d 716, 720 (2017)	8	If a defendant supplements his motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction with an affidavit or other supporting evidence, the allegations in the complaint can no longer be taken as true or controlling and plaintiff cannot rest on the allegations of the complaint. N.C. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(2).	"[I]f the defendant supplements his motion to dismiss with an affidavit or other supporting evidence, the allegations [in the complaint] can no longer be taken as true or controlling and plaintiff[] cannot rest on the allegations of the complaint." Id.	"If a defendant supplements his motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction with an affidavit or other supporting evidence, can the allegations in the complaint no longer be taken as true or controlling?"

2651	Nasca v. Sgro, 130 A.D.3d 588, 588, 13 N.Y.S.3d 188, 190 (2015)	3	A court is permitted to consider evidentiary material in support of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action, and, if it does so, the criterion then becomes whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action, not whether he has stated one. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	"A court is, of course, permitted to consider evidentiary material ... in support of a motion to dismiss pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(7)" (Sokol v. Leader, 74 A.D.3d 1180, 1181, 904 N.Y.S.2d 153), and, if it does so, "the criterion then becomes 'whether the proponent of the pleading has a cause of action, not whether he has stated one' " (id. at 1181-1182, 904 N.Y.S.2d 153, quoting Guggenheimer v. Ginzburg, 43 N.Y.2d 268, 275, 401 N.Y.S.2d 182, 372 N.E.2d 17).	Is a court permitted to consider evidentiary material in support of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action?
2652	Kowalski-Schmidt v. CLS Mortg., 981 F. Supp. 105, 108 (E.D.N.Y. 1997)	3	Court may determine pretrial motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction on basis of affidavits alone, it may permit discovery in aid of motion, or it may conduct evidentiary hearing on motion's merits. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc.Rule 12(b)(2), 28 U.S.C.A.	[The Court] may determine the motion on the basis of affidavits alone; or it may permit discovery in aid of the motion; or it may conduct an evidentiary hearing on the merits of the motion.	"Does the trial court have discretion to decide a pretrial motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction on the basis of affidavits alone, to permit discovery?"
2653	Com. v. Swan, 73 Mass. App. Ct. 258, 260-61 (2008)	1	A conviction for open and gross lewdness and lascivious behavior requires proof that a defendant (1) exposed genitals, breasts, or buttocks, (2) intentionally, (3) openly or with reckless disregard of public exposure, (4) in a manner so as to produce alarm or shock, (5) thereby actually shocking or alarming one or more persons. M.G.L.A. c. 272, § 16.	However, decisional law requires proof of five elements to support a conviction, i.e., that the defendant (1) exposed genitals, breasts, or buttocks; *261 (2) intentionally; (3) openly or with reckless disregard of public exposure; (4) in a manner so "as to produce alarm or shock"; (5) thereby actually shocking or alarming one or more persons.	What is required to prove gross lewdness?
2654	Com. v. Swan, 73 Mass. App. Ct. 258, 260-61 (2008)	1	A conviction for open and gross lewdness and lascivious behavior requires proof that a defendant (1) exposed genitals, breasts, or buttocks, (2) intentionally, (3) openly or with reckless disregard of public exposure, (4) in a manner so as to produce alarm or shock, (5) thereby actually shocking or alarming one or more persons. M.G.L.A. c. 272, § 16.	However, decisional law requires proof of five elements to support a conviction, i.e., that the defendant (1) exposed genitals, breasts, or buttocks; *261 (2) intentionally; (3) openly or with reckless disregard of public exposure; (4) in a manner so "as to produce alarm or shock"; (5) thereby actually shocking or alarming one or more persons.	What is required to prove lascivious behavior?
2655	Veltri v. Bldg. Serv. 32B-J Pension Fund, 393 F.3d 318, 326 (2d Cir. 2004)	14	The doctrine of equitable estoppel is properly invoked where the enforcement of the rights of one party would work an injustice upon the other party due to the latter's justifiable reliance upon the former's words or conduct.	Also available to defendants in such cases is the doctrine of equitable estoppel, which "is properly invoked where the enforcement of the rights of one party would work an injustice upon the other party due to the latter's justifiable reliance upon the former's words or conduct."	Is equitable estoppel properly invoked where enforcement of the rights of one party would work an injustice upon the other party?

2656	Dev. Corp. of Palm Beach v. WBC Const., 925 So. 2d 1156, 1160 (Fla. App. 2006)	7	If only the motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction is filed, then the defendant merely raises the legal sufficiency of the pleadings; when, however, the defendant files affidavits contesting the factual assertions of jurisdiction or the existence of minimum contacts, the burden then shifts to the plaintiff to file counter-affidavits supporting its position.	When a defendant challenges jurisdiction, the defendant files a motion to dismiss. If the motion alone is filed, then the defendant merely raises the legal sufficiency of the pleadings. When, however, the defendant files affidavits contesting the factual assertions of jurisdiction or the existence of minimum contacts, the burden then shifts to the plaintiff to file counter-affidavits supporting its position.	Can a defendant contest jurisdictional allegation of a complaint or claim a lack of sufficient minimum contacts?
2658	Dakota Cheese v. Taylor, 525 N.W.2d 713, 716 (S.D. 1995)	7	Dismissal of cause of action for failure to prosecute should be granted when, after considering all facts and circumstances of particular case, plaintiff can be charged with lack of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude.	Finally, dismissal of the cause of action for failure to prosecute should be granted when, after considering all the facts and circumstances of the particular case, the plaintiff can be charged with lack of due diligence in failing to proceed with reasonable promptitude.	Should dismissal of cause of action for failure to prosecute be granted after considering all facts and circumstances of particular case?
2660	House v. State of California, 119 Cal. App. 3d 861, 874, 174 Cal. Rptr. 279, 286 (Ct. App. 1981)	2	If summons has not been served and return made within three years after commencement of action, dismissal of complaint is mandatory if plaintiff fails to prove reasonable diligence in attempting to serve and return summons. West's Ann.Code Civ.Proc. S 581a(a).	If the summons has not been served and return made within three years after the commencement of the action, dismissal of the complaint under Code of Civil Procedure section 581a, subdivision (a), 10 is mandatory if the plaintiff fails to prove reasonable diligence in attempting to serve and return summons.	Is dismissal of complaint mandatory if plaintiff fails to prove reasonable diligence in attempting to serve and return summons?
2661	Suffolk Cnty. Water Auth. v. Dow Chem. Co., 44 Misc. 3d 569, 577-78, 987 N.Y.S.2d 819, 825 (N.Y. Sup. 2014)	2	In assessing a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action, a court is free to consider affidavits submitted to aid in support of allowing the complaint to stand. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	In assessing a motion under CPLR § 3211(a)(7), a court is free to consider affidavits submitted to aid in support of allowing the complaint to stand, Leon v. Martinez, 84 N.Y.2d 83, 614 N.Y.S.2d 972, 638 N.E.2d 511 (1994); Endless Ocean, LLC v. Twomey, Latham, Shea, Kelley, Dubin & Quartararo, 113 A.D.3d 587, 979 N.Y.S.2d 84 (2d Dep't 2014).	"In assessing a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action, is a court free to consider affidavits submitted to aid in support of allowing the complaint to stand?"

2662	Ashwood Cap., Inc. v. OTG Mgmt., Inc., 99 A.D.3d 1, 10, 948 N.Y.S.2d 292, 299 (2012)	14	On a motion to dismiss, a court must read the complaint liberally, accept as true the facts alleged, and accord plaintiff the benefit of every possible inference; further, a court must consider the factual assertions of an affidavit submitted in opposition to the dismissal motion in order to preserve inartfully pleaded, but potentially meritorious, claims.	On a motion to dismiss we must read the complaint liberally, accept as true the facts alleged, and accord plaintiff the benefit of every possible inference (see 511 W. 232nd Owners Corp. v. Jennifer Realty Co., 98 N.Y.2d 144, 151–152, 746 N.Y.S.2d 131, 773 N.E.2d 496 [2002]). Further, we must consider the factual assertions of an affidavit submitted in opposition to the dismissal motion in order to preserve “inartfully pleaded, but potentially meritorious, claims” (Rovello v. Orofino Realty Co., 40 N.Y.2d 633, 635, 389 N.Y.S.2d 314, 357 N.E.2d 970 [1976]).	"Should a court consider the factual assertions of an affidavit submitted in opposition to the dismissal motion in order to preserve in artfully pleaded, but potentially meritorious, claims?"
2666	Coleman v. Comm'r of Correction, 137 Conn. App. 51, 56 (2012)	9	In reviewing whether a pleading states a cause of action, although the court accepts all well pleaded facts as true, it need not admit legal conclusions or the truth or accuracy of opinions stated in the pleadings.	Accordingly, in reviewing whether a pleading states a cause of action, although we accept all well pleaded facts as true, we need not "admit legal conclusions or the truth or accuracy of opinions stated in the pleadings.	"In reviewing whether a pleading states a cause of action, does it need to admit legal conclusions or the truth or accuracy of opinions stated in the pleadings?"
2668	Beaubien v. Cambridge Consol., Ltd., 652 So. 2d 936, 939 (Fla. App. 1995)	9	Defendant wishing to contest allegations of complaint concerning jurisdiction or to raise contention of minimum contacts must file affidavits in support of his position; burden is then placed upon plaintiff to prove by affidavit the basis upon which jurisdiction may be obtained.	A defendant wishing to contest the allegations of the complaint concerning jurisdiction or to raise a contention of minimum contacts must file affidavits in support of his position. The burden is then placed upon the plaintiff to prove by affidavit the basis upon which jurisdiction may be obtained.	Should a defendant wishing to contest allegations of a complaint concerning jurisdiction or to raise contention of minimum contacts file affidavits in support of his position?
2669	Dworak v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 269 Neb. 386, 393 (2005)	6	A "dismissal without prejudice" after failing to timely serve defendants means that another petition may be filed against the same parties upon the same facts as long as it is filed within the applicable statute of limitations. Neb.Rev.St. S 25-217.	A dismissal without prejudice means that another petition may be filed against the same parties upon the same facts as long as it is filed within the applicable statute of limitations.	Does a dismissal without prejudice mean that another petition can be filed against the same parties upon the same facts as long as it is filed within the applicable statute of limitations?
2670	Drakeford v. Barnett Bank of Tampa, 694 So. 2d 822, 824 (Fla. App. 1997)	5	Dismissal of complaint with prejudice is severe sanction which should only be granted when pleader has failed to state cause of action and it conclusively appears that there is no possible way to amend complaint in order to state cause of action.	Dismissal of a complaint with prejudice is a severe sanction which should only be granted when the pleader has failed to state a cause of action and it conclusively appears that there is no possible way to amend the complaint in order to state a cause of action.	"Is dismissal with prejudice a severe sanction, which should be granted only when the pleader has failed to state a cause of action and it conclusively appears that the pleader cannot possibly amend?"

2671	Collier v. City & Cty. of San Francisco, 151 Cal. App. 4th 1326, 1346 (2007)	10	To show a fee is a regulatory fee and not a special tax within the meaning of Proposition 13's super-majority requirement for imposing special taxes, the government should prove (1) the estimated costs of the service or regulatory activity, and (2) the basis for determining the manner in which the costs are apportioned, so that charges allocated to a payor bear a fair or reasonable relationship to the payor's burdens on or benefits from the regulatory activity. West's Ann.Cal. Const. Art. 13A, S 4; West's Ann.Cal.Gov.Code S 50076.	[T]o show a fee is a regulatory fee and not a special tax, the government should prove (1) the estimated costs of the service or regulatory activity, and (2) the basis for determining the manner in which the costs are apportioned, so that charges allocated to a payor bear a fair or reasonable relationship to the payor's burdens on or benefits from the regulatory activity.	What does the government have to prove in order to show a fee is a regulatory fee and not a special tax?
2673	Nelson v. Mercy Health Ctr., 241 P.3d 276, 279 (Okla.Civ.App. Div. 4, 2010)	5	Under abuse of discretion standard of review, if an order of dismissal results in a dismissal with prejudice, an appellate court must take a closer look at the circumstances; circumstances which would support a finding of lack of good cause and dismissal without prejudice might well not support such a finding when the dismissal is terminal under the savings statute. 12 Okl.St. Ann. S 100.	If an order of dismissal results in a dismissal with prejudice, as here, an appellate court must take a closer look at the circumstances. "Circumstances which would support a finding of lack of 'good cause' and dismissal without prejudice might well not support such a finding when the dismissal is terminal due to [12 O.S.2001]..."	Can circumstances which would support dismissal without prejudice well support such a finding when the dismissal is terminal?
2675	Unbank Co., LLP v. Merwin Drug Co., 677 N.W.2d 105, 109 (Minn. Ct. App. 2004)	8	A district court's designation of "with prejudice" or "without prejudice" must be viewed in light of the basis for the dismissal and is not automatically dispositive of whether a second suit is barred.	We recognize that a district court's designation of "with prejudice" or "without prejudice" must be viewed in light of the basis for the dismissal and is not automatically dispositive of whether a second suit is barred.	"Should a district court's designation of ""with prejudice"" or ""without prejudice"" be viewed in light of the basis for the dismissal and is not automatically dispositive of whether a second suit is barred?"
2676	Vopalka v. Abraham, 260 Neb. 737	3	A civil action shall stand dismissed without prejudice as to any defendant not served within six months from the date the petition was filed as mandated by statute. Neb.Rev.St. S 25-217.	Neb.Rev.Stat. § 25–217 (Reissue 1995) provides that "[t]he action shall stand dismissed without prejudice as to any defendant not served within six months from the date the petition was filed."	Shall a civil action stand dismissed without prejudice as to any defendant not served within six months from the date the petition was filed as mandated by statute?
2677	Gilmartin v. Abastillas, 10 Haw. App. 283, 284 (1994)	3	Unconditional dismissal with prejudice terminates trial court's jurisdiction, except for limited purposes of reopening and setting aside judgment of dismissal within scope allowed by rule. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 60(b).	An unconditional dismissal with prejudice terminates the trial court's jurisdiction, except for the limited purposes of reopening and setting aside the judgment of dismissal within the scope allowed by HRCF Rule 60(b).	"Does an unconditional dismissal with prejudice terminate a trial court's jurisdiction, except for the limited purposes of reopening and setting aside judgment?"
2678	Dillaplain v. Lite Indus., 788 S.W.2d 530, 532 (Mo. App. 1990)	2	A dismissal without prejudice, which plaintiff may cure by filing another suit in the same court, is not a "final judgment" from which an appeal may be taken because it lacks the hallmarks of a final judgment, i.e., it fails to dispose of all the issues and parties to the cause of action.	A dismissal without prejudice which the plaintiff may cure by filing another suit in the same court, is not a final judgment from which an appeal may be taken under Missouri law because it lacks the hallmarks of a final judgment -it fails to dispose of all the issues and parties to the cause of action.	"Where a petition is dismissed without prejudice, can the plaintiff typically cure the dismissal by filing another suit in the same court?"

2679	Elrod v. Stewart, 163 S.W.3d 587, 591 (Mo. App. 2005)	10	While a dismissal without prejudice for failure to state a claim may operate to preclude the plaintiff from bringing another action for the same cause and may be res judicata of what the judgment actually decided, the dismissal does not preclude the plaintiff from reasserting the claim on new factual allegations. V.A.M.R. 67.01.	While a dismissal without prejudice for failure to state a claim may operate to preclude the plaintiff from bringing another action for the same cause and may be res judicata of what the judgment actually decided, the dismissal does not preclude the plaintiff from reasserting the claim on new factual allegations.	"Does a dismissal without prejudice permit the party to bring another civil action for the same cause, unless it is otherwise barred?"
2680	In re S. Bay Expressway, 434 B.R. 589, 598 (S.D. Cal. 2010)	3	Under California law, a governmental franchise is a special privilege granted to a private enterprise by a duly-empowered governmental entity to use public property to provide vital public services which the government itself is otherwise obligated to furnish to its citizens, such as providing water, gas, electricity, or telephone services, and the right to use the public streets and ways to bring them to the general public.	A governmental franchise is a special privilege granted to a private enterprise by a duly-empowered governmental entity to use public property to provide vital public services which the government itself is otherwise obligated to furnish to its citizens, such as providing water, gas, electricity or telephone services, and the right to use the public streets and ways to bring them to the general public.	What is a governmental franchise?
2681	Harris v. News-Sun, 269 Ill. App. 3d 648, 650-51 (1995)	3	Under statute authorizing dismissal of action on ground that claim asserted is barred by other "affirmative matter" avoiding legal effect or defeating claim, affirmative matter includes defense that completely negates asserted cause of action. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(9).	Under section 2-619(a)(9), an action may be dismissed on *651 the ground that a claim asserted is barred by other affirmative matter avoiding the legal effect or defeating the claim. (735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(9) (West 1992).) "Affirmative matter" includes a defense that completely negates the asserted cause of action.	Does an affirmative matter that defeats claim asserted in complaint include defense that completely negates asserted cause of action?
2682	City of Philadelphia v. Williams, 122 Pa. Cmwlt. 630, 635 (1989)	4	When respondent effectively denies material allegations in petition to open judgment non pros, petitioner must support his position with clear and convincing proof. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 209, 42 Pa.C.S.A.	It is well established that when a respondent effectively denies material allegations in a petition to open judgment, the petitioner must support his position with clear and convincing proof.	"When a respondent effectively denies material allegations in a petition to open judgment non pros, should a petitioner support his position with clear and convincing proof?"
2683	State ex rel. Polaris Indus. v. Journey, 505 S.W.3d 370, 375-376 (Mo.App. W.D., 2016)	15	When a court involuntarily dismisses a case without prejudice, the court does not immediately lose jurisdiction over the matter, but instead retains jurisdiction over the matter so that the court is allowed to reconsider its action, correct any errors, and modify or set aside its order.	When a court involuntarily dismisses a case without prejudice, the court does not immediately lose jurisdiction over the matter, but instead "retains jurisdiction over the matter so that the court [is] allowed to reconsider its action, correct any errors, and modify or *376 set aside its order."	"When a court involuntarily dismisses a case without prejudice, does the court immediately lose jurisdiction over the matter?"

2684	Fuller Family Holdings v. N. Tr. Co., 371 Ill. App. 3d 605, 613 (2007)	1	An action will be dismissed based on defects or defenses which avoid or defeat claims if, after construing the pleadings and supporting documents in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party, the trial court finds that no set of facts can be proved upon which relief could be granted. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-619.	An action will be dismissed under section 2-619 of the Code if, after construing the pleadings and supporting documents in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party, the trial court finds that no set of facts can be proved upon which relief could be granted.	Would relief be granted if the court finds that no set of facts can be proved?
2685	Brown By & Through Brown v. Commercial Dispatch Pub. Co., 504 So. 2d 245, 246 (Ala. 1987)	3	Agency relationship is not created when employer merely retains right to supervise or inspect work of an independent contract as it progresses for purpose of determining whether it is completed according to plans and specifications and retains right to stop work that is not properly done.	An agency relationship is not created when the employer merely retains the right to supervise or inspect the work of an independent contractor as it progresses for the purpose of determining whether it is completed according to plans and specifications and retains the right to stop work that is not properly done.	Is an agency relationship created when an employer retains the right to supervise the work of an independent contractor?
2686	Brown By & Through Brown v. Commercial Dispatch Pub. Co., 504 So. 2d 245, 246 (Ala. 1987)	3	Agency relationship is not created when employer merely retains right to supervise or inspect work of an independent contract as it progresses for purpose of determining whether it is completed according to plans and specifications and retains right to stop work that is not properly done.	An agency relationship is not created when the employer merely retains the right to supervise or inspect the work of an independent contractor as it progresses for the purpose of determining whether it is completed according to plans and specifications and retains the right to stop work that is not properly done.	Does the employer retaining the right to inspect the work of independent contractor create an agency relationship?
2688	In re Y.M., 207 Cal. App. 4th 892, 908 (2012)	7	Federal law imposes requirements on state dependency plans and recognizes the institutional competence of state courts as the appropriate forum for child welfare determinations regarding abuse, neglect, or abandonment, and a child's best interests. Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act, S 106, 42 U.S.C.A. S 5106a.	Federal law imposes requirements on state dependency plans and recognizes "the institutional competence of state courts as the appropriate forum for child welfare determinations regarding abuse, neglect, or abandonment, and a child's best interests."	Are state courts the appropriate forum for child welfare determinations regarding abuse of a child?
2689	H.S.P. v. J.K., 223 N.J. 196, 209-10 (2015)	2	A child seeking special immigrant juvenile (SIJ) status, or another individual acting on his or her behalf, must first petition for an order from a state juvenile court making findings that the juvenile satisfies certain criteria. Immigration and Nationality Act, S 101(a)(27)(J), 8 U.S.C.A. S 1101(a)(27)(J).	"a special circumstance 'where a state juvenile court is charged with addressing an issue relevant only to federal immigration law.' " The child-or another individual acting on his or her behalf-must first petition for " 'an order from a state juvenile court making findings that 858 the juvenile satisfies certain criteria.' " "	Does a child have to petition for an order from a state juvenile court to make findings that the juvenile satisfies certain criteria to qualify for Special Immigrant Juvenile (SIJ) status?

2690	Fonseca v. Fong, 167 Cal. App. 4th 922, 931 (2008)	10	The initial inquiry into whether a state statute relating to immigration is preempted by federal law is whether the state statute constitutes an attempted regulation of immigration that is per se preempted because of the exclusivity of federal power to regulate in the area under the United States Constitution; if this is not the case, the statute may nevertheless be preempted under a second test, which is whether it was the clear and manifest purpose of Congress to effect a complete ouster of state power-including state power to promulgate laws not in conflict with federal laws with respect to the subject matter of the state statute-because Congress intended to occupy the field to which the state statute applies. U.S.C.A. Const. Art. 6, cl. 2.	The De Canas court established a three-part test for determining whether a state statute relating to immigration is preempted by federal law. The initial inquiry is whether the state statute constitutes an attempted "regulation of immigration" that is per se preempted because of the exclusivity of federal power to regulate in this area under the United States Constitution. If this is not the case, the statute may nevertheless be preempted under the second test, which is whether it was the "clear and manifest purpose of Congress" "to effect a "complete ouster of state power -including state power to promulgate laws not in conflict with federal laws" with respect to the subject matter of the state statute-because Congress intended to "occupy the field" "to which the state statute applies.	Are state statutes that regulate immigration per se preempted because of the exclusivity of federal power to regulate in this area under the United States Constitution?
2694	Rowe v. HCA Health Services of Oklahoma, Inc., 130 P.3d 761, 762–63 (Okla.Civ.App. Div. 4, 2005)	1	When District Court grants motion to dismiss for failure to state claim, it must grant plaintiff leave to file amended petition if defect can be remedied, and District Court has duty to specify time within which plaintiff must file amended petition; if District Court does not prescribe time, defendant who obtained dismissal has responsibility to move court to set time. 12 Okl.St. Ann. S 2012(G).	When a district court grants a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, it must grant the plaintiff leave to file an amended petition if the defect can be remedied. Kelly v. Abbott, 1989 OK 124, 6, 781 P.2d 1188, 1190. The district court has a duty to specify the time within which the plaintiff must file the amended petition. Id. at 10, 781 P.2d at 1191. If the district court does not prescribe a time, the defendant who obtained the dismissal has the responsibility to move the court to set a time.	"When District Court grants motion to dismiss for failure to state claim, should it grant a plaintiff leave to file an amended petition if a defect can be remedied?"
2695	Sellers v. Foster, 199 S.W.3d 385, 397 (Tex .App. 2006)	17	A party whose case has been dismissed for failure to appear at a hearing due to a lack of notice of that hearing need not show that he or she has a meritorious claim to be entitled to reinstatement.	But a party whose case has been dismissed for failure to appear at a hearing due to a lack of notice of that hearing need not show that he or she has a meritorious claim to be entitled to reinstatement.	Should a party whose case has been dismissed for failure to appear at a hearing due to a lack of notice of that hearing not show that he or she has a meritorious claim to be entitled to reinstatement?

2696	Petrone v. Whirlwind, 444 Pa. Super. 477, 481-482 (1995)	2	Three factors must be present in order to open non pros judgment: (1) petition to open must be promptly filed; (2) default or delay must be reasonably explained; and (3) facts must be shown to exist that support cause of action. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 3051, 42 Pa.C.S.A.	400, 581 A.2d 193, 196 (1990), three factors must be present in order to open a non pros judgment. These are (1) the petition to open must be promptly filed; (2) the default or delay must be reasonably explained; and (3) facts must be shown to exist which support *482 a cause of action. We note that factors (1) and (3) are undisputedly satisfied.	What three factors must be present in order to open non pros judgment?
2697	Hawes v. 1997 Jeep Wrangler, 602 N.W.2d 874, 878 (Minn. App. 1999)	6	In determining whether an in rem civil forfeiture is "punishment" for double jeopardy purposes, the court must first examine the governing statute to determine whether the legislative body intended the forfeiture proceedings to be criminal/punitive or civil/remedial, and then must consider whether the party challenging the statute has shown by the clearest proof that the forfeiture is so punitive in fact that it may not legitimately be viewed as civil in nature. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; M.S.A. Const. Art. 1, S 7.	In Urserly, the Supreme Court articulated a two- step test for determining whether a civil forfeiture constitutes "punishment" for double jeopardy purposes. Under that test: First, a court must examine the governing statute to determine whether the legislative body intended the forfeiture *369 proceedings to be criminal/punitive or civil/remedial. Next, the court must consider whether the party challenging the statute has shown by the clearest proof that the forfeiture is so punitive in fact that it may not legitimately be viewed as civil in nature.	"Did the legislature intend that a drug forfeiture proceeding be civil in rem action, rather than a criminal proceeding, for purpose of determining whether forfeiture imposed ""punishment""?"
2698	People v. Anderson, 117 Cal. App. Supp. 763	11	In general, if a jury is discharged without returning a verdict, the double jeopardy bar applies unless manifest necessity required the discharge or the defendant consented to it. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; West's Ann.Cal. Const. Art. 1, S 15.	In general, if a jury is discharged without returning a verdict, the double jeopardy bar applies unless manifest necessity required the discharge or the defendant consented to it.	"If a jury is discharged without returning a verdict, does the double jeopardy bar apply unless manifest necessity required the discharge or the defendant consented to it?"
2699	Koch v. Dakota Cty., 151 Neb. 506, 511 (1949)	7	The statutory provision that a petition for establishment or vacation of a public road shall be signed by at least ten electors residing within five miles of road, is jurisdictional. R.S.1943, S 39-105.	The statutory provision that a petition for the establishment or vacation of a public road shall be signed by at least ten electors residing within five miles of the road is jurisdictional.	Is it necessary that the statutory provision for the establishment or vacation of a public road be signed by at least ten electors residing within five miles of the road?

2700	Nedell v. Sprigman, 227 A.D.2d 163, 164, 641 N.Y.S.2d 837, 838 (1996)	5	Case which is deemed abandoned and automatically dismissed for neglect to prosecute should be restored if, on motion, plaintiff can show lack of intent to abandon action, existence of meritorious cause of action, reasonable excuse for delay, and lack of substantial prejudice. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	A case which is deemed abandoned under CPLR 3404 and dismissed for neglect to prosecute should be restored if, on motion, the plaintiff can show a lack of intent to abandon the action, the existence of a meritorious cause of action, a reasonable excuse for the delay and the lack of substantial prejudice (Kopilas v. Peterson, 206 A.D.2d 460, 614 N.Y.S.2d 562; Roberts v. Town of Hempstead, 206 A.D.2d 466, 614 N.Y.S.2d 569).	When should a case which is deemed abandoned and automatically dismissed for neglect to prosecute be restored?
2701	Estela v. Bristol Hosp., 165 Conn. App. 100, 108 (2016)	5	To set aside a judgment rendered after a nonsuit, there must be a showing (1) that a good cause of action, the nature of which must be set forth, existed at the time judgment was rendered, and (2) that the plaintiff was prevented from prosecuting the action because of mistake, accident or other reasonable cause; both prongs of the test must be met. C.G.S.A. § 52-212(a).	"[T]here is a two-pronged test for setting aside a judgment rendered after a nonsuit.... There must be a showing (1) that a good cause of action, the nature of which must be set forth, existed at the time judgment was rendered, and (2) that the plaintiff was prevented from prosecuting the action because of mistake, accident or other reasonable cause."	"Should a plaintiff seeking to have a nonsuit set aside establish that it had a good cause of action, the nature of which must be set forth?"
2702	Florida Nat. Org. for Women v. State, 832 So. 2d 911, 915 (Fla. App. 2002)	7	A party that may be able to allege additional facts to support its cause of action or support another cause of action under a different legal theory should be allowed to amend a complaint. West's F.S.A. RCP Rule 1.190(a).	Further, a party that "may be able to allege additional facts to support its cause of action or support another cause of action under a different legal theory" should be allowed to amend a complaint.	Can a party that can be able to allege additional facts to support its cause of action or support another cause of action under a different legal theory be allowed to amend a complaint?
2703	Gerena v. New York State Div. of Parole, 266 A.D.2d 761, 762, 698 N.Y.S.2d 750, 751 (1999)	1	Where a party has failed to separately set forth and number allegations of a pleading as required by statute, the appropriate remedy is dismissal of the pleading with leave to replead. McKinney's CPLR 3014.	Consequently, where a party has failed to separately set forth and number allegations of a pleading as required by CPLR 3014, the appropriate remedy is dismissal of the pleading with leave to replead (see, e.g., Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Merchants Mut. Ins. Co., 84 A.D.2d 736, 444 N.Y.S.2d 79; Joffe v. Rubenstein, 24 A.D.2d 752, 263 N.Y.S.2d 867, appeal dismissed 21 N.Y.2d 721, 287 N.Y.S.2d 685, 234 N.E.2d 706; see generally, Siegel, N.Y. Prac. § 212, at 308 [2d ed.]).	"Where a party has failed to separately set forth and number allegations of a pleading as required by statute, is the appropriate remedy dismissal of the pleading with leave to replead?"

2704	Varo, Inc. v. Alvis PLC, 261 A.D.2d 262, 267, 691 N.Y.S.2d 51, 56 (1999)	7	When a motion to dismiss is predicated on a claim of failure to state a cause of action, plaintiff must be afforded an opportunity to seek leave to replead. McKinney's CPLR 3211(e).	As noted above, when a motion to dismiss is predicated on a claim of failure to state a cause of action, the plaintiff must be afforded an opportunity to seek leave to replead within the prescriptions of CPLR 3211(e) (see, McLearn v. Cowen & Co., supra, 60 N.Y.2d at 689, 468 N.Y.S.2d 461, 455 N.E.2d 1256).	"When a motion to dismiss is predicated on a claim of failure to state a cause of action, should the plaintiff be afforded an opportunity to seek leave to replead?"
2705	Aguilar v. Chastain, 923 S.W.2d 740, 745 (Tex. App. 1996), writ denied (Jan. 10, 1997)	15	Court may dismiss in forma pauperis lawsuit without affording opportunity to amend given that court is under no duty to suggest voluntarily that plaintiff amend pleading; court has broad discretion to dismiss either before or after service of process.	A court may dismiss an in forma pauperis lawsuit without affording the pauper an opportunity to amend. Kendrick, 804 S.W.2d at 156. Because the court has broad discretion to dismiss either before or after service of process, a court is under no duty to suggest voluntarily that a plaintiff amend his pleadings.	Can a court dismiss in forma pauperis a lawsuit without affording an opportunity to amend given that court is under no duty?
2707	Smith v. Cowart, 68 So. 3d 802, 811 (Ala., 2011)	3	The dismissal of a civil action for want of prosecution because of the plaintiff's failure to appear at trial falls within the judicial discretion of a trial court and will not be reversed upon an appeal except for an abusive use of that discretionary power.	Insofar as the trial court's August 26, 2009, final judgment dismissed the Smith's claims for lack of prosecution, we note that "[t]he dismissal of a civil action for want of prosecution because of the plaintiff's failure to appear at trial falls within the judicial discretion of a trial court and will not be reversed upon an appeal except for an abusive use of that discretionary power."	Will the dismissal of a civil action for want of prosecution because of the plaintiff's failure to appear at trial be reversed?
2708	Jones v. Morales, 318 S.W.3d 419, 427 (Tex. App. 2010)	15	A trial court is empowered to dismiss a case for want of prosecution either under Rules of Civil Procedure or its inherent power to control its docket. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a.	A trial court is authorized to dismiss a case for want of prosecution by rule of civil procedure 165a and by exercise of its inherent power to manage its docket.	Is a trial court empowered to dismiss a case for want of prosecution either under Rules of Civil Procedure or its inherent power to control its docket?
2709	Lopez v. Harding, 68 S.W.3d 78, 80 (Tex. App. 2001)	2	The trial judge's authority to dismiss a case for want of prosecution derives from two sources: the rules of civil procedure and the court's inherent power. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a.	The trial judge's authority to dismiss a case for want of prosecution derives from two sources: rule 165a of the Texas Rules of Civil Procedure and the court's inherent power.	Does the trial judge's authority to dismiss a case for want of prosecution derive from the rules of civil procedure and the court's inherent power?

2710	People v. Mosley, 155 Cal. App. 4th 313, 324 (2007)	1	Determination of whether a defendant intended his words to be taken as a threat, and whether the words were sufficiently unequivocal, unconditional, immediate and specific they conveyed to the victim an immediacy of purpose and immediate prospect of execution of the threat can be based on all the surrounding circumstances and not just on the words alone; the parties' history can also be considered as one of the relevant circumstances.	" '[T]he determination whether a defendant intended his words to be taken as a threat, and whether the words were sufficiently unequivocal, unconditional, immediate and specific they conveyed to the victim an immediacy of purpose and immediate prospect of execution of the threat can be based on all the surrounding circumstances and not just on the words alone. The parties' history can also be considered as one of the relevant circumstances.	Is the determination of whether a defendant intended his words to be taken as a threat based on words alone?
2711	Amodeo v. Gellert & Quartararo, P.C., 26 A.D.3d 705, 706, 810 N.Y.S.2d 246, 247 (2006)	1	In order to succeed in opposing defendants' motion to dismiss based upon plaintiffs' delay in serving a complaint well beyond the 20-day time limit, plaintiffs were required to show reasonable excuse for the delay and a meritorious cause of action. McKinney's CPLR 3012(b).	In order to succeed in opposing defendants' motion to dismiss based upon plaintiffs' delay in serving a complaint well beyond the 20-day time limit (see CPLR 3012[b]), plaintiffs were required to show reasonable excuse for the delay and a meritorious cause of action (see CPLR 3012[d]; Porter v. Beaulieu, 282 A.D.2d 980, 980, 723 N.Y.S.2d 713 [2001]).	"Does the determination of what constitutes a reasonable excuse for delay in serving a complaint, lie within the sound discretion of the motion court?"
2712	Richter v. Prairie Farms Dairy, Inc., 2016 IL 119518, ¶ 28 (Ill., 2016)	16	Where the circuit court dismisses a complaint, and specifies a number of days for filing an amended complaint, the court retains jurisdiction to allow the amended complaint to be filed even after the time period has expired.	Accordingly, where, as in this case, the circuit court dismisses a complaint, and specifies a number of days for filing an amended complaint, the court retains jurisdiction to allow the amended complaint to be filed even after the time period has expired.	"Where the circuit court dismisses a complaint specifying the number of days for filing an amended complaint, does the court retain jurisdiction to allow the amended complaint to be filed even after the expiry of the time period?"
2714	Kimmelman v. Heather Downs Mgmt. Ltd., 278 Mich. App. 569, 571 (2008)	1	Leave to amend the pleadings should be freely granted to the nonprevailing party upon a grant of summary disposition unless the amendment would be futile or otherwise unjustified. MCR 2.118(A)(2).	"Leave to amend the pleadings should be freely granted to the nonprevailing party upon a grant of summary disposition unless the amendment would be futile or otherwise unjustified."	"Should leave to amend pleadings be freely granted to a nonprevailing party at summary disposition, unless amendment would be futile or otherwise unjustified?"
2715	Stanback v. Stanback, 297 N.C. 181, 185 (1979)	2	In ruling on motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, allegations of the complaint must be viewed as admitted, and on that basis the court must determine as a matter of law whether allegations state a claim for which relief may be granted. Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 12(b)(6), G.S. S 1A-1.	In ruling on the motion the allegations of the complaint must be viewed as admitted, and on that basis the court must determine as a matter of law whether the allegations state a claim for which relief may be granted.	On what basis should the court determine as a matter of law whether allegations state a claim for which relief may be granted?

2716	Hosey v. Lowery, 911 So. 2d 15, 18 (Ala. App. 2005)	7	Trial court has the discretion and inherent power to dismiss claims for various reasons, including failure to prosecute and failure to attend a hearing, but since dismissal with prejudice is a drastic sanction, it is to be applied only in extreme situations.	A trial court has the discretion and inherent power to dismiss claims for various reasons, including failure to prosecute and failure to attend a hearing, but " 'since dismissal with prejudice is a drastic sanction, it is to be applied only in extreme situations.' "	"Does a court have the discretion and inherent power to dismiss claims for various reasons, including failure to prosecute?"
2718	Larios v. Superior Ct., 24 Cal. 3d 324, 329, 594 P.2d 491, 493 (1979)	1	Once a criminal defendant is placed on trial and jury is duly impaneled and sworn, a discharge of jury without a verdict is equivalent to an acquittal and bars retrial unless defendant consents to discharge or legal necessity requires it. West's Ann.Pen.Code, SS 1023, 1123; West's Ann.Const. art. 1, S 15.	Under this command, once a criminal defendant is placed on trial and the jury is duly impaneled and sworn, a discharge of the jury without a verdict is equivalent to an acquittal and bars retrial unless (1) the defendant consents to the discharge or (2) legal necessity requires it.	Is a discharge of the entire jury without a verdict equivalent to an acquittal and bars a retrial on double jeopardy grounds unless a defendant consented to it?
2721	Moldovan ex rel. Moldovan v. Miller, 280 A.D.2d 362, 363, 720 N.Y.S.2d 482, 483 (2001)	1	A party seeking to restore a case dismissed as abandoned to the calendar must establish each of the following: a meritorious cause of action, a reasonable excuse for the delay, lack of intent to abandon the matter, and a lack of prejudice to the non-moving party in the event the case is restored. McKinney's CPLR 3404.	A party seeking to restore a dismissed case to the calendar must establish each of the following: a meritorious cause of action, a reasonable excuse for the delay, lack of intent to abandon the matter, and a lack of prejudice to the non-moving party in the event the case is restored (Ware v. Porter, 227 A.D.2d 214, 642 N.Y.S.2d 278).	What must be established by a party seeking to restore a case dismissed as abandoned to the calendar?
2724	J.N.S. v. D.B.S., 302 N.J. Super. 525, 532 (1997)	3	Neither the harassment statute nor Prevention of Domestic Violence Act were intended to place trial judges in role of super monitors over modern-day parenting. N.J.S.A. 2C:25-17 et seq., 2C:33-4.	Nevertheless, neither the harassment statute nor the Prevention of Domestic Violence Act were intended to place trial judges in the role of super monitors over modern-day parenting.	Were the harassment statute or the Prevention of Domestic Violence Act intended to place trial judges in the role of super monitors over modern-day parenting?
2725	State v. Murphy, 545 N.W.2d 909, 916 (Minn. 1996)	6	Terroristic threats statute is designed to deter and punish future act threatened, as well as underlying act of making threat; statute mandates that threats must be to commit future crime of violence which would terrorize victim. M.S.A. S 609.713, subd. 1.	Murphy's interpretation lacks merit. The terroristic threats statute mandates that the threats must be to commit a future crime of violence which would terrorize a victim. It is the future act threatened, as well as the underlying act constituting the threat, that the statute is designed to deter and punish	Is the terroristic threats statute designed to deter and punish future acts that are threatened as well as the underlying act of making the threat?
2729	Indiana High Sch. Athletic Ass'n v. Cade, 51 N.E.3d 1225, 1233 (Ind. App. 2016)	6	In reviewing a decision of the Indiana High School Athletic Association (IHSAA), the courts do not review the decision de novo and do not substitute their judgment for the association's; instead, courts apply an arbitrary and capricious standard and analyze the record as a whole to determine whether substantial evidence supports the IHSAA's findings.	The courts therefore do not review IHSAA decisions de novo and do not substitute their judgment for the association's. Instead, courts apply an arbitrary and capricious standard to review IHSAA decisions. They analyze the record as a whole to determine whether substantial evidence supports the IHSAA's findings.	What is the standard of review courts use in reviewing action taken by athletic association?

2731	Therrien v. Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Tr. Co., 360 Mo. 149, 154 (1950)	6	In ruling upon a general demurrer, all properly pleaded facts and all inferences of fact that may fairly and reasonably be drawn therefrom must be taken as true; but neither conclusions of law nor conclusions of pleader on the facts are admitted by the demurrer. V.A.M.S. SS 509.250, 509.270, 509.300.	'In ruling upon a general demurrer, all (properly pleaded) facts and all inferences of fact that may fairly and reasonably be drawn therefrom must be taken as true.' But in the next full sentence the decision goes on to say: 'Of course, neither conclusions of law nor the conclusions of the pleader on the facts are admitted by a general demurrer.'	"In ruling upon a general demurrer, should all properly pleaded facts and all inferences of fact that may fairly and reasonably be drawn therefrom be taken as true?"
2732	Manning v. North, 82 S.W.3d 706, 713 (Tex. App. 2002)	10	If a dismissal order is silent, plaintiffs seeking reinstatement must negate all possible grounds for dismissal, including whether dismissal was prompted by a lack of due diligence in prosecuting suit or for a violation of the Supreme Court's standards. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a.	If the dismissal order is silent, the plaintiffs seeking reinstatement must negate all possible grounds for dismissal, including whether the dismissal was prompted by a lack of due diligence in prosecuting the suit or for a violation of the Supreme Court's standards.	"If a dismissal order is silent, should plaintiffs seeking reinstatement negate all possible grounds for dismissal?"
2733	State v. Ervin, 158 Wash. 2d 746, 752 (2006)	2	The double jeopardy clause applies where (1) jeopardy has previously attached, (2) that jeopardy has terminated, and (3) the defendant is in jeopardy a second time for the same offense in fact and law; where these elements have been met, the double jeopardy clause bars the State from retrying a defendant. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; West's RCWA Const. Art. 1, S 9.	The double jeopardy clause applies where (1) jeopardy has previously attached, (2) that jeopardy has terminated, and (3) the defendant is in jeopardy a second time for the same offense in fact and law. See 570 State v. Corrado, 81 Wash.App. 640, 645, 915 P.2d 1121 (1996); In re Pers. Restraint of Orange, 152 Wash.2d 795, 820, 100 P.3d 291 (2004). Where these elements have been met, the double jeopardy clause bars the State from retrying a defendant.	"Does double jeopardy clause apply where jeopardy has previously attached, jeopardy has terminated, and the defendant is in jeopardy a second time for the same offense in fact and law?"
2734	Mansfield v. United States, 800 F. Supp. 2d 84, 88–89 (D.D.C. 2011)	4	The Double Jeopardy Clause of the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution affords a criminal defendant with three basic protections: (1) it protects against a second prosecution for the same offense after acquittal; (2) it protects against a second prosecution for the same offense after conviction; and (3) it protects against multiple punishments for the same offense. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	The Double Jeopardy Clause of the Fifth Amendment to the United States *89 Constitution 4 affords a criminal defendant with three basic protections: (1) it protects against a second prosecution for the same offense after acquittal; (2) it protects against a second prosecution for the same offense after conviction; and (3) it protects against multiple punishments for the same offense.	Does double jeopardy clause afford a defendant protection against a second prosecution for the same offense after conviction?

2736	U.S. v. Morse, 613 F.3d 787, 796 (C.A.8 (Minn.), 2010)	20	As long as the sentence previously imposed was within the authorized statutory limits for that earlier crime, enhancing a sentence for a separate crime with the same conduct does not constitute punishment for that conduct within the meaning of the Double Jeopardy Clause. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	As long as the sentence previously imposed was within the authorized statutory limits for that earlier crime, enhancing a sentence for a separate crime with the same conduct does not constitute punishment for that conduct within the meaning of the Double Jeopardy Clause.	Does enhancing a sentence for a separate crime with the same conduct constitute punishment for that conduct within the meaning of the Double Jeopardy Clause?
2738	City of Billings ex rel. Huertas v. Billings Mun. Court, 404 P.3d 709, 716 (2017)	10	After a defendant's double jeopardy rights are implicated and a mistrial is declared, a second criminal trial is barred unless there was a manifest necessity to terminate the trial or the defendant acquiesced in the termination. U.S. Const. Amend. 5; Mont. Const. art. 2, § 25.	After a defendant's double jeopardy rights are implicated and a mistrial is declared, a "second criminal trial is barred unless there was a manifest necessity to terminate the trial or the defendant acquiesced in the termination.	"After a defendant's double jeopardy rights are implicated and a mistrial is declared, is a second criminal trial barred unless there was a manifest necessity to terminate the trial?"
2739	Durkin v. Davis, 814 So. 2d 1246, 1248 (Fla. App. 2002)	7	A dismissal with prejudice should not be ordered without giving the party an opportunity to amend unless it appears that the privilege to amend has been abused or it is clear that the pleading cannot be amended to state a cause of action.	"A dismissal with prejudice should not be ordered without giving the party ... an opportunity to amend unless it appears that the privilege to amend has been abused or it is clear that the pleading cannot be amended to state a cause of action."	Should a dismissal with prejudice not be ordered without giving the party an opportunity to amend unless it is clear that the pleading cannot be amended to state a cause of action?
2743	In re Durham, 260 B.R. 383, 389 (2001)	5	Determination of whether a transaction constitutes a true lease or a disguised security agreement is a matter of state law, and often dependent upon the peculiar facts of each creditor-debtor relationship.	In reaching this conclusion, the Court first notes that the determination of whether a transaction constitutes a true lease or a disguised security agreement is a matter of state law and one which is often dependent upon the peculiar facts of each creditor-debtor relationship.	Is the determination of whether a transaction constitutes a true lease or a disguised security agreement a matter of state law?
2744	Meadowlands Reg'l Dev. Agency v. State, 112 N.J. Super. 89, 116 (Ch. Div. 1970)	12	The Legislature may properly delegate incidents of taxing power, such as the functions of computation, appraisal and adjustment, to appointive officials without running afoul of the proscription against delegation of the power itself thereto. N.J.S.A.Const.1947, Art. IV, § I, par. 1; S VII, par. 9(6).	7 As the decisions upon which the plaintiffs rely quite clearly hold, the Legislature may properly delegate incidents of the taxing power, such as the functions of computation, appraisal and adjustment, to appointive officials without running afoul of the proscription against delegation of the power itself thereto, Bernards, supra, 61 N.J.L.	Can the Legislature properly delegate incidents of taxing to appointive officials without running afoul of the proscription against delegation of the power itself thereto?

2745	Hawkins v. Tennessee Dep't of Correction, 127 S.W.3d 749, 753-54 (Tenn. App. 2002)	6	Even though venue is considered a personal privilege of the defendant that can be waived if not raised in a timely manner, waiver is not available when a transitory action has been localized by statute; in that situation, venue has become part of the court's authority to hear a particular action and is, therefore, jurisdictional.	Even though venue is considered a personal privilege of the defendant that can be waived if not raised in a timely manner, Metropolitan Dev. & Hous. Agency, 637 S.W.2d at 880, waiver is not available when a transitory action has been localized by statute. In that situation, venue has become part of the court's authority *754 to hear a particular action and is, therefore, jurisdictional.	Can one waive or consent to venue when a transitory action has been localized by statute?
2746	Am. Home Assur. Co. v. City of Opa Locka, 368 So. 2d 416, 420 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1979)	6	Subrogation, a creation of equity, is founded on the principle of doing justice without regard to form and was designed to afford relief to one who is required to pay a legal obligation which ought to have been met either wholly or partially by another.	"Subrogation, a creation of equity, is founded on the proposition of doing justice without regard to form, and was designed to afford relief where one is required to pay a legal obligation which ought to have been met, either wholly or partially, by another.	"Does equitable subrogation apply when a legal obligation ought to have been met, either wholly or partially, by another? "
2747	Occidental Chemical Corp. v. OHM Remediation Services Corp., 175 F.R.D. 431, 436-37 (W.D.N.Y., 1997)	11	Attorney-client privilege may cover communications made to agents of attorney hired to assist in rendition of legal services; thus, attorney-client privilege can attach to reports of third parties made at request of attorney or client where purpose of report was to put in usable form information obtained from client.	The attorney-client privilege may cover "communications made to agents of an attorney ... hired to assist in the rendition of legal services." United States v. Schwimmer, 892 F.2d 237, 243 (2d Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 810, 112 S.Ct. 55, 116 L.Ed.2d 31 (1991). Thus, "the attorney-client privilege can attach to reports of third parties made at the request of the attorney or the client where the purpose of the report was to put in usable form information obtained from the client	Are agents of an attorney covered by attorney-client privilege?
2748	Bivona v. Danna & Assocs., P.C., 123 A.D.3d 956, 957, 999 N.Y.S.2d 490, 492 (2014)	2	A motion to dismiss a cause of action based on a defense founded in documentary evidence may be granted only if documentary evidence utterly refutes plaintiff's factual allegations, thereby conclusively establishing a defense as a matter of law. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(1).	"A motion to dismiss a cause of action pursuant to CPLR 3211(a)(1) may be granted only if 'documentary evidence utterly refutes [the] plaintiff's factual allegations, thereby conclusively establishing a defense as a matter of law' " (Indymac Venture, LLC v. Nagessar, 121 A.D.3d 945, 945, 995 N.Y.S.2d 145, quoting Whitebox Concentrated Convertible Arbitrage Partners, L.P. v. Superior Well Servs., Inc., 20 N.Y.3d 59, 63, 956 N.Y.S.2d 439, 980 N.E.2d 487).	Will a motion to dismiss a cause of action based on a defense founded in documentary evidence be granted?

2749	MBIA Ins. Corp. v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 34 Misc. 3d 895, 901, 936 N.Y.S.2d 513, 518 (Sup. Ct. 2012)	1	When moving to dismiss an affirmative defense, the plaintiff bears the burden of demonstrating that the affirmative defense is without merit as a matter of law because it either does not apply under the factual circumstances of the case or fails to state a defense. McKinney's CPLR 3211(b).	When moving to dismiss an affirmative defense, the plaintiff bears the burden of demonstrating that the affirmative defense is without merit as a matter of law because it either does not apply under the factual circumstances of the case or fails to state a defense.	Why should the plaintiff bear the burden to demonstrate that the affirmative defense is without merit as a matter of law?
2750	Anson v. Erlanger Minerals and Metals, 702 P.2d 393, 396 (Ok. App. 1985)	3	Constitutionally required fault elements underlying liability for defamation are willfulness and negligence; liability attaches to anyone who publishes defamatory falsehood concerning private person or public official or figure regarding purely private matter not affecting his official conduct, fitness or capacity if utterer knows statement is false or if publisher acts in reckless disregard of whether such statement is false or not, or if speaker acts negligently in failing to ascertain that statement is false. 76 O.S.1981, S 5(a).	Hence the constitutionally required fault elements underlying liability for defamation in this state are willfulness and negligence. More specifically, liability attaches to anyone who publishes a defamatory falsehood concerning a private person-or a public official or figure regarding a purely private matter not affecting his official conduct, fitness or capacity-if (1) the utterer knows the statement is false, or (2) the publisher acts in reckless disregard of whether such statement is false or not, or (3) the speaker acts negligently in failing to ascertain that the statement is false.	When can liability for defamation be imposed on a defendant?
2751	Fin. Sec. Assur. v. Stephens, 500 F.3d 1276, 1287 (11th Cir. 2007)	13	"Subrogation" is the substitution of one person in the place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand or right, so that he who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relation to the debt or claim, and its rights, remedies, or securities.	Subrogation is '[t]he substitution of one person in the place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand or right, so that he who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relation to the debt or claim, and its rights, remedies, or securities.' "	"Is subrogation the substitution of one person in the place of another with reference to a lawful claim, demand or right, so that he who is substituted succeeds to the rights of the other in relation to the debt or claim, and its rights, remedies, or securities?"
2754	Brazilia v. Collector of St. Louis Cty., 117 S.W.3d 704, 706 (Miss. App. 2003)	3	Whether there is subject matter jurisdiction is a question of fact left to the sound discretion of a trial court, on motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction; the court may review affidavits, exhibits and other evidence to determine jurisdiction.	Whether there is subject matter jurisdiction is a question of fact left to the sound discretion of the trial court. Id. The court may review affidavits, exhibits and other evidence to determine jurisdiction.	"Is whether there is subject matter jurisdiction a question of fact left to the sound discretion of a trial court, on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction?"
2758	Slowke v. Altermatt, 293 Mich. 360, 363-364 (1940)	1	A plaintiff's common law right to dismiss action or submit to voluntary nonsuit still exists, except as modified by statute or court rule.	Graham, supra, the common law right of a plaintiff to dismiss or submit to a voluntary nonsuit is noted. The right still exists *364 except as modified by statute or court rule.	"Does a plaintiffs common law right to dismiss an action or submit to a voluntary nonsuit still exist, except as modified by statute or court rule?"

2761	In re City Nat. Bank, 257 S.W.3d 452, 454 (Tex. App. 2008)	3	A party must allege two venue facts, and establish them by prima facie proof if specifically denied, to show venue in a suit involving an interest in property: (1) that the nature of the suit fits within those listed in relevant venue statute, and (2) that all or part of the realty at issue is located in the county of suit. V.T.C.A., Civil Practice & Remedies Code S 15.011.	A plaintiff must allege two "venue facts" (and establish them by prima facie proof if specifically denied) to show that venue is mandatory under section 15.011:(1) that the nature of the suit fits within those listed in section 15.011; and (2) that all or part of the realty at issue is located in the county of suit.	What are the two venue facts that must be established to show that venue is mandatory under the venue statute?
2762	Mahler v. Szucs, 135 Wash. 2d 398, 411 (Wash. 1998)	1	"Subrogation" is an equitable doctrine the essential purpose of which is to provide for a proper allocation of payment responsibility; it seeks to impose ultimate responsibility for a wrong or loss on the party who, in equity and good conscience, ought to bear it.	Subrogation is an equitable doctrine the essential purpose of which is to provide for a proper allocation of payment responsibility. It seeks to impose ultimate responsibility for a wrong or loss on the party who, in equity and good conscience, ought to bear it.	"Is subrogation an equitable doctrine, the essential purpose of which is to provide for a proper allocation of payment responsibility?"
2764	Perez v. New York City Hous. Auth., 290 A.D.2d 265, 265, 736 N.Y.S.2d 29, 29 (2002)	2	A dismissal of an action based on a plaintiff's failure to appear at a calendar call should be vacated where the plaintiff shows a reasonable excuse for the default and a meritorious cause of action. N.Y.Ct.Rules, S 202.27.	A dismissal of an action pursuant to 22 NYCRR 202.27, based on a plaintiff's failure to appear at a calendar call, should be vacated where the plaintiff shows a reasonable excuse for the default and a meritorious cause of action (see, Telep v. Republic Elev. Corp., 267 A.D.2d 57, 699 N.Y.S.2d 380).	Should a dismissal of an action based on a plaintiff's failure to appear at a calendar call be vacated where the plaintiff shows a reasonable excuse for the default and a meritorious cause of action?
2769	Jenkins v. St. Tammany Par. Police Jury, 98-2627 (La. 7/2/99), 736 So. 2d 1287, 1290	2	"Zoning" is a general plan designed to foster improvement by confining certain classes of building and uses of property to certain localities, and its purpose is to reduce or eliminate the adverse effects that one type of land use might have on another.	Zoning is a general plan designed to foster improvement by confining certain classes of buildings and uses of property to certain localities. City of New Orleans v. Hamilton, 602 So.2d 112, 114 (La.App. 4 Cir.1992). The purpose of zoning is to reduce or eliminate the adverse effects that one type of land use might have on another.	Is the elimination of adverse effects of land use considered as a purpose of zoning?
2771	In re Indep. Pier Co., 209 B.R. 333, 341 (E.D.Pa. 1997)	12	Under Pennsylvania law, party that cannot demonstrate legal assignment may nevertheless invoke doctrine of "equitable assignment," which is any order, writing or act by assignor that makes absolute appropriation of chose in action or fund to use of assignee with intention to transfer present interest, although not amounting to legal assignment.	A party that cannot demonstrate a legal assignment may nevertheless invoke the doctrine of equitable assignment, which is any order, writing or act by the assignor which makes an absolute appropriation of a chose in action or fund to the use of the assignee with the intention to transfer a present interest, although not amounting to a legal assignment.	What is the distinction between a legal assignment and an equitable assignment?

2776	Howard v. Ferrellgas Partners, 748 F.3d 975, 978 (10th Cir. 2014)	5	When it is apparent from a quick look at the case that no material disputes of fact exist as to whether the parties agreed to arbitrate, it may be permissible and efficient for a district court to decide the arbitration question as a matter of law through motions practice and by viewing the facts in the light most favorable to the party opposing arbitration, and in these circumstances, the Federal Arbitration Act's (FAA) summary trial can look a lot like summary judgment, but when a quick look at the case suggests material disputes of fact do exist on the question whether the parties agreed to arbitrate, round after round of discovery and motions practice is not the answer, and parties should not have to endure years of waiting and exhaust legions of photocopiers in discovery and motions practice merely to learn where their dispute will be heard. 9 U.S.C.A. § 4.	When it's apparent from a quick look at the case that no material disputes of fact exist it may be permissible and efficient for a district court to decide the arbitration question as a matter of law through motions practice and viewing the facts in the light most favorable to the party opposing arbitration. In these circumstances, the Act's summary trial can look a lot like summary judgment. But when, as in this case, a quick look at the case suggests material disputes of fact do exist on the question whether the parties agreed to arbitrate, round after round of discovery and motions practice isn't the answer. Parties should not have to endure years of waiting and exhaust legions of photocopiers in discovery and motions practice merely to learn where their dispute will be heard.	How will the district court decide an arbitration question?
2780	Hamaker v. Am. States Ins. Co. of Texas, 493 S.W.2d 893, 895 (Tex. App. 1973)	1	By enacting articles authorizing Board of Insurance to regulate coverage of policies by prescribing standard forms, clauses and endorsements, legislature exercised its power to regulate a business affected with a public interest and did not improperly delegate its legislative power. V.A.T.S. Insurance Code, arts. 5.35, 5.36.	By virtue of these Articles the Board is authorized to regulate the coverage of insurance policies by prescribing standard forms, clauses and endorsements. By enacting these Articles the legislature exercised its power to regulate a business affected with a public interest, and did not improperly delegate its legislative power.	Is delegation of authority to a State Board of Insurance to promulgate and establish uniform policies a constitutional delegation of legislative power?

2781	Wachs v. Winter, 569 F. Supp. 1438, 1446 (E.D.N.Y. 1983)	16	Under New York law, there are two general classes of compensatory damages for defamation: general damages which law presumes to be natural, proximate, and necessary result of publication, and special damages which, although natural and probable consequences thereof, are not assumed to be necessary and inevitable; special damages must generally be shown by allegation and proof, but where language is libelous per se, plaintiff need not plead or prove special damages in order to recover them.	There are two general classes of compensatory damages for defamation: (1) general damages which the law presumes to be the natural, proximate and necessary result of the publication; and (2) special damages which, although the natural and probable consequences thereof, are not assumed to be necessary and inevitable; rather, special damages must be shown by allegation and proof. Bishop v. New York Times Company, 233 N.Y. 446, 135 N.E. 845 (1922). However, where the language alleged as libel is libelous per se, the plaintiff need not plead or prove special damages in order to recover them. Mencher v. Chesley, 297 N.Y. at 100, 75 N.E.2d at 259.	What are the two major categories of compensatory damages in a defamation claim?
2782	Hoover v. New Holland N. Am., Inc., 23 N.Y.3d 41, 60–61, 11 N.E.3d 693, 706 (2014)	18	Although a product manufacturer's responsibilities do not extend to designing a product that is impossible to abuse or one whose safety features may not be circumvented, it must still use reasonable care in designing a product that is reasonably safe for all of its intended uses and foreseeable misuses.	Robinson made clear, however, that although the manufacturer's responsibilities "do[] not extend to designing a product that is impossible to abuse or one whose safety features may not be circumvented," it must still "use reasonable care" in designing a product that is reasonably safe for all of its intended uses and foreseeable misuses (id. at 480–481, 426 N.Y.S.2d 717, 403 N.E.2d 440; see Micallef, 39 N.Y.2d at 385–386, 384 N.Y.S.2d 115, 348 N.E.2d 571).	Does a manufacturer have a duty to design and manufacture a product that is reasonably safe for its intended use?
2783	Banc One Acceptance Corp. v. Hill, 367 F.3d 426, 429 (5th Cir. 2004)	6	While there is a strong federal policy favoring arbitration, the policy does not apply to the initial determination whether there is a valid agreement to arbitrate; nonetheless, once a court determines that an agreement to arbitrate exists, the court must pay careful attention to the strong federal policy favoring arbitration and must resolve all ambiguities in favor of arbitration. 9 U.S.C.A. § 4.	While there is a strong federal policy favoring arbitration, the policy does not apply to the initial determination whether there is a valid agreement to arbitrate. Will–Drill Res., Inc. v. Samson Res. Co., 352 F.3d 211, 214 (5th Cir.2003). Nonetheless, once a court determines that an agreement to arbitrate exists, the court must pay careful attention to the strong federal policy favoring arbitration and must resolve all ambiguities in favor of arbitration. Primerica Life, 304 F.3d at 471 (citing Southland Corp. v. Keating, 465 U.S. 1, 10, 104 S.Ct. 852, 79 L.Ed.2d 1 (1984)).	Does the strong federal policy favouring arbitration apply to the initial determination of whether there is a valid arbitration agreement?

2784	O'Brien v. Rautenbush, 10 Ill. 2d 167, 173 (Ill., 1956)	8	Primary purpose of Workmen's Compensation Act is to provide employees a prompt, sure, and definite compensation, together with a quick and efficient remedy, for injuries or death suffered by such employees in course of their employment and to require cost of such injuries to be borne by industry itself and not by its individual members. S.H.A. ch. 48, S 138.1 et seq.	The primary purpose of the Workmen's Compensation Act is to provide employees a prompt, sure, and definite compensation, together with a quick and efficient remedy, for injuries or death suffered by such employees in the course of their employment, O'Brien v. Chicago City Railway Co., 305 Ill. 244, 137 N.E. 214, 27 A.L.R. 479; Raymond v. Industrial Comm., 354 Ill. 586, 188 N.E. 861, and to require the cost of such injuries to be borne by the industry itself and not by its individual members.	What is the primary purpose of the Workmen's Compensation Act?
2786	Ball v. Taylor, 416 F.3d 915, 917 (8th Cir. 2005)	2	Under Iowa law, although defamatory words must refer to an ascertainable person, the plaintiff need not be specifically named if the alleged defamation contains matters of description or other references therein, or the extraneous facts and circumstances show that plaintiff was intended to be the object of the alleged defamation, and was so understood by others.	The Iowa Supreme Court has interpreted the third element in a manner consistent with the group defamation exception: Although defamatory words must refer to an ascertainable person, the plaintiff need not be named "if the alleged libel contains matters of description or other references therein, or the extraneous facts and circumstances ... show that plaintiff was intended to be the object of the alleged libel, and was so understood by others." Wisner v. Nichols, 165 Iowa 15, 143 N.W. 1020, 1025 (Iowa 1913).	Should defamatory words refer to an ascertained person?
2789	UHC Mgmt. Co. v. Computer Scis. Corp., 148 F.3d 992, 995 (8th Cir. 1998)	1	Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) establishes national policy favoring arbitration by assuring that when parties to commercial transactions agree to resolve their disputes through arbitration, provisions will be valid, irrevocable, and enforceable, subject only to ordinary grounds that exist at law or in equity for revocation of any contract. 9 U.S.C.A. S 2.	Congress enacted the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) in order to establish a "national policy favoring arbitration." Southland Corp. v. Keating, 465 U.S. 1, 10, 104 S.Ct. 852, 79 L.Ed.2d 1 (1984). The FAA accomplishes this by assuring that when parties to commercial transactions agree to resolve their disputes through arbitration, such provisions will be "valid, irrevocable, and enforceable," subject only to ordinary grounds that "exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract."	"When parties to commercial transactions agree to resolve their disputes through arbitration, will such arbitration provisions be deemed valid?"

2790	Jalou II v. Liner, 43 So. 3d 1023, 1040 (La. App. 2010)	27	In a malicious prosecution action, there must be malice in fact; any feeling of hatred, animosity, or ill will toward the plaintiff amounts to malice, but malice is also found when the defendant uses the prosecution for the purpose of obtaining any private advantage as, for example, a means to extort money, to collect a debt, or to intimidate witnesses in another action.	In a malicious prosecution action, there must be malice in fact. Id., 511 So.2d at 453. Any feeling of hatred, animosity, or ill will toward the plaintiff, of course, amounts to malice. Id. But malice is also found when the defendant uses the prosecution for the purpose of obtaining any private advantage (as, for example, a means to extort money, to collect a debt, or to intimidate witnesses in another action).	How is malice inferred in a malicious prosecution claim?
2793	Nat'l City Mortg. Co. v. Ross, 34 Kan.App.2d 282, 294 (Kan.App.,2005)	8	The right of subrogation or of equitable assignment is not founded upon contract alone, nor upon the absence of contract, but is founded upon the facts and circumstances of the particular case and upon principles of natural justice; and generally, where it is equitable that a person furnishing money to pay a debt should be substituted for the creditor or in the place of the creditor, such person will be so substituted.	Explaining that the doctrine of subrogation is based on the theory of unjust enrichment, the Crippen court stated: "[T]he right of subrogation or of equitable assignment is not founded upon contract alone, nor upon the absence of contract, but is founded upon the facts and circumstances of the particular case and upon principles of natural justice; and generally, where it is equitable that a person furnishing money to pay a debt should be substituted for the creditor or in the place of the creditor, such person will be so substituted	Is the right of subrogation founded upon contract?
2796	Taylor v. Bd. of Educ. of City of Chicago, 2014 IL App (1st) 123744, ¶ 45 (2014)	6	Decision of whether to grant motion in limine rests within sound discretion of trial court and will not be disturbed on appeal unless that discretion is abused.	The decision of whether to grant a motion in limine rests within the sound discretion of the trial court and will not be disturbed on appeal unless that discretion is abused.	Does the decision of whether to grant motion in limine rest within sound discretion of trial court and will not be disturbed on appeal unless that discretion is abused?
2798	Chase v. Ameriqurest Mortg. Co., 155 N.H. 19, 27 (N.H. 2007)	19	Equitable subrogation applies where one who has discharged the debt of another may, under certain circumstances, succeed to the rights and position of the satisfied creditor.	[E]quitable subrogation "applies where one who has discharged the debt of another may, under certain circumstances, succeed to the rights and position of the satisfied creditor.	"Does equitable subrogation apply where one who has discharged the debt of another may, under certain circumstances, succeed to the rights and position of the satisfied creditor?"
2799	ContiMortgage Corp. v. United States, 109 F. Supp. 2d 1038, 1042 (D. Minn. 2000)	6	In general, for equitable subrogation to apply, the equity of the party seeking subrogation must be clear and substantial, and superior to that of other claimants, and subrogation cannot be invoked where it would work an injustice, violate sound public policy, or result in harm to innocent third parties.	In general, the equity of the party seeking subrogation must be clear and substantial, and superior to that of other claimants. Universal Title, 942 F.2d at 1315. Finally, subrogation cannot be invoked where it would work an injustice, violate sound public policy, or result in harm to innocent third parties.	"Should the equity of the party seeking subrogation be clear and substantial, and superior to that of other claimants?"

2800	Morgan Creek Residential v. Kemp, 153 Cal. App. 4th 675, 695 (2007)	17	The aim of equitable subrogation is to place the burden for a loss on the party ultimately liable or responsible for it and by whom it should have been discharged, and to relieve entirely the insurer or surety who indemnified the loss and who in equity was not primarily liable therefor; on the other hand, the aim of equitable contribution is to apportion a loss between two or more parties who cover the same risk, so that each pays its fair share and one does not profit at the expense of the others.	The aim of equitable subrogation is to place the burden for a loss on the party ultimately liable or responsible for it and by whom it should have been discharged, and to relieve entirely the insurer or surety who indemnified the loss and who in equity was not primarily liable therefor. [Citation.] On the other hand, the aim of equitable contribution is to apportion a loss between two or more [parties] who cover the same risk, so that each pays its fair share and one does not profit at the expense of the others.	Is the aim of equitable subrogation to place the burden for a loss on the party ultimately liable or responsible for it and by whom it should have been discharged?
2801	ContiMortgage Corp. v. United States, 109 F. Supp. 2d 1038, 1042 (D. Minn. 2000)	5	Although equitable subrogation, which is also called legal subrogation, is a highly favored doctrine, it is not an absolute right, but rather, one that depends on the equities and attending facts and circumstances of each case.	Although equitable subrogation (also called "legal subrogation") is a highly favored doctrine, it is not an absolute right, but rather, one that depends on the equities and attending facts and circumstances of each case.	Is equitable subrogation an absolute right or one that depends on the equities and attending facts and circumstances of each case?
2802	McBroome-Bennett Plumbing v. Villa France, Inc., 515 S.W.2d 32, 36 (Tex. Civ. App. 1974)	3	Doctrine of subrogation is always given a liberal interpretation and is broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, has paid a debt for which another was primarily liable and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter.	The doctrine of subrogation is always given a liberal interpretation and is broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily has paid a debt for which another was primarily liable and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter.	Is the doctrine of subrogation given a liberal interpretation?
2804	In re Allegheny Health, Educ. & Research Found., 312 B.R. 58, 69 (W.D. Pa. 2004)	5	Once the right to subrogation is established, subrogee becomes subrogated to all rights of creditor, whose claim such subrogee satisfied, against principal debtor, including the security given to secure the debt.	"Case law indicates that once the right to subrogation is established, the subrogee becomes subrogated to all rights of the creditor [whose claim such subrogee satisfied] against the principal debtor, including the security given to secure the debt."	"Once the right to subrogation is established, does the subrogee become subrogated to all rights of the creditor, whose claim such subrogee satisfied, against the principal debtor, including the security given to secure the debt?"
2806	Pep'e v. McCarthy, 249 A.D.2d 286, 287, 672 N.Y.S.2d 350, 351 (1998)	2	Surety paying on a bond at the behest of a creditor is entitled by operation of law to be subrogated to the rights and remedies available to the creditor for enforcement of the debtor's obligation.	It is well settled that a surety paying on a bond at the behest of a creditor is entitled by operation of law to be subrogated to the rights and remedies available to the creditor for enforcement of the debtor's obligation (see, Romano v. Key Bank of Central New York, 90 A.D.2d 679, 680, 455 N.Y.S.2d 879; Carrols Equities Corp. v. Villnave, 57 A.D.2d 1044; , 395 N.Y.S.2d 800 63 N.Y.Jur.2d, Guaranty and Suretyship §§ 428, 440).	Is the surety paying on a bond at the behest of a creditor entitled by operation of law to be subrogated to the rights and remedies available to the creditor for enforcement of the debtor's obligation?

2808	Scanlan v. U.S., State Farm Ins. Co., 743 F. Supp. 2d 813, 817 (N.D.Ill., 2010)	8	A tax levy secures an interest in unpaid taxes, while a subrogation right secures repayment of a secondarily liable party, but if the government claims either type of interest, the sorting out of competing property claims that is then required is just the task for which the quiet-title act was designed. 28 U.S.C.A. § 2410(a).	A tax levy secures an interest in unpaid taxes, while a subrogation right secures repayment of a secondarily liable party, but if the government claims either type of interest, "the sorting out of competing property claims that is then required is just the task for which the quiet-title act was designed."	Does a subrogation right secure the repayment of a secondarily liable party?
2810	Ball v. SFX Broad., Inc., 165 F. Supp. 2d 230, 240 (N.D.N.Y. 2001)	14	It is sufficient for employee seeking to avoid arbitration of federal statutory claims to show a likelihood that he or she will be responsible for significant arbitrators' fees, or other costs which would not be incurred in a judicial forum, thereby demonstrating that the challenged arbitration agreement does not provide an effective mechanism for the vindication of statutory rights.	As such, it is held that it is sufficient for an employee seeking to avoid arbitration to show a likelihood that he or she will be responsible for significant arbitrators' fees, or other costs which would not be incurred in a judicial forum. Such a showing is sufficient to demonstrate that the challenged arbitration agreement does not provide an effective mechanism for the vindication of statutory rights.	Can a litigant avoid arbitration by showing a likelihood that he or she will be responsible for significant arbitrators expenses?
2811	Beanal v. Freeport-McMoRan, 969 F. Supp. 362, 371 (E.D. La. 1997)	15	State action is not required for all international torts covered by the Alien Tort Statute, as certain conduct, such as genocide, violates the law of nations whether committed by a state or private actor, whereas other conduct only violates the law of nations if committed by a state actor. 28 U.S.C.A. § 1350.	In Kadic, the Second Circuit held that state action is not required for all international torts. Id. at 239. Certain conduct violates the law of nations whether committed by a state or private actor, whereas other conduct only violates the law of nations if committed by a state actor.	"Is state action required for all international torts covered by the Alien Tort Statute, as certain conduct, violates the law of nations whether committed by a state or private actor?"
2812	State v. Crume, 271 Kan. 87, 87 (2001)	24	A protective order issued on a motion in limine should be granted only when the trial court finds two factors are present: (1) the material or evidence in question will be inadmissible at a trial under the rules of evidence, and (2) the mere offer of or statements made during trial concerning the material will tend to prejudice the jury.	It is generally agreed a protective order issued on a motion in limine should be granted only when the trial court finds two factors are present: (1) The material or evidence in question will be inadmissible at a trial under the rules of evidence; and (2) the mere offer of or statements made during trial concerning the material will tend to prejudice the jury.	What must the court find to grant a party's motion in limine?
2814	Jakobsen v. Colonial Pipeline Co., 237 Ga. App. 441, 446 (1999)	13	"Motion in limine" is a pretrial method of determining the admissibility of evidence, as a party may secure a pretrial ruling on the admissibility of evidence or a ruling prohibiting any reference to certain evidence until its admissibility can be assessed in the context of the trial as it unfolds.	A motion in limine is a pretrial method of determining the admissibility of evidence, as a party may secure a pretrial ruling on the admissibility of evidence or a ruling prohibiting any reference to certain evidence until its admissibility can be assessed in the context of the trial as it unfolds.	Does a ruling in a motion in limine prohibit any reference to certain evidence until its admissibility can be assessed in the context of the trial as it unfolds?

2815	Duran v. Hyundai Motor Am., 271 S.W.3d 178, 192 (Tenn. App. 2008)	4	A "motion in limine" provides a vehicle for requesting guidance from the trial court prior to trial regarding an evidentiary question which the court may provide, at its discretion, to aid the parties in formulating their trial strategy.	A motion in limine provides a vehicle for requesting guidance from the trial court prior to trial regarding an evidentiary question which the court may provide, at its discretion, to aid the parties in formulating their trial strategy.	"Does a ""motion in limine"" provide a vehicle for requesting guidance from the trial court prior to trial regarding an evidentiary question?"
2817	In re N. Am. Rubber Thread Co., 333 B.R. 164, 168 (D. Mass. 2005)	8	Equitable subrogation occurs when one party, by virtue of its payment of another's obligation, steps into shoes of party who was owed the obligation for purposes of getting recompense for its payment.	Equitable subrogation occurs where one party, by virtue of its payment of another's obligation, steps into the shoes of the party who was owed the obligation for purposes of getting recompense for its payment.	Does equitable subrogation occur when one party by virtue of its payment of another's obligation steps into shoes of party who was owed the obligation for purposes of getting recompense for its payment?
2818	In re Pihl, 560 B.R. 1, 9 (D.Mass. 2016)	4	Equitable subrogation occurs when one party, by virtue of its payment of another's obligation, steps into the shoes of the party who was owed the obligation for purposes of getting recompense for its payment.	"Equitable subrogation occurs where one party, by virtue of its payment of another's obligation, steps into the shoes of the party who was owed the obligation for purposes of getting recompense for its payment."	Does equitable subrogation occur when one party by virtue of its payment of another's obligation steps into shoes of party who was owed the obligation for purposes of getting recompense for its payment?
2819	Builders Supply Co. v. Czerwinski, 275 Neb. 622, 637 (2008)	16	The general rule is that a surety or guarantor is entitled to be subrogated to the benefit of all the security and means of payment under the creditor's control and, therefore, in the absence of assent, waiver, or estoppel, he is generally released by an act of the creditor which deprives him of such right.	This court has noted that regardless of whether a guaranty is absolute or conditional, [t]he general rule is that a surety or guarantor is entitled to be subrogated to the benefit of all the security and means of payment under the creditor's control and, therefore, in the absence of assent, waiver, or estoppel, he is generally released by an act of the creditor which deprives him of such right.	Is a surety entitled to be subrogated to the benefit of all securities and means of payment under the creditor's control?
2820	Krusi v. S.J. Amoroso Constr. Co., 81 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1005, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 294, 301 (2000), as modified (June 29, 2000), as modified (July 18, 2000)	1	Cause of action for damage to real property accrues when the defendant's act causes immediate and permanent injury to the property or, put it another way, when there is actual and appreciable harm to the property.	It is clear that a cause of action for damage to real property accrues when the defendant's act causes "immediate and permanent injury" to the property or, to put it another way, when there is "[a]ctual and appreciable harm" to the property.	"Does a cause of action for damage to real property accrue when the defendant's act causes ""immediate and permanent injury"" to the property or when there is ""actual and appreciable harm"" to the property?"

2821	Collins v. Scenic Homes, 38 So. 3d 28, 35 (Ala. 2009)	10	A party has a cause of action on the date the first legal injury occurs, but not necessarily from the date of the act causing the injury; that is, where the act complained of does not itself constitute a legal injury at the time, but the plaintiff's injury comes only as a result of, and in furtherance and subsequent development of, the act of the defendant, the cause of action "accrues," when, and only when, the damages are sustained.	"A party has a cause of action ... on the date the first legal injury occurs, but not necessarily from the date of the act causing the injury.... That is, where the act complained of does not itself constitute a legal injury at the time, but the plaintiff's injury comes only as a result of, and in furtherance and subsequent development of, the act of the defendant, the cause of action 'accrues,' ... ' 'when, and only when, the damages are sustained.	Does a party have a cause of action on the date the first legal injury occurs?
2822	Deniz v. Municipality of Guaynabo, 285 F.3d 142, 146 (1st Cir. 2002)	4	A takings claim under the Fifth Amendment ordinarily is considered unripe if the claimant comes directly to a federal court without first seeking compensation through state procedures. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Thus, a takings claim ordinarily is considered unripe if the claimant comes directly to a federal court without first seeking compensation through state procedures.	Is a takings claim considered unripe if the claimant moves directly to a federal court without first seeking compensation through state procedures?
2823	Mannatt v. United States, 48 Fed. Cl. 148, 155 (2000)	16	Although a survey, standing alone, does not affect title in real property, when the government improperly resurveys lands so as to enlarge its interest in the property, and then effectively takes the property, such resurvey plus the assertion of control of the property will constitute a taking by inverse condemnation.	Although a survey, standing alone, does not affect title in real property, when the government improperly resurveys lands so as to enlarge its interest in the property, and then effectively takes the property, such resurvey plus the assertion of control of the property will constitute a taking by inverse condemnation.	"Does a survey, standing alone, affect title in real property under the taking laws?"
2824	Laker Airways Ltd. v. Sabena, Belgian World Airlines, 731 F.2d 909, 921–22 (D.C. Cir. 1984)	1	Territoriality-based jurisdiction allows states to regulate conduct or status of individuals or property physically situated within territory, even if effects of conduct are felt outside the territory, while conduct outside territorial boundary which has or is intended to have substantial effect within the territory may also be regulated by the state.	Territoriality- based jurisdiction thus allows states to regulate the conduct or status of individuals or property physically situated within the territory, even if the effects of the conduct are felt outside the territory. Conversely, conduct outside the territorial boundary which has or is intended to have a substantial effect within the territory may also be regulated by the state.	Does territoriality-based jurisdiction allow states to regulate the conduct or status of individuals or property physically situated within the territory?
2825	United States v. Columba-Colella, 604 F.2d 356, 358 (C.A.5 (Tex.), 1979)	2	Under protective theory, country's legislature is competent to enact laws and, assuming physical power over the defendant, its courts have jurisdiction to enforce criminal laws wherever and by whomever act is performed that threatens the country's security or directly interferes with its governmental operations.	Under the protective theory, which does not bear on the resolution of the case before us, a country's legislature is competent to enact laws and, assuming physical power over the defendant, its courts have jurisdiction to enforce criminal laws wherever and by whomever the act is performed that threatens the country's security or directly interferes with its governmental operations.	When can a country enforce criminal laws under the protective principle?

2826	Samantar v. Yousuf, 560 U.S. 305, 322 (2010)	14	In the context of the act of state doctrine, an official's acts can be considered the acts of the foreign state, and the courts of one country will not sit in judgment of those acts when done within the territory of the foreign state.	We have recognized, in the context of the act of state doctrine, that an official's acts can be considered the acts of the foreign state, and that "the courts of one country will not sit in judgment" of those acts when done within the territory of the foreign state.	"In the context of the act of state doctrine, can an official's acts be considered the acts of the foreign state, and the courts of one country will not sit in judgment of those acts when done within the territory of the foreign state?"
2827	United States v. Sum of $70,990,605, 234 F. Supp. 3d 212, 238-39 (D.D.C. 2017)	18	The act of state doctrine, under which federal and state courts in the United States must presume the validity of an official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory, applies only when a court must decide, that is, when the outcome of the case turns upon, the effect of official action by a foreign sovereign.	Under the act of state doctrine, federal and state courts in the United States must "presume the validity of an 'official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory.' . . . As exemplified by each of these cases, the act of state doctrine applies only "when a court must decide—that is, when the outcome of the case turns upon—the effect of official action by a foreign sovereign."	"Does the act of state doctrine apply only when a court must decide, when the outcome of the case turns upon, the effect of official action by a foreign sovereign?"
2828	Provincial Gov't of Marinduque v. Placer Dome, Inc., 582 F.3d 1083, 1088 (C.A.9 (Nev.),2009)	11	A long-standing common law principle, the "act of state doctrine," precludes courts from evaluating the validity of actions that a foreign government has taken within its own borders.	A long-standing common law principle, the act of state doctrine precludes courts from evaluating the validity of actions that a foreign government has taken within its own borders.	Does the act of state doctrine preclude courts from evaluating the validity of actions that a foreign government has taken within its own borders?
2830	Sarei v. Rio Tinto PLC., 221 F. Supp. 2d 1116, 1130-31 (C.D.Cal., 2002)	1	Alien Tort Claims Act both confers federal subject matter jurisdiction and creates an independent cause of action for violations of treaties or the law of nations. 28 U.S.C.A. S 1350.	90 The Alien Tort Claims Act is also known as the Alien Tort Statute. [1] The Ninth Circuit has stated that the ATCA both confers federal subject *1131 matter jurisdiction and creates an independent cause of action for violations of treaties or the law of nations.	Does the Alien Tort Claims Act both confer federal subject matter jurisdiction and creates an independent cause of action for violations of treaties or the law of nations?
2831	Allied Bank Int'l v. Banco Credito Agricola de Cartago, 757 F.2d 516, 522 (2d Cir. 1985)	10	Acts of foreign governments purporting to have extraterritorial effect, and consequently, by definition, falling outside scope of "act of state" doctrine, should be recognized by courts only if they are consistent with law and policy of the United States.	Acts of foreign governments purporting to have extraterritorial effect-and consequently, by definition, falling outside the scope of the act of state doctrine-should be recognized by the courts only if they are consistent with the law and policy of the United States.	Should acts of foreign governments purporting to have extraterritorial effect be recognized by United States courts only if they are consistent with the law and policy of the United States?
2832	Helmerich & Payne Int'l Drilling Co. v. Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, 971 F. Supp. 2d 49, 62 (D.D.C. 2013)	9	The party raising the act of state doctrine as a defense bears the burden to affirmatively show that an act of state has occurred and that no bar to the doctrine is applicable under the factual circumstances.	Similarly, the party invoking the act of state doctrine bears the burden to prove its applicability. ("[T]he party raising the defense bears the burden to affirmatively show that an act of state has occurred and 'that no bar to the doctrine is applicable under the factual circumstances.' "	Does the party raising the act of state doctrine as a defense bear the burden to affirmatively show that an act of state has occurred and that no bar to the doctrine is applicable under the factual circumstances?

2833	Spectrum Stores v. Citgo Petroleum Corp., 632 F.3d 938, 954 (C.A.5 (Tex.), 2011)	18	For act of state, as opposed to sovereign immunity, purposes, the relevant acts are not merely those of the named defendants, but any governmental acts whose validity would be called into question by adjudication of the suit; the burden lies on the proponent of the doctrine to establish the factual predicate for the doctrine's application.	"For act of state (as opposed to sovereign immunity) purposes, the relevant acts are not merely those of the named defendants, but any governmental acts whose validity would be called into question by adjudication of the suit." Callejo, 764 F.2d at 1115, 1116 (emphasis added). The burden lies on the proponent of the doctrine to establish the factual predicate for the doctrine's application.	Does the burden of establishing that the conduct of a foreign government amounts to an Act of State rest with the party asserting the defense?
2834	Nesvig v. Nesvig, 712 N.W.2d 299, 307 (N.D.,2006)	11	An in limine ruling is only a preliminary order regarding admissibility of evidence; a district court's in limine ruling is subject to change when the case unfolds, particularly if the actual testimony differs from what was contained in the defendant's proffer.	However, an in limine ruling is only a preliminary order regarding admissibility of evidence. See Luce v. United States, 469 U.S. 38, 40-41, 105 S.Ct. 460, 83 L.Ed.2d 443 (1984); Evans v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 976 S.W.2d 582, 584 (Mo.Ct.App.1998). A district court's in limine ruling "is subject to change when the case unfolds, particularly if the actual testimony differs from what was contained in the defendant's proffer.	"Is a district court's in limine ruling subject to change when the case unfolds, particularly if the actual testimony differs from what was contained in the defendant's proffer?"
2835	Banks v. State, 761 N.E.2d 403, 404-405 (Ind. 2002)	2	Predicating error on the admission of evidence that had been excluded preliminarily by an order in limine presents nothing for review; rather, if the trial court errs by admitting evidence, the exclusion of which was sought by a motion in limine, then the error is in admitting the evidence in violation of an evidentiary rule, not in rescinding a previous order in limine.	We first observe that predicating error on the admission of evidence that *405 had been excluded preliminarily by an order in limine presents nothing for review. Rather, if the trial court errs by admitting evidence, the exclusion of which was sought by a motion in limine, then the error is in admitting the evidence in violation of an evidentiary rule, not in rescinding a previous order in limine.	"If the trial court errs by admitting evidence sought to be excluded by a motion in limine, will the error be in admitting the evidence at trial in violation of an evidentiary rule, or in denying the motion in limine?"
2836	Mardirossian & Assocs. v. Ersoff, 153 Cal. App. 4th 257, 271 (2007)	7	It is a misuse of a motion in limine to attempt to compel a witness or a party to conform his or her trial testimony to his or her deposition testimony; trial testimony may be impeached by inconsistent deposition testimony, but absent an abuse of the discovery process, such testimony should not be precluded.	Accordingly, "[i]t is a misuse of a motion in limine " to attempt to compel a witness or a party to conform his or her trial testimony to his or her deposition testimony. Trial testimony may be impeached by inconsistent deposition testimony, but absent an abuse of the discovery process, such testimony should not be precluded.	Is it a misuse of a motion in limine to attempt to compel a witness or a party to conform his or her trial testimony to his or her deposition testimony?

2839	State, Dep't of Transp. v. Douglas Asphalt Co., 297 Ga. App. 470, 471 (2009)	1	The admission of evidence, including a ruling on a motion in limine, is a matter resting within the sound discretion of the trial court, and an appellate court will not disturb the exercise of that discretion absent evidence of its abuse.	"The admission of evidence, including a ruling on a motion in limine, is a matter resting within the sound discretion of the trial court, and we will not disturb the exercise of that discretion absent evidence of its abuse."	"Is the admissibility of evidence, including a ruling on a motion in limine, a matter resting within the sound discretion of the trial court?"
2842	Ray v. Paul, 563 N.W.2d 635, 638 (Iowa App., 1997)	1	Primary purpose of motion in limine is to preclude reference to potentially prejudicial evidence prior to trial court's definitive ruling on its admissibility.	The primary purpose of a motion in limine is to preclude reference to potentially prejudicial evidence prior to the trial court's definitive ruling on its admissibility.	Is the primary purpose of motion in limine to preclude reference to potentially prejudicial evidence prior to trial court's definitive ruling on its admissibility?
2843	Edwards v. Centex Real Estate Corp., 53 Cal. App. 4th 15, 26 (1997)	1	Motion in limine is made to exclude evidence before the evidence is offered at trial, on grounds that would be sufficient to object to or move to strike the evidence; purpose of motion in limine is to avoid the obviously futile attempt to "unring the bell" in the event motion to strike is granted in proceedings before jury.	A motion in limine is made to exclude evidence before the evidence is offered at trial, on grounds that would be sufficient to object to or move to strike the evidence. The purpose of a motion in limine is "to avoid the obviously futile attempt to 'unring the bell' in the event a motion to strike is granted in the proceedings before the jury."	"Is the purpose of motion in limine to avoid the obviously futile attempt to ""unring the bell"" in the event motion to strike is granted in proceedings before jury?"
2845	Lohmann v. Lohmann, 62 S.W.3d 875, 881 (Tex. App. 2001)	9	A "motion in limine" is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, before trial, certain evidentiary rulings that the court may be asked to make.	A motion in limine is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, before trial, certain evidentiary rulings that the court may be asked to make.	"Is a motion in limine a procedural device that permits a party to identify, before trial, certain evidentiary rulings that the court may be asked to make?"
2846	State, Dep't of Transp. v. Douglas Asphalt Co., 297 Ga. App. 470, 471 (2009)	1	The admission of evidence, including a ruling on a motion in limine, is a matter resting within the sound discretion of the trial court, and an appellate court will not disturb the exercise of that discretion absent evidence of its abuse.	"The admission of evidence, including a ruling on a motion in limine, is a matter resting within the sound discretion of the trial court, and we will not disturb the exercise of that discretion absent evidence of its abuse."	"Is the admission of evidence, including a ruling on a motion in limine, a matter resting within the sound discretion of the trial court?"
2847	Palazzolo v. Rhode Island, 533 U.S. 606, 617 (U.S., 2001)	5	Where a regulation places limitations on land that fall short of eliminating all economically beneficial use, a taking nonetheless may have occurred, depending on a complex of factors including the regulation's economic effect on the landowner, the extent to which the regulation interferes with reasonable investment-backed expectations, and the character of the government action. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Where a regulation places limitations on land that fall short of eliminating all economically beneficial use, a taking nonetheless may have occurred, depending on a complex of factors including the regulation's economic effect on the landowner, the extent to which the regulation interferes with reasonable investment-backed expectations, and the character of the government action.	"Is preventing the government from forcing some people alone to bear public burdens, the purpose of the Takings Clause?"

2849	Mendenhall v. City of Indianapolis, 717 N.E.2d 1218, 1227 (Ind. Ct. App. 1999)	27	A taking by inverse condemnation includes any substantial interference with private property which destroys or impairs one's free use, enjoyment, or interest in the property.	A taking by inverse condemnation includes "any substantial interference with private property which destroys or impairs one's free use, enjoyment, or interest in the property."	"Does a taking by inverse condemnation include any substantial interference with private property which destroys or impairs one's free use, enjoyment, or interest in the property?"
2850	Buell v. Mitchell, 274 F.3d 337, 372 (6th Cir. 2001)	45	Courts in the United States are bound to give effect to international law and to international agreements, except that a "non-self-executing" agreement will not be given effect as law in the absence of necessary authority. Restatement (Third) of the Foreign Relations Law of the United States S 111.	Courts in the United States are bound to give effect to international law and to international agreements, except that a 'non-self-executing' agreement will not be given effect as law in the absence of necessary authority..	"Are courts in the United States bound to give effect to international law and to international agreements, except that a ""non-self-executing"" agreement will not be given effect as law in the absence of necessary authority?"
2852	Ramirez de Arellano v. Weinberger, 745 F.2d 1500, 1534 (C.A.D.C.,1984)	37	Successful act of state defense must rest on factual showing that act of state has occurred, coupled with legal showing that no bar to doctrine is applicable under factual circumstances.	149 A successful act of state defense must rest on a factual showing that an act of state has occurred, coupled with a legal showing that no bar to the doctrine is applicable under the factual circumstances.	"Must a successful act of state defense rest on a factual showing that an act of state has occurred, coupled with legal showing that no bar to doctrine is applicable under factual circumstances?"
2853	Perez v. Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A., 61 N.Y.2d 460, 469, 463 N.E.2d 5, 8 (1984)	1	Basic premise of act of state doctrine is that courts of one country will not sit in judgment on acts of government of another done within its own territory.	The basic premise of the Act of State doctrine is that "the courts of one country will not sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another done within its own territory."	Is the basic premise of the act of state doctrine that courts of one country will not sit in judgment on acts of government of another done within its own territory?
2854	DeRoburt v. Gannett Co., Inc., 733 F.2d 701, 702 (C.A.Hawaii,1984)	1	While sovereign immunity addresses jurisdiction of court, act of state doctrine is prudential doctrine designed to avoid judicial action in sensitive areas.	Where sovereign immunity addresses the jurisdiction of the court, the act of state doctrine "is a prudential doctrine designed to avoid judicial action in sensitive areas."	"While sovereign immunity addresses jurisdiction of court, is the act of state doctrine a prudential doctrine designed to avoid judicial action in sensitive areas?"
2855	Haven v. Rzeczpospolita Polska, 68 F. Supp. 2d 947, 957 (N.D.Ill. 1999)	16	No federal court is vested with a roving commission to force any foreign government to do equity, and if any such government fails or refuses to act in its governmental capacity as conscience would command, no federal court is empowered to force it to do so except as Congress has specified.	Hence no federal court is vested with a roving commission to force any foreign government to do equity. If any such government fails or refuses to act in its governmental capacity as conscience would command, no federal court is empowered to force it to do so except as Congress has specified.	Is any federal court vested with a roving commission to force any foreign government to do equity?
2856	Virtual Def. & Dev. Int'l, Inc. v. Republic of Moldova, 133 F. Supp. 2d 1, 7 (D.D.C. 1999)	6	Act of state doctrine requires that courts defer to legislative and executive branches when those branches are better equipped to resolve politically sensitive question.	"The act of state doctrine is similar to the political question doctrine in domestic law. It requires that the courts defer to the legislative and executive branches when those branches are better equipped to resolve a politically sensitive question."	Does the act of state doctrine require that courts defer to legislative and executive branches when those branches are better equipped to resolve a politically sensitive question?

2858	Allied Bank Intern. v. Banco Credito Agricola de Cartago, 757 F.2d 516, 522 (C.A.2 (N.Y.),1985)	10	Acts of foreign governments purporting to have extraterritorial effect, and consequently, by definition, falling outside scope of "act of state" doctrine, should be recognized by courts only if they are consistent with law and policy of the United States.	Acts of foreign governments purporting to have extraterritorial effect-and consequently, by definition, falling outside the scope of the act of state doctrine-should be recognized by the courts only if they are consistent with the law and policy of the United States.	Should acts of foreign governments purporting to have extraterritorial effect be recognized by courts only if they are consistent with law and policy of the United States?
2859	United Mexican States v. Ashley, 556 S.W.2d 784, 786 (Tex. 1977)	4	Act of state doctrine provides that courts will not review validity of executive or legislative act of foreign sovereign affecting property within that sovereign's own borders.	Generally the act of state doctrine provides that courts will not review the validity of executive or legislative acts of a foreign sovereign affecting property within that sovereign's own borders.	Does the act of state doctrine provide that courts will not review validity of executive or legislative act of foreign sovereign affecting property within that sovereign's own borders?
2860	Lernout & Hauspie Speech Prod., N.V. v. Stonington Partners, Inc., 268 B.R. 395, 399 (D. Del. 2001), rev'd, 310 F.3d 118 (3d Cir. 2002), as amended (Nov. 12, 2002)	8	United States courts should deny comity to executive, legislative or judicial act of foreign sovereign only where its acceptance would be prejudicial to the interests of United States.	The doctrine of international comity requires a domestic court to give effect to executive, legislative, and judicial acts of a foreign sovereign. Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U.S. 113, 163–64, 16 S.Ct. 139, 40 L.Ed. 95 (1895). The question of whether to extend international comity is relevant only where there is a true conflict between United States law and that of a foreign state. Maxwell Communication Corp. v. Societe Generale (In re Maxwell Communication Corp.), 93 F.3d 1036, 1049 (2d Cir.1996). A true conflict exists where foreign law requires conduct that violates United States law. Id. In the face of a true conflict, the law of the sovereign who has the most significant contacts, that is the "center of gravity", should be applied. Id. at 1055. Furthermore, United States courts should deny comity only if its acceptance would be prejudicial to the interests of the United States.	"Should United States courts deny comity to executive, legislative or judicial act of foreign sovereign only where its acceptance would be prejudicial to the interests of United States?"
2862	Ficken v. Alton & Southern Ry. Co., 685 N.E.2d 1, 7, 226 Ill.Dec. 187, 193, 291 Ill.App.3d 635, 642 (Ill.App. 5 Dist.,1996)	11	Trial court has discretion in deciding whether motion in limine should be granted, and reviewing court will not reverse trial court's order absent clear showing of abuse of that discretion.	The trial court has discretion in deciding whether a motion in limine should be granted, and a reviewing court will not reverse the trial court's order absent a clear showing of an abuse of that discretion.	"Does a trial court have the discretion in deciding whether a motion in limine should be granted, and will the reviewing court reverse the trial court's order absent a clear showing of abuse of that discretion?"

2864	Tri-City Const. Council, Inc. v. Westfall, 112 P.3d 558, 560, 127 Wash.App. 669, 675 (Wash.App. Div. 3,2005)	2	The doctrine of equitable subrogation is broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, pays a debt for which another is primarily liable, and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter.	" '[T]he doctrine as now applied is broad enough to include every instance in which one person, not acting voluntarily, pays a debt for which another is primarily liable, and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter.'	Is equitable subrogation broadly applied to include instances in which one person pays a debt for which another is primarily liable?
2866	Hladek v. City of Merced, 69 Cal. App. 3d 585, 588, 138 Cal. Rptr. 194, 196 (Ct. App. 1977)	2	When a municipality or public agency engages in competition with a private business and the latter suffers economic harm, the infliction of that harm is not a "taking" of private property which requires compensation in the constitutional sense.	It is well settled, however, that when a municipality or public agency engages in competition with a private business and the latter suffers economic harm, the infliction of that harm is not a 'taking' of private property that requires compensation in the constitutional sense.	"When a public entity engages in competition with a private business and the latter suffers economic harm, does the infliction of that harm constitute a taking?"
2868	Scanlan v. U.S., State Farm Ins. Co., 743 F.Supp.2d 813, 817 (N.D.Ill., 2010)	8	A tax levy secures an interest in unpaid taxes, while a subrogation right secures repayment of a secondarily liable party, but if the government claims either type of interest, the sorting out of competing property claims that is then required is just the task for which the quiet-title act was designed. 28 U.S.C.A. S 2410(a).	A tax levy secures an interest in unpaid taxes, while a subrogation right secures repayment of a secondarily liable party, but if the government claims either type of interest, "the sorting out of competing property claims that is then required is just the task for which the quiet-title act was designed."	Does the right of subrogation secure repayment of a party that is secondarily liable?
2869	Van Alstyne v. Elec. Scriptorium, Ltd., 560 F.3d 199, 208 (4th Cir. 2009)	8	Nothing in common law of trespass to chattel alters traditional understanding that tort recovery requires not only wrongful act plus causation reaching to the plaintiff, but proof of some harm for which damages can reasonably be assessed.	Thus, nothing in the common law of trespass to chattel alters "the traditional understanding that tort recovery requires not only wrongful act plus causation reaching to the plaintiff, but proof of some harm for which damages can reasonably be assessed."	Does trespass to chattel require a proof of harm for which damages can reasonably be assessed?
2870	U.S. v. McDonnell, 64 F.Supp.3d 783, 789 (E.D.Va., 2014)	7	Bribery statute's quid pro quo requirement is satisfied so long as evidence shows course of conduct of favors and gifts flowing to public official in exchange for pattern of official actions favorable to donor. 18 U.S.C.A. S 201.	"The quid pro quo requirement is satisfied so long as the evidence shows a course of conduct of favors and gifts flowing to a public official in exchange for a pattern of official actions favorable to the donor.	To satisfy federal bribery statute's quid pro quo requirement is it enough to show that payment were made with intent of securing specific type of official action or favor in return?
2871	City of Buffalo v. J. W. Clement Co., 28 N.Y.2d 241, 257, 269 N.E.2d 895, 904 (1971)	14	Mere announcement of impending condemnation, coupled with substantial delay and damage does not, in absence of any acts which may be translated into an exercise of dominion and control by the condemning authority, constitute a "taking" so as to warrant awarding compensation.	Accordingly, the mere announcement of impending condemnations, coupled as it may well be with substantial delay and damage, does not, in the absence of other acts which may be translated into an exercise of dominion and control by the condemning authority, constitute a Taking so as to warrant awarding compensation.	"Does a mere announcement of impending appropriation, coupled with substantial delay and damage constitute a de facto taking of property?"

2872	U.S. v. Best, 172 F.Supp.2d 656, 660 (D.Virgin Islands,2001)	2	In addition to the "subjective territorial principle," by which a state has jurisdiction to prescribe law with respect to conduct that, wholly or in substantial part, takes place within its territory, United States recognizes five other principles of jurisdiction under international law by which a nation may reach conduct outside its territory: (1) the objective territorial principle; (2) the protective principle; (3) the nationality principle; (4) the passive personality principle; and (5) the universality principle. Restatement (Third) of the Foreign Relations Law of the United States § 402(1)(a).	As restated by the American Law Institute, the primary basis of extraterritorial jurisdiction recognized by the United States is the "subjective territorial principle," by which "a state has jurisdiction to prescribe law with respect to ... conduct that, wholly or in substantial part, takes place within its territory." RESTATEMENT (THIRD) OF THE FOREIGN RELATIONS LAW OF THE UNITED STATES § 402(1) (a) ["RESTATEMENT"]. The United States also recognizes five other principles of jurisdiction under international law by which a nation may reach conduct outside its territory: (1) the objective territorial principle; (2) the protective principle; (3) the nationality principle; (4) the passive personality principle; and (5) the universality principle. United States v.	What are the five other principles of jurisdiction under international law by which a nation may reach conduct outside its territory?
2873	GSS Group Ltd. v. Republic of Liberia, 31 F.Supp.3d 50, 57 (D.C., 2014)	2	Foreign state enjoys sovereign immunity under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (FSIA) unless an international agreement or one of several exceptions in the statute provides otherwise, and thus, in the absence of an applicable exception, the foreign sovereign's immunity is complete, and the district court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the plaintiff's case. 28 U.S.C.A. § 1602 et seq.	"A foreign state enjoys sovereign immunity under the Act 'unless an international agreement or one of several exceptions in the statute provides otherwise,' " and thus, "[i]n the absence of an applicable exception, the foreign sovereign's immunity is complete-[t]he district court lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the plaintiff's case."	Is a foreign state is entitled to sovereign immunity?
2875	Department of Highways v. Capone, 298 So.2d 94, 96 (La.App. 1 Cir., 1974)	2	When there is no taking, damage which merely causes disturbance, inconvenience or discomfort, and which is ordinary and general result of public improvement is not compensable, but is held to be damnum absque injuria.	When there is no taking, damages which merely cause disturbance, inconvenience or discomfort, and which are an ordinary and general result of a public improvement, are not compensable, but are held to be damnum absque injuria.	"When there is no taking, are damages compensable, which merely cause disturbance, inconvenience or discomfort, and which are an ordinary and general result of a public improvement?"
2877	Epperson v. State of Ark., 89 S.Ct. 266, 270, 393 U.S. 97, 104 (U.S.Ark. 1968)	3	Courts do not and cannot intervene in resolution of conflicts which arise in daily operation of school systems and which do not directly and sharply implicate basic constitutional values, but, the vigilant protection of constitutional freedoms is nowhere more vital than in the community of American schools.	Courts do not and cannot intervene in the resolution of conflicts which arise in the daily operation of school systems and which do not directly and sharply implicate basic constitutional values. 13 On the other hand, '(t)he vigilant protection of constitutional freedoms is nowhere more vital than in the community of American schools,	"As a general rule, can courts intervene in the resolution of conflicts which arise in the daily operation of school systems which do not directly and sharply implicate basic constitutional values?"

2878	Fleischmann v. Wausau Business Ins. Co., 671 N.E.2d 473, 475 (Ind.App.,1996)	6	Workers' Compensation Act represents compromise between insuring compensation for injured employee and protecting employer from unanticipated costs and large damage verdicts. West's A.I.C. 22-3-1-1 to 22-3-12-5.	However, the Worker's Compensation Act represents a compromise between insuring compensation for an injured employee and protecting an employer from unanticipated costs and large damage verdicts.	Does the Workers Compensation Act represent a compromise between insuring compensation for injured employees and protecting an employer from unanticipated costs and large damage verdicts?
2880	Amende v. Town of Morton,40 Wash.2d 104, 106 (WASH. 1952)	1	The absence of a valid or subsisting title or right of action at the inception of a suit cannot be cured by filing a supplemental complaint alleging subsequent acquisition of such title or right of action.	This indicates a recognition of the general rule that the absence of a valid or subsisting title or right of action at the inception of a suit cannot be cured by filing a supplemental complaint alleging subsequent acquisition of such title or right of action.	Can the absence of a valid or subsisting title or right of action at the inception of a suit be cured by filing a supplemental complaint alleging subsequent acquisition of such title or right of action?
2881	State Mut. Life Assur. Co. of Worcester, Mass. v. Heine, 141 F.2d 741, 744 (C.A.6 1944)	4	The courts have concurrent jurisdiction in equity and at law and equitable defenses are available to a law action, but laches is a defense at law only when a plaintiff is seeking to enforce some equitable right and where enforcement lies within the conscience of the chancellor.	The courts have concurrent jurisdiction in equity and at law, and equitable defenses are available to a law action, but laches is a defense at law only when a plaintiff is seeking to enforce some equitable right, and where enforcement lies within the conscience of the Chancellor.	Is laches a defense at law only when a plaintiff is seeking to enforce some equitable right and where enforcement lies within the conscience of the chancellor?
2882	Jahnke v. Palomar Financial Corp., 22 Ariz. App. 369, 373 (Ariz. App. 1974)	6	Rights and liabilities of the parties depend upon the facts as they exist at the time of the commencement of the action and not later at the time of the filing of a motion for summary judgment.	The rights and liabilities of the parties depend upon the facts as they existed at the time of the commencement of the action and not later at the time of filing of a motion for summary judgment.	Do the rights and liabilities of the parties depend upon the facts as they exist at the time of the commencement of the action and not later at the time of the filing of a motion for summary judgment?
2883	In re Permian Basin Area Rate Cases, 88 S.Ct. 1344, 1361, 390 U.S. 747, 769 (U.S.N.M. 1968)	13	Regulation of prices may, consistently with Constitution, limit stringently return recovered on investment, since investors' interests provide only one variable in constitutional calculus of reasonableness.	Regulation may, consistently with the Constitution, limit stringently the return recovered on investment, for investors' interests provide only one of the variables in the constitutional calculus of reasonableness.	"Can a regulation limit stringently the return recovered on investment, for investors' interests provide only one of the variables in the constitutional calculus of reasonableness?"
2887	Autin v. Goetz, 524 S.W.3d 617, 631 (Tenn.Ct.App., 2017)	9	A plaintiff's right to voluntary dismissal without prejudice is subject to the exceptions expressly stated in rule of civil procedure governing voluntary dismissal as well as to an implied exception which prohibits nonsuit when it would deprive the defendant of some vested right. Tenn. R. Civ. P. 41.01(1).	Consequently, "[a] plaintiff's right to voluntary dismissal without prejudice is subject to the exceptions expressly stated in Rule 41.01(1) as well as to an implied exception which prohibits nonsuit when it would deprive the defendant of some vested right." Lacy v. Cox, 152 S.W.3d 480, 484 (Tenn.	Is a plaintiff's right to voluntary dismissal without prejudice subject to exceptions?

2888	Hatfill v. New York Times Co., 416 F.3d 320, 335 (4th Cir. 2005)	16	As used in Virginia statute authorizing plaintiff to take a nonsuit on any cause of action, "cause of action" is a set of operative facts which, under the substantive law, may give rise to one or more rights of action. West's V.C.A. § 8.01-380.	Section 8.01–380 authorizes a plaintiff to take a nonsuit on any "cause of action," and the Virginia Supreme Court defines a "cause of action" as "a set of operative facts which, under the substantive law, may give rise to one or more rights of action," Roller v. Basic Constr. Co., 238 Va. 321, 384 S.E.2d 323, 326 (1989)	"Is a cause of action"" a set of operative facts which, under the substantive law, may give rise to one or more rights of action?"
2889	Hawkins v. Pierotti, 232 Ga. 631, 631 (1974)	1	Action by grantor to cancel deed conveying land allegedly obtained from her by fraud and coercion of grantees was not a suit respecting title to land but was an equitable action which was required to be brought in the county of residence of defendants. Const. art. 6, § 14, pars. 2, 3.	An action by a grantor to cancel a deed conveying land, which she alleges was obtained from her by the grantees by fraud and coercion, is not a suit respecting the title to land within the meaning of the Constitution, Art. VI, Sec. XIV, Par. II (Code Ann. § 2-4902), but is an equitable action, and must be brought in the county of the residence of the defendants, as required by the Constitution, Art.	Is an action to cancel a deed conveying land based on allegations of fraud a suit respecting title to land?
2890	Bernay v. Sales, 424 A.2d 123, 127 (D.C., 1980)	4	Purpose of rule of civil procedure dealing with voluntary dismissal is to limit voluntary dismissal as a matter of right to the early stages of litigation and to prevent plaintiff's running for cover after the defendant has expended significant efforts and has presented a substantial defense. D.C.C.E. SCR, Civil Rule 41(a)(1).	The purpose of Rule 41(a)(1) is to limit voluntary dismissal as a matter of right to the early stages of litigation and to prevent a plaintiff's running for cover after the defendant has expended significant efforts and has presented a substantial defense.	Does the rule related to voluntary dismissal limit such dismissal as a matter of right to the early stages of litigation?
2891	In re Sheena B., 83 A.D.3d 1056, 1057, 922 N.Y.S.2d 176, 177–78 (2011)	1	Ordinarily a party cannot be compelled to litigate and, absent special circumstances, party's motion for voluntary discontinuance should be granted; however, particular prejudice to the opposing party or other improper consequences flowing from discontinuance may however make denial of discontinuance permissible or, at times, obligatory. McKinney's CPLR 3217(b).	"[O]rdinarily a party cannot be compelled to litigate and, absent special circumstances, discontinuance should be granted. Particular prejudice to the [child] or other improper consequences flowing from discontinuance may however make denial of discontinuance permissible or [at times] obligatory" (Tucker v. Tucker, 55 N.Y.2d 378, 383–384, 449 N.Y.S.2d 683, 434 N.E.2d 1050; see Matter of Bianchi v. Breakell, 48 A.D.3d 1000, 852 N.Y.S.2d 454; Christenson v. Gutman, 249 A.D.2d 805, 671 N.Y.S.2d 835; Matter of Commissioner of Franklin County Dept. of Social 178 Servs. v. Terry M., 178 A.D.2d 881, 577 N.Y.S.2d 735).	"Are courts generally reluctant to compel a party to litigate and, in exercise of discretion, will grant motion for discontinuance absent compelling circumstances or particular prejudice to defendants?"

2892	Greenberg v. Brookshire, 640 S.W.2d 870, 872 (Tex. 1982)	1	Granting of nonsuit is merely ministerial act; a plaintiff's right thereto exists from moment a written motion is filed or an oral motion is made in open court unless defendant has, prior to that time, filed pleading seeking affirmative relief. Vernon's Ann.Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 164, 164 note.	The granting of a non-suit is merely a ministerial act. A plaintiff's right thereto exists from the moment a written motion is filed or an oral motion is made in open court unless the defendant has, prior to that time, filed pleadings seeking affirmative relief. "The right to take a non-suit is governed by Rule 164."	Does a plaintiff's right to nonsuit of its own action exist at the moment that an action is filed?
2893	Pfleeger v. Swanson, 229 Or. 254, 258 (1961)	2	Statutes limiting right of plaintiff to voluntary nonsuit are in derogation of common law, must be strictly construed, and will not be extended to include cases not within their express terms. ORS 18.230.	Statutes limiting the right of the plaintiff to a voluntary nonsuit are in derogation of the common law, must be strictly construed, and will not be extended to include cases not within their express terms.	Are statutes limiting a right of a plaintiff to voluntary nonsuit in derogation of common law and must be strictly construed?
2894	Georgiades v. Di Ferrante, 871 S.W.2d 878, 880 (Tex. App. 1994)	1	Plaintiff has absolute and unqualified right to take nonsuit upon timely motion so long as defendant has not made claim for affirmative relief.	A plaintiff has an absolute and unqualified right to take a nonsuit upon timely motion so long as the defendant has not made a claim for affirmative relief.	Does a plaintiff have an absolute and unqualified right to take nonsuit upon timely motion so long as a defendant has not made a claim for affirmative relief?
2895	Cotton v. Ostroski, 554 N.W.2d 130, 135, 250 Neb. 911, 917-18 (Neb.,1996)	8	Purpose of pretrial conference is to simplify issues, to amend pleadings when necessary, and to avoid unnecessary proof of facts at trial; to that end, litigants must adhere to spirit of procedure and are bound by pretrial order to which no exception has been taken.	The purpose of a pretrial conference is to simplify the issues, to amend pleadings when necessary, and to avoid unnecessary proof of facts at trial. To that end, litigants must adhere to the spirit of the procedure and are bound by the pretrial order to which no exception has been taken.	Should the litigants adhere to the spirit of the pretrial procedure and are they bound by a pretrial order?
2896	Alpert, Goldberg, Butler, Norton & Weiss, P.C. v. Quinn, 410 N.J.Super. 510, 542 (N.J.Super.A.D., 2009)	31	The requirement for a case management conference in malpractice actions is one intended to benefit the administration of justice and to assist the parties with an expeditious resolution of malpractice cases, as well as an attempt to reduce the flow of litigation that has arisen from the Affidavit of Merit statute, but such requirement does not vest litigants with any additional rights. N.J.S.A. 2A:53A-27.	We hold that the requirement set forth in Ferreira for a case management 623 conference in malpractice actions is one intended to benefit the administration of justice and to assist the parties with an expeditious resolution of malpractice cases, as well as an attempt to reduce the flow of litigation that has arisen from the Affidavit of Merit statute. We do not discern that the Court's requirement vested any of the litigants with any additional rights.	What is the requirement for a case management conference in malpractice actions?
2897	Kohler v. Van Peteghem, 330 Ga.App. 230, 238 (Ga.App., 2014)	10	Imposition of scheduling deadlines for identification of experts, and questions regarding admission or exclusion of expert testimony, are left to broad discretion of trial court.	The imposition of scheduling deadlines for the identification of experts, and questions regarding the admission or exclusion of expert testimony, are left to the broad discretion of the trial court.	"Are the imposition of scheduling deadlines for identification of experts, and questions regarding admission or exclusion of expert testimony, left to the broad discretion of a trial court?"

2899	McCain Foods USA, Inc. v. C. Processors, Inc., 275 Kan. 1, 18 (2002)	14	The purpose of the pretrial conference is to eliminate the element of surprise from trials and to simplify the issues and procedure by full disclosure to all parties of the anticipated evidence, and factual and legal issues, and to consider such other matters as may aid in the disposition of the action. Rules Civ.Proc., K.S.A. 60-216(c)(7).	"The purpose of the pretrial conference ... is to eliminate the element of surprise from trials and to simplify the issues and procedure by full disclosure to all parties of the anticipated evidence, and factual and legal issues, and to consider '[s]uch other matters as may aid in the disposition of the action.' [K.S.A.2001 Supp. 60-216(c)(7)].	How will the pretrial conference procedure help to eliminate the element of surprise at trials?
2900	Chacon v. Jones-Schilds, 904 N.E.2d 286, 289 (Ind.App.,2009)	6	A pretrial order is to limit the issues for trial to those not disposed of by admission or agreement of counsel, and such order when entered shall control the subsequent course of action, unless modified thereafter to prevent manifest injustice. Trial Procedure Rule 16(J).	A pretrial order is to "limit the issues for trial to those not disposed of by admission or agreement of counsel, and such order when entered shall control the subsequent course of action, unless modified thereafter to prevent manifest injustice." Ind. Trial Rule 16(J).	Does a pretrial order limit the issues for trial to those not disposed of by admission or agreement of counsel?
2902	Bump v. Firemens Ins. Co. of Newark, N.J., 380 N.W.2d 268, 273 (Neb. 1986)	2	Pretrial conferences are conducted to simplify and narrow issues presented in a case, and issues specified at a pretrial conference control the course of an action and, unless altered by the court, constitute the issues on which the case is tried.	Pretrial conferences are conducted to simplify and narrow issues presented in a case. Issues specified at a pretrial conference control the course of an action and, unless altered by the court, constitute the issues on which the case is tried.	"Does an issue specified at a pretrial conference control the course of an action, and unless altered by the court, does it constitute the issues on which the case is tried?"
2903	Stephens v. Bi-State Development Agency, 439 S.W.2d 252, 254 (Mo.App. 1969)	2	Generally, in order for absence of a witness to be grounds for a continuance there must be a probability the testimony can be obtained at a certain future time or within a reasonable time. V.A.M.R. Civil Rule 65.04(2, 3).	As a general rule in order for the absence of a witness to be grounds for a continuance there must be a probability the testimony can be obtained at a certain future time or within a reasonable time.	"In order for absence of a witness to be grounds for a continuance, must there be a probability the testimony can be obtained at a certain future time or within a reasonable time?"
2904	Great Games v. S.C. Dep't of Revenue, 339 S.C. 79, 84 (2000)	9	The essential characteristics of a "tax" are that it is not a voluntary payment or donation, but an enforced contribution, enacted pursuant to legislative authority, in the exercise of the taxing power, the contribution being of a proportional character, payable in money, and imposed, levied, and collected for the purpose of raising revenue, to be used for public or governmental purposes. Code 1976, S 12-60-30(27).	The essential characteristics of a tax are that it is not a voluntary payment or donation, but an enforced contribution, enacted pursuant to legislative authority, in the exercise of the taxing power, the contribution being of a proportional character, payable in money, and imposed, levied, and collected for the purpose of raising revenue, to be used for public or governmental purposes.	Is tax as an enforced contribution?
2905	U.S. v. Hitchcock, 286 F.3d 1064, 1069 (C.A.9 (Hawai i), 2002)	2	Posse Comitatus Act (PCA) prohibits Army and Air Force personnel from participating in civilian law enforcement activities unless otherwise permitted by federal law. 18 U.S.C.A. S 1385.	The PCA prohibits Army and Air Force personnel from participating in civilian law enforcement activities unless otherwise permitted by federal law. 18 U.S.C. 1385; supra note 3.	Does the Posse Comitatus Act (PCA) prohibit Army and Air Force military personnel from participating in civilian law enforcement activities?

2907	Perdue Housing, Inc. v. Davis, 582 P.2d 1336, 1337 (1978)	1	Different factors are considered when request for continuance is sought because of absence of party, or because of absence of witness; however, underlying standard for review in either case is whether trial court abused discretion in denying continuance.	Different factors are considered when the request for continuance is sought because of the absence of a party, or because of the absence of a witness, Beck v. Peard, 183 Okl. 195, 80 P.2d 614, although the underlying standard for review in either case is whether the trial court abused its discretion in denying the continuance.	Do courts consider different factors when a request for continuance is sought because of absence of a party and absence of a witness?
2908	Dean v. Gainesville Stone Co., 170 S.E.2d 348, 350, 120 Ga.App. 315, 316 (Ga.App. 1969)	1	Under Civil Practice Act, trial judge is authorized to direct parties to action to produce pertinent documents for inspection, copying or photographing. Code, S 81A-134(a).	Under the discovery provisions of the Civil Practice Act, a trial judge is authorized to direct parties to an action to produce pertinent documents for inspection, copying or photographing. Code Ann. s 81A-134(a).	"Under the Civil Practice Act, is a trial judge authorized to direct parties to action to produce pertinent documents for inspection, copying or photographing?"
2909	Brown v. Hardin, 419 P.2d 912, 915, 197 Kan. 517, 519-20 (Kan. 1966)	4	Statute which provides that orders entered at pretrial conference have full force of other orders of court and that they control subsequent course of action, unless modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice, reposes in trial court large discretion. K.S.A. 60-216.	Orders entered at pretrial conference have the full force of other orders of court and they control the subsequent course of the action, unless modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice (K.S.A. 60-216). This latter *520 proviso reposes in the trial court a large discretion and it is the exercise of this discretion plaintiff claims has been abused to his prejudice.	Do orders entered at pretrial conference have the full force of other orders of court and control the subsequent course of the action?
2911	Himmelfarb v. Allain, 380 S.W.3d 35, 40 (Tenn. 2012)	7	When a voluntary nonsuit is taken, the rights of the parties are not adjudicated, and the parties are placed in their original positions prior to the filing of the lawsuit; the case may be refiled subject to the applicable statutes of limitations. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41.01.	When a voluntary nonsuit is taken, the rights of the parties are not adjudicated, and the parties are placed in their original positions prior to the filing of the suit. The case may be refiled subject to the applicable statutes of limitations.	"When a voluntary nonsuit is taken, are the rights of the parties adjudicated, and the parties are placed in their original positions prior to the filing of the lawsuit?"
2912	Chca Woman's Hosp., L.P. v. Lidji, 369 S.W.3d 488, 492 (Tex. App. 2012)	5	A voluntary nonsuit extinguishes a case or controversy from the moment the motion for nonsuit is filed or an oral motion is made in open court, and it renders the merits of the nonsuited case moot. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 162.	A voluntary nonsuit "extinguishes a case or controversy from the moment the motion for nonsuit is filed or an oral motion is made in open court" and it "renders the merits of the nonsuited case moot."	"Does a voluntary nonsuit extinguish a case or controversy from the moment the motion for nonsuit is filed or an oral motion is made in open court, and it renders the merits of the nonsuited case moot?"
2914	Tober v. Hampton, 178 Neb. 858, 859, 136 N.W.2d 194, 196 (1965), overruled by Royal Indem. Co. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 193 Neb. 752, 229 N.W.2d 183 (1975)	4	Subsequent course of action at trial is controlled by agreements made at pretrial conference so long as they remain unmodified, and such would also be true on appeal. Supreme Court Rules, pt. 4, Rule Promulgated by the Supreme Court.	4. The subsequent course of an action is controlled by the agreements made at pretrial conference so long as they remain unmodified and that would be true on appeal.	"Is a subsequent course of action at trial controlled by agreements made at pretrial conference so long as they remain unmodified, and such would also be true on appeal?"

2915	2nd Roc-Jersey Associates v. Town of Morristown, 158 N.J. 581, 595–96 (N.J.,1999)	6	Core of definition of special assessment that makes imposition special assessment rather than general tax is not that benefit necessarily or primarily consists of physical improvements that are permanent in nature and are local in that they are adherent to or identified with specific individual properties that are directly and tangibly benefitted thereby, rather special assessment is used to provide combination of services and improvements that are intended and designed to benefit particular properties and demonstrably enhance the value and/or use or function of properties that are subject to special assessment.	We conclude that the core of the definition of a special assessment that makes the imposition a special assessment rather than a general tax is not that the benefit necessarily or primarily consists of physical improvements that are permanent in nature and are local in that they are adherent to or identified with specific individual properties that are directly and tangibly benefitted thereby. Rather, the special assessment is used to provide a combination of services and improvements that are intended and designed to benefit particular properties and demonstrably enhance *596 the value and/or the use or function of the properties that are subject to the special assessment.	What is the core of definition of special assessment?
2916	Southeastern Michigan Transp. Authority v. Secretary of State for State of Mich., 104 Mich.App. 390, 399 (1981)	1	Designation given by legislature to a tax is not controlling, although entitled to be given great weight; in passing upon constitutionality of statute, court looks to operation of tax imposed rather than to labels or descriptive words used to define tax.	The designation given by the Legislature to a tax is not controlling, although 851 entitled to be given great weight. Banner Laundering Co. v. State Board of Tax Administration, 297 Mich. 419, 429, 298 N.W. 73 (1941). In passing upon the constitutionality of a statute, the court looks to the operation of the tax imposed rather than to the labels or descriptive words used to define the tax.	Does a court look to the operation of the tax imposed rather than to the labels or descriptive words used to define the tax in passing upon the constitutionality of statute?
2917	Rozas v. Evangeline Parish Police Jury, 214 So.2d 398, 400 (La.App., 1968)	4	In determining whether a cause of action based on fraud has been pleaded, court may disregard as mere conclusions of the pleader a petition's general charges of fraud if they are unaccompanied by formal allegations setting forth with particularity the circumstances alleged to constitute same. LSA-C.C.P. art. 856.	In determining whether a cause of action has been pleaded, the court may disregard as mere conclusions of the pleader a petition's general charges of fraud if they are unaccompanied by formal allegations setting forth with particularity the circumstances alleged to constitute same.	Will a court disregard general charges of fraud as mere conclusions?
2918	Taylor v. Washington Hospital Center, 407 A.2d 585, 592 (D.C., 1979)	9	Existing pretrial procedures contemplate that fair disclosure will be made to remove cases from the realm of surprise, and both parties generally are bound by the pretrial order. D.C.C.E. SCR, Civil Rule 16.	The existing pretrial procedures contemplate that fair disclosure will be made to remove cases from the realm of surprise, and both parties generally are bound by the pretrial order.	Do the existing pretrial procedures contemplate that fair disclosure will be made to remove cases from the realm of surprise and are both parties generally bound by the pretrial order?

2919	Paselk v. Rabun, 293 S.W.3d 600, 611–12 (Tex. App. 2009)	34	A nonsuit is effective upon filing; the order dismissing the suit, while the starting point for determining when a trial court's plenary power expires, is purely a ministerial act. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 162.	A nonsuit is effective upon filing; the order dismissing the suit-while the "starting point for determining when a trial court's plenary power expires"- is purely a ministerial act.	"Is the order dismissing the suit, while the starting point for determining when a trial court's plenary power expires, purely a ministerial act?"
2920	Harris v. Billings, 16 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1402, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718, 721 (1993)	2	Plaintiff has no right to dismiss without prejudice if general demurrer has been sustained without leave to amend, since there has been "trial" of legal issues raised by demurrer.	For example, a plaintiff has no right to dismiss without prejudice if a general demurrer has been sustained without leave to amend, since there has been a "trial" of the legal issues raised by the demurrer.	"Does a plaintiff have right to dismiss without prejudice if a general demurrer has been sustained without leave to amend, since there has been ""trial"" of legal issues raised by a demurrer?"
2921	Virginia Concrete Co. v. Bd. of Sup'rs of Fairfax Cnty., 197 Va. 821, 826, 91 S.E.2d 415, 419 (1956)	2	An order "dismissed agreed" not only puts an end to the pending suit, but is a bar to any subsequent suit on the same cause of action by the same parties as fully as a retraxit would be. Code 1950, S 8-154.	An order 'dismissed agreed' not only puts an end to the pending suit, but is a bar to any subsequent suit on the same cause of action by the same parties 'as fully as a retraxit would be.' Bardach Iron Co. v. Tenenbaum, 136 Va. 163, 171 118 S.E. 502, 505.	"Does an order ""dismissed agreed"" puts an end to the pending suit and also bar any subsequent suit on the same cause of action by the same parties as fully as a retraxit would be?"
2922	Alvarado v. Hyundai Motor Co., 885 S.W.2d 167, 175 (Tex.App. San Antonio,1994	10	Upon timely motion for nonsuit, plaintiffs' right thereto is absolute and unqualified, and district court has no discretion to dismiss part of suit with prejudice. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 162.	Upon a timely motion for nonsuit, the appellants' right thereto is absolute and unqualified, and the trial court has no discretion to dismiss a part of the suit with prejudice.	"Upon a timely motion for nonsuit, is a plaintiffs right thereto absolute and unqualified, and district court has no discretion to dismiss part of a suit with prejudice?"
2923	Vardaman v. Baker Ctr., Inc., 96-0831 (La. App. 1 Cir. 2/14/97), 689 So. 2d 667, 669	2	Trial court may not dismiss action without prejudice if substantive rights acquired by defendant would be lost or if dismissal would deprive defendant of a just defense, and when either of these circumstances exists and plaintiff has moved for dismissal without prejudice, trial court may grant voluntary dismissal only if plaintiff agrees that it be dismissal with prejudice. LSA-C.C.P. art. 1671.	Moreover, the trial court may not dismiss an action without prejudice if the substantive rights acquired by the defendant would be lost or if the dismissal would deprive the defendant of a just defense. City National Bank v. Anlage, 448 So.2d 199, 200 (La.App. 1st Cir.1984).When either of these circumstances exists and the plaintiff has moved for a dismissal without prejudice, the trial court may grant the voluntary dismissal only if the plaintiff agrees that it be a dismissal with prejudice.	Can a trial court dismiss an action without prejudice if the substantive rights acquired by defendant would be lost or if the dismissal would deprive defendant of a just defense?
2924	Shelter Mut. Ins. Co. v. Vulgamott, 96 S.W.3d 96, 105 (Mo. Ct. App. 2003)	24	A partial summary judgment that does not dispose of an entire claim for relief can not be turned into a final, appealable judgment by the dismissal of the remaining issues without prejudice.	Finally, we note that a partial summary judgment that does not dispose of an entire claim for relief could not be turned into a final, appealable judgment by the dismissal of the remaining issues without prejudice.	"Can a partial summary judgment that does not dispose of an entire claim for relief be turned into a final, appealable judgment by the dismissal of the remaining issues without prejudice?"

2925	Forshey v. Airborne Freight Corp., 142 Ohio App. 3d 404, 408 (2001)	3	Notice dismissal is available to the plaintiff only once, and a second notice dismissal acts as an adjudication on the merits despite contrary language in the notice; this is also called the "double-dismissal rule." Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(A)(1) (2000).	41(A)(1) is available to the plaintiff only once, and a second notice dismissal acts as an adjudication on the merits despite contrary language in the notice. This is also called the "double-dismissal rule."	"Is a notice dismissal available to the plaintiff only once, and a second notice dismissal acts as an adjudication on the merits despite contrary language in the notice; and is this also called the "double-dismissal rule"?"
2927	Levine v. Gonzalez, 901 So.2d 969, 973 (Fla.App. 4 Dist.,2005)	5	Where parties file a stipulation of voluntary dismissal, the trial court is divested of "case jurisdiction," which is the power of the court over a particular case that is within its subject matter jurisdiction.	Where parties file such a stipulation of voluntary dismissal, the trial court is divested of "case jurisdiction," or "the power of the court over a particular case that is within its subject matter jurisdiction.	"Where parties file a stipulation of voluntary dismissal, is the trial court divested of "case jurisdiction," which is the power of the court over a particular case that is within its subject matter jurisdiction?"
2928	Watkins v. U.S. Army, 721 F.2d 687, 691 (9th Cir. 1983), opinion withdrawn, 875 F.2d 699 (9th Cir. 1989)	1	The broad equitable powers courts possess to regulate civilian life may not be used to force military to disobey its own regulations absent determination that regulations cannot be given legal effect.	We hold, therefore, that the broad equitable powers the courts possess to regulate civilian life may not be used to force the military to disobey its own regulations absent a determination that the regulations cannot be given legal effect.	Can the broad equitable powers the courts possess to regulate civilian life be used to force military to disobey its own regulations?
2930	Holmes v. California Nat. Guard, 90 Cal. App. 4th 297, 310, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 154, 166 (2001)	3	During their time of federal active duty, the state affiliation of members of the National Guard is suspended in favor of an entirely federal affiliation, and they are subject to all applicable laws and regulations of the United States military; upon being relieved from federal active duty, such individuals then revert to their state National Guard status and duty. 10 U.S.C.A. §§ 101(d), 12107, 12201(a); 32 U.S.C.A. §§ 101(5), 12), 102, 325(a).	During their time of federal active duty, their state affiliation is suspended in favor of an entirely federal affiliation, and they are subject to all applicable laws and regulations of the United States military. Upon being relieved from federal active duty, such individuals then revert to their State National Guard status and duty.	Does the National Guard lose their status in their respective state National Guards for the duration of their period of active federal military service?
2931	Williams v. Pucinski, No. 01-cv-5588, 2002 WL 1585571, at *3 (N.D. Ill. July 12, 2002)	1	Under Illinois law, voluntary dismissals and dismissals for want of prosecution are not considered final judgments on the merits until the statute of limitations and a one-year refiling period have expired. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/13-217.	Under Illinois law, voluntary dismissals and dismissals for want of prosecution are not considered final judgments on the merits until the statute of limitations and a one-year refiling period have expired.	Are voluntary dismissals and dismissals for want of prosecution considered final judgments on the merits until the statute of limitations and a one-year refiling period have expired?
2932	In re Bro Bro Properties, 50 S.W.3d 528, 530 (Tex. App. 2000)	7	The signing of an order dismissing a case, not the filing of a notice of nonsuit, is the starting point for determining when a trial court's plenary power expires.	As the Supreme Court of Texas has stated: [T]he signing of an order dismissing a case, not the filing of a notice of nonsuit, is the starting point for determining when a trial court's plenary power expires.	"Is the signing of an order dismissing a case, not the filing of a notice of nonsuit, the starting point for determining when a trial court's plenary power expires?"
2934	State ex rel. J. Richard Gaier Co., L.P.A. v. Kessler, 97 Ohio App.3d 782, 785 (1994)	3	Regardless of nature of dismissal, trial courts must retain some limited jurisdiction to determine collateral matters, even when action is dismissed voluntarily. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(A)(1).	Regardless of the nature of the dismissal, trial courts must retain some limited jurisdiction to determine collateral matters even when the action is dismissed voluntarily.	"Regardless of nature of dismissal, must trial courts retain some limited jurisdiction to determine collateral matters, even when action is dismissed voluntarily?"

2935	Time Warner, Inc. v. Gonzalez, 441 S.W.3d 661, 664–65 (Tex.App.-San Antonio, 2014)	1	A trial court has discretion to permit a party to withdraw an admission if: (1) the party shows good cause for the withdrawal; (2) the court finds that the other party will not be unduly prejudiced; and (3) presentation of the lawsuit's merits is served by the withdrawal. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 198.3.	A trial court has discretion to permit a party to withdraw an admission if: (a) the party shows good cause for the withdrawal; (b) the court finds that the other party will not be unduly prejudiced; and (c) presentation of the lawsuit's merits is served by the withdrawal.	"Does a trial court have discretion to permit a party to withdraw an admission if the party shows good cause, and if the trial court finds that the party relying on the admission will not be unduly prejudiced?"
2936	Steffan v. Steffan, 29 S.W.3d 627, 631 (Tex. App. 2000)	4	The burden is on the party seeking withdrawal of deemed admissions to establish good cause by proving that he did not intentionally or consciously disregard his obligation to timely answer; the failure to answer must have been accidental or the result of mistake, rather than intentional or the result of conscious indifference. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 169, subd. 2 (Repealed).	The burden is on the party seeking withdrawal to establish good cause by proving that he did not intentionally or consciously disregard his obligation to timely answer. See North River Ins. Co. v. Greene, 824 S.W.2d 697, 699-700 (Tex.App.-El Paso 1992, writ denied). The failure to answer must have been accidental or the result of mistake, rather than intentional or the result of conscious indifference.	Is the burden on the party seeking withdrawal of deemed admissions to establish good cause by proving that he did not intentionally or consciously disregard his obligation to timely answer?
2939	Bryant v. Cnty. Council of Lake Cnty., 720 N.E.2d 1, 6 (Ind.App., 1999)	10	Party moving for withdrawal of admissions does not meet its burden of showing that withdrawal will subserve the presentation of the merits simply by demonstrating that the admissions go to the core issues to be litigated. Trial Procedure Rule 36.	Moreover, the party moving for the withdrawal of admissions established by operation of T.R. 36 does not meet its burden of showing that withdrawal will subserve the presentation of the merits simply by demonstrating that the admissions go to the core issues to be litigated.	Does a party moving for withdrawal of admissions meet its burden of showing that withdrawal will subserve the presentation of the merits simply by demonstrating that the admissions go to the core issues to be litigated?
2940	Wilson v. Ortiz, 232 Ga. App. 191, 196–97, 501 S.E.2d 247, 253 (1998), overruled by Giles v. State Farm Mut. Ins. Co., 330 Ga. App. 314, 765 S.E.2d 413 (2014)	17	Party to suit will not be allowed to disprove admission made in his pleading without first being granted leave by trial court to withdraw such pleading from record. O.C.G.A. § 24-3-30.	A party to a suit will not be allowed to disprove an admission made in his pleading without first being granted leave by the trial court to withdraw such pleading from the record.	Will a party to suit be allowed to disprove an admission made in his pleading without first being granted leave by trial court to withdraw such pleading from record?
2941	Schwarz v. Platte Valley Exterminating, Inc., 258 Neb. 841, 848 (2000)	5	A party's failure to make a timely and appropriate response to a request for admission constitutes an admission of the subject matter of the request, which matter is conclusively established unless, on motion, the court permits withdrawal of the admission. Discovery Rule 36.	A motion for new trial is addressed to the discretion of the trial court, whose decision will be upheld in the absence of an abuse of that discretion. 5. Pretrial Procedure: Evidence. A party's failure to make a timely and appropriate response to a request for admission constitutes an admission of the subject matter of the request, which matter is conclusively established unless, on motion, the court permits withdrawal of the admission.	Does a party's failure to make a timely and appropriate response to a request for admission constitute an admission of the subject matter of the request?

2943	Albitus v. Farmers & Merchants Bank, 283 S.E.2d 632, 634, 159 Ga.App. 406, 407 (Ga.App.,1981)	1	If party served with request for admission does not serve answer or objection and does not move for extension of time or to withdraw admissions resulting from failure to answer, matter stands admitted. Code, S 81A-136.	If a party served with a request for admission does not serve an answer or objection and does not move for an extension of time or to withdraw the admissions resulting from a failure to answer, the matter stands admitted.	"If a party served with request for admission does not serve an answer or objection and does not move for an extension of time or to withdraw admissions resulting from failure to answer, does the matter stand admitted?"
2944	Hampton v. City of Wichita, 192 Kan. 534, 536-37 (1964)	2	Tax is not "debt" and civil action will not lie for its recovery except where statute especially confers right to bring such action or where it impliedly confers such right by omitting all mention of any method for collection of tax.	Under the authorities it may be stated that a tax is not a debt in the ordinary acceptance of that term, and consequently a civil action will not lie for its recovery, except in those cases where the statute expressly confers the right to bring such an action or where it *537 impliedly confers 760 such right by omitting all mention of any method for the collection of the tax.	Will a civil action lie for the recovery of a tax where statute expressly confers right to bring such action or where it impliedly confers such right by omitting all mention of any method for collection of tax?
2945	China Media Express Holdings, Inc. by Barth v. Nexus Executive Risks, Ltd., 182 F.Supp.3d 42, 50 (S.D.N.Y., 2016)	9	Where a contract contains a broad arbitration clause, only those claims that present no question involving construction of the contract, and no questions in respect of the parties' rights and obligations under it, are beyond the scope of the arbitration agreement.	Where a contract contains a broad arbitration clause, only those claims that "present no question involving construction of the contract, and no questions in respect of the parties' rights and obligations under it, are beyond the scope of the arbitration agreement.	"Are the claims that present no question involving construction of the contract and parties rights and obligations under it, beyond the scope of the arbitration agreement?"
2946	In re Alexandravicus' Estate, 83 N.J.Super. 303, 310 (1964)	2	Laws, acts, judgments, and decrees of foreign governments have extra-territorial effect only as matter of comity which in legal sense is neither matter of absolute obligation on one hand or of mere courtesy and good will on other hand.	It is well settled that the laws, acts, judgments and decrees of foreign governments have extraterritorial effect only as a matter of comity, sometimes called 'comity of nations,' which in a legal sense is 'neither a matter of absolute obligation, on the one hand, nor of mere courtesy and good will, upon the other.'	"Is comity, in the legal sense, neither a matter of absolute obligation on one hand nor of mere courtesy and good will, upon the other?"
2947	Sanford v. Dudley, 196 So.3d 1106, 1110 (Miss.App., 2016)	5	For the trial court to exercise its discretion to permit withdrawal of admission, the party seeking to withdraw an admission must first file a motion requesting that relief. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 36.	For the trial court to exercise its discretion to permit withdrawal, the party seeking to withdraw an admission must first file a motion requesting that relief.	"For the trial court to exercise its discretion to permit withdrawal of admission, must the party seeking to withdraw an admission first file a motion requesting that relief?"
2949	Brown v. Rowe Chevrolet-Buick, Inc., 357 S.E.2d 181, 183, 86 N.C.App. 222, 224 (N.C.App.,1987)	1	Where attorney has given movant no prior notice of intent to withdraw, court has no discretion but must grant reasonable continuance or deny motion to withdraw. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 40(b), G.S. S 1A-1.	Where the attorney has given the movant no prior notice of intent to withdraw, the court has no discretion but must grant a reasonable continuance or deny motion to withdraw.	"Where an attorney has given movant no prior notice of intent to withdraw, does the court have no discretion but must grant reasonable continuance or deny motion to withdraw?"

2950	Adobe Land Corp. v. Griffin, L.L.C., 236 S.W.3d 351, 357 (Tex.App.-Fort Worth, 2007)	9	A duty to preserve evidence arises only when a party knows or reasonably should know that there is a substantial chance that a claim will be filed and that evidence in its possession or control will be potentially relevant to that claim.	Such a duty arises only when a party knows or reasonably should know that there is a substantial chance that a claim will be filed and that evidence in its possession or control will be potentially relevant to that claim.	Does a duty to preserve evidence arise only when a party knows or reasonably should know that there is a substantial chance that a claim will be filed and that evidence in its possession or control will be potentially relevant to that claim?
2954	St. Mary v. Superior Court, 223 Cal.App.4th 762, 776, 167 Cal.Rptr.3d 517, 528 (Cal.App. 6 Dist., 2014)	11	A "deemed admitted" order establishes, by judicial fiat, that a nonresponding party has responded to requests for admission (RFA) by admitting the truth of all matters contained therein. Cal. Civ. Proc. Code S 2033.280(c).	"[A] deemed admitted order establishes, by judicial fiat, that a nonresponding party has responded to the requests by admitting the truth of all matters contained therein."	"Does a ""deemed admitted"" order establish, by judicial fiat, that a nonresponding party has responded to requests for admission (RFA) by admitting the truth of all matters contained therein?"
2955	Crider v. Pepsi Cola Bottlers of Atlanta, 235 S.E.2d 683, 684, 142 Ga.App. 304, 304 (Ga.App. 1977)	1	Where requests for admissions are timely served on the opposite party and no order extending the time for answer is entered, requests are admitted unless answered or objected to within 30 days. Code, S 81A-136(a, b).	Where requests for admissions are timely served upon the opposite party, and no order extending the time for answer is entered, the requests are admitted unless answered or objected to within 30 days. Code s 81A-136(a).	"Where requests for admissions are timely served on the opposite party and no order extending the time for answer is entered, are the requests admitted unless answered or objected to within 30 days?"
2956	New Jersey Realty Title Ins. Co. v. Division of Tax Appeals in Dept. of Taxation and Finance, 1 N.J. 496, 499-500 (N.J. 1949)	2	A state has power to levy a tax on a legitimate subject such as corporate franchises or property, measured by net assets or income, even though there is included, in the measure of the tax, tax exempt federal instrumentalities or the income derived therefrom, and a state tax so measured is not an infringement of the immunity from taxation.	But it is equally well settled that a state has the power to levy a tax on a legitimate subject, such as corporate franchises or property, measured by net assets or income, even though there is included, in the measure of the tax, tax-exempt federal instrumentalities or the income derived therefrom. A state tax so measured is not an infringement of the *500 immunity from taxation.	Does a state has the power to levy a tax on a legitimate subject measured by net assets or income?
2957	Capitol Novelty Co. v. Evatt, 61 N.E.2d 211, 213, 145 Ohio St. 205, 208 (Ohio 1945)	3	A "tax" is a means of distributing burden of costs of government and not an assessment of benefits, the only benefit to which taxpayer is constitutionally entitled being that derived from enjoyment of privilege of living in an organized society, established and safeguarded by devotion of taxes to public purposes.	A tax is not an assessment of benefits. It is, as we have said, a means of distributing the burden of the cost of government. The only benefit to which the taxpayer is constitutionally entitled is that derived from his enjoyment of the privileges of living in an organized society, established and safeguarded by the devotion of taxes to public purposes.	Is tax a means of distributing the burden of the cost of government and not an assessment of benefits?

2958	U.S. v. Jefferson, 674 F.3d 332, 359 (C.A.4 (Va.), 2012)	5	In order to establish the quid pro quo essential to proving bribery, government need not show that the defendant intended for his payments to be tied to specific official acts or omissions; rather, bribery can be accomplished through an ongoing course of conduct. 18 U.S.C.A. S 201.	We agree with that court's explanation that, "in order to establish the quid pro quo essential to proving bribery, the government need not show that the defendant intended for his payments to be tied to specific official acts (or omissions)." Id. at 148 (internal quotation marks omitted). Rather, "bribery can be accomplished through an ongoing course of conduct." Id.	Can bribery of a public official be established through an ongoing course of conduct?
2959	In re Peloquin's Estate, 409 A.2d 586, 588, 137 Vt. 559, 562 (Vt., 1979)	4	Engagement of counsel in other trial courts is not cause for an automatic continuance nor is it alone a ground for claiming abuse of discretion by trial court in dismissing the action with prejudice. V.R.C.P. 40, 41; 4 V.S.A. S 906.	The engagement of counsel in other trial courts will not be considered cause for an automatic continuance, nor is it alone a ground for claiming abuse of discretion by the trial court in dismissing the action under V.R.C.P. 41.	Is engagement of counsel in other trial courts not cause for an automatic continuance or is it alone a ground for claiming abuse of discretion by trial court in dismissing the action with prejudice?
2963	Dobbelaere v. Cosco, Inc., 697 N.E.2d 1016, 1024, 120 Ohio App.3d 232, 244 (Ohio App. 3 Dist.,1997)	10	Where party files written request for admission, failure of opposing party to timely answer request constitutes conclusive admission, and also satisfies written answer requirement of summary judgment rule. Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 36, 56(C).	"[W]here a party files a written request for admission[,] a failure of the opposing party to timely answer the request constitutes a conclusive admission pursuant to Civ.R. 36 and also satisfies the written answer requirement of Civ.R. 56(C) in the case of a summary judgment." Id.	"Where a party files a written request for admission, does failure of the opposing party to timely answer request constitute a conclusive admission and also satisfies the written answer requirement?"
2964	State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Hatherley, 250 Ill.App.3d 333, 338 (1993)	9	Party must respond or object to request to admit facts within 28 days following service of request, otherwise such facts may be deemed admitted. Sup.Ct.Rules, Rule 216.	... party must respond or object to a request to admit facts within 28 days following service of the request, otherwise such facts may be deemed admitted.	"Must a party respond or object to request to admit facts within 28 days following service of the request, otherwise such facts may be deemed admitted?"
2965	J.M. Parker & Sons, Inc. v. William Barber, Inc., 208 N.C.App. 682, 688 (N.C.App., 2010)	6	In order to avoid having requests for admissions deemed admitted, a party must timely respond if there is any objection whatsoever to the request; failure to do so means that the facts in question are judicially established. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 36(a), West's N.C.G.S.A. S 1A-1.	Rule 36 "means precisely what it says [i.e.,] [i]n order to avoid having requests for admissions deemed admitted, a party must respond within the period of the rule if there is any objection whatsoever to the request." Burchette, 100 N.C.App. at 162, 394 S.E.2d at 701 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). Failure to do so means that the facts in question are judicially established.	"In order to avoid having request for admissions deemed admitted, must a party respond within the period of the rule if there is any objection whatsoever to the request?"

2966	Whirlpool Corp. v. Camacho, 251 S.W.3d 88, 102 (Tex. App. 2008), rev'd, 298 S.W.3d 631 (Tex. 2009)	17	A duty to preserve evidence arises when a party knows or reasonably should know (1) that there is a substantial chance that a claim will be filed, and (2) that evidence in its possession or control will be material and relevant to that claim.	This duty to preserve evidence arises when a party knows or reasonably should know (1) that there is a substantial chance that a claim will be filed, and (2) that evidence in its possession or control will be material and relevant to that claim.	"Does a duty to preserve evidence arise when a party knows or reasonably should know that there is a substantial chance that a claim will be filed, and that the evidence in its possession or control will be material and relevant to that claim?"
2967	Smith v. Circle P Ranch Co., 150 Cal.Rptr. 828, 836, 87 Cal.App.3d 267, 279 (Cal.App., 1978)	11	The amount which may properly be assessed as sanctions is limited to those fees and expenses related to a particular abuse of discovery; no assessment may be made for expenses unrelated to specific grounds of motion before court. West's Ann.Code Civ.Proc. S 2034(c).	The amount which may properly be assessed as sanctions is limited to those fees and expenses related to a particular abuse of discovery; no assessment may be made for expenses unrelated to the specific grounds of the motion before the court.	"Is the amount which may properly be assessed as sanctions, limited to those fees and expenses related to a particular abuse of discovery?"
2968	Albitus v. Farmers & Merchants Bank, 283 S.E.2d 632, 634, 159 Ga.App. 406, 407 (Ga.App.,1981)	1	If party served with request for admission does not serve answer or objection and does not move for extension of time or to withdraw admissions resulting from failure to answer, matter stands admitted. Code, S 81A-136.	If a party served with a request for admission does not serve an answer or objection and does not move for an extension of time or to withdraw the admissions resulting from a failure to answer, the matter stands admitted.	"If a party served with a request for admission does not serve an answer or objection and does not move for an extension of time or to withdraw admissions resulting from failure to answer, does the matter stand admitted?"
2969	Masterson v. Hogue, 842 S.W.2d 696, 697 (Tex. App. 1992)	3	Untimely answered requests for admissions are automatically deemed admitted and constitute judicial admissions; responding parties cannot thereafter introduce proof to controvert them.	Untimely answered Requests are automatically deemed admitted and constitute judicial admissions; the responding parties cannot thereafter introduce proof to controvert them.	Are untimely answered requests for admissions automatically deemed admitted and constitute judicial admissions and responding parties cannot thereafter introduce proof to controvert them?
2973	State v. Easton, 69 Wash.2d 965, 970 (1966)	4	Treasury department's issuance of stop payment notice neither affected negotiability of social security check nor discharged treasury department's liability thereon; holder in due course could enforce payment for full amount thereof. RCWA 62A.3-305.	The issuance of the stop payment notice by the Treasury Department neither affected the negotiability of the check nor discharged the Treasury Department's liability thereon. A holder in due course could enforce payment for the full amount thereof.	Can a check remain negotiable by a holder in due course and be enforced after the issuance of stop payment order?
2975	Components Direct, Inc. v. Eur. Am. Bank & Tr. Co., 175 A.D.2d 227, 232, 572 N.Y.S.2d 359, 362-63 (1991)	8	Although statements in pleadings are required to be factual, party may supplement or round out his pleading by conclusory allegations or by stating legal theories explicitly, if facts upon which pleader relies are also stated.	Although the statements in pleadings are required to be factual, "a party may supplement or round out his pleading by conclusory allegations or by 'stating legal theories explicitly' if the facts upon which the pleader relies are also stated" (Foley v. D'Agostino, 21 A.D.2d 60, 63, 248 N.Y.S.2d 121, quoting Notes, First Preliminary Report of Advisory Committee on Practice and Procedure, at 63 [1957]).	Can a party supplement or round out his pleading by conclusory allegations or by stating legal theories explicitly?

2976	Moore v. Dudley, 31 Kan.App.2d 184, 190 (Kan.App.,2002)	12	Statute which states that a pretrial order controls the future course of the case bestows broad discretionary power upon the trial court in controlling the course of the action. K.S.A. 60-216(e).	60-216(e) provides that a pretrial order controls the future course of the case: "[T]his order shall control the subsequent course of action unless modified by a subsequent order." This statute bestows broad discretionary power upon the trial court in controlling the course of the action.	Does a statute which state that a pretrial order controls the subsequent course of the case bestows broad discretionary power upon the trial court?
2977	Boyter v. MCR Const. Co., 673 S.W.2d 938, 941 (Tex.App. 5 Dist.,1984)	3	Request for admission directed to one party concerning another's state of mind seeks to elicit inadmissible opinions and cannot be deemed admitted.	Requests for admissions directed to one party concerning another's state of mind seek to elicit inadmissible opinions and cannot be deemed admitted.	Does a request for admission directed to one party concerning another's state of mind seek to elicit inadmissible opinions and cannot be deemed admitted?
2980	Moran v. Superior Ct. in & for Sacramento Cnty., 38 Cal. App. 2d 328, 334, 100 P.2d 1096, 1099 (1940)	11	The statute authorizing the taking of depositions to be used in pending trials should be liberally construed to the end that a litigant in a pending action may be afforded a reasonable opportunity to procure available testimony in support of his cause. Code Civ.Proc. S 2020.	The statute authorizing the taking of depositions to be used in pending trials should be liberally construed to the end that a litigant in a pending action may be afforded a reasonable opportunity to procure available testimony in support of his cause.	Should the statute authorizing the taking of depositions used in pending trials be liberally construed?
2981	Paterno v. Superior Ct., 163 Cal. App. 4th 1342, 1349, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 244, 250 (2008)	5	Trial judges should refrain from ordering unnecessary, expensive, and burdensome discovery proceedings in defamation actions if it appears from the strategic lawsuit against public participation (SLAPP) motion that there are significant issues as to falsity or publication, which the plaintiff should be able to establish without discovery. West's Ann.Cal.C.C.P. S 425.16(g); West's Ann.Cal.Civ.Code S 45.	Trial judges should refrain from ordering "unnecessary, expensive and burdensome" discovery proceedings "if it appears from the SLAPP motion there are significant issues as to falsity or publication- issues which the plaintiff should be able to establish without discovery...."	"Should trial judges refrain from ordering unnecessary, expensive, and burdensome discovery proceedings in defamation actions?"
2983	Necchi Sewing Mach. Sales Corp. v. Sewline Co., 194 F.Supp. 602, 604 (D.C.N.Y. 1960)	3	Party by entering into arbitration agreement subjects himself in advance to jurisdiction of court within whose territorial jurisdiction arbitration proceedings are to be had, and such submission would waive any objection to venue. 9 U.S.C.A. S 4.	4, 1954 Amendment, that a party may, by entering into an arbitration agreement subject himself in advance to the jurisdiction of the court within whose territorial jurisdiction the arbitration proceedings are to be had. Such submission waives any objection to venue.	Whether objection to venue can be waived if the party in an arbitration agreement subjects himself in advance to jurisdiction of the court within whose territorial jurisdiction arbitration proceeding to be held?
2984	Pelletier v. Yellow Transp., Inc., 549 F.3d 578, 581 (C.A.1 (Me.),2008)	5	Contractual clause selecting either judicial or arbitral forum for resolution of disputes establishes legal right which is analytically distinct from rights being asserted in dispute to which it is addressed.	As the Third Circuit has noted in another context, "a contractual clause selecting either a judicial or an arbitral forum for the resolution of disputes establishes a legal right which is analytically distinct from the rights being asserted in the dispute to which it is addressed." Coastal Steel Corp.	Whether acontractual clause selecting either judicial or arbitral forum for resolution of disputes establishes legal right distinct from rights being asserted in dispute to which it is addressed?

2985	Brown v. Cain, 56 F.Supp. 56, 58 (D.C.Pa. 1944)	1	An enrolled temporary member of Coast Guard Reserve with rating of Boatswain's Mate, First Class, was a member of armed forces of the United States.	The relator has been since December 21, 1942, an enrolled temporary member of the Coast Guard Reserve, with the rating of Boatswain's Mate, First Class. As such he was a member of the Armed Forces of the United States.	"Is an enrolled temporary member of the Coast Guard Reserve, with the rating of Boatswain's Mate, First Class a member of the Armed Forces of the United States?"
2986	Norman v. Cummings, 73 S.D. 559, 563 (S.D. 1951)	2	If, as a result of usual, ordinary and reasonable use a highway is injured, obstructed or rendered dangerous and unsafe for travel, it becomes duty of duly authorized public authorities to provide the remedy, but no liability on ground of negligence, attaches to user as a result of such use, either to the public or the highway authorities, for damages to highway or to other travelers. SDC 28.0912, 28.9909.	If as a result of usual, ordinary and reasonable use a highway is injured, obstructed or rendered dangerous and unsafe for travel, it becomes the duty of the duly authorized public authorities to provide the remedy, but no liability attaches to the user as a result of such use, either to the public highway authorities for damages to the highway (40 C.J.S., Highways, 233; 29 C.J., Highways, 410; Winston & Co.	When does no liability attaches to the user as a result of the use of highway?
2988	Matter of Estate of Katschor, 543 P.2d 560, 562 (Okla., 1975)	4	Where party has acted in a timely and diligent manner, refusal to continue a case to permit the taking of a deposition authorized by statute is prejudicial error. 12 O.S.1971, SS 383, 439, 667.	Where a party has acted in a timely and diligent manner, refusal to continue a case to permit the taking of a deposition authorized by statute is prejudicial error.	"Where a party has acted in a timely and diligent manner, is the refusal to continue a case to permit the taking of a deposition authorized by statute prejudicial error?"
2990	State ex rel. Woodard v. District Court of Fourteenth Judicial Dist., 120 Mont. 585, 590 (1948)	4	Whether depositions are taken in proceeding to perpetuate testimony or in any other case wherein depositions may be taken, affidavit, application or complaint should tender issue sufficiently definite to disclose that testimony sought is relevant to framed or proposed issue. Rev.Codes, 1935, SS 10673-10675,10686-10692	Whether a deposition be taken in a proceeding to perpetuate testimony, or in any other matter or case where depositions may be taken, it appears that an issue should be tendered by the affidavit, application or complaint, sufficiently definite to disclose that the testimony sought is relevant and pertinent to the framed or proposed issue.	Should an application or complaint tender an issue sufficiently definite to disclose that testimony sought is relevant?
2992	Perryman v. Crawford, 968 So.2d 83, 85 (Fla.App. 4 Dist.,2007)	4	In the context of the interpretation and enforcement of pretrial orders mandating witness disclosure, broad discretion is vested in the trial court and reviewing courts should reverse the trial judge only where there is a clear showing of abuse prejudicial to the affected party.	In the context of the interpretation and enforcement of pretrial orders mandating witness disclosure, broad discretion is vested in the trial court and reviewing courts should reverse the trial judge only where there is "a clear showing of abuse prejudicial to the affected party."	Is broad discretion vested in the courts while interpreting and enforcing pretrial orders?
2994	Loc. 205, United Elec., Radio & Mach. Workers of Am. (UE) v. Gen. Elec. Co., 233 F.2d 85, 96 (1st Cir. 1956)	15	The hoary, though probably misguided, judge-made reluctance to give full effect to arbitration agreements cannot now be ignored by Court of Appeals as a matter of federal law without pretty explicit statutory basis for so doing.	That history convinces us that the hoary though probably misguided judge-made reluctance to give full effect to arbitration agreements cannot now be ignored by us as a matter of federal law without a pretty explicit statutory basis for so doing.	Does the court an ignore arbitration agreement considering the hoary judge-made reluctance to give full effect to arbitration agreements?

2995	ABB Flakt, Inc. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., 731 A.2d 811, 815, fn5 (Del.Supr.,1999)	6	Discovery on the issue of contractual intent is usually appropriate whenever the provisions in controversy are reasonably or fairly susceptible of different interpretations or meanings.	We take the occasion, however, to emphasize that discovery on the issue of contractual intent is usually appropriate whenever the provisions in controversy are reasonably or fairly susceptible of different interpretations or meanings.	Is discovery on the issue of contractual intent usually appropriate whenever the provisions in controversy are reasonably or fairly susceptible of different interpretations or meanings?
2997	Roberts v. Geren, 530 F. Supp. 2d 24, 32–33 (D.D.C. 2007)	1	Courts review decisions of military corrections boards under an unusually deferential application of the arbitrary or capricious standard of the Administrative Procedure Act (APA). 5 U.S.C.A. S 706(2).	Courts review the decisions of military corrections boards "under an 'unusually deferential application of the arbitrary or capricious standard' of the Administrative Procedures Act."	Do courts review decisions of the Military Corrections Board under an unusually deferential application of the arbitrary or capricious standard of the Administrative Procedure Act?
2998	W. Pipe & Supply, Inc. v. Heart Mountain Oil Co., 179 Neb. 858, 861–62, 140 N.W.2d 813, 817 (1966)	3	Modification of pretrial order may be had at trial to prevent manifest injustice, but modification should be by direction and not by indirection, that is modification must be attended by degree of directness and formality such as is appropriate to court order of such magnitude that, from time of its entry, it controls subsequent course of the action.	'Modification of a pretrial order may be had at the trial to prevent manifest injustice, but the modification should be by direction and not by indirection. That is, modification must be attended by a degree of directness and formality such as is appropriate to a court order of such magnitude that from the time of its entry it controls the subsequent course of the action.	Is a subsequent course of action in the trial court controlled by agreements made at pretrial conference so long as they remain unmodified?
2999	Beverly Hills Nat. Bank & Tr. Co. v. Superior Ct. In & For Los Angeles Cnty., 195 Cal. App. 2d 861, 867, 16 Cal. Rptr. 236, 239 (Ct. App. 1961)	4	Party initiating proceedings for taking deposition of nonresident has choice of designating that deposition be taken on either oral examination or upon written interrogatories, but trial court is vested with discretion, after hearing, to direct whether interrogatories are to be written or oral, and in exercising such discretion elements of convenience and expense may, among other things, be considered. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc. rule 26, 28 U.S.C.A.; West's Ann.Code Civ.Proc. SS 2016, 2018-2021, 2024-2028, 2025, 2026.	Although the party initiating the proceeding has a choice of designating that the deposition be taken on either oral examination, or upon written interrogatories, it is evident that the trial court is vested with discretion, after hearing, to direct whether the interrogatories are to be written or oral. Hoge v. Lava Cap Gold Mining Corp., 55 Cal.App.2d 176, 178, 130 P.2d 470; Hopkins v. Superior Court, 105 Cal.App. 133, 286 P. 1053. In exercising such discretion, among others, elements of convenience and expense properly may be considered.	"Is the trial court vested with the discretion, after hearing, to direct whether interrogatories are to be written or oral?"
3002	Ohio Multi-Use Trails Assn. v. Vinton Cty. Commrs., 182 Ohio App. 3d 32, 35 (2009)	1	The legal standard for deciding a motion to dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction is whether any cause of action cognizable by the forum has been raised in the complaints.	The legal standard for deciding a motion to dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction is "whether any cause of action cognizable by the forum has been raised in the complaints."	Is the legal standard for deciding a motion to dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction whether any cause of action cognizable by the forum has been raised in the complaints?

3007	Dargart v. Ohio Dep't of Transp., 871 N.E.2d 608, 611 (Ohio 2006)	2	When ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction, trial courts must determine whether a claim raises any action cognizable in that court. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(B)(1).	When ruling on a Civ.R. 12(B)(1) motion to dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction, trial courts must determine whether a claim raises any action cognizable in that court.	"When ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction, must trial courts determine whether a claim raises any action cognizable in that court?"
3008	Cleveland Raceways, Inc. v. Bowers, 163 N.E.2d 73, 80–81 (Ohio Com.Pl., 1958)	11	The state's power over taxation is plenary and only emphatic requirements of the Constitution may authorize interpretation of privileges and immunities clause which restricts power of states to manage their own fiscal affairs. U.S.C.A.Const. Amend. 14.	The state's power over taxation is plenary and only emphatic requirements of the Constitution may authorize interpretation of the privileges and immunities clause which restricts the power of states to manage their own fiscal affairs;	Which requirements of the Constitution authorize interpretation of the privileges and immunities clause which restricts the power of states to manage their own fiscal affairs?
3010	Troyan v. Reyes, 855 N.E.2d 967, 977 (Ill. App. 3d Dist. 2006)	25	Party has a good-faith obligation to make a reasonable effort to secure answers to requests to admit from persons and documents within the responding party's reasonable control.	"[A] party has a good-faith obligation to make a reasonable effort to secure answers to requests to admit from persons and documents within the responding party's reasonable control.	Should a party have a good-faith obligation to make a reasonable effort to secure answers to requests to admit from persons and documents within the responding party's reasonable control?
3011	Cline v. Prowler Industries of Maryland, Inc., 418 A.2d 968, 985 (Del.Supr., 1980)	13	Under rule requiring that party who unjustifiably fails to admit the truth of a matter requested pay petitioning party "the reasonable expenses incurred in making that proof," "reasonable" would be construed to mean that not only are number of hours, cost per hour, and other expenses charged reasonable in amount, but that total amount assessed against a party bear a relationship to his responsibility in causing that party to prove the fact in question. Superior Court Rules, Civil Rule 37(c), Del.C.Ann.	Rule 37(c) requires that a party who unjustifiably fails to admit the truth of a matter requested pay the petitioning party "the reasonable expenses incurred in making that proof". We construe "reasonable" to mean that not only are the number of hours, cost per hour, and other expenses charged reasonable in amount, but that the total amount assessed against a party bear a relationship to his responsibility in causing that party to prove the fact in question.	"Should a party who unjustifiably fails to admit the truth of a matter requested, pay petitioning party ""the reasonable expenses incurred in making that proof?"
3013	Chase Manhattan Bank v. Gavin, 733 A.2d 782, 791 (Conn. 1999)	1	State is free to pursue its own fiscal policies, unembarrassed by Constitution, if by practical operation of a tax the state has exerted its power in relation to opportunities which it has given, to protection which it has afforded, to benefits which it has conferred by fact of being an orderly, civilized society.	"A state is free to pursue its own fiscal policies, unembarrassed by the Constitution, if by the practical operation of a tax the state has exerted its power in relation to opportunities which it has given, to protection which it has afforded, to benefits which it has conferred by the fact of being an orderly, civilized society."	"Is a state free to pursue its own fiscal policies, unembarrassed by the Constitution?"
3014	Revenue Cabinet v. Estate of Field, 864 S.W.2d 930, 932 (Ky.App.,1993)	1	"Ad Valorem" literally means "according to the worth," and is used in taxation to designate assessment of taxes against property at certain rate upon its value.	The term "ad valorem" literally means "according to the worth," and is used in taxation to designate an assessment of taxes against property at a certain rate upon its value.	"Does ""ad valorem"" literally means ""according to the worth"", and is used in taxation to designate assessment of taxes against property at certain rate upon its value?"

3015	U.S. v. Andrews, 681 F.3d 509, 527 (3d Cir. 2012)	17	An honest services fraud prosecution for bribery after Skilling requires the government to prove: (1) that the payor provided a benefit to a public official intending that he would thereby take favorable official acts that he would not otherwise take, and (2) that the official accepted those benefits intending, in exchange for the benefits, to take official acts to benefit the payor. 18 U.S.C.A. § 1346.	. An honest services fraud prosecution for bribery after Skilling thus requires the Government to prove: (1) that "the payor provided a benefit to a public official intending that he w[ould] thereby take favorable official acts that he would not otherwise take," and (2) that "the official accepted those benefits intending, in exchange for the benefits, to take official acts to benefit the payor."	What are the requirements to prove honest services fraud prosecution for bribery?
3016	State v. Emmanuel, 42 Wash.2d 1, 7 (1953)	4	Statute defining crime of asking or receiving bribe does not limit crime to cases where official duties prescribed by statute may be affected, but it is sufficient if State officer, agent or employee is given such official duties by direction of his superiors or by custom of office practice. RCW 9.18.020.	The criminal statute, however, does not limit the crime of asking or receiving a bribe to cases where official duties prescribed by statute may be affected. Nor does State v. Hart, supra. It is sufficient if, as here, the state officer, agent or employee is given such official duties by direction of his superiors or by customary office practice.	Is it necessary to prescribe by a statute the duties of board secretary to sustain a conviction for asking and receiving a bribe or is it sufficient if the state officer is given such official duties by direction of his superiors or by custom of the office?
3017	Texas Co. v. R.R. Comm'n of Tex., 246 S.W.2d 487, 491 (Tex. Civ. App. 1952), writ refused NRE	2	Rule against subdivision for purpose of drilling oil wells contemplates prohibition of division of tract of land, or tracts of land, under common ownership, into smaller tracts, for purpose of acquiring additional permits to drill.	The rule against subdivision contemplates the prohibition of a division of a tract of land, or tracts of land, under common ownership, into smaller tracts, for the purpose of acquiring additional permits to drill.	Does the rule against subdivision contemplate the prohibition of a division of a tract of land under common ownership into smaller tracts for the purpose of acquiring additional permits to drill?
3019	Bauer v. Douglas Aquatics, Inc., 698 S.E.2d 757, 761 (N.C. App. 2010)	8	Upon a defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, the plaintiff bears the burden of making out a prima facie case that jurisdiction exists.	As such, upon a defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, the plaintiff bears the burden of making out a prima facie case that jurisdiction exists.	"Upon a defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, does the plaintiff bear the burden of making out a prima facie case that jurisdiction exists?"
3020	Providence Volunteer Fire Department v. Town of Weddington, 800 S.E.2d 425, 432 (N.C.App., 2017)	11	If a defendant moving to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction submits supportive evidence, for example an affidavit, along with the motion to dismiss, the complaint's allegations can no longer be taken as true or controlling and the plaintiff cannot rest on the allegations of the complaint.	If, however, the defendant submits supportive evidence—for example an affidavit—along with the motion to dismiss, the complaint's allegations "can no longer be taken as true or controlling and [the] plaintiff[] cannot rest on the allegations of the complaint."	"If a defendant moving to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction submits supportive evidence, along with the motion to dismiss, can the complaint's allegations no longer be taken as true?"

3021	Cuozzo v. Town of Orange, 109 A.3d 903, 908–09, 315 Conn. 606, 615–17 (Conn., 2015)	10	Where a jurisdictional determination is dependent on the resolution of a critical factual dispute, it cannot be decided on a motion to dismiss in the absence of an evidentiary hearing to establish jurisdictional facts; likewise, if the question of jurisdiction is intertwined with the merits of the case, a court cannot resolve the jurisdictional question without a hearing to evaluate those merits. Practice Book 1998, S 10-30.	"Finally, where a jurisdictional determination is dependent on the resolution of a critical factual dispute, it cannot be decided on a motion to dismiss in the absence of an evidentiary hearing to establish jurisdictional facts.... Likewise, if the question of jurisdiction is intertwined with the merits of the case, a court cannot resolve the jurisdictional question without a hearing to evaluate those merits....	"Where a jurisdictional determination is dependent on the resolution of a critical factual dispute, can it be decided on a motion to dismiss in the absence of an evidentiary hearing to establish jurisdictional facts?"
3022	Sun Life Assur. Co. of Canada v. Indiana Comprehensive Health Ins. Ass'n, 827 N.E.2d 1206, 1209 (Ind. App. 2005)	4	A party's failure to exhaust its administrative remedies creates a jurisdictional defect and makes a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction appropriate.	Thus, a party's failure to exhaust its administrative remedies creates a jurisdictional defect and makes a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction appropriate.	Does a party's failure to exhaust its administrative remedies create a jurisdictional defect and makes a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction appropriate?
3023	AAIS Corp. v. Department of Administrative Services, 93 Conn.App. 327, 328–29 (Conn.App., 2006)	1	Motion to dismiss for lack of standing attacks the jurisdiction of the court, asserting essentially that the plaintiff cannot as a matter of law or fact state a claim that should be heard by the court.	"A motion to dismiss for lack of standing attacks the jurisdiction of the court, asserting essentially that the plaintiff cannot as a matter of law or fact state a claim that should be heard by the court....	Does a motion to dismiss for lack of standing attack the jurisdiction of the court that the plaintiff cannot as a matter of law or fact state a claim that should be heard by the court?
3024	Grajczyk v. Tasca, 717 N.W.2d 624, 631 (S.D. 2006)	10	The party on whose behalf service has been made has the burden of establishing its validity; however, this initial burden only requires that the party establish a prima facie case: when a defendant moves to dismiss for insufficient service of process, the burden is on the plaintiff to establish a prima facie case that the service was proper.	"The great weight of the case law is to the effect that the party on whose behalf service has been made has the burden of establishing its validity." However, this initial burden only requires that the party establish a prima facie case: when a defendant moves to dismiss for insufficient service of process, the burden is on the plaintiff to establish a prima facie case that the service was proper.	"When a defendant moves to dismiss for insufficient service of process, is the burden on the plaintiff to establish a prima facie case that the service was proper?"
3025	Paragon Const. Co. v. Dept. of Pub. Works, 23 A.3d 732, 740 (Conn. App. 2011)	19	In the absence of a proper factual basis in the complaint to support the applicability of exceptions to the state's sovereign immunity from suit, the granting of a motion to dismiss on sovereign immunity grounds is proper.	In the absence of a proper factual basis in the complaint to support the applicability of these exceptions, the granting of a motion to dismiss on sovereign immunity grounds is proper.	"In the absence of a proper factual basis in the complaint to support the applicability of exceptions to the state's sovereign immunity from suit, is the granting of a motion to dismiss on sovereign immunity grounds proper?"

3026	Disney Enterprises, Inc. v. Tax Appeals Tribunal of State, 10 N.Y.3d 392, 403, 888 N.E.2d 1029, 1036 (2008)	6	Since power to tax is traditional state power , unambiguous evidence is required to raise inference that scope of federal pre-emption of such power extends beyond that which clearly is mandated by Congress's language.	As this Court has long held that the power to tax is such a traditional state power (see People v. Adirondack Ry. Co., 160 N.Y. 225, 54 N.E. 689 [1899]), we will not "absent unambiguous evidence, infer a scope of pre-emption beyond that which clearly is mandated by Congress' language " (Cipollone v. Liggett Group, Inc., 505 U.S. 504, 533, 112 S.Ct. 2608, 120 L.Ed.2d 407 [1992]).	Is evidence required to raise inference that scope of federal pre-emption of the state's power to tax extends beyond that which is clearly mandated by Congress's language?
3027	One Beacon Ins. Co. v. Hughes, 269 Ga.App. 390, 392 (Ga.App.,2004)	2	The Workers' Compensation Act constitutes a complete code of laws on the subject, and the entitlement to workers' compensation benefits is strictly a matter of statutory construction, because there is no common law right to such benefits. West's Ga.Code Ann. S 34-9-1 et seq.	In construing the statutes at issue, we note that the Workers' Compensation Act constitutes a complete code of laws on the subject, and the entitlement to workers' compensation benefits is strictly a matter of statutory construction because there is no common law right to such benefits.	"Does the Workers Compensation Act constitute a complete code of laws on the subject, and is the entitlement to workers compensation benefits strictly a matter of statutory construction?"
3028	Hook v. Springfield, 141 Ohio App. 3d 260, 266 (2001)	4	The rights of injured employees and the dependents of killed employees to recover from or participate in the workers' compensation fund are neither constitutional rights, inherent rights, nor common-law rights, but are wholly statutory.	" '[T]he rights of injured employees and the dependents of killed employees to recover from or participate in the [workers' compensation] fund are neither constitutional rights, inherent rights, nor common-law rights, but are wholly statutory[.]' "	"Are the rights of injured employees and dependents of killed employees to recover from or participate in the workers compensation fund constitutional, inherent, common-law, or statutory rights?"
3030	United States v. Rosen, 716 F.3d 691, 700 (2d Cir. 2013)	4	To establish the corrupt intent necessary to support a federal bribery conviction, the government must prove that the defendant had a specific intent to give something of value in exchange for an official act, which generally includes any act taken under color of official authority. 18 U.S.C.A. S 666(a)(2).	To establish the " 'corrupt' intent necessary to a bribery conviction," the Government must prove that the defendant had " 'a specific intent to give ... something of value in exchange for an official act,' " United States v. Alfisi, 308 F.3d 144, 149 (2d Cir.2002) (emphasis in original) (quoting United States v. Sun-Diamond Growers of Cal., 526 U.S. 398, 404-05, 119 S.Ct. 1402, 143 L.Ed.2d 576 (1999)),which generally includes any act taken "under color of official authority," Ganim, 510 F.3d at 142 n. 4.	What should the government prove in order to establish the corrupt intent necessary to a bribery conviction?
3034	Blake v. Samuelson, 524 P.2d 624, 625, 34 Colo.App. 183, 185 (Colo.App. 1974)	3	Under rule providing that a complaint shall contain a short and plain statement of claim showing that pleader is entitled to relief, pleadings need only serve notice of claim asserted and need not express a complete recitation of all facts which support the cause of action. Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 8(a).	8(a) provides that a complaint shall contain, inter alia: 'a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief' Under this rule pleadings need only serve notice of the claim asserted and need not express a complete recitation of all the facts which support the cause of action.	Should pleadings only serve notice of the claim asserted?

3035	Teva Pharm. Indus. v. Ruiz, 181 So. 3d 513, 516-517 (Fla.App. 2 Dist., 2015)	3	In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction, the complaint must first be examined to determine whether it alleges a basis for jurisdiction under long-arm statute; a plaintiff may either track the language of statute without pleading supporting facts, or the plaintiff may allege specific facts that demonstrate that the defendant's actions fit within one or more subsections of statute. West's F.S.A. S 48.193.	In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction, the complaint must first be examined to determine whether it alleges a basis for jurisdiction under section 48.193, Florida Statutes (2009). See Hilltopper Holding Corp. v. Estate of Cutchin ex rel. Engle, 955 So.2d 598, 601 (Fla. 2d DCA 2007). The plaintiff may *517 either track the language of section 48.193 without pleading supporting facts, or the plaintiff may allege "specific facts that demonstrate that the defendant's actions fit within one or more subsections of section 48.193."	"In ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction, must the complaint first be examined to determine whether it alleges a basis for jurisdiction under long-arm statute?"
3039	Krinit v. Idaho Department of Fish and Game, 398 P.3d 158, 163 (2017)	14	The decision of whether to impose sanctions for violating a scheduling order is within a district court's discretion and an appellate court will not overturn such a decision absent a manifest abuse of that discretion. Idaho R. Civ. P. 16(i), 37(b)(2)(B) (2015).	The decision of whether to impose sanctions for violating a scheduling order "is within the district court's discretion ... and we will not overturn such a decision absent a manifest abuse of that discretion."	Is the decision of whether to impose sanctions for violating a scheduling order within a district court's discretion and such a decision will not be overturned absent a manifest abuse of discretion?
3040	Bobick v. Community & Southern Bank, 743 S.E.2d 518, 525, 321 Ga.App. 855, 860 (Ga.App., 2013)	6	A motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction can allege either a facial challenge, in which the court accepts as true the allegations on the face of the complaint or counterclaim, or a factual challenge, which requires consideration of evidence beyond the face of the complaint or counterclaim.	A motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction under OCGA 9-11-12(b)(1) "can allege either a facial challenge, in which the court accepts as true the allegations on the face of the complaint [or counterclaim], or a factual challenge, which requires consideration of evidence beyond the face of the complaint [or counterclaim]."	Can a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction allege a facial challenge?
3043	In re Peoples, 250 S.E.2d 890, 912, 296 N.C. 109, 148 (N.C., 1978)	13	Unlike question of jurisdiction, issue of mootness is not determined merely by examining facts in existence at commencement of action, for if issues before court or administrative body become moot at any time during course of proceedings, usual response should be to dismiss the action.	Unlike the question of jurisdiction, the issue of mootness is not determined solely by examining facts in existence at the commencement of the action. If the issues before a court or administrative body become moot at any time during the course of the proceedings, the usual response should be to dismiss the action.	Should an action be dismissed if the issues before a court become moot at any time during the course of the proceedings?

3044	Cnty. of Shelby v. McWherter, 936 S.W.2d 923, 931 (Tenn.Ct.App., 1996)	6	Moot case is one which has lost its character as present, live controversy; case will generally be considered moot when prevailing party will be provided no meaningful relief from judgment in its favor, and, to avoid being dismissed as moot, cases or issues must be justiciable not only when case is first filed but must remain justiciable throughout entire course of litigation, including appeal.	A moot case is one which has lost its character as a present, live controversy. McIntyre v. Traugher, 884 S.W.2d 134, 137 (Tenn.App.1994). A case will generally be considered moot when the prevailing party will be provided no meaningful relief from a judgment in its favor. Id. To avoid being dismissed as moot, cases or issues must be justiciable not only when a case is first filed but must remain justiciable throughout the entire course of the litigation, including the appeal.	Should cases or issues must be justiciable not only when a case is first filed but must remain justiciable throughout the entire course of the litigation in order to avoid being dismissed as moot ?
3045	Chacha v. Transport USA, Inc., 78 So.3d 727, 730 (Fla.App. 4 Dist., 2012)	1	A trial court has the inherent authority to dismiss a plaintiff's entire case when there is clear and convincing evidence that the plaintiff has committed a fraud on the court which permeates the entire proceedings.	A trial court has the inherent authority to dismiss a plaintiff's entire case when there is clear and convincing evidence that the plaintiff has committed "a fraud on the court which permeates the entire proceedings."	Does a trial court have the inherent authority to dismiss a plaintiff's entire case when there is clear and convincing evidence that the plaintiff has committed a fraud on the court which permeates the entire proceedings?
3046	Hechtman v. Savitsky, 62 Conn. App. 654, 657 (2001)	1	Mootness implicates subject matter jurisdiction, which imposes a duty on a court to dismiss a case if a court can no longer grant practical relief to the parties.	Mootness implicates subject matter jurisdiction, which imposes a duty on the court to dismiss a case if the court can no longer grant practical relief to the parties.	"Does mootness implicate subject matter jurisdiction, which imposes a duty on a court to dismiss a case if a court can no longer grant practical relief to the parties?"
3047	Adkins v. Labor Ready, Inc., 303 F.3d 496, 500-01 (C.A.4 (W.Va.), 2002)	4	Litigant can compel arbitration under the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) if he can demonstrate (1) the existence of a dispute between the parties, (2) a written agreement that includes an arbitration provision which purports to cover the dispute, (3) the relationship of the transaction, which is evidenced by the agreement, to interstate or foreign commerce, and (4) the failure, neglect or refusal of the defendant to arbitrate the dispute. 9 U.S.C.A. S 1 et seq.	In the Fourth Circuit, a litigant can compel arbitration under the FAA if he can demonstrate "(1) the existence of a dispute between the parties, (2) a written agreement that includes an arbitration *501 provision which purports to cover the dispute, (3) the relationship of the transaction, which is evidenced by the agreement, to interstate or foreign commerce, and (4) the failure, neglect or refusal of the defendant to arbitrate the dispute."	Can litigants compel arbitration under the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA)?
3049	Jancauskas v. Tow Motor Corp., 126 Ill. App. 2d 289, 292, 261 N.E.2d 753, 755 (Ill. App. Ct. 1970)	3	Purpose of sanctions of Supreme Court Rule for failure of party to appear for pretrial conference is to coerce corporation rather than to dispose of litigation as a form of punishment. S.H.A. ch. 110, S 59; Supreme Court Rules, rule 219(c), S.H.A. ch. 110A, S 219(c).	The purpose of the sanctions of Supreme Court Rule 219(c) (Ill.Rev.Stat.1967, ch. 110A, sec. 219(c)) is to coerce this cooperation rather than to dispose of litigation as a form of punishment.	Is the purpose of sanctions of the Supreme Court Rule for failure of a party to appear for a pretrial conference is to coerce a corporation rather than to dispose of litigation as a form of punishment?

3050	Salifu v. Ward, 1998 WL 928427, at *2 (Mass.App.Div.,1998)	2	A defect in a summons served upon a defendant does not warrant dismissal for insufficiency of service of process where the defendant receives notice of the lawsuit and is not deprived of an opportunity to defend. M.G.L.A. c. 223, S 84; M.G.L.A. c. 231, S 51; Mass.R.Civ.P. 4(g).	A defect in a summons served upon a defendant does not warrant dismissal for insufficiency of service of process where the defendant receives notice of the lawsuit and is not deprived of an opportunity to defend.	Does a defect in a summons served upon a defendant warrant dismissal for insufficiency of service of process where the defendant receives notice of the lawsuit and is not deprived of an opportunity to defend?
3051	Wheeler v. Hajianpour, 688 So. 2d 423, 424 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1997)	1	Dismissal of action with prejudice as sanction for failing to comply with court order has generally been frowned upon by courts, except in most egregious circumstances of intentional defiance and contumacious disregard of court's authority.	Dismissal of a litigant's action with prejudice as a sanction for failing to comply with a court order has generally been frowned upon by the courts, except in the most egregious circumstances of intentional defiance and contumacious disregard of the court's authority (a circumstance not present in the instant case).	Has dismissal of action with prejudice as a sanction for failing to comply with a court order generally been frowned upon by courts?
3052	Bejda v. SGL Industries, Inc., 392 N.E.2d 38, 41, 29 Ill.Dec. 481, 484, 73 Ill.App.3d 484, 487 (Ill.App. 1 Dist., 1979)	3	Trial court possesses inherent power to dismiss cause for failure of party to take some step as ordered where no sufficient excuse is provided. S.H.A. ch. 110, S 37, Supreme Court Rules, rules 201-219, S.H.A. ch. 110A, SS 201-219.	There is no doubt, however, that a trial court does possess the inherent power to dismiss a cause for failure of a party to take some step as ordered where no sufficient excuse is provided.	Does a trial court possess an inherent power to dismiss cause for failure of a party to take some step as ordered where no sufficient excuse is provided?
3054	Causey v. Caterpillar Machinery Corp., 822 So.2d 188, 190-91, 2002-0746 La.App. 4 Cir. 6/26/02, 3 (La.App. 4 Cir.,2002)	3	Only two categories of causes outside the record satisfy the jurisprudential exceptions to the abandonment rule: (1) a plaintiff-oriented exception, based on contra non valentem, that applies when failure to prosecute is caused by circumstances beyond the plaintiff's control; and (2) a defense-oriented exception, based on acknowledgment, that applies when the defendant waives his right to assert abandonment by taking actions inconsistent with an intent to treat the case as abandoned. LSA-C.C.P. art. 561.	The only other categories of causes outside the record that satisfy the jurisprudential exceptions to the abandonment rule are: (1) a plaintiff-oriented exception, based upon contra non valentem, that applies when failure to prosecute is caused by circumstances beyond the plaintiff's control; and (2) a defense-oriented exception based upon acknowledgement that applies when the defendant waives his right to assert abandonment by taking actions inconsistent with intent to treat the case as abandoned.	"Does a party take a ""step"" in the prosecution or defense of an action when he takes a deposition with or without formal notice?"
3058	Geico Fin. Serv. v. VRR, 69 Ohio App. 3d 556, 558 (1990)	4	Where party fails to appear at pretrial conference, such party must receive notice that action will be dismissed sua sponte by court, and if he does not receive such notice, judgment entered against him may be vacated. Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 41(B)(1), 60(B)(1).	Where a party fails to appear at a pretrial conference, such party must receive notice that the action will be dismissed sua sponte by the court, and if he does not receive such notice, the judgment entered against him may be vacated pursuant to Civ.R. 60(B)(1).	"Where a party fails to appear at a pretrial conference, must such party receive notice that the action will be dismissed sua sponte by court?"

3061	Martin v. Brooks, 270 A.D.2d 538, 538–39, 703 N.Y.S.2d 823, 825 (2000)	2	Fundamentally, where a party disobeys a court order and by his or her conduct frustrates the statutory disclosure scheme, dismissal of the complaint is within the broad discretion of the trial court.	Fundamentally, “[w]here a party in these circumstances disobeys a court order and by his [or her] conduct frustrates the disclosure scheme provided by the CPLR, dismissal of the complaint is within the broad discretion of the trial court” (Zletz v. Wetanson, 67 N.Y.2d 711, 713, 499 N.Y.S.2d 933, 490 N.E.2d 852; see, Kihl v. Pfeffer, 94 N.Y.2d 118, 700 N.Y.S.2d 87, 722 N.E.2d 55; Reynolds Sec. v. Underwriters Bank & Trust Co., 44 N.Y.2d 568, 571–572, 406 N.Y.S.2d 743, 378 N.E.2d 106).	"Where a party disobeys a court order and by his or her conduct frustrates the statutory disclosure scheme, is dismissal of the complaint within the broad discretion of the trial court?"
3064	Kelly v. Kelly, 2005 WL 1084636	2	A dismissal for failure to appear is a harsh remedy and the court must also consider a broad range of less severe alternatives prior to deciding on dismissal. LSA-C.C.P. art. 1672(A)(1).	However, a dismissal for failure to appear is a harsh remedy and the court must also consider a broad range of less severe alternatives prior to deciding on dismissal.	Is a dismissal for failure to appear a harsh remedy and should court consider a broad range of less severe alternatives prior to deciding on dismissal?
3066	Kirby v. BancorpSouth Bank, 211 So.3d 704, 709 (Miss.App., 2016)	7	When analyzing whether dismissal for failure to prosecute is appropriate, the court looks for the following factors: (1) a record of dilatory or contumacious conduct by the plaintiff; and (2) a finding that lesser sanctions would not serve the interests of justice. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	When analyzing whether a Rule 41(b) dismissal is appropriate, this Court looks for the following factors: "(1) a record of dilatory or contumacious conduct by the plaintiff; and (2) a finding that lesser sanctions would not serve the interests of justice."	What factors should the court look when analyzing whether dismissal for failure to prosecute is appropriate?
3067	Guttilla v. Peppino's Food, Inc., 125 A.D.3d 604, 605, 3 N.Y.S.3d 108, 109 (2015)	2	A court may enter default and dismiss an action when a plaintiff is unprepared to proceed to trial at the call of the calendar; in order to be relieved of the default, a plaintiff must demonstrate both a reasonable excuse for the default and a potentially meritorious cause of action. N.Y.Ct.Rules, § 202.27.	Pursuant to 22 NYCRR 202.27, a court may dismiss an action when a plaintiff is unprepared to proceed to trial at the call of the calendar (see Aydiner v. Grosfillex, Inc., 111 A.D.3d 589, 589, 975 N.Y.S.2d 80; Vera v. Soohoo, 99 A.D.3d 990, 992, 953 N.Y.S.2d 615). In order to be relieved of the default, a plaintiff must demonstrate both a reasonable excuse for the default and a potentially meritorious cause of action (see id. at 992, 953 N.Y.S.2d 615; Frey v. Chiou, 94 A.D.3d 810, 811, 941 N.Y.S.2d 522; Felsen v. Stop & Shop Supermarket Co., LLC, 83 A.D.3d 656, 656, 919 N.Y.S.2d 883).	Can a court dismiss an action when a plaintiff is unprepared to proceed to trial at the call of the calendar?

3068	Ward v. Levin, 161 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1033, 208 Cal. Rptr. 312, 316 (Ct. App. 1984)	5	Where a party seeks a trial de novo after arbitration, trial court should give matter priority and sign at the earliest possible trial date; time between date arbitration award is filed with court and date set for new trial is to be excluded from calculation of five-year limitation period. West's Ann.Cal.C.C.P. S 583(b).	Where [a party] seeks a trial de novo after arbitration, the trial court should give the matter priority and assign it the earliest possible trial date. The time between the date the arbitration award is filed with the court and the date set for the new trial is to be excluded from calculation of the five-year period of section 583(b).	"Where a party seeks a trial de novo after arbitration, should a trial court give a matter priority and sign at the earliest possible trial date?"
3069	United States v. Pompey, 445 F.2d 1313, 1317 (C.A.3 (Pa.), 1971)	1	In order to qualify for a "ministerial exemption," registrant must show a regularity of religious preaching and teaching, the ministry must be his main and primary calling, that is his vocation rather than avocation, and his standing in his congregation must be recognized as that of a minister or leader of a group of lesser members. Military Selective Service Act of 1967, SS 6(g), 16(g) (1-3), 50 U.S.C.A. App. SS 456(g), 466(g) (1-3).	In sum, in order to qualify for a ministerial exemption, the registrant must satisfy the following tripartite test: (1) he must show a regularity of religious preaching and teaching; (2) the ministry must be his main and primary calling, his vocation rather than avocation; and (3) his standing in the congregation must be recognized as that of a minister or leader of a group of lesser members.	How does a registrant qualify for a ministerial exemption?
3072	Kohn's Bakery, Inc. v. Terracciano, 147 N.J.Super. 582, 584-85 (N.J.Super.A.D. 1977)	4	Trial judge has the right, as an exercise of discretion, to impose sanctions for violation of the rules or failure to obey the orders of the court; such sanctions may include dismissal of the action. R. 1:2-4; R. 4:37-2(a).	There is no doubt at all of the right of a trial judge, as an exercise of discretion, to impose sanctions for violation *585 of the rules or failure to obey the orders of the court, and those sanctions may include dismissal of the action. R. 4:37-2(a), and See Elmora S.	"Does a trial judge have the right, as an exercise of discretion, to impose sanctions for a violation of the rules or failure to obey the orders of the court?"
3073	Thompson v. Kentucky Power Co., 551 S.W.2d 815, 816 (Ky. Ct. App. 1977)	1	Application of rule that a defendant may move for dismissal of an action or of any claim against him for failure of plaintiff to prosecute or to comply with rules or any order of court is a matter that is within discretion of court. CR 41.02.	"For failure of the plaintiff to prosecute or to comply with these rules or any order of the court, a defendant may move for dismissal of an action or of any claim against him." It appears that this is a matter for the discretion of the Court.	Is application of rule that a defendant can move for dismissal of an action or of any claim against him for failure of plaintiff to prosecute or to comply with rules or any order of court a matter that is within discretion of court?
3076	American Truck Driving Academy, Inc. v. Smith, 998 So.2d 1067, 1069 (Ala.Civ.App.,2008)	3	A dismissal with prejudice for lack of prosecution is proper only where there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct by the plaintiff or a serious showing of willful default.	A trial court may dismiss an action, with prejudice, for lack of prosecution only when there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct by the plaintiff or a serious showing of willful default.	"Is a dismissal with prejudice for lack of prosecution, proper where there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct by the plaintiff or a serious showing of willful default?"

3077	Bagalay v. Lahaina Restoration Foundation, 588 P.2d 416, 422, 60 Haw. 125, 132 (Hawaii, 1978)	2	In general, dismissal of complaint is such severe sanction that it is to be used only in extreme circumstances where there is clear record of delay or contumacious conduct and where lesser sanctions would not serve best interests of justice.	In general, the federal appellate courts have said that a dismissal of a complaint is such a severe sanction that it is to be used only in extreme circumstances when there is a clear record of delay or contumacious conduct and where lesser sanctions would not serve the best interests of justice.	Is dismissal of a complaint a severe sanction to be used in extreme circumstances and where lesser sanctions would not serve the interests of justice?
3078	Clark v. Yarbrough, 900 S.W.2d 406, 408 (Tex.App. Texarkana,1995)	2	Court may dismiss case for want of prosecution if party seeking relief fails to appear for any hearing or trial of which party has notice, for noncompliance with time standards, or for lack of due diligence and each different kind of dismissal is cumulative and independent. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 165a, 165a, subds. 1, 2, 4.	A court may dismiss a case for want of prosecution if the party seeking relief fails to appear for any hearing or trial of which the party had notice, Rule 165a(1); for noncompliance with time standards, Rule 165a(2); or for lack of due diligence, Rule 165a(4). The different kinds of dismissals are cumulative and independent.	Will court dismiss a case for want of prosecution for failure of a party to comply with the time standards set by the Court?
3080	Wells Fargo Bank v. Country Place Condo. Ass'n, 304 Mich. App. 582, 589, 848 N.W.2d 425, 430 (2014)	3	A motion for summary disposition for alleged failure to state a valid defense against a claim asserted tests the sufficiency of the defendant's pleadings, and is appropriately granted where the defendant has failed to state a valid defense to a claim. MCR 2.116(C)(9).	A motion for summary disposition pursuant to MCR 2.116(C)(9) tests the sufficiency of the defendant's pleadings, and is appropriately granted where the defendant has failed to state a valid defense to a claim.	Does a motion for summary disposition for alleged failure to state a valid defense against a claim asserted test the sufficiency of the defendant's pleadings?
3083	Hanlin v. Saugatuck Twp., 299 Mich. App. 233, 239 (Mich. App. 2013)	4	A motion for summary disposition for failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted tests the legal sufficiency of the complaint on the allegations of the pleadings alone. MCR 2.116(C)(8).	Summary disposition is proper under MCR 2.116(C)(8) if "[t]he opposing party has failed to state a claim on which relief can be granted." A motion under MCR 2.116(C)(8) tests the legal sufficiency of the complaint on the allegations of the pleadings alone.	Does a motion for summary disposition on the basis of failure to state a claim test the legal sufficiency of the complaint on the basis of the pleadings alone to determine if the opposing party has stated a claim for which relief can be granted?
3084	Banks v. Bordeaux Long Term Care, 465 S.W.3d 141, 147 (Tenn.Ct.App., 2014)	2	A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted challenges only the legal sufficiency of the complaint, not the strength of the plaintiff's proof or evidence. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12.02(6).	Montgomery Cnty.: A motion to dismiss based upon Tennessee Rule of Civil Procedure 12.02(6) requires a court to determine if the pleadings state a claim upon which relief may be granted. Tenn. R. Civ. P. 12.02(6); Cullum v. McCool, 432 S.W.3d 829, 832 (Tenn.2013). A Rule 12.02(6) motion challenges "only the legal sufficiency of the complaint, not the strength of the plaintiff's proof or evidence."	Can a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief be granted challenge only the legal sufficiency of the complaint?

3087	C.L. v. State Dep't of Soc. & Health Servs., 2017 WL 3587372	5	To prove intimidation, the State must establish that the legal act occurred prior to the threat and that the defendant intended to place the victim in fear of retaliation for that act. West's A.I.C. 35-45-2-1.	To prove intimidation, the State must establish that the legal act occurred prior to the threat and that the defendant intended to place the victim in fear of retaliation for that act.	"As an evidence of the intimidation, should the state establish that the legal act occurred prior to the threat and that the defendant intended to place the victim in fear of retaliation for that act?"
3088	Anderson v. Armentano, 139 A.D.3d 769, 770, 33 N.Y.S.3d 294, 296 (2016)	1	On a pre-answer motion to dismiss, the pleading is to be afforded a liberal construction and the plaintiff's allegations are accepted as true and accorded the benefit of every possible favorable inference. McKinney's CPLR 3211.	"On a pre-answer motion to dismiss pursuant to CPLR 3211, the pleading is to be afforded a liberal construction and the plaintiff's allegations are accepted as true and accorded the benefit of every possible favorable inference" (Granada Condominium III Assn. v. Palomino, 78 A.D.3d 996, 996, 913 N.Y.S.2d 668; see Leon v. Martinez, 84 N.Y.2d 83, 87, 614 N.Y.S.2d 972, 638 N.E.2d 511).	"On a pre-answer motion to dismiss, is the pleading to be afforded a liberal construction and the plaintiffs allegations are accepted as true?"
3089	Lindsay v. Pasternack Tilker Ziegler Walsh Stanton & Romano LLP, 129 A.D.3d 790, 792, 12 N.Y.S.3d 124, 126 (2015)	6	On a pre-answer motion to dismiss, the pleading is to be afforded a liberal construction and the plaintiff's allegations are accepted as true and accorded the benefit of every possible favorable inference. McKinney's CPLR 3211.	"On a pre-answer motion to dismiss pursuant to CPLR 3211, the pleading is to be afforded a liberal construction and the plaintiff's allegations are accepted as true and accorded the benefit of every possible favorable inference" (Barker v. Amorini, 121 A.D.3d 823, 824, 995 N.Y.S.2d 89 [internal quotation marks and citation omitted]).	"On a pre-answer motion to dismiss, is the pleading to be afforded a liberal construction and the plaintiffs allegations are accepted as true?"
3090	Green v. Trinity Intern. University, 344 Ill. App. 3d 1079, 1085 (2003)	4	A motion to dismiss because claim asserted against defendant is barred by other affirmative matter avoiding the legal effect of or defeating the claim is properly used to raise affirmative matters that negate the claim, not to challenge the essential allegations of the plaintiff's cause of action. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(9).	A motion to dismiss pursuant to section 2-619(a)(9), on the other hand, raises an "affirmative matter avoiding the legal effect of or defeating the claim" (735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(9) (West 2002)). Such a motion "is properly used to raise affirmative matters that negate the claim, not to challenge the essential allegations of the plaintiff's cause of action."	Can a motion to dismiss be properly used to raise affirmative matters that negate the claim?
3092	Locklear v. Lanuti, 176 N.C.App. 380, 384 (N.C.App.,2006)	3	If the complaint discloses an unconditional affirmative defense which defeats the claim asserted, or pleads facts which deny the right to any relief on the alleged claim, it will be dismissed. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(6), West's N.C.G.S.A. S 1A-1.	"If the complaint discloses an unconditional affirmative defense which defeats the claim asserted or pleads facts which deny the right to any relief on the alleged claim it will be dismissed."	"If a complaint discloses an unconditional affirmative defense which defeats the claim asserted or pleads facts which deny the right to any relief on the alleged claim, will it be dismissed?"

3094	Khan v. Parsons Global Services, Ltd., 521 F.3d 421, 428 (C.A.D.C.,2008)	8	Irrespective of other indicators of involvement in litigation, filing a motion for summary judgment based on matters outside of the pleadings is inconsistent with preserving the right to compel arbitration.	We hold that, irrespective of other indicators of involvement in litigation, filing a motion for summary judgment based on matters outside of the pleadings is inconsistent with preserving the right to compel arbitration;	Is filing a motion for summary judgment based on matters outside of the pleadings inconsistent with preserving the right to compel arbitration?
3095	Lewallen v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 487 F.3d 1085, 1092 (C.A.8 (Mo.), 2007)	9	Contractual arbitration provision gives parties the choice of alternative, nonjudicial forum to resolve their disputes, but it does not go so far as to allow or encourage parties to proceed, either simultaneously or sequentially, in multiple forums.	An arbitration provision gives parties "the choice of an alternative, nonjudicial forum" to resolve their disputes, but it does not go so far as to "allow or encourage the parties to proceed, either simultaneously or sequentially, in multiple forums."	Do contractual arbitration provisions allow or encourage parties to proceed either simultaneously or sequentially in multiple forums?
3096	Kamhi v. EmblemHealth, Inc., 37 Misc. 3d 171, 176, 944 N.Y.S.2d 821, 825–26 (Sup. Ct. 2012)	2	Although the facts pleaded are presumed to be true and accorded every favorable inference on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action, bare legal conclusions and factual claims which are flatly contradicted by the evidence are not presumed to be true on such a motion. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	Although "the facts pleaded are presumed to be true and accorded every favorable inference ..., bare legal conclusions and factual claims which are flatly contradicted by the evidence are not presumed to be true on such a motion" (Palazzolo v. Herrick, Feinstein, LLP, 298 A.D.2d 372, 372, 751 N.Y.S.2d 401 [2d Dept. 2002] [internal citations omitted]).	Are bare legal conclusions and factual claims which are flatly contradicted by the evidence not presumed to be true on a motion to dismiss?
3097	Best Cartage, Inc. v. Stonewall Packaging, LLC, 727 S.E.2d 291, 296, 219 N.C.App. 429, 433 (N.C.App., 2012)	3	The trial court considering a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim should construe the complaint liberally and only grant the motion if it appears certain that plaintiffs could prove no set of facts which would entitle them to relief under some legal theory. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(6), West's N.C.G.S.A. S 1A-1.	Furthermore, the trial court "should construe the complaint liberally and only grant the motion if it appears certain that plaintiffs could prove no set of facts which would entitle them to relief under some legal theory."	Should the trial court considering a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim construe the complaint liberally?
3098	All American Finance Co. v. Pugh Shows, Inc., 30 Ohio St.3d 130, 132, fn1 (Ohio, 1987)	1	Five criteria must be satisfied to establish holder in due course status, allowing holder to take instrument free from claims and defenses: one must be holder, of negotiable instrument, taken for value, in good faith, and without notice that it is overdue or has been dishonored or of any defense against or claim to it on part of any person. R.C. S 1303.31.	Five criteria must be satisfied to establish holder in due course status: (1) one must be a holder, (2) of a negotiable instrument, (3) taken for value, (4) in good faith, and (5) without notice that it is overdue or has been dishonored or of any defense against or claim to it on the part of any person.	How can a person establish the holder in due course status?
3099	Barnes v. Hodge, 118 A.D.3d 633, 633, 989 N.Y.S.2d 467, 468 (2014)	3	Although on a motion to dismiss plaintiffs' allegations are presumed to be true and accorded every favorable inference, conclusory allegations, claims consisting of bare legal conclusions with no factual specificity, are insufficient to survive a motion to dismiss.	"Although on a motion to dismiss plaintiffs' allegations are presumed to be true and accorded every favorable inference, conclusory allegations—claims consisting of bare legal conclusions with no factual specificity—are insufficient to survive a motion to dismiss" (Godfrey v. Spano, 13 N.Y.3d 358, 373, 892 N.Y.S.2d 272, 920 N.E.2d 328 [2009]).	Are claims consisting of bare legal conclusions with no factual specificity insufficient to survive a motion to dismiss?

3100	Dorry v. Garden, 98 A.3d 55, 60, 313 Conn. 516, 523–24 (Conn., 2014)	8	When a jurisdictional determination is dependent on the resolution of a critical factual dispute, it cannot be decided on a motion to dismiss in the absence of an evidentiary hearing to establish jurisdictional facts; likewise, if the question of jurisdiction is intertwined with the merits of the case, a court cannot resolve the jurisdictional question without a hearing to evaluate those merits. Practice Book 1998, S 10-31.	"Finally, [when] a jurisdictional determination is dependent on the resolution of a critical factual dispute, it cannot be decided on a motion to dismiss in the absence of an evidentiary hearing to establish jurisdictional facts.... Likewise, if the question of jurisdiction is intertwined with the merits of the case, a court cannot resolve the jurisdictional question without a hearing to evaluate those merits....	"When a jurisdictional determination is dependent on the resolution of a critical factual dispute, can it be decided on a motion to dismiss in the absence of an evidentiary hearing to establish jurisdictional facts?"
3101	State ex rel. Com'r of Transp. v. Cherry Hill Mitsubishi, Inc., 439 N.J.Super. 462, 467 (2015)	1	Motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim require the complaint be searched in depth and with liberality to determine if there is any cause of action suggested by the facts; the inquiry is limited to examining the legal sufficiency of the facts alleged on the face of the complaint.	Motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim require the complaint be searched in depth and with liberality to determine if there is any "cause of action [] 'suggested' by the facts." Printing-Mart Morristown v. Sharp Elecs. Corp., 116 N.J. 739, 746, 563 A.2d 31 (1989). The inquiry is limited to "examining the legal sufficiency of the facts alleged on the face of the complaint."	Do motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim require the complaint be searched in depth and with liberality to determine if there is any cause of action suggested by the facts?
3102	Gerstner v. Washington Water Power Co., 122 Idaho 673, 677 (1992)	1	In deciding whether to dismiss case for failure to prosecute, district court must consider length of delay, justification, if any, for delay, and extent of any resultant prejudice. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	When deciding whether to dismiss a case the district court must consider the length of delay caused by the failure to prosecute, the justification, if any, for such delay, and the extent of any resultant prejudice.	"Should court consider length of delay, justification, if any, for delay, and extent of any resultant prejudice in deciding whether to dismiss case for failure to prosecute?"
3103	Maggio, Inc. v. United Farm Workers, 227 Cal. App. 3d 847, 883, 278 Cal. Rptr. 250, 273 (Ct. App. 1991), modified (Feb. 19, 1991)	32	In ruling on motion to dismiss on basis that plaintiff has not brought case to trial within two years, trial court should be guided by policy favoring trial on merits over dismissal for failure to prosecute with reasonable diligence. Cal.Rules of Court, Rule 373.	In ruling on a motion to dismiss because the plaintiff has not brought the case to trial within two years, the trial court should be guided by the policy favoring trial on the merits over a dismissal for failure to prosecute with reasonable diligence.	Should courts be guided by policy favoring trial on merits over dismissal for failure to prosecute with reasonable diligence?
3104	Middleton v. Middleton, 526 So. 2d 859, 860–61 (La. Ct. App. 1988)	2	Whether step or steps taken by defendant after accrual of five-year abandonment of action period be termed as "affirmative," "definite," or "formal," it is qualitative effect of step(s) taken by defendant which must be considered to determine whether defendant's conduct waived abandonment. LSA-C.C.P. art. 561.	Whether the step or steps taken by a defendant after the five-year period be *861 termed as "affirmative" (Southport Petroleum, supra) or as "definite" (Sandfield Oil & Gas Co., supra) or "formal" (Traigle, supra), it is the qualitative effect of the step(s) taken by a defendant which must be considered in a case to case approach to determine whether the defendant has waived the CCP Art. 561 abandonment.	Is it a qualitative effect of step taken by defendant which must be considered to determine whether defendant waived abandonment?

3105	Aiello v. Ed Saxe Real Estate, Inc., 508 Pa. 553, 562 (Pa.,1985)	2	Principal is liable to innocent third parties for frauds, deceits, concealments, misrepresentations, torts, negligences and other malfeasances or misfeasances of his agent committed in the course of his employment, even if principal did not authorize, justify or participate in, or indeed know of, such misconduct, or even if he forbade the acts or disapproved of them. 63 P.S. SS 455.522, 455.601, 455.603.	Today we reaffirm the longstanding and widely held rule of law that a principal is liable to innocent third parties for the frauds, deceits, concealments, misrepresentations, torts, negligences and other malfeasances or misfeasances of his agent committed in the course of his employment, 5 although the principal did not authorize, justify or participate in, or indeed know of, such misconduct, or even if he forbade the acts or disapproved of them.	Is principal liable for agents acts in scope of his employment even though principal did not authorize it?
3106	Sabel v. Mead Johnson & Co., 737 F.Supp. 135, 138 (D.Mass.,1990)	3	Agency relationship has three essential characteristics: power of agent to alter legal relationships between principal and third parties and principal and himself, existence of fiduciary relationship toward principal with respect to matters within scope of agency, and right of principal to control agent's conduct with respect to matters within scope of agency.	An agency relationship has three essential characteristics: 1) the power of the agent to alter the legal relationships between the principal and third parties and the principal and himself; 2) the existence of a fiduciary relationship toward the principal with respect to matters within the scope of the agency; and 3) the right of the principal to control the agent's conduct with respect to matters within the scope of the agency.	"Is the right of the principal to control the agent's conduct, an essential characteristic of agency?"
3107	Winter v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 23, 129 S. Ct. 365, 376, 172 L. Ed. 2d 249 (2008)	3	When the Government conducts an activity, the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) itself does not mandate particular results; instead, NEPA imposes only procedural requirements to ensure that the agency, in reaching its decision, will have available, and will carefully consider, detailed information concerning significant environmental impacts. National Environmental Policy Act of 1969, S 2 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. S 4321 et seq.	When the Government conducts an activity, "NEPA itself does not mandate particular results." Robertson v. Methow Valley Citizens Council, 490 U.S. 332, 350, 109 S.Ct. 1835, 104 L.Ed.2d 351 (1989). Instead, NEPA imposes only procedural requirements to "ensur[e] that the agency, in reaching its decision, will have available, and will carefully consider, detailed information concerning significant environmental impacts."	Is National Environmental Policy Acts requirement procedural or substantial?
3108	Rodash v. AIB Mortg. Co., 16 F.3d 1142, 1144 (C.A.11 (Fla.),1994)	3	Congress intended Truth in Lending Act (TILA) to create system of private attorneys general to aid its enforcement; thus, to further its remedial purpose, Court of Appeals liberally construes language in favor of consumer. Truth in Lending Act, S 102 et seq., 15 U.S.C.A. S 1601 et seq.	Congress intended the statute to create a system of private attorneys general to aid its enforcement; thus, to further its remedial purpose, we liberally construe its language in favor of the consumer. McGowan v. King, Inc., 569 F.2d 845, 848 (5th Cir.1978). 1 Accord Smith v. Fidelity Consumer Discount Co., 898 F.2d 896, 898 (3rd Cir.1990).	Why did Congress intend to create a system of private attorneys generals under Truth in Lending Act (TILA)?

3109	David v. Neumann Univ., 187 F. Supp. 3d 554, 558 (E.D. Pa. 2016)	3	While Pennsylvania law allows a student to sue a private university for breach of contract, the allegations must relate to a specific and identifiable promise that the school failed to honor; as such, the student must point to specific undertakings in the contract that were not provided.	While Pennsylvania law allows a student to sue a private university for breach of contract, “the allegations must relate to a specific and identifiable promise that the school failed to honor.” Vurimindi v. Fuqua Sch. of Bus. , 435 Fed.Appx. 129, 133 (3d Cir.2011) (per curiam) (nonprecedential). As such, the student “must point to specific undertakings in the [contract] that were not provided.”	"If a student sues a private university for breach of contract, the allegation must relate to a specific and identifiable promise?"
3110	Goldberg v. Regents of Univ. of Cal., 248 Cal. App. 2d 867, 874, 57 Cal. Rptr. 463, 468 (Ct. App. 1967)	6	Regents of state university have general rule-making or policy-making power in regard to university and are with certain exceptions, fully empowered with respect to organization and government of university, including authority to maintain order and decorum on campus and enforcement of same by all appropriate means, including suspension or dismissal. West's Ann.Const. art. 9, S 9.	The Regents have the general rule-making or policy-making power in regard to the University (Estate of Royer, 123 Cal. 614, 56 P. 461, 44 L.R.A. 364),44 L.R.A. 364),and are (with exceptions not material here) fully empowered with respect to the organization and government of the University (Williams v. Wheeler, 23 Cal.App. 619, 138 P. 937; Wallace v. Regents, etc., 75 Cal.App. 274, 242 P. 892), including the authority to maintain order and decorum on the campus and the enforcement of the same by all appropriate means, including suspension or dismissal from the University.	Do the Regents have general rule-making power in regard to the university?
3111	Wilson v. Holland, 96 Ga. App. 679, 680, 101 S.E.2d 97, 99 (1957)	4	Where plaintiff alleges that he thought he saw a nonexistent object or failed to properly identify existing object because of described conditions, trial court must judge whether such allegations contradict primary physical laws of nature, and, if they do, such allegations must be disregarded.	Where the plaintiff alleges that he thought he saw a nonexistent object or failed to properly identify an existing object because of certain described conditions, the court must judge whether such allegations contradict primary physical laws of nature, and, if they do, must disregard them.	Should the court disregard allegations which contradict the primary physical laws of nature?
3112	Lang v. Enervest Energy Institutional Fund XI A LP, 68 N.E.3d 179, 186–87 (Ohio App. 4 Dist., 2016)	7	When a trial court considers a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted, it must review only the complaint, accepting all factual allegations contained in the complaint as true and making all reasonable inferences in favor of the nonmoving party. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(B)(6).	When a trial court considers a Civ.R. 12(B)(6) motion to dismiss, it must review only the complaint, accepting all factual allegations contained in the complaint as true and making all reasonable inferences in favor of the nonmoving party.	"When a court considers a motion to dismiss for failure under Rule 12(b)(6), should it accept as true all factual allegations in the complaint?"

3113	Otte v. Edwards, 370 S.W.3d 898, 900 (Mo.App. E.D., 2012)	2	When reviewing a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, the Court of Appeals applies the following standard of review: A motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action is solely a test of the adequacy of the plaintiff's petition; it assumes that all of plaintiff's averments are true, and liberally grants to plaintiff all reasonable inferences therefrom; and no attempt is made to weigh any facts alleged as to whether they are credible or persuasive, instead, the petition is reviewed in an almost academic manner, to determine if the facts alleged meet the elements of a recognized cause of action, or of a cause that might be adopted in that case.	When reviewing a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, we apply the following standard of review: A motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action is solely a test of the adequacy of the plaintiff's petition. It assumes that all of plaintiff's averments are true, and liberally grants to plaintiff all reasonable inferences therefrom. No attempt is made to weigh any facts alleged as to whether they are credible or persuasive. Instead, the petition is reviewed in an almost academic manner, to determine if the facts alleged meet the elements of a recognized cause of action, or of a cause that might be adopted in that case.	Is a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action solely a test of the adequacy of the plaintiff's petition?
3115	Walker v. Columbus Ins. Agency, 156 Ga. App. 199, 200, 274 S.E.2d 159, 160-61 (1980)	2	Under "three minute" rule, when case is sounded for trial, parties shall immediately announce ready or move for continuance, and if three minutes shall elapse before announcement or motion to continue, case will be dismissed. Code, SS 24-3341, 81A-141(b).	Under the "three minute" rule (Code Ann. s 24-3341), when a case is sounded for trial the parties shall immediately announce ready or move for continuance and if three minutes shall elapse "before the announcement or motion to continue, the plaintiff's case will be dismissed."	"Should parties immediately announce ready or move for continuance under ""three minute"" rule, when case is sounded for trial?"
3116	Horowitz v. People's Sav. Bank, 29 N.E.2d 770, 771, 307 Mass. 222, 224-25 (Mass. 1940)	4	A deed with full covenants of warranty "estops" grantor who has imperfect title or no title to realty conveyed, from setting up against grantee or those claiming under him, any later acquired title which inured to benefit of grantee and his successors in title, and persons claiming by descent or by grant under grantor after acquisition of later title, are likewise estopped.	It is the rule in this Commonwealth that a deed with full covenants of warranty estops a grantor who has an imperfect title or no title at all to the real estate conveyed, from setting up against the grantee or those claiming under him any later acquired title to the property and that such a later acquired *225 title inures to the benefit of the grantee and his successors in title. Persons claiming by descent or by grant under the grantor after the acquisition of later title are likewise estopped.'	Does a deed with full covenants of warranty estop a grantor who has an imperfect title?

3117	Charron v. State, 257 S.W.3d 147, 151 (Mo.App. W.D.,2008)	4	Generally, the decision to dismiss for lack for subject matter jurisdiction is a question of fact left to the sound discretion of the trial court, and it will not be reversed on appeal absent an abuse of that discretion; however, where the facts are uncontested, a question as to the subject matter jurisdiction of a court is purely a question of law, which is reviewed de novo.	Generally, the decision to dismiss for lack for subject-matter jurisdiction is a question of fact left to the sound discretion of the trial court, and it will not be reversed on appeal absent an abuse of that discretion. However, where, as here, the facts are uncontested, a question as to the subject-matter jurisdiction of a court is purely a question of law, which is reviewed de novo.	"Generally, is the decision to dismiss for lack for subject matter jurisdiction a question of fact left to the sound discretion of the trial court?"
3119	Geisler v. City Council of City of Cedar Falls, 769 N.W.2d 162, 165 (Iowa 2009)	3	A trial court cannot consider factual allegations contained in the motion to dismiss or the documents attached to the motion, and the trial court must ignore those facts, except those of which the trial court may take judicial notice.	A court cannot consider factual allegations contained in the motion or the documents attached to the motion. The court must ignore these facts, except those of which the court may take judicial notice.	"Can a trial court consider factual allegations contained in the motion to dismiss or the documents attached to the motion, except those of which the trial court can take judicial notice?"
3122	Harris v. Winn-Dixie Stores, Inc., 378 So.2d 90, 92 (Fla. App. 1979)	1	Purpose of rule permitting dismissal of action for failure to prosecute is to require prompt and efficient prosecution of case up to point of submission for disposition or determination by judges or jury and to prevent clogging of dockets of trial courts with litigation that has been, essentially, abandoned for stated period. 30 West's F.S.A. Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 1.420(e).	The two-fold purpose of Rule 1.420(e) is stated by this court in Strader v. Morrill, Fla. 1st DCA 1978, 360 So.2d 1137as follows: "(1) To require prompt and efficient prosecution of the case up to the point of submission for disposition or determination by the judge or the jury. (2) To prevent the clogging of dockets of the trial courts with litigation that has been, essentially, abandoned for the stated period."	What is the purpose of rule dealing with dismissals for failure to prosecute?
3123	Cadet-Duval v. Gursim Holding, Inc., 147 A.D.3d 718, 719, 45 N.Y.S.3d 585, 586 (2017)	2	In assessing a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action a court may freely consider affidavits submitted by the plaintiff to remedy any defects in the complaint. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a)(7).	" 'In assessing a motion under CPLR 3211(a)(7) ... a court may freely consider affidavits submitted by the plaintiff to remedy any defects in the complaint' " (Hampshire Props. v. BTA Bldg. & Developing, Inc., 122 A.D.3d at 573, 996 N.Y.S.2d 129, quoting Leon v. Martinez, 84 N.Y.2d 83, 88, 614 N.Y.S.2d 972, 638 N.E.2d 511).	"In assessing a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action, can a court freely consider affidavits submitted by the plaintiff to remedy any defects in the complaint?"
3124	Hinrichs v. Youssef, 214 A.D.2d 604, 604–05, 625 N.Y.S.2d 87, 88 (1995)	1	Affidavits received on motion to dismiss for failure to state cause of action which has not been converted to motion for summary judgment are not to be examined for purpose of determining whether there is evidentiary support of pleading.	Affidavits received on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action which has not been converted to a motion for summary judgment are not to be examined for the purpose of determining whether there is evidentiary support of the pleading (see, Rovello v. Orofino Realty Co., 40 N.Y.2d 633, 635, 389 N.Y.S.2d 314, 357 N.E.2d 970).	Are affidavits received on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a cause of action which has not been converted to a motion for summary judgment not to be examined?

3125	Pentland v. Commissioner of Correction, 169 A.3d 851, 853 (2017)	1	In ruling upon whether a complaint survives a motion to dismiss, a court must take the facts to be those alleged in the complaint, including those facts necessarily implied from the allegations, construing them in a manner most favorable to the pleader.	Except in other circumstances which are inapplicable here, "[i]n ruling upon whether a complaint survives a motion to dismiss, a court must take the facts to be those alleged in the complaint, including those facts necessarily implied from the allegations, construing them in a manner most favorable to the pleader.	"In ruling upon whether a complaint survives a motion to dismiss, should a court take the facts to be those alleged in the complaint?"
3126	Williams v. Kroger Food Co., 46 Mich. App. 514, 516, 208 N.W.2d 549, 551 (1973)	1	Where plaintiff and counsel fail to appear at a duly scheduled trial, trial court may in its discretion dismiss the suit and subsequently deny a motion for reinstatement.	Where plaintiff and counsel fail to appear at a duly scheduled trial, the trial court may in its discretion dismiss the suit and subsequently deny a motion for reinstatement.	Can court dismiss the suit and subsequently deny a motion for reinstatement where plaintiff and counsel fail to appear at a duly scheduled trial?
3129	United States v. Tracts 31a, Lots 31 & 32, Lafitte's Landing Phase Two Port Arthur, Jefferson Cty. Texas, 852 F.3d 385, 390 (C.A.5 (Tex.), 2017)	8	Under Texas law, each spouse has the power to convey his or her sole management community property without approval of the other spouse, even though both spouses have an undivided one-half interest in the property. Tex. Fam. Code Ann. S 3.102(a).	Conversely, Texas law provides that each spouse has the power to convey his or her sole management community property without approval of the other spouse, even though both spouses have an undivided one-half interest in the property.	"Does each spouse have the power to convey his or her sole management community property without approval of the other spouse, even though both spouses have an undivided one-half interest in the property?"
3130	Hiles v. Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts, 773 N.E.2d 929, 938, 437 Mass. 505, 516 (Mass.,2002)	13	Under factual challenge to subject matter jurisdiction by motion to dismiss, the plaintiff's jurisdictional averments in the complaint are entitled to no presumptive weight, and the court must address the merits of the jurisdictional claim by resolving the factual disputes between the parties. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 12(b)(1), 43A M.G.L.A.	Under this "factual challenge" to jurisdiction, "the plaintiff's jurisdictional averments [in the complaint] are entitled to no presumptive weight [and] the court must address the merits of the jurisdictional claim by resolving the factual disputes between the parties."	"Under factual challenge to subject matter jurisdiction by motion to dismiss, are the plaintiff's jurisdictional averments in the complaint entitled to no presumptive weight?"
3131	Billups v. Jade, Inc., 482 N.W.2d 269, 272, 240 Neb. 494, 498 (Neb.,1992)	6	In absence of showing of good cause, litigant's failure to prosecute civil action, resulting in noncompliance with Nebraska Supreme Court's Case Progression Standards for civil actions in district courts, is basis to dismiss action on account of lack of diligent prosecution.	Thus, in the absence of a showing of good cause, a litigant's failure to prosecute a civil action, resulting in noncompliance with the Nebraska Supreme Court's Case Progression Standards for civil actions in district courts, is a basis to dismiss an action on account of a lack of diligent prosecution.	What is the basis to dismiss action on account of lack of diligent prosecution?
3132	State ex rel. Nixon v. Summit Inv. Co., LLC, 186 S.W.3d 428, 433 (Mo.App. S.D.,2006)	8	A trial court has inherent power, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss a case for failure to prosecute with due diligence, and a dismissal on that ground will not be disturbed on appeal unless such discretion was abused.	We observe that "[a] trial court has inherent power, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss a case for failure to prosecute with due diligence, and a dismissal on that ground will not be disturbed on appeal unless such discretion was abused."	"Will action of trial court in dismissing case for failure to prosecute, be disturbed on appeal unless discretion of trial court was abused?"

3133	Koch v. Lavorne, 699 So.2d 164, 166 (Ala. Civ. App. 1997)	2	It falls within judicial discretion of trial court to dismiss action for want of prosecution when plaintiff fails to appear at trial of case, and trial court's determination will not be disturbed on appeal unless there is abuse of that discretion.	"It is well settled that it falls within the judicial discretion of the trial court to dismiss an action for want of prosecution when the plaintiff fails to appear at the trial of the case." Smith v. Savage, 655 So.2d 1022, 1024 (Ala.Civ.App.1995). "The trial court's determination will not be disturbed on appeal unless there is an abuse of that discretion."	"Will action of trial court in dismissing case for failure to prosecute, be disturbed on appeal unless discretion of trial court was abused?"
3134	State ex rel. Missouri Highway and Transp. Com'n v. Kersey, 663 S.W.2d 364, 365 (Mo.App. S.D. 1983)	1	Courts have inherent power, in exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss a case for failure to prosecute with due diligence, and action thereon will not be disturbed on appeal unless such discretion was abused.	Appellant recognizes the general rule that courts have the inherent power, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss a case for failure to prosecute with due diligence, and that the action thereon will not be disturbed on appeal unless such discretion was abused.	"Will action of trial court in dismissing case for failure to prosecute, be disturbed on appeal unless discretion of trial court was abused?"
3135	Samanie & Barnes v. Lawler, 619 So.2d 1166, 1169 (La.App. 1 Cir., 1993)	2	Judgment dismissing action shall be rendered upon application of any party when plaintiff fails to appear on day set for trial. LSA-C.C.P. art. 1672, subd. A.	LSA-C.C.P. Art. 1672 A provides that a judgment dismissing an action shall be rendered upon application of any party, when the plaintiff fails to appear on the day set for trial.	Should a judgment dismissing an action be rendered upon application of any party when the plaintiff fails to appear on day set for trial?
3136	Lacey v. Vill. of Palatine, 379 Ill. App. 3d 62, 69, 882 N.E.2d 1187, 1194 (2008), rev'd, 232 Ill. 2d 349, 904 N.E.2d 18 (2009)	10	The affirmative matter asserted by the defendant on a motion to dismiss based upon defects or defenses must be apparent on the face of the complaint; otherwise, the motion must be supported by affidavits or certain other evidentiary materials. S.H.A. 735 ILCS 5/2-619(a)(9).	"[T]he 'affirmative matter' asserted by the defendant must be apparent on the face of the complaint; otherwise, the motion must be supported by affidavits or certain other evidentiary materials."	Should the affirmative matter asserted by the defendant be apparent on the face of the complaint or supported by affidavits or certain other evidentiary materials?
3137	Finkelstein Newman Ferrara LLP v. Manning, 67 A.D.3d 538, 540, 889 N.Y.S.2d 147, 149 (2009)	3	On a motion to dismiss asserting a failure to state a cause of action, affidavits may be used freely to preserve inartfully pleaded, but potentially meritorious, claims.	It is well settled that "affidavits may be used freely to preserve inartfully pleaded, but potentially meritorious, claims"	"On a motion to dismiss for failure to state cause of action, can affidavits be used to preserve in-artfully pleaded, but potentially meritorious, claims?"
3141	Citizens Sav. Bank v. G & C Development, L.L.C., 113 So.3d 1085, 1088, 2012-1034 La.App. 1 Cir. 2/15/13, 5 (La.App. 1 Cir., 2013)	1	The articles providing a system to determine whether certain dismissals prior to trial on the merits are to be with or without prejudice, when read in pari materia, dictate that dismissals after trials on the merits are to be with prejudice. LSA-C.C.P. art. 1671 et seq.	Accordingly, LSA-C.C.P. arts. 1671 through 1673 provide a system to determine whether certain dismissals prior to a trial on the merits are to be with or without prejudice. The articles, when read in pari materia, dictate that dismissals after trials on the merits, however, are to be with prejudice.	Do the articles provide a system to determine whether certain dismissals prior to trial on the merits are to be with or without prejudice?

3143	Kenneth R. v. Roman Cath. Diocese of Brooklyn, 229 A.D.2d 159, 162, 654 N.Y.S.2d 791, 794 (1997)	6	Evidentiary material may be considered to remedy defects in complaint, and, unless it can be shown that material fact as claimed by pleader to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it, dismissal may not be predicated on such evidentiary material. McKinney's CPLR 3211(a), par. 7.	Evidentiary material may be considered to "remedy defects in the complaint" (Rovello v. Orofino Realty Co., supra, at 636, 389 N.Y.S.2d 314, 357 N.E.2d 970), "and, unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the pleader to be one is not a fact at all and unless it can be said that no significant dispute exists regarding it", dismissal may not be predicated on such evidentiary material (Guggenheimer v. Ginzburg, supra, at 275, 401 N.Y.S.2d 182, 372 N.E.2d 17).	"Unless it has been shown that a material fact as claimed by the pleader to be one is not a fact at all, can a dismissal not be predicated on such evidentiary material?"
3144	Cron v. Hargro Fabrics, Inc., 91 N.Y.2d 362, 366, 694 N.E.2d 56, 58 (1998)	2	In opposition to motion to dismiss, plaintiff may submit affidavits to remedy defects in complaint and preserve inartfully pleaded, but potentially meritorious claims; though limited to that purpose, such additional submissions of plaintiff, if any, will be given their most favorable intendment. McKinney's CPLR 3211.	In opposition to such a motion, a plaintiff may submit affidavits "to remedy defects in the complaint" and "preserve inartfully pleaded, but potentially meritorious claims" (Rovello v. Orofino Realty Co., 40 N.Y.2d 633, 635, 636, 389 N.Y.S.2d 314, 357 N.E.2d 970; but see, American Indus. Contr. Co. v. Travelers Indem. Co., 42 N.Y.2d 1041, 1043, 399 N.Y.S.2d 206, 369 N.E.2d 762). Though limited to that purpose, such additional submissions of the plaintiff, if any, will similarly be "given their most favorable intendment" (Arrington v. New York Times Co., 55 N.Y.2d 433, 442, 449 N.Y.S.2d 941, 434 N.E.2d 1319).	"In opposition to a motion to dismiss, can a plaintiff submit affidavits to remedy defects in complaint and preserve inartfully pleaded, but potentially meritorious claims?"
3145	HealthSouth Med. Ctr. v. Employers Ins. Co. of Wausau, 232 S.W.3d 828, 830–31 (Tex. App. 2007)	8	Until party has satisfied requirement to exhaust administrative remedies, the trial court lacks subject matter jurisdiction and must dismiss those claims without prejudice to refiling.	Until the party has satisfied this exhaustion requirement, the trial court lacks subject matter jurisdiction and must dismiss those claims without prejudice to refiling.	"Until a party has satisfied the exhaustion of administrative remedies requirement, does the trial court lack subject matter jurisdiction?"
3146	Dworak v. Farmers Ins. Exchange, 693 N.W.2d 522, 528, 269 Neb. 386, 393 (Neb., 2005)	6	A "dismissal without prejudice" after failing to timely serve defendants means that another petition may be filed against the same parties upon the same facts as long as it is filed within the applicable statute of limitations. Neb.Rev.St. S 25-217.	A dismissal without prejudice means that another petition may be filed against the same parties upon the same facts as long as it is filed within the applicable statute of limitations.	"Does a ""dismissal without prejudice"" after failing to timely serve defendants mean that another petition can be filed against the same parties upon the same facts?"

3147	Weaver v. Leon Cnty. Classroom Tchrs. Ass'n, 680 So. 2d 478, 481 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1996)	5	Dismissal of complaint with prejudice is severe sanction which should be granted only when pleader has failed to state cause of action and it conclusively appears that there is no possible way to amend complaint to state cause of action.	Dismissal of a complaint with prejudice is a severe sanction which should be granted only when the pleader has failed to state a cause of action, and it conclusively appears that there is no possible way to amend the complaint to state a cause of action. Madison County v. Foxx, 636 So.2d 39, 51 (Fla. 1st DCA 1994); Carr v. Dean Steel Buildings, Inc., 619 So.2d 392, 394 (Fla. 1st DCA 1993).	Should a dismissal of a complaint with prejudice only be granted when the pleader has failed to state a cause of action and it conclusively appears there is no possible way to amend the complaint to state a cause of action?
3148	Hughes v. Massey, 65 S.W.3d 743, 746 (Tex. App. 2001)	10	Dismissal for failure to comply with the rules governing the filing of in forma pauperis suits is not a ruling on the merits; accordingly, it is error to dismiss the suit with prejudice if the inmate was not first provided with an opportunity to amend his pleadings. V.T.C.A., Civil Practice & Remedies Code S 14.003.	A dismissal for failure to comply with the rules governing the filing of in forma pauperis suits is not a ruling on the merits; accordingly, it is error to dismiss the suit with prejudice if the inmate was not first provided with an opportunity to amend his pleadings.	Is a dismissal for failure to comply with rules governing filing of in forma pauperis suits not a ruling on the merits?
3149	Lewis v. City of Savannah, 336 Ga. App. 126, 129 (2016)	4	The unqualified dismissal of a case terminates the action, divests the trial court of jurisdiction to take further action in the case, and renders all orders entered after the dismissal a mere nullity.	Under Georgia law, the unqualified dismissal of a case terminates the action, divests the trial court of jurisdiction to take further action in the case, and renders all orders entered after the dismissal a mere nullity.	"Does the unqualified dismissal of a case terminate the action, divests the trial court of jurisdiction to take further action in the case, and renders all orders entered after the dismissal a mere nullity?"
3150	Fabian v. BGC Holdings, LP, 24 N.E.3d 307, 314, 388 Ill.Dec. 399, 406, 2014 IL App (1st) 141576, ¶ 23 (Ill.App. 1 Dist., 2014)	14	A dismissal with prejudice is regarded as a final judgment on the merits and is deemed to be as conclusive of the rights of the parties as if the matter had proceeded to trial and been resolved by a final judgment adverse to the plaintiff.	A dismissal "with prejudice" is regarded as a final judgment on the merits and is deemed to be as conclusive of the rights of the parties as if the matter had proceeded to trial and been resolved by a final judgment adverse to the plaintiff.	Is dismissal with prejudice deemed to be as conclusive of rights of parties as if a matter had proceeded to trial and been resolved by final judgment adverse to a plaintiff?
3151	Thiele v. Sec. State Bank of New Salem, 396 N.W.2d 295, 297 (N.D., 1986)	1	Court may not consider motion to amend complaint following judgment of dismissal unless court first alters, vacates, or sets aside judgment. Rules Civ.Proc., Rules 59, 60(b).	A court may not consider a motion to amend a complaint following a judgment of dismissal unless the court first alters, vacates, or sets aside the judgment under Rules 59 or 60(b), N.D.R.Civ.P.	"Can a court not consider a motion to amend complaint following judgment of dismissal unless a court first alters, vacates, or sets aside judgment?"
3153	Jaroszewski v. Flege, 297 S.W.3d 24, 33 (Ky. 2009)	4	The propriety of a trial court's ruling on a motion to dismiss for lack of prosecution does not necessarily hinge on its discussing the six particular factors listed in Ward v. Housman; rather, to rule properly on a motion to dismiss for lack of prosecution, the trial court must assess all factors relevant to that particular case, which might include some or all factors listed in Ward and may include other factors. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41.02(1).	In contrast to this misunderstanding, we hold that the propriety of the trial court's ruling does not necessarily hinge on its discussing the six particular factors listed in Ward. Rather, to rule properly on a motion to dismiss for lack of prosecution, the trial court must assess all factors relevant to that particular case, which might include some or all factors listed in Ward and may include other factors.	Should the court assess all factors relevant to a particular case for a motion to dismiss for lack of prosecution?

3155	Oratowski v. Civil Service Commission of City of Chicago, 3 Ill.App.2d 551, 561 (Ill.App. 1 Dist. 1954)	5	An officer of the law must exercise the greatest degree of restraint in dealing with the public and he must not conceive that every threatening or insulting word, gesture, or motion amounts to disorderly conduct, since it may be of such character or so provoked or conditioned as to be fully justified.	An officer of the law must exercise the greatest degree of restraint in dealing with the public. He must not conceive that every threatening or insulting word, gesture, or motion amounts to disorderly conduct. It may be of such a character or so provoked or conditioned as to be fully justified.	"Should police officers conceive that every threatening or insulting word, gesture, or motion amounts to disorderly conduct?"
3158	Marshall v. Beach, 143 Ohio App.3d 432, 436 (Ohio App. 11 Dist.,2001)	4	When an action is unconditionally dismissed, the trial court loses authority to proceed in that matter, including efforts to enforce a settlement agreement arising from the dismissed action, absent a provision to the contrary.	As appellant correctly notes, "when an action is unconditionally * * * dismissed, the trial court loses authority to proceed in that matter, absent a provision to the contrary, including efforts to enforce a settlement agreement arising from the dismissed action."	"When an action is unconditionally dismissed, does the trial court lose authority to proceed in that matter absent a provision to the contrary?"
3159	Gilbreath v. Brewster, 463 S.E.2d 836, 837, 250 Va. 436, 440 (Va.,1995)	1	Dismissal with prejudice generally is as conclusive of rights of parties as if suit had been prosecuted to final disposition adverse to plaintiff, and it not only terminates particular action, but also right of action upon which it is based.	A dismissal with prejudice generally is "as conclusive of the rights of the parties as if the suit had been prosecuted to a final disposition adverse to the plaintiff," and it not only terminates the particular action, "but also the right of action upon which it is based."	Is a dismissal with prejudice generally as conclusive of rights of parties as if suit had been prosecuted to a final disposition adverse to a plaintiff?
3162	Dalmex, Ltd. v. Apparel Enterprises, Inc., 455 S.W.3d 241, 244 (Tex.App.-El Paso, 2015)	7	A trial court abuses its discretion in denying reinstatement following a dismissal for want of prosecution when an attorney's explanation for a failure to appear is reasonable. Tex. R. Civ. P. 165a(3).	A trial court abuses its discretion in denying reinstatement following a dismissal for want of prosecution when an attorney's explanation for a failure to appear is reasonable.	Does a trial court abuse its discretion in denying reinstatement following a dismissal for want of prosecution when an attorney's explanation for a failure to appear is reasonable?
3163	Crafton Contracting Company v. Swenson Construction Company, Inc., 495 S.W.3d 178, 181 (Mo.App. E.D., 2016)	4	Generally, there are three essential elements to an agency relationship: (1) the agent holds the power to alter the legal relations between the principal and a third party; (2) the agent is a fiduciary with respect to matters within the scope of the agency; and (3) the principal has the right to control the conduct of the agent with respect to matters entrusted to the agent.	Generally, there are three essential elements to an agency relationship: 1) the agent holds the power to alter the legal relations between the principal and a third party; 2) the agent is a fiduciary with respect to matters within the scope of the agency; and 3) the principal has the right to control the conduct of the agent with respect to matters entrusted to the agent.	Is the right to control an essential element of the agency relationship?

3164	Fonseca v. Fong, 167 Cal. App. 4th 922, 930 (2008)	6	Federal authority to regulate immigration derives from various sources, including the federal government's power to establish a uniform rule of naturalization, its power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and its broad authority over foreign affairs. U.S.C.A. Const. Art. 1, cl. 3, 4.	Federal authority to regulate immigration derives from various sources, including the federal government's power "[t]o establish [a] uniform rule of naturalization" (U.S. Const., art. I, § 8, cl. 4), its power "[t]o regulate commerce with foreign nations" (id., cl. 3), and its broad authority over foreign affairs.	Is the authority to regulate immigration derived from the federal government's power to regulate commerce with foreign nations?
3167	Villas at Parkside Partners v. City of Farmers Branch, Tex., 675 F.3d 802, 807 (5th Cir. 2012), on reh'g en banc, 726 F.3d 524 (5th Cir. 2013)	1	In the field of immigration, the power to regulate is unquestionably exclusively a federal power; the exclusivity of Congress's power stems from multiple constitutional sources, including the Federal Government's power to establish a uniform Rule of Naturalization, its power to regulate Commerce with foreign Nations, and its broad authority over foreign affairs. U.S.C.A. Const. Art. 1, § 8, cls. 3, 4.	In the field of immigration, the power to regulate "is unquestionably exclusively a federal power." The exclusivity of Congress's power stems from multiple constitutional sources, "including the Federal Government's power '[t]o establish [a] uniform Rule of Naturalization,' ... its power '[t]o regulate Commerce with foreign Nations,' ... and its broad authority over foreign affairs."	Does the government have the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations?
3170	In re Marriage of Buster, 115 S.W.3d 141, 144 (Tex.App. Texarkana,2003)	2	The standard for reviewing a dismissal for want of prosecution is abuse of the court's discretion, whereas the test for reinstatement of a case dismissed under the failure to appear provision of the rules of civil procedure is mistake or accident on the part of the aggrieved party. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 165a.	The standard for reviewing a dismissal for want of prosecution is abuse of the court's discretion, whereas the test for reinstatement of a case dismissed under the failure to appear provision of Rule 165a is mistake or accident on the part of the aggrieved party..	Is the standard for reviewing a dismissal for want of prosecution an abuse of the court's discretion?
3171	Kruis v. McKenna, 2001 PA Super 366, ¶ 6 (Pa.Super.,2001)	1	A request to open a judgment of non pros is by way of grace and not of right and its grant or refusal is peculiarly a matter for the trial court's discretion, and the Superior Court is loathe to reverse the exercise of the court's equitable powers unless an abuse of discretion is clearly evident.	A request to open a judgment of non pros is by way of grace and not of right and its grant or refusal is peculiarly a matter for the [trial] court's discretion. We are loathe to reverse the exercise of the court's equitable powers unless an abuse of discretion is clearly evident.	Is a request to open a judgment of non pros by way of grace and not of right and its grant or refusal is peculiarly a matter for the trial court's discretion?
3175	Landvatter Ready Mix, Inc. v. Buckey, 963 S.W.2d 298, 304 (Mo.App. E.D.,1997)	16	Failure to timely and specifically object to evidence on ground that it is beyond scope of pleadings constitutes consent for determination of issues thereby raised.	Failure to timely and specifically object to evidence on the ground that it is beyond the scope of the pleadings constitutes consent for determination of issues thereby raised.	Does the failure to timely and specifically object to evidence on ground that it is beyond scope of pleadings constitutes consent for determination of issues thereby raised?
3177	Corte v. Corte, 664 So.2d 218, 218 (Ala.Civ.App.,1994)	1	Dismissal of case for want of prosecution, as well as subsequent refusal to set aside the dismissal, is within the sound discretion of the trial court, and Court of Civil Appeals will reverse only for abuse of that discretion.	The dismissal of a case for want of prosecution, as well as a subsequent refusal to set aside the dismissal, is within the sound discretion of the trial court, and this court will reverse only if the trial court has abused that discretion.	"Is the dismissal of a case for want of prosecution, as well as a subsequent refusal to set aside the dismissal, within the sound discretion of the trial court?"

3180	Browning v. Walters, 616 N.E.2d 1040, 1044 (Ind.App. 1 Dist.,1993)(fn2)	4	When party fails to comply with condition precedent to jurisdiction, complaint is subject to dismissal for failure to state a claim, after which plaintiff may amend. Trial Procedure Rule 12(B)(6).	When a party fails to comply with a condition precedent to jurisdiction, the complaint will be subject to dismissal for failure to state a claim pursuant to Trial Rule 12(B)(6), after which the plaintiff can amend.	"When party fails to comply with condition precedent to jurisdiction, is a complaint subject to dismissal for failure to state a claim, after which plaintiff can amend?"
3181	Laurie v. Ezard, 595 S.W.2d 336, 337 (Mo.App. S.D. 1980)	1	Generally, courts have inherent power, in exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss case for failure to prosecute; discretion to be used is not mental discretion, but legal discretion, to be exercised in conformity with spirit of law, and in manner to serve ends of substantial justice.	The general rule is that courts have inherent power, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, to dismiss a case for failure to prosecute. The discretion to be used is not a mental discretion, but a legal discretion, to be exercised in conformity with the spirit of the law, and in a manner to serve the ends of substantial justice.	Is the court's discretion to dismiss a case for failure to prosecute a mental discretion?
3182	Corte v. Corte, 664 So.2d 218, 218 (Ala.Civ.App.,1994)	1	Dismissal of case for want of prosecution, as well as subsequent refusal to set aside the dismissal, is within the sound discretion of the trial court, and Court of Civil Appeals will reverse only for abuse of that discretion.	The dismissal of a case for want of prosecution, as well as a subsequent refusal to set aside the dismissal, is within the sound discretion of the trial court, and this court will reverse only if the trial court has abused that discretion.	"Is the dismissal of case for want of prosecution, as well as subsequent refusal to set aside the dismissal, within the sound discretion of the trial court?"
3185	Petrone v. Whirlwind, Inc., 444 Pa .Super. 477, 481–82 (1995)	2	Three factors must be present in order to open non pros judgment: (1) petition to open must be promptly filed; (2) default or delay must be reasonably explained; and (3) facts must be shown to exist that support cause of action. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 3051, 42 Pa.C.S.A.	400, 581 A.2d 193, 196 (1990), three factors must be present in order to open a non pros judgment. These are (1) the petition to open must be promptly filed; (2) the default or delay must be reasonably explained; and (3) facts must be shown to exist which support *482 a cause of action. We note that factors (1) and (3) are undisputedly satisfied.	"In order to open non pros judgment, should three factors be present?"
3186	City of Philadelphia v. Williams, 553 A.2d 111, 112, 122 Pa.Cmwlth. 630, 632 (Pa.Cmwlth.,1989)	1	Before court may grant petition to open judgment non pros, petition must be timely filed, there must be reasonable explanation or excuse for default, and facts constituting grounds for cause of action must be alleged.	Before a court may grant a petition to open judgment there must be a coalescence of three factors: (1) the petition to open judgment must be timely filed, (2) there must be a reasonable explanation or excuse for the default, and (3) facts constituting grounds for a cause of action must be alleged.	"Before a court can grant petition to open judgment non pros, should there be a reasonable explanation or excuse for default?"

3187	Scholastic Book Clubs, Inc. v. State, Dep't of Treasury, Revenue Div., 223 Mich. App. 576, 579, 567 N.W.2d 692, 693-94 (1997)	1	"Sales tax" is tax imposed upon sellers for privilege of engaging in business of making sales of tangible personal property at retail within state.	Unlike the sales tax, which is a tax imposed upon sellers for the privilege of engaging in the business of making sales of tangible personal property at retail within this state, World Book, Inc. v. Dep't of Treasury, 222 Mich.App. 203, 205, 564 N.W.2d 82 (1997), the use tax is an excise tax imposed for the "privilege of using, storing, or consuming tangible personal property in the state."	"Is ""sales tax"" imposed upon sellers for the privilege of engaging in business of making sales of tangible personal property at retail within state?"
3188	Collins v. U.S., 254 F.2d 66, 67 (C.A.7 (Wis.),1958)	1	To void a National Service Life Insurance policy for fraud, evidence must show that insured made a false representation in reference to a material fact with knowledge of its falsity and intent to deceive and that action was taken in reliance upon the representation. National Service Life Insurance Act, S 602(w) as amended 38 U.S.C.A. S 710.	It has been established that in order to void a National Life Insurance policy for fraud, the evidence must show the insured made 1) a false representation; 2) in reference to a material fact; 3) made with knowledge of its falsity; 4) with the intent to deceive; and 5) with action taken in reliance upon the representation.	What actions will void a National Life Insurance Policy for fraud?
3190	Sanjari v. State, 961 N.E.2d 1005, 1007 (Ind., 2012)	1	Rules of statutory construction and common law that are separate and in addition to the protections afforded by the Indiana Double Jeopardy Clause include situations in which an enhancement is imposed for the very same behavior or harm as another crime for which the defendant has been convicted and punished. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; West's A.I.C. Const. Art. 1, S 14; West's A.I.C. 35-38-1-6.	Often discussed under the general rubric of Indiana double jeopardy jurisprudence, we recognize "a series of rules of statutory construction and common law that are separate and in addition to the protections afforded by the Indiana Double Jeopardy Clause." Spivey v. State, 761 N.E.2d 831, 834 (Ind.2002). Among these are situations in which an "enhancement is imposed for the very same behavior or harm as another crime for which the defendant has been convicted and punished."	What kind of situations do rules of statutory construction and common law include?
3191	Rose v. Board of Zoning Adjustment Platte Cnty., 68 S.W.3d 507, 517 (Mo.App. W.D.,2001)	15	The determination of whether a civil penalty is considered punishment for purposes of double jeopardy analysis depends upon whether the penalty is remedial or punitive in nature; this determination requires a particularized assessment of the penalty imposed and the purposes that the penalty may fairly be said to serve. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; V.A.M.S. Const. Art. 1, S 19.	"[T]he determination of whether a civil penalty is considered punishment for purposes of double jeopardy analysis depends upon whether the penalty is remedial or punitive in nature." In Re Caranchini, 956 S.W.2d 910, 914 (Mo.banc), cert. denied, 524 U.S. 940, 118 S.Ct. 2347, 141 L.Ed.2d 717 (1998).This determination requires a "particularized assessment of the penalty imposed and the purposes that the penalty may fairly be said to serve." Mayo, 915 S.W.2d at 760.	Is the determination of whether a civil penalty is considered punishment for purposes of double jeopardy analysis depends upon whether the penalty is remedial or punitive in nature?

3192	City of New Brighton v. 2000 Ford Excursion VIN No. 1FMNU43S2YEA74156, 622 N.W.2d 364, 369 (Minn.App., 2001)	10	Civil in rem forfeiture that has some punitive aspects will not necessarily violate double jeopardy provisions if it still serves important non-punitive goals. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; M.S.A. Const. Art. 1, S 7.	("A civil in rem forfeiture that has some punitive aspects will not necessarily violate double jeopardy provisions if it still serves important non-punitive goals." (citation omitted)).	Will civil in rem forfeiture that has some punitive aspects not necessarily violate double jeopardy provisions if it still serves important non-punitive goals?
3194	State v. Rowlands, 343 S.C. 454, 457 (2000)	2	Generally, jeopardy attaches when a jury is sworn and impaneled, unless prior to reaching a verdict, the jury is discharged with the defendant's consent or upon some ground of legal necessity. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; Const. Art. 1, S 12.	Generally, jeopardy attaches when a jury is sworn and impaneled, unless prior to reaching a verdict, the jury is discharged with the defendant's consent or upon some ground of legal necessity.	"Does jeopardy attach when the jury is sworn and impaneled, unless the defendant consents to the jury's discharge before it reaches a verdict or legal necessity mandates the jury's discharge?"
3195	U.S. v. Combs, 222 F.3d 353, 358–59 (C.A.7 (Ill.),2000)	1	Double jeopardy clause bars retrial unless the district court's mistrial declaration was occasioned by manifest necessity, or consented to by the defendant. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	The double jeopardy clause bars retrial unless the district court's mistrial *359 declaration was occasioned by manifest necessity or consented to by the defendant.	"Does the double jeopardy clause bar retrial unless the district court's mistrial declaration was occasioned by manifest necessity, or consented to by the defendant?"
3196	United States v. Botello, 991 F.2d 189, 192 (C.A.5 (Tex.), 1993)	5	Defendant may waive double jeopardy protection by consenting to mistrial before verdict is entered, even if defendant's motion is necessitated by prosecutorial or judicial error. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	A defendant may ... waive double jeopardy protection by consenting to a mistrial before a verdict is rendered.... [A] motion by the defendant for mistrial is ordinarily assumed to remove any barrier to reprosecution, even if the defendant's motion is necessitated by prosecutorial or judicial error.	"Can a defendant waive double jeopardy protection by consenting to mistrial before verdict is entered, even if a defendant's motion is necessitated by prosecutorial or judicial error?"
3197	Camden v. Cir. Ct. of Second Jud. Cir., Crawford Cnty., Ill., 892 F.2d 610, 615 (7th Cir. 1989)	5	Absent other circumstances, it is unfair to infer consent to trial court's declaration of mistrial in presence of jury if defendant is not given adequate opportunity to object. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	If a trial judge declares a mistrial in the presence of the jury without giving the defendant an adequate opportunity to object, it would of course be unfair to infer consent absent other circumstances indicating acquiescence.	"Absent other circumstances, is it unfair to infer consent to a trial court declaration of a mistrial in presence of a jury if a defendant is not given an adequate opportunity to object?"
3198	City of Wichita v. Bannon, 209 P.3d 207, 211, 42 Kan.App.2d 196, 200 (Kan.App.,2009)	6	A main component of a judgment of acquittal is the prohibition against subsequent prosecutions for the same offense based upon the Fifth Amendment protection against double jeopardy. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	A main component of the judgment of acquittal is its prohibition against subsequent prosecutions for the same offense based upon the Fifth Amendment protection against double jeopardy.	Is a main component of a judgment of acquittal the prohibition against subsequent prosecutions for the same offense based upon the Fifth Amendment protection against double jeopardy?
3200	Martin v. Grandview Hosp., 373 Pa.Super. 369, 374 (Pa.Super.,1988)	3	Petition to reactivate case terminated for inactivity of record may be granted only upon good cause shown, regardless of whether local rule expressly requires showing of good cause. Pa.R.J.A. No. 1901.	We disagree; we hold that a petition to reactivate a case terminated for inactivity of record may be granted only upon good cause shown, regardless of whether the local rule expressly requires a showing of good cause. 4 Many local rules adopted pursuant to Pa.R.J.A.	Can a petition to reactivate a case terminated for inactivity of record be granted only upon good cause shown?

3201	Mohiuddin v. Doctors Billing & Management Solutions, Inc., 196 Md.App. 439, 452–53 (Md.App., 2010)	9	The problem, following the dismissal of a pleading, of whether the pleading may be amended, is resolved by the trial court either by adding, within the four corners of the order itself, the explicit words "with leave to amend" or by leaving the order silent in that regard; leave to amend is either expressly stated on the face of the order or it does not exist. Md.Rule 2-322.	The other problem following the dismissal of a pleading-that of whether the pleading may be amended-is *453 resolved by the trial court either by adding, within the four corners of the order itself, the explicit words "with leave to amend" or by leaving the order silent in that regard. There is no "in-between." Leave to amend is either expressly stated on the face of the order or it does not exist.	"Is the problem, following the dismissal of a pleading, of whether the pleading can be amended, resolved by the trial court?"
3202	Indus. Risk Insurers v. Lorenz Equip. Co., 1994-Ohio-442, 69 Ohio St. 3d 576, 581, 635 N.E.2d 14, 18	3	It is not abuse of discretion for trial court to dismiss action for lack of prosecution when plaintiff voluntarily fails to appear at hearing, without explanation, and trial court has specifically directed him to appear. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(B)(1).	It is not, for instance, an abuse of discretion for a trial court to dismiss an action for lack of prosecution when a plaintiff voluntarily fails to appear at a hearing, without explanation, and the trial court has specifically directed him to appear.	Is it an abuse of discretion for trial court to dismiss action for lack of prosecution when plaintiff voluntarily fails to appear at hearing?
3203	State v. Bjergum, 771 N.W.2d 53, 57 (Minn.App., 2009)	7	Because threats are context specific, a person who might lack a specific intent to threaten or terrorize may nevertheless utter an objectively threatening statement recklessly, committing a terroristic-threats crime. M.S.A. S 609.713(1).	Because threats are context specific, a person who might lack a specific intent to threaten or terrorize may nevertheless utter an objectively threatening statement recklessly, committing a terroristic-threats crime.	Can a person who recklessly makes an objectively threatening statement yet lacks the specific intent to threaten or terrorize be convicted of committing a terroristic threats crime?
3204	Switzerland Gen. Ins. Co. v. Gulf Ins. Co., 213 S.W.2d 161, 163 (Tex.Civ.App.-Dallas, 1948)	1	"Residence" may mean a temporary, permanent, or transient character; or it may mean one's fixed abode, depending upon the purpose of the particular object of its use, while "domicile" as a fixed permanent abode.	'Residence' may mean a temporary, permanent, or transient character; or it may mean one's fixed abode, depending upon the purpose of the particular object of its use; while 'domicile' is a fixed, permanent abode.	"Does ""residence"" mean a temporary, permanent or transient character or may mean one's fixed abode, depending on the purpose of the particular object?"
3205	United States v. Wheeler, 330 F.3d 407, 413 (C.A.6 (Tenn.), 2003)	8	Although the Constitution prohibits multiple criminal punishments for the same offense, double jeopardy principles generally have no application in the sentencing context because the determinations at issue do not place a defendant in jeopardy for an "offense." U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Although the Constitution prohibits multiple criminal punishments for the same offense, double jeopardy principles generally have no application in the sentencing context "because the determinations at issue do not place a defendant in jeopardy for an 'offense."	Do double jeopardy principles generally have application in the sentencing context because the determinations at issue do not place a defendant in jeopardy for an offense?
3206	Emmons v. State, 847 N.E.2d 1035, 1038 (Ind.App.,2006)	8	A defendant may be retried if the prior proceeding was terminated because a legal defect in the proceedings would make any resulting judgment reversible as a matter of law. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; West's A.I.C. Const. Art. 1, S 14; West's A.I.C. 35-34-1-1, 35-41-4-3(a)(2)(iii).	A defendant may also be retried if the prior proceeding was terminated because a legal defect in the proceedings would make any resulting judgment reversible as a matter of law.	Can a defendant be retried if the prior proceeding was terminated because a legal defect in the proceedings would make any resulting judgment reversible as a matter of law?

3207	Cagle v. Clinton Cotton Mills, 56 S.E.2d 747, 749, 216 S.C. 93, 97 (S.C. 1949)	4	The basic purpose of Workmen's Compensation Act is inclusion of employers and employees, and not their exclusion, and its presumptions and its penalties are directed toward the end of effective coverage rather than noncoverage.	The basic purpose of the Workmen's Compensation Act is inclusion of employers and employees and not their exclusion, and its presumptions and its penalties are directed toward the end of effective coverage rather than noncoverage.	"Are the presumptions and penalties of the Workmens Compensation Act directed towards the end of effective coverage, rather than noncoverage?"
3208	Crist v. Bretz, 437 U.S. 28, 36, 98 S. Ct. 2156, 2161, 57 L. Ed. 2d 24 (1978)	2	An accused's right to have his trial completed by a particular tribunal lies at the foundation of the federal rule that jeopardy attaches when a jury is empaneled and sworn and is thus within the protection of the constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy. U.S.C.A.Const. Amends. 5, 14.	Regardless of its historic origin, however, the defendant's "valued right to have his trial completed by a particular tribunal" is now within the protection of the constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy, since it is that "right" that lies at the foundation of the federal rule that jeopardy attaches when the jury is empaneled and sworn.	Is the right to have one's trial completed by a particular tribunal within the protection of the constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy?
3210	Collum v. State, 96 S.W.3d 361, 365 (Tex.App. Austin,2002)	1	When district court granted defendant's motion for continuance and dismissed first jury, it made clear on record that jury had not been sworn, and thus, it was clearly apparent that district court did not subject defendant to double jeopardy by dismissing unsworn jury pursuant to defendant's motion for continuance. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	In the present case, when the district court granted appellant's motion for continuance and dismissed the first jury, it made "clear on the record that the jury has not been sworn." On the face of the record, it is not clearly apparent that the district court subjected appellant to double jeopardy by dismissing an unsworn jury pursuant to appellant's motion for continuance.	Would it be apparent that court did not subject defendant to double jeopardy by dismissing unsworn jury?
3211	Com. v. Bradley, 457 A.2d 911, 914, 311 Pa.Super. 330, 336 (Pa.Super., 1983)	3	In determining whether circumstances surrounding declaration of mistrial bar reprosecution on same charges, courts must apply standards established by both state and federal decisions. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; Const. Art. 1, S 10.	In determining whether the circumstances surrounding the declaration of a mistrial in a given case bar reprosecution on the same charges, "we apply the standards established by both Pennsylvania and federal decisions.	"In determining whether circumstances surrounding declaration of mistrial bar reprosecution on same charges, should courts apply standards established by both state and federal decisions?"
3212	Com. v. Bradley, 457 A.2d 911, 915, 311 Pa.Super. 330, 338 (Pa.Super., 1983)	4	Before trial court can properly declare mistrial sua sponte, it should consider whether there are any less drastic alternatives which would allow trial to continue; failure to consider alternatives before declaring mistrial is grounds for barring retrial. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; Const. Art. 1, S 10.	Before a trial court can properly declare a mistrial sua sponte, it should consider whether there are any less drastic alternatives which would allow the trial to continue. Failure to consider alternatives before declaring a mistrial is grounds for barring retrial.	"Before trial court can properly declare mistrial sua sponte, should it consider whether there are any less drastic alternatives which would allow a trial to continue?"
3213	Com. v. Hallman, 67 A.3d 1256, 1261 (Pa.Super.,2013)	7	The constitutional prohibition on double jeopardy does not offer a guarantee to the defendant that the state will vindicate its societal interest in the enforcement of the criminal laws in one proceeding. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; Const. Art. 1, S 10.	Notwithstanding the above right, the Double Jeopardy Clause "does not offer a guarantee to the defendant that the State will vindicate its societal interest in the enforcement of the criminal laws in one proceeding.	Does the constitutional prohibition on double jeopardy offer a guarantee to the defendant that the state will vindicate its societal interest in the enforcement of the criminal laws in one proceeding?

3214	Furnish v. Com., 267 S.W.3d 656, 666 (Ky. 2007)	22	It is not double jeopardy to impose a separate penalty for one offense while using the same offense as an aggravating circumstance authorizing imposition of capital punishment for another offense. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; Const. S 13.	It is not double jeopardy "to impose a separate penalty for one offense while using the same offense as an aggravating circumstance authorizing imposition of capital punishment for another offense."	Is it double jeopardy to impose a separate penalty for one offense while using the same offense as an aggravating circumstance authorizing imposition of capital punishment for another offense?
3215	State v. Lovato, 141 N.M. 508, 511 (N.M.App., 2007)	5	Double jeopardy concerns arise when a defendant has completed service of a sentence, and state thereafter seeks to impose additional punishment for that offense. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	Second, as discussed at length in Gaddy, double jeopardy concerns arise when a defendant has completed service of a sentence, and the State thereafter seeks to impose additional punishment for that offense.	"Does a double jeopardy concern arise when a defendant has completed service of a sentence, and state thereafter seeks to impose additional punishment for that offense?"
3216	People v. Jaudon, 307 Ill.App.3d 427, 441 (1999)	18	Test for determining whether a civil fixed-penalty provision violates the double jeopardy protections of the Federal Constitution requires a balancing of the government's harm against the size of the penalty. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	The test for determining whether a civil fixed-penalty provision violates the double jeopardy protections of the federal constitution requires a balancing of the government's harm against the size of the penalty.	Does the test for determining whether a civil fixed-penalty provision violate the double jeopardy protections of the Federal Constitution?
3217	Glover v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Court of State ex rel. Cnty. of Clark, 220 P.3d 684, 696 (Nev. 2009)	27	Where a criminal trial ends in acquittal or conviction, the constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy automatically bars retrial, unless the conviction is later reversed. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; West's NRSA Const. Art. 1, S 8.	Where a criminal trial ends in acquittal or conviction, the constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy "automatically bar[s] retrial] (unless, of course, the conviction is later reversed)."	"Where a criminal trial ends in acquittal or conviction, does the constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy automatically bar retrial, unless the conviction is later reversed?"
3218	Commodity Futures Trading Commission v. Hunt, 591 F.2d 1211, 1224 (C.A.Ill., 1979)	22	Without explicit authority, or unless agency is offspring of suable entity, agency of federal government cannot be sued eo nomine for damages; Congress did not write such authority into the Commodity Exchange Act. Commodity Exchange Act, S 1 et seq., 7 U.S.C.A. S 1 et seq.	Without explicit authority, or unless the agency is the offspring of a suable entity, an agency of the federal government cannot be sued Eo nomine for damages. Congress did not write such authority into the Commodity Exchange Act.	"Without explicit authority, can a federal government agency be sued Eo nomine for damages under Commodity Exchange Act?"
3219	Perkinson v. State, 273 Ga. 491, 494 (2001)	5	A defendant is protected by the Double Jeopardy Clause from attempts to re-litigate the facts after an acquittal and from attempts to secure additional punishment after a prior conviction and sentence. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5; Const. Art. 1, S 1, Par. 18.	A defendant is protected by the Double Jeopardy Clause from attempts to re-litigate the facts after an acquittal and from attempts "to secure additional punishment after a prior conviction and sentence." Brown, supra at 166, 97 S.Ct. 2221.	Is a defendant is protected by the Double Jeopardy Clause from attempts to re-litigate the facts after an acquittal and from attempts to secure additional punishment after a prior conviction and sentence?
3220	People v. Dawson, 431 Mich. 234, 252 (1988)	3	Double jeopardy clause does not bar retrial, where prosecutor or judge made innocent error or where cause prompting mistrial was outside their control. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	The thrust of the Court's decisions is that the Double Jeopardy Clause does 895 not bar retrial where the prosecutor or judge made an innocent error 45 or where the cause prompting the mistrial was outside their control.	"Does double jeopardy clause not bar retrial, where a prosecutor or judge made an innocent error or where a cause prompting mistrial was outside their control?"

3221	United States v. Coughlin, 610 F.3d 89, 97 (C.A.D.C., 2010)	9	In the double jeopardy analysis, if multiple potential reasons for acquittal are evident in the record of the trial, courts will not presume that the jury acquitted on the ground most favorable to the defendant; the question is what the jury necessarily decided, so there is no collateral estoppel if a different ground merely could have been a rational basis for acquittal. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	At the same time, if multiple potential reasons for acquittal are evident in the record of the trial, we will not presume that the jury acquitted on the ground most favorable to the defendant. The question is what the jury "necessarily" decided, Yeager, 129 S.Ct. at 2366; there is no collateral estoppel if a different ground "could" have been a rational basis for acquittal, Ashe, 397 U.S. at 444, 90 S.Ct. 1189.	"In the double jeopardy analysis, if multiple potential reasons for acquittal are evident in the record of the trial, will courts not presume that the jury acquitted on the ground most favorable to the defendant?"
3222	McMillan v. Park Towers Owners Corp., 225 A.D.2d 742, 743–44, 640 N.Y.S.2d 144, 145 (1996)	2	Since reservation of title under lease does not create security interest unless parties so intended, mere existence of proprietary lease, without more, does not establish enforceable security agreement to which Uniform Commercial Code applies. McKinney's Uniform Commercial Code S 1-201(37)	Since reservation of title under a lease does not create a security interest unless the parties so intended, the mere existence of a proprietary lease, without more, does not establish an enforceable security agreement to which the Uniform Commercial Code applies (see, UCC 1–201 [37]; Saada v. Master Apts., 152 Misc.2d 861, 866–867, 579 N.Y.S.2d 536; DeCastro v. Karen Gardens Apts. Corp., N.Y.L.J., July 28, 1993, at 24, col. 6).	"Does the mere existence of a proprietary lease, without more, not establish an enforceable security agreement?"
3223	United States v. Deardorff, 343 F. Supp. 1047, 1050 (S.D.N.Y., 1971)	3	Under Pennsylvania law, extortionate activity on part of recipient of a bribe, in connection with the particular bribe charged, is relevant on the issue of the intent of the person offering the bribe, but is not a complete defense as insanity or duress would be. 18 U.S.C.A. SS 1952, 1952(b) (2).	This court finds that, under Pennsylvania law, extortionate activity on the part of the recipient of a bribe, in connection with the particular bribe charged, is relevant and admissible on the issue of the intent of the person offering the bribe, but is not a complete defense as insanity or duress would be.	Is extortionate activity on part of recipient of a bribe relevant on the issue of the intent of the person offering the bribe?
3224	United States v. Wynn, 827 F.3d 778, 785 (8th Cir. 2016)	6	Statute criminalizing act of threatening to assault, kidnap, or murder official includes both objective and subjective elements: (1) a true threat to assault or murder a federal employee, and (2) the intent to retaliate against the employee on account of the performance of official duties. 18 U.S.C.A. S 115(a)(1)(B).	As the Second Circuit recently explained, § 115(a)(1)(B) "includes both objective and subjective elements:" a true threat to assault or murder a federal employee, and the intent to retaliate against the employee "on account of the performance of official duties." United States v. Turner, 720 F.3d 411, 420 (2d Cir. 2013), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 135 S.Ct. 49, 190 L.Ed.2d 29 (2014).	"Does 115(a)(1)(B), the statute criminalizing the act of threatening to assault, kidnap, or murder an official, include subjective or objective elements?"

3227	Carpenters and Joiners Union of America, Local No. 213 v. Ritter's Cafe, 62 S.Ct. 807, 813, 315 U.S. 722, 735 (U.S. 1942)(dissent)	6	The rights of employers and employees to conduct their economic affairs and to compete with others for a share in the products of industry are subject to modification or qualification in the interests of the society in which they exist.	'It is true that the rights of employers and employees to conduct their economic affairs and to compete with others for a share in the products of industry are subject to modification or qualification in the interests of the society in which they exist.	Is the rights of employers and employees to conduct their economic affairs and to compete with others for a share in the products of industry subject to modification?
3230	State v. Badaracco, 156 Conn.App. 650, 660 (2015)	11	Under federal law, a bribery conviction must be based on more than evidence of mere preparation; it must progress to the point that the defendant made an offer that consisted of an expression of a desire and an ability to pay the public official for performing a proscribed act. 18 U.S.C.A. S 201(b).	Under federal law, a bribery conviction must be based on more than evidence of mere preparation. It must progress to the point that the defendant made an offer that consisted of an expression of a desire and an ability to pay the public official for performing a proscribed act. The defendant has included in his appellate brief an analysis of the relevant federal cases interpreting an "offer" under 18 U.S.C.	Can a bribery conviction be based on evidence of mere preparation?
3231	State v. Emmanuel, 42 Wash.2d 1, 7 (1953)	2	Statute defining the crime of asking or receiving a bribe does not limit the crime to cases where official duties prescribed by statute may be affected, but it is sufficient if state officer, agent or employee is given such official duties by direction of his superiors or by customary office practice. RCW 9.18.020.	The criminal statute, however, does not limit the crime of asking or receiving a bribe to cases where official duties prescribed by statute may be affected. Nor does State v. Hart, supra. It is sufficient if, as here, the state officer, agent or employee is given such official duties by direction of his superiors or by customary office practice. [3]	"For purpose of bribery, can duties given by direction of superiors or by customary office practice be considered the defendants official duties?"
3232	Cassin v. Stillman-Delehanty-Ferris Co., 185 A.D. 63, 65, 172 N.Y.S. 754, 755-56 (App. Div. 1918)	1	To justify a decision that parties to a written contract intended to obligate themselves to something unexpressed, the custom must be shown to be reasonable, uniform, well settled, and either known to the parties or so generally known as to raise a presumption of their knowledge at the time.	But, to justify a decision that the parties to a written contract intended to obligate themselves to something which cannot be found in the terms of the contract itself, the custom must be shown to be reasonable, uniform, well settled, and either known to the parties when the contract is made, or so generally known as to raise a presumption that they had it in mind at the time. Rickerson v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 149 N. Y. 307, 43 N. E. 856.	When can custom justify a decision that parties to a written contract intended to obligate themselves to something which cannot be found in the terms of the contract itself?
3233	Cannon v. U.S., 45 F.Supp. 106, 108 (D.C.Pa. 1941)	3	Congress alone can prescribe the terms on which a claim for benefits under the War Risk Insurance Act may be recovered, and it is not within the province of the court to extend or limit a clear expression of those terms. World War Veterans' Act of 1924, S 19, as amended, 38 U.S.C.A. S 445.	Congress alone can prescribe the terms on which the claim for benefits under the World War Veterans' Act 1924 may be recovered, and it is not within the province of the courts to extend or limit a clear expression of these terms.	Can congress prescribe the terms by which a claim for benefits under the War Risk Insurance Act can be recovered?

3235	Robert T. Reynolds Associates, Inc. v. Asbeck, 23 Conn.App. 247, 253–54 (Conn.App.,1990)	4	Agent, by making contract only on behalf of competent disclosed principal whom he has power to bind, does not thereby become liable for its nonperformance, but whether there was nondisclosure of competent principal so that plaintiff might hold defendant personally liable on the contract is question of fact for trial court.	While it is true that "[a]n agent, by making a contract only on behalf of a competent disclosed principal whom he has the power to bind, does not thereby become liable for its nonperformance; Behlman v. Universal Travel Agency, Inc., 4 Conn.App. 688, 690, 496 A.2d 962 (1985); whether there was a nondisclosure of a competent principal so that the plaintiff might hold the defendant personally liable on the contract is a question *254 of fact for the trial court.	s the issue of whether an agent disclosed the identity of a principal to avoid liability a question of fact?
3236	Norman v. Cummings, 73 S.D. 559, 563 (S.D. 1951)	2	If, as a result of usual, ordinary and reasonable use a highway is injured, obstructed or rendered dangerous and unsafe for travel, it becomes duty of duly authorized public authorities to provide the remedy, but no liability on ground of negligence, attaches to user as a result of such use, either to the public or the highway authorities, for damages to highway or to other travelers. SDC 28.0912, 28.9909.	If as a result of usual, ordinary and reasonable use a highway is injured, obstructed or rendered dangerous and unsafe for travel, it becomes the duty of the duly authorized public authorities to provide the remedy, but no liability attaches to the user as a result of such use, either to the public highway authorities for damages to the highway.	"Who would be held liable for damage caused to the highway on a usual, ordinary or a reasonable use?"
3237	Powell v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 245 S.W.3d 864, 865 (Mo.App. E.D.,2008)	1	Generally, the decision to dismiss for lack for subject matter jurisdiction is a question of fact left to the sound discretion of the trial court, and it will not be reversed on appeal absent an abuse of that discretion. V.A.M.R. 55.27(g)(3).	Rule 55.27(g) (3).... Generally, the decision to dismiss for lack for subject matter jurisdiction is a question of fact left to the sound discretion of the trial court, and it will not be reversed on appeal absent an abuse of that discretion.	Is whether there is subject matter jurisdiction a question of fact left to the sound discretion of the trial court on a motion to dismiss ?
3238	Belington Bank v. Masketeers Co., 408 S.E.2d 316, 319, 185 W.Va. 564, 567 (W.Va.,1991)	2	In setting aside nonsuit and reinstating case upon trial docket, trial judge may consider evidence adduced before nonsuit and his actions will not be disturbed on appeal unless it is shown that he has abused his discretion. Code, 56-8-12; Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b).	In setting aside a non-suit and reinstating a case upon the trial docket, the trial judge may consider the evidence adduced prior to the non-suit and his action in so setting aside the non-suit and reinstating the case will not be disturbed on appeal unless a showing is made that he has abused his discretion.	" In setting aside a nonsuit and reinstating a case upon a trial docket, can a trial judge consider evidence adduced before nonsuit?"
3239	In re Mario S., 38 Misc. 3d 444, 449, 954 N.Y.S.2d 843, 848 (Fam. Ct. 2012)	3	Special immigrant juvenile (SIJ) provisions of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) were enacted to protect abused, neglected, or abandoned children who, with their families, illegally entered the United States, by providing an alternative to deportation for these children. Immigration and Nationality Act, S 101(a)(27)(J), 8 U.S.C.A. S 1101(a)(27)(J).	"The SIJ provisions of the [Immigration and Naturalization Act] were enacted in 1990 to protect abused, neglected, or abandoned children who, with their families, illegally entered the United States. Congress provided an alternative to deportation for these children.	Were Special Immigrant Juvenile (SIJ) provisions of theImmigration and Naturalization Act (INA) enacted to protect abused children who illegally entered the United States?

3242	State v. Perry, 95 A.3d 95, 99 (2014)	10	If the trial court unsustainably exercised its discretion in concluding that manifest necessity required a mistrial, then the double jeopardy clause will bar retrial. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	"However, if the trial court unsustainably exercised its discretion in concluding that manifest necessity required a mistrial, then the Double Jeopardy Clause will bar retrial."	"If the trial court unsustainably exercised its discretion in concluding that manifest necessity required a mistrial, will then the double jeopardy clause bar retrial? "
3243	Du Daobin v. Cisco Systems, Inc., 2 F.Supp.3d 717, 725 (D.Md., 2014)	8	The act of state doctrine is premised on the principle that every sovereign state is bound to respect the independence of every other sovereign state, and the courts of one country will not sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another, done within its own territory.	The act of state doctrine is premised on the principle that "[e]very sovereign state is bound to respect the independence of every other sovereign state, and the courts of one country will not sit in judgment on the acts of the government of another, done within its own territory."	Is the act of state doctrine premised on the principle that every sovereign state is bound to respect the independence of every other sovereign state?
3244	Maliqi v. 17 E. 89th St. Tenants, Inc., 25 Misc. 3d 182, 187, 880 N.Y.S.2d 917, 921 (Sup. Ct. 2009)	1	A "motion in limine" is a preliminary application usually made at the beginning of a trial that certain evidence, claimed to be inadmissible and prejudicial, not be referred to or offered at trial.	A motion in limine , by definition, is a "preliminary application," usually made at the beginning of a trial, that certain evidence, claimed to be inadmissible and prejudicial, not be referred to or offered at trial (see generally, Black's Law Dictionary [7th ed. 1999]).	"Is a ""motion in limine"" a preliminary application usually made at the beginning of a trial, that certain evidence, claimed to be inadmissible and prejudicial, not be referred to or offered at trial?"
3245	Olds v. Olds, 356 N.W.2d 571, 572 (Iowa,1984)	1	A party may not obtain an adjudication of any point of law raised in any pleading which goes to the whole or any material part of the case if any material facts are in dispute. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 105.	Iowa Rule of Civil Procedure 105 permits a party to obtain an adjudication of "any point of law raised in any pleading which goes to the whole or any material part of the case." The adjudication cannot be made if any material facts are in dispute.	Can a party obtain an adjudication of any point of law raised in any pleading which goes to the whole or any material part of the case if any material facts are in dispute?
3248	Brister v. Southwest Louisiana Hosp. Ass'n, 624 So.2d 970, 972 (La.App. 3 Cir.,1993)	8	Suit subject to dismissal for premature filing must be dismissed without prejudice and plaintiff's right to bring action anew must be maintained. LSA-C.C.P. arts. 423,933 comment, 1673.	The official Revision Comment (c) of La.C.C.P. 933 correctly points out that a suit subject to dismissal for premature filing must be dismissed without prejudice and plaintiff's right to bring the action anew must be maintained.	Should a suit subject to dismissal for premature filing must be dismissed without prejudice and plaintiff's right to bring action anew be maintained?
3250	In re Pihl, Inc., 529 B.R. 414, 425 (D.Mass. 2015)	6	Equitable subrogation occurs when one party, by virtue of its payment of another's obligation, steps into the shoes of the party who was owed the obligation for purposes of getting recompense for its payment.	Equitable Subrogation occurs when "one party by virtue of its payment of another's obligation, steps into the shoes of the party who was owed the obligation for the purposes of getting recompense for its payment.	"Does subrogation or equitable subrogation occur when one party, by virtue of its payment of another's obligation, steps into shoes of party who was owed the obligation for purpose of getting recompense for its payment?"

3252	In re Schuler, 354 B.R. 37, 40 (Bkrtcy.W.D.N.Y.,2006)	2	Under New York law, in "subrogation," a third party discharges an obligor's obligation to the obligee and then seeks the right to stand in the obligee's position, so as to be able to assert the obligee's former rights against the obligor.	New York Jurisprudence 2nd accurately states that "in subrogation, a third party discharges an obligor's obligation to the obligee and then seeks the right to stand in the obligee's position, so as to be able to assert the obligee's former rights against the obligor."	"In ""subrogation,"" does a third party discharges an obligor's obligation to the obligee and then seeks the right to stand in the obligee's position, so as to be able to assert the obligee's former rights against the obligor?"
3253	In re Shavers, 418 B.R. 589, 605 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. 2009)	17	Under Mississippi law, decisions in the area of law dealing with equitable subrogation generally are highly fact-specific, and there is no general rule to determine when the right of subrogation exists, since it depends upon the equities of each case.	In accordance with this practice, this Court looks to the law of other states when necessary to supplement Mississippi's law on equitable subrogation. This Court acknowledges at the outset that decisions in this area of law generally are highly fact-specific, and there is no general rule to determine when the right of subrogation exists, since it depends upon the equities of each case.	Is there a general rule which can be laid down to determine whether a right of equitable subrogation exists since this right depends upon the equities of each particular case?
3254	Dodge Data & Analytics LLC v. iSqFt, Inc., 183 F.Supp.3d 855, 874 (S.D.Ohio, 2016)	43	Under Ohio law, one who commits a trespass to a chattel is subject to liability to the possessor of the chattel if, but only if: (1) he dispossesses the other of the chattel; (2) the chattel is impaired as to its condition, quality, or value; (3) the possessor is deprived of the use of the chattel for a substantial time; or (4) bodily harm is caused to the possessor, or harm is caused to some person or thing in which the possessor has a legally protected interest. Restatement (Second) of Torts S 218.	One who commits a trespass to a chattel is subject to liability to the possessor of the chattel if, but only if, (a) he dispossesses the other of the chattel, or (b) the chattel is impaired as to its condition, quality, or value, or (c) the possessor is deprived of the use of the chattel for a substantial time, or (d) bodily harm is caused to the possessor, or harm is caused to some person or thing in which the possessor has a legally protected interest.	When can a trespasser be subjected to liability to the possessor of the trespassed chattel?
3256	Cruz v. U.S., 387 F.Supp.2d 1057, 1068 (N.D.Cal., 2005)	4	"Act of state doctrine" is non-jurisdictional, prudential limitation on court's power to examine official actions of foreign state in order to avoid conflicts with foreign policy of political branches.	Act of State Doctrine [4] [5] [6] [7] The act of state doctrine is a non- jurisdictional, prudential limitation on a court's power to examine the official actions of a foreign state in order to avoid conflicts with the foreign policy of the political branches.	"Is the act of state doctrine a non- jurisdictional, prudential limitation on a court's power to examine official actions of foreign states?"

3257	Dodge Data & Analytics LLC v. iSqFt, Inc., 183 F.Supp.3d 855, 874 (S.D. Ohio, 2016)	43	Under Ohio law, one who commits a trespass to a chattel is subject to liability to the possessor of the chattel if, but only if: (1) he dispossesses the other of the chattel; (2) the chattel is impaired as to its condition, quality, or value; (3) the possessor is deprived of the use of the chattel for a substantial time; or (4) bodily harm is caused to the possessor, or harm is caused to some person or thing in which the possessor has a legally protected interest. Restatement (Second) of Torts S 218.	One who commits a trespass to a chattel is subject to liability to the possessor of the chattel if, but only if, (a) he dispossesses the other of the chattel, or (b) the chattel is impaired as to its condition, quality, or value, or (c) the possessor is deprived of the use of the chattel for a substantial time, or (d) bodily harm is caused to the possessor, or harm is caused to some person or thing in which the possessor has a legally protected interest.	When will trespassers to chattel be subject to liability to the possessor of the chattel?
3260	In re Bill Heard Enterprises, Inc., 423 B.R. 771, 780 (N.D. Ala. 2010)	4	"Subrogation," generally, is defined as the substitution of another person in the place of a creditor, so that the person in whose favor it is exercised succeeds to the rights of the creditor in relation to the debt.	Subrogation, generally, is defined as the "substitution of another person in the place of a creditor, so that the person in whose favor it is exercised succeeds to the rights of the creditor in relation to the debt."	"Is subrogation generally defined as the substitution of another person in the place of a creditor, so that the person in whose favor it is exercised succeeds to the rights of the creditor in relation to the debt?"
3266	United States v. Aguasvivas-Castillo, 668 F.3d 7, 17 (C.A.1 (Puerto Rico), 2012)	10	To determine whether a forfeiture is grossly disproportional, courts should consider: (1) whether the defendant falls into the class of persons at whom the criminal statute was principally directed; (2) other penalties authorized by the legislature (or the Sentencing Commission); and (3) the harm caused by the defendant. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 8.	To determine whether a forfeiture is grossly disproportional, courts should consider the following factors: "(1) whether the defendant falls into the class of persons at whom the criminal statute was principally directed; (2) other penalties authorized by the legislature (or the Sentencing Commission); and (3) the harm caused by the defendant."	What factors should the court consider for determining whether a forfeiture is grossly disproportional?
3268	National Bank of Rochester v. Meadowbrook Heights, Inc., 80 Mich.App. 777, 782 (Mich.App. 1978)	3	Married women may acquire, hold, and devise property separate from their husbands' influence and not subject to their husbands' debts, with like effect as if they were unmarried, and may be held liable on any contract made in relation to their sole property. M.C.L.A. SS 557.1 et seq., 557.4.	s 26.161 et seq., provides that married women may acquire, hold, and devise property separate from their husbands' influence and not subject to their husbands' debts, with "like effect as if * * * (they) were unmarried", M.C.L.A. s 557.1; M.S.A. s 26.161, and may be held liable on any contract made in relation to their sole property, M.C.L.A.	Is the separate property of a husband or wife liable for the debts of their spouse?
3270	Southland Corp. v. Keating, 465 U.S. 1, 10 (1984)	5	In enacting provision of federal arbitration act that an arbitration provision is valid and irrevocable the Congress declared a national policy favoring arbitration and withdrew power of the states to require a judicial forum for resolution of claims which the contracting parties agreed to resolve by arbitration. 9 U.S.C.A. S 2.	So interpreted the California Franchise Investment Law directly conflicts with 2 of the Federal Arbitration Act and violates the Supremacy Clause. [5] In enacting 2 of the federal Act, Congress declared a national policy favoring arbitration and withdrew the power of the states to require a judicial forum for the resolution of claims which the contracting parties agreed to resolve by arbitration.	Does Congress withdraw the power of the states by declaring a national policy favoring arbitration?

3271	E.I. DuPont de Nemours and Co. v. Rhone Poulenc Fiber and Resin Intermediates, S.A.S., 269 F.3d 187, 194 (C.A.3 (Del.), 2001)	3	The liberal policy favoring arbitration agreements is at bottom a policy guaranteeing the enforcement of private contractual arrangements, and under the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA), a court may only compel a party to arbitrate where that party has entered into a written agreement to arbitrate that covers the dispute. 9 U.S.C.A. S 1 et seq.	The liberal policy "favoring arbitration agreements ... is at bottom a policy guaranteeing the enforcement of private contractual arrangements," id., and under the FAA, "a court may only compel a party to arbitrate where that party has entered into a written agreement to arbitrate that covers the dispute."	"Will a liberal policy favoring arbitration, guarantee the enforcement of private contractual arrangements?"
3272	Banc One Acceptance Corp. v. Hill, 367 F.3d 426, 429 (5th Cir. 2004)	6	While there is a strong federal policy favoring arbitration, the policy does not apply to the initial determination whether there is a valid agreement to arbitrate; nonetheless, once a court determines that an agreement to arbitrate exists, the court must pay careful attention to the strong federal policy favoring arbitration and must resolve all ambiguities in favor of arbitration. 9 U.S.C.A. S 4.	While there is a strong federal policy favoring arbitration, the policy does not apply to the initial determination whether there is a valid agreement to arbitrate. Will-Drill Res., Inc. v. Samson Res. Co. , 352 F.3d 211, 214 (5th Cir.2003). Nonetheless, once a court determines that an agreement to arbitrate exists, the court must pay careful attention to the strong federal policy favoring arbitration and must resolve all ambiguities in favor of arbitration. Primerica Life , 304 F.3d at 471 (citing	Does a strong federal policy favoring arbitration help in determining a valid agreement to arbitrate exists between parties?
3273	Moses H. Cone Memorial Hosp. v. Mercury Constr. Corp., 460 U.S. 1, 24–25 (U.S.N.C., 1983)	13	Arbitration Act establishes that, as a matter of federal law, any doubts concerning scope of arbitrable issues should be resolved in favor of arbitration, whether problem at hand is construction of contract language itself or allegation of waiver, delay, or like defense to arbitrability. 9 U.S.C.A. S 2.	The Arbitration Act establishes that, as a matter of federal law, any doubts concerning the scope of arbitrable issues *25 should be resolved in favor of arbitration, whether the problem at hand is the construction of the contract language itself or an allegation of waiver, delay, or a like defense to arbitrability.	Are doubts regarding the scope of arbitral issues resolved in favor of arbitration?
3274	Cox v. City of Kinston, 8 S.E.2d 252, 256 (N.C. 1940)	4	The Housing Authority Act conferring quasi-judicial and administrative duties on same board violates no implication of constitution requiring the supreme judicial power to be kept separate from the legislative and executive. Pub.Acts 1935, c. 456; Const. art. 1, S 8; art. 2, S 1.	The performance of quasi-judicial and administrative duties by the same Board violates no implication of the cited section of the Constitution, requiring that the supreme judicial power be kept separate from the legislative and executive.	"Is a statute conferring quasi-judicial and administrative duties on a same board violate section of the Constitution, requiring that the supreme judicial power be kept separate from the legislative and executive?"
3275	Mack v. Carmack, 79 So.3d 597, 610–11 (Ala., 2011)	6	Amendment to homicide statutes to include as a victim of homicide "an unborn child in utero at any stage of development, regardless of viability," constitutes clear legislative intent to protect even nonviable fetuses from homicidal acts. Code 1975, S 13A-6-1(a)(3).	Our legislature has now expressly amended Alabama's homicide statutes to include as a victim of homicide "an unborn child in utero at any stage of development, regardless of viability." 13A-6-1(a)(3), Ala.Code 1975 (emphasis added). This change constitutes clear legislative intent to protect even nonviable fetuses from homicidal acts.	Is there a clear legislative intent to protect even nonviable fetuses?

3276	Union Nat. Bank & Tr. Co. v. Bd. of Sup'rs of Kendall Cnty., 65 Ill. App. 3d 1004, 1009-10, 382 N.E.2d 1382, 1386 (1978)	7	"Reclamation Act's" provision that all requirements of Environmental Protection Act shall be complied with fully at all times during mining, reclamation and after reclamation only means that a person who seeks to operate strip mine is not exempted from any applicable provisions of Environmental Protection Act by reason of operation of "Reclamation Act." S.H.A. ch. 96 1/2, S 4507(g).	The Reclamation Act does provide that all requirements of the Environmental Protection Act "shall be complied with fully at all times during mining, reclamation, and after reclamation." (Ill.Rev.Stat.1977, ch. 961/2, par. 4507(g).) But we read this provision merely as a legislative statement that any person who seeks *1010 to operate a strip mine is not exempted from any applicable provision of the Environmental Protection Act by reason of the operation of the Reclamation Act.	"Does the Reclamation Act provide that all requirements of the Environmental Protection Act shall be complied with fully at all times during mining, reclamation, and after reclamation?"
3278	Bear Creek Development Corp. v. Genesee Foundation, 919 P.2d 948, 954 (Colo.App.,1996)	14	Because scope of right condemned for way of necessity can be limited so as to achieve its purpose most effectively, and disputes which arise as to its scope are resolved, in part, by reference to court's order of condemnation, court must clearly define extent of easement, at request of condemnee, in order to avoid inevitable litigation over vague condemnation order. West's C.R.S.A. Const. Art. 2, S 14.	Because the scope of the condemned right can be limited so as to achieve its purpose most effectively, State Department of Highways v. Denver & Rio Grande Western R.R. Co., supra, and disputes which arise as to its scope are resolved, in part, by reference to the court's order of condemnation, a court must clearly define the extent of the easement, at the request of the condemnee, in order to avoid inevitable litigation over a vague condemnation order.	May the scope of the condemned right be limited?
3279	Wilson v. City & Cnty. of Denver, 65 Colo. 484, 489, 178 P. 17, 19 (1919)	4	The right to carry on a legitimate business is a property right, and cannot be taken away or abridged by an exercise of police power, unless necessary to interests of public generally, and unless means employed are reasonably necessary for accomplishment of the purpose, and not unduly oppressive upon individuals.	The right to carry on a legitimate business is a property right, and it cannot be taken away or abridged by an exercise of the police power, unless it appears: 'First, that the interests of the public generally, as distinguished from those of a particular class, require such interference; and, second, that the means are reasonably necessary for the accomplishment of the purpose, and not unduly oppressive upon individuals.' Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 14 Sup. Ct. 499, 38 L. Ed. 385.	Is the right to carry on a legitimate business a property right?
3281	Moorman v. Department of Community Affairs, 626 So.2d 1108, 1110 (Fla.App. 3 Dist., 1993)	1	Statutes relating to environmental land and water management require balancing of state's interests in protecting public's health, safety, and welfare against constitutionally protected private property interests of landowner.	Statutes relating to environmental land and water management require a balancing of the state's interests in protecting the public's health, safety, and welfare against the constitutionally protected private property interests of the landowner.	"Should there exist a balance in the interests of the state in protecting the health, safety, and welfare of the public with those of the private property owner?"

3285	State v. Begey, 672 N.W.2d 747, 750 (Iowa, 2003)	8	A defendant can be relieved of criminal responsibility for a victim's death if an intervening act breaks the chain of causal connection between the defendant's actions and the victim's death; however, for an intervening act to relieve a defendant of criminal responsibility for homicide, the intervening act must be the sole proximate cause of death.	A defendant can be relieved of criminal responsibility if an intervening act breaks the chain of causal connection between the defendant's actions and the victim's death. However, for an intervening act to relieve a defendant of criminal responsibility for homicide, the intervening act must be the sole proximate cause of death.	Should the defendants intervening act be the sole proximate cause of death to constitute criminal responsibility for homicide?
3286	Athena Holdings, LLC v. Marcus, 125 A.3d 290, 294, 160 Conn.App. 470, 476–77 (Conn.App., 2015)	8	The word "action" has no precise meaning and the scope of proceedings which will be included within the term depends upon the nature and purpose of the particular statute in question; what the legislature may have intended to be a civil action for some purposes may not be a civil action for others.	As this court has previously held, "[t]he word action has no precise meaning and the scope of *477 proceedings which will be included within the term ... depends upon the nature and purpose of the particular statute in question.... What the legislature may have intended to be a civil action for some purposes may not be a civil action for others."	"What do the scope of proceedings included within the term ""action"" depend upon?"
3287	Tennessee, Alabama & Georgia R. Co. v. Zugar, 193 Ga. 386, 386 (Ga. 1942)	3	In case of a trespass by cutting and carrying away timber, a "wilful trespasser" is one who knows that he is wrong, while an "innocent trespasser" is one who believes that he is right, and the question as to whether the trespass was wilfully or innocently done is generally for the jury to determine, except where the trespasser acts with such entire want of care and reckless indifference as would clearly amount to a disregard of the rights of the other party.	In such a case, a 'wilful trespasser' can be defined in general terms as one who knows that he is wrong, while an 'innocent trespasser' is one who believes that he is right. 45 Words & Phrases, 341, and cit. The question as to whether the trespass was wilfully or innocently done is generally for the jury to determine, except in those cases where the trespasser acts with such entire want of care and reckless indifference as would clearly amount to a disregard of the rights of the other party.	Who is a wilful trespasser?
3288	Stacy v. Ross, 798 So. 2d 1275, 1280 (Miss., 2001)	6	The determination whether parents are unreasonable in denying visitation in whole or part to grandparents is not a contest between equals; parents with custody have a paramount right to control the environment, physical, social, and emotional, to which their children are exposed. West's A.M.C. SS 93-16-1 to 93-16-7.	The determination whether parents are unreasonable in denying visitation in whole or part to grandparents is not a contest between equals. Parents with custody have a paramount right to control the environment, physical, social, and emotional, to which their children are exposed.	Do parents with custody have a paramount right to control the environment to which their children are exposed?

3289	Schachter v. Citigroup, Inc., 47 Cal.4th 610, 621 (2009)	16	While the public policy in favor of full and prompt payment of an employee's earned wages is fundamental and well established, nothing in the public policy of California concerning wages transforms a contingent expectation of receiving bonuses into an entitlement.	While "[t]he public policy in favor of full and prompt payment of an employee's earned wages is fundamental and well established" (Smith v. Superior Court (2006) 39 Cal.4th 77, 82, 45 Cal.Rptr.3d 394, 137 P.3d 218), "nothing in the public policy of this state concerning wages ... transforms [a] contingent expectation of receiving bonuses into an entitlement."	Is there a public policy in favor of full and prompt payment of an employee's earned wages?
3290	In re Johnson, 19 B.R. 371, 374 (Bkrtcy.Kan., 1982)	3	Kansas courts use a number of tests in determining existence of a partnership, and no one factor or test is conclusive; relevant factors include parties' intentions, sharing of profits, losses and expenses, joint control of management, joint ownership of assets, and active participation in management. K.S.A. 56-301 et seq.	Kansas courts use a number of tests in determining the existence of a partnership. No one factor or test is conclusive. Factors include: the parties' intentions; sharing of profits, losses and expenses; joint control of management; joint ownership of assets; and active participation in management.	What tests are utilized to determine the existence of a partnership?
3291	DeOrnellas v. Aspen Square Management, Inc., 295 F.Supp.2d 753, 759 (E.D.Mich., 2003)	1	Congress' purpose in enacting the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) was to reverse longstanding judicial hostility to arbitration agreements that had existed at English common law and had been adopted by American courts, and to place arbitration agreements upon the same footing as other contracts. 9 U.S.C.A. § 1 et seq.	Congress' purpose in enacting the FAA "was to reverse the longstanding judicial hostility to arbitration agreements that had existed at English common law and had been adopted by American courts, and to place arbitration agreements upon the same footing as other contracts."	What was the purpose behind the enactment of the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA)?
3292	Sheldon v. PHH Corp., 135 F.3d 848, 852 (2d Cir. 1998)	4	In diversity case, district court ordinarily determines applicable state law by reference to choice of law rules of forum state, but, when case has been transferred pursuant to interests of justice, even on plaintiff's own motion, court will apply law of transferor forum, including that forum's choice of law rules. 28 U.S.C.A. § 1404(a).	In a diversity case, a district court ordinarily determines the applicable state law by reference to the choice of law rules of the forum state. See Klaxon Co. v. Stentor Elec. Mfg. Co., 313 U.S. 487, 496, 61 S.Ct. 1020, 1021- 22, 85 L.Ed. 1477 (1941). However, when a case has been transferred pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a), even on plaintiff's own motion, a court will apply the law of the transferor forum, including that forum's choice of law rules.	How do courts determine which state's choice of law rules apply?
3293	Contech Const. Products, Inc. v. Heierli, 764 F.Supp.2d 96, 107 (D.D.C., 2011)	10	The intent of the contracting parties to apply state arbitration rules or law to arbitration proceedings and opt out of the applicability of the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) must be explicitly stated in the contract and a general choice of law provision does not evidence such intent. 9 U.S.C.A. § 1 et seq.	"[T]he intent of the contracting parties to apply state arbitration rules or law to arbitration proceedings [and opt out of the applicability of the FAA] must be explicitly stated in the contract and ... a general choice of law provision does not evidence such intent.	Does a generic choice of law provision explicitly state the intent of the parties to apply state arbitration rules?

3294	Safar v. Tingle, 178 F.Supp.3d 338, 346 (E.D.Va., 2016)	3	In a malicious prosecution claim, "probable cause" is defined as knowledge of such facts and circumstances to raise the belief in a reasonable mind, acting on those facts and circumstances, that the plaintiff is guilty of the crime of which he is suspected, as judged with reference to the time the defendant took the action initiating the criminal charges; importantly, when the facts relating to probable cause are in dispute, there is a question of fact for the jury. U.S. Const. Amend. 4.	Probable cause is defined as "knowledge of such facts and circumstances to raise the belief in a reasonable mind, acting on those facts and circumstances, that the plaintiff is guilty of the crime of which he is suspected," as "judged with reference to the time the defendant took the action initiating the criminal charges." Andrews v. Ring, 266 Va. 311, 322, 585 S.E.2d 780 (2003) (citation omitted). Importantly, when the facts relating to probable cause are in dispute, there is a question of fact for the jury.	How is probable cause defined in the context of malicious prosecution?
3295	Boeken v. Philip Morris USA, Inc., 230 P.3d 342, 348, 108 Cal.Rptr.3d 806, 813–14, 48 Cal.4th 788, 798 (Cal., 2010)	11	In California the phrase "cause of action" is often used indiscriminately to mean counts which state according to different legal theories the same cause of action, but for purposes of applying the doctrine of res judicata, the phrase "cause of action" has a more precise meaning: the cause of action is the right to obtain redress for a harm suffered, regardless of the specific remedy sought or the legal theory advanced.	"In California the phrase 'cause of action' is often used indiscriminately ... to mean counts which state [according to different [T]he same cause of action...." (Eichler Homes of San Mateo, Inc. v. Superior Court (1961) 55 Cal.2d 845, 847, 13 Cal.Rptr. 194, 361 P.2d 914.) But for purposes of 814 applying the doctrine of res judicata, the phrase "cause of action" has a more precise meaning: The cause of action is the right to obtain redress for a harm suffered, regardless of the specific remedy sought or the legal theory (common law or statutory) advanced.	"Is a ""cause of action"" a right to obtain redress for a harm suffered?"
3296	Miami Bridge Co. v. Miami Beach Ry. Co., 152 Fla. 458, 473 (Fla. 1943)	11	Except insofar as such matters may have been regulated by duly constituted public authority, a utility has the right to prescribe rules, regulations, and rates for the conduct of its business, provided such rules, regulations, and rates are reasonable, just, nondiscriminatory, and not contrary to law.	Except insofar as such matters may have been regulated by duly constituted public authority, a utility has the right to prescribe rules, regulations and rates for the conduct of its business, provided the same are reasonable, just, nondiscriminatory, and not contrary to law.	Do public utilities have the power to prescribe and adopt reasonable rules and regulations not contrary to law?
3297	Valley View Health Care, Inc. v. Chapman, 992 F. Supp. 2d 1016, 1039 (E.D. Cal. 2014)	33	As federal substantive law, the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) preempts contrary state law; nonetheless, the FAA's preemption power has an exception, via the savings clause, in that it does not require the enforcement of arbitration agreements on such grounds as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract. U.S.C.A. Const. Art. 6, cl. 2; 9 U.S.C.A. § 2.	"As federal substantive law, the FAA preempts contrary state law." Mortensen, 722 F.3d at 1158. Nonetheless, the FAA's preemption power has an exception, via the 9 U.S.C. § 2 savings clause, in that it does not require the enforcement of arbitration agreements on "such grounds as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract."	Are there any exceptions to the preemption power of the Federal Arbitration Act?

3298	Appeal of Granite State Elec. Co., 421 A.2d 121, 124, 120 N.H. 536, 541 (N.H., 1980)	7	The Public Utilities Commission may order a public utility, which has collected charges at rates which are not final and which are later found to be unlawful, to make due reparation either by repayment or by credit to persons who have paid according to those rates with interest from the date of payment.	We hold, therefore, that the PUC may order a public utility, which has collected charges at rates which are not final and which are later found to be unlawful, to make due reparation either by repayment or by credit to persons who have paid according to those rates with interest from the date of payment.	When may a Public Utility Commission order a public utility to refund rates?
3299	St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Battle, 44 Ohio App. 2d 261, 269 (1975)	3	Subrogation is broad enough to include every instance in which one party pays a debt for which another is primarily answerable and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter; however, the payment must be made either under compulsion or for the protection of some interest of the party making the payment and in discharge of an existing liability.	Subrogation, an equitable doctrine taken from the civil law, is broad enough to include every instance in which one party pays a debt for which another is primarily answerable, and which in equity and good conscience should have been discharged by the latter, so long as the payment was made either under compulsion or for the protection of some interest of the party making the payment, and in discharge of an existing liability.	What does equitable subrogation include?
3300	Bank of America, N.A. v. Diamond Financial, LLC, 42 N.E.3d 1151, 1157, 88 Mass.App.Ct. 564, 571 (Mass.App.Ct., 2015)	7	Five factors must be determined before equitable subrogation can be applied: (1) the subrogee made the payment to protect his or her own interest; (2) the subrogee did not act as a volunteer; (3) the subrogee was not primarily liable for the debt paid; (4) the subrogee paid off the entire encumbrance; and (5) subrogation would not work any injustice to the rights of the junior lienholder.	[T]he Supreme Judicial Court adopted five factors that must be determined before equitable subrogation can be applied. These five factors are: "(1) the subrogee made the payment to protect his or her own interest, (2) the subrogee did not act as a volunteer, (3) the subrogee was not primarily liable for the debt paid, (4) the subrogee paid off the entire encumbrance, and (5) subrogation would not work any injustice to the rights of the junior lienholder."	What do courts look for in deciding whether equitable subrogation applies?
3301	Smith v. Board of Ed. of Oswego Community High School Dist., 405 Ill. 143, 148 (1950)	12	The unexplained use of the terms fraud or fraudulently in a complaint alleges nothing, and such allegations must include facts on which they are based, and a general charge that a party acted fraudulently or was guilty of fraud is not good pleading for the reason that only a conclusion of the pleader is stated.	It is not enough to merely use the terms 'fraud' or 'fraudulently' in a complaint, because the unexplained use of such terms alleges nothing. Such allegations must include the facts upon which they are based, and a general charge that a party acted fraudulently or was guilty of fraud is not good pleading for the reason that only a conclusion 897 of the pleader is stated.	Is a general charge that a party acted fraudulently a conclusion?

3302	Warren Tr. v. United States, 107 Fed. Cl. 533, 551 (2012)	21	A "noncategorical taking" of property effected through regulation falls short of eliminating all economically beneficial use of property, and is the consequence of a regulatory imposition that prohibits or restricts only some of the uses that would otherwise be available to the property owner, but leaves the owner with substantial viable economic use. U.S. Const. Amend. 5.	A noncategorical taking "fall[s] short of eliminating all economically beneficial use of property." Consumers Energy Co. v. United States, 84 Fed.Cl. 152, 156 (2008) (citing Palazzolo v. Rhode Island, 533 U.S. 606, 617, 121 S.Ct. 2448, 150 L.Ed.2d 592 (2001)). A noncategorical taking is the "consequence of a regulatory imposition that prohibits or restricts only some of the uses that would otherwise be available to the property owner, but leaves the owner with substantial viable economic use...." Palm Beach, 231 F.3d at 1357.	Does a non-categorical takings fall short of eliminating all economically beneficial use of property?
3303	Cruickshank v. Clean Seas Co., 346 B.R. 571, 581 (D. Mass. 2006)	6	Equitable principle behind "subrogation," an old term rooted in equity which today is used to mean to stand in the shoes of, is that when one, pursuant to obligation, and so not a volunteer, fulfills the duties of another, he is entitled to assert the rights of that other against third persons.	"Subrogation is an old term, rooted in equity," which today is used to mean "stand in the shoes of." Nat'l Shawmut Bank of Boston v. New Amsterdam Cas. Co., Inc., 411 F.2d 843, 844 (1st Cir.1969). "The equitable principle is that when one, pursuant to obligation—not a volunteer, fulfills the duties of another, he is entitled to assert the rights of that other against third persons."	"Is the equitable principle behind ""subrogation that when one, pursuant to obligation, and so not a volunteer, fulfills the duties of another, he is entitled to assert the rights of that other against third persons?"
3304	Welch v. Complete Care Corp., 818 So. 2d 645, 648 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2002)	1	Equitable subrogation is generally appropriate when the following five factors exist: (1) the subrogee made the payment to protect his or her own interest, (2) the subrogee did not act as a volunteer, (3) the subrogee was not primarily liable for the debt, (4) the subrogee paid off the entire debt, and (5) subrogation would not work any injustice to the rights of a third party.	In Dade County School Board v. Radio Station WQBA , 731 So.2d 638, 646 (Fla.1999), the court held that equitable subrogation is generally appropriate when the following five factors exist: (1) the subrogee made the payment to protect his or her own interest, (2) the subrogee did not act as a volunteer, (3) the subrogee was not primarily liable for the debt, (4) the subrogee paid off the entire debt, and (5) subrogation would not work any injustice to the rights of a third party.	Where is equitable subrogation appropriate?
3305	Ripley v. Piehl, 700 N.W.2d 540, 545 (Minn.App.,2005)	9	Equitable subrogation cannot be invoked where it would work an injustice, violate sound public policy, or result in harm to innocent third parties.	Subrogation cannot be invoked where it would work an injustice, violate sound public policy, or result in harm to innocent third parties.	"Can equitable subrogation be invoked where it would work an injustice, violate sound public policy, or result in harm to innocent third parties?"

3306	Cunningham v. Fleetwood Homes of Georgia, Inc., 253 F.3d 611, 617–18 (C.A.11 (Ala.),2001)	3	Agreements to arbitrate are essentially forum-selection clauses, and by agreeing to arbitrate statutory claim, party does not forgo substantive rights afforded by statute; it only submits to their resolution in arbitral, rather than judicial, forum.	Agreements to arbitrate are essentially forum- selection clauses, Scherk v. Alberto-Culver Co., 417 U.S. 506, 519, 94 S.Ct. 2449, 2457, 41 L.Ed.2d 270 (1974) and by "agreeing to arbitrate a statutory claim, a party does not forgo the substantive rights afforded by the statute; it only submits to their resolution in an arbitral, rather than a judicial, forum."	Does a party forgo their substantive rights afforded by statute when agreeing to arbitrate a statutory claim?
3307	Baucom v. Friend, 52 A.2d 123, 124 (D.C.App. 1947)	2	Marginal notations or memoranda, placed on bill or note at time of execution with intention of making them part of the contract, constitute part thereof and must be considered along with body of the instrument in arriving at parties' true intent.	'Marginal notations' or memoranda placed on a bill or note at the time of the execution thereof with the intention of making them a part of the contract, constitute a part thereof and must be considered along with the provisions in the body of the instrument in arriving at the true intent of the parties.	Do memoranda or marginal notations on a bill or note become a substantive part of the instrument?
3308	Weidner v. Sanchez, 14 S.W.3d 353, 363 (Tex. App. 2000)	20	A "motion in limine" is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, before trial, certain evidentiary rulings that the court may be asked to make.	A motion in limine is a procedural device that permits a party to identify, before trial, certain evidentiary rulings that the court may be asked to make. Fort Worth Hotel Ltd. Partnership v. Enserch Corp., 977 S.W.2d 746, 757 (Tex.App.—Fort Worth 1998, no pet).	"Is a motion in limine a procedural device that allows parties to identify, prior to trial, certain evidentiary rulings the court may be asked to make?"
3310	Queensway Financial Holdings Ltd. v. Cotton & Allen, P.S.C., 237 S.W.3d 141, 148 (Ky., 2007)	5	The accrual rule means that the limitations period does not even begin to run until the cause of action accrues; until that time, no cause of action yet exists, meaning a lawsuit would be premature and should be dismissed.	The distinction between the two rules is important because, when properly applied, the accrual rule means that the limitations period does not even begin to run until the cause of action accrues. Until that time, no cause of action yet exists, meaning a lawsuit would be premature and should be dismissed. [6]	Does the accrual rule mean that the limitations period does not even begin to run until the cause of action accrues?
3311	Cobb v. City of Stockton, 120 Cal.Rptr.3d 389, 394, 192 Cal.App.4th 65, 72–73 (Cal.App. 3 Dist., 2011)	3	Generally, a cause of action accrues and the statute of limitation begins to run when a suit may be maintained; ordinarily this is when the wrongful act is done and the obligation or the liability arises, but it does not accrue until the party owning it is entitled to begin and prosecute an action thereon.	Generally, a cause of action accrues and the statute of limitation begins to run when a suit may be maintained. [Citations.] "Ordinarily this is *73 when the wrongful act is done and the obligation or the liability arises, but it does not 'accrue until the party owning it is entitled to begin and prosecute an action thereon.	Does a claim accrue when a wrongful act is done and the obligation or the liability arise?

3312	Adamson v. Innovative Real Estate, Inc., 284 S.W.3d 721, 731 (Mo.App. S.D.,2009)	10	A claim matures or accrues when the damage sustained is capable of ascertainment, there exists the right of the injured party to bring and maintain a claim in a court of law, and it is within claimant's power to prosecute a suit to successful judgment.	A claim matures or accrues when the damage sustained is capable of ascertainment, "there exists the right of the injured party to bring and maintain a claim in a court of law," and it is within claimant's power to prosecute a suit to successful judgment.	Does a cause of action or claim mature or accrue when the damage sustained is capable of ascertainment?
3313	Doe v. Exxon Mobil Corporation, 69 F.Supp.3d 75, 88 (D.D.C., 2014)	14	Under the act of state doctrine, it is not sufficient that a court's factual findings would impugn the foreign state's actions; the claims must call for the invalidation of those actions.	It is not sufficient under the act of state doctrine that a court's factual findings would "impugn" the foreign state's actions; the claims must call for the invalidation of those actions.	"Under the act of state doctrine, is it not sufficient that a court's factual findings would impugn the foreign state's actions or should the claims call for the invalidation of those actions?"
3314	BAE Sys. Tech. Sol. & Servs., Inc. v. Republic of Korea's Def. Acquisition Program Admin., 195 F. Supp. 3d 776, 786 (D. Md. 2016)	8	The same principles underlying territorial jurisdiction occasionally permit a state to address conduct causing harmful effects across national borders.	The same "principles underlying territorial jurisdiction occasionally permit a state to address conduct causing harmful effects across national borders." Id.	Do the same principles underlying territorial jurisdiction permit a state to address conduct causing harmful effects across national borders?
3315	United States v. Sum of $70,990,605, 234 F. Supp. 3d 212, 238-39 (D.D.C. 2017)	18	The act of state doctrine, under which federal and state courts in the United States must presume the validity of an official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory, applies only when a court must decide, that is, when the outcome of the case turns upon, the effect of official action by a foreign sovereign.	Under the act of state doctrine, federal and state courts in the United States must "presume the validity of an 'official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory.' . . . As exemplified by each of these cases, the act of state doctrine applies only "when a court must decide—that is, when the outcome of the case turns upon—the effect of official action by a foreign sovereign."	"Under the act of state doctrine, must federal and state courts in the United States presume the validity of an official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory?"
3316	Voda v. Cordis Corp., 476 F.3d 887, 904 (Fed. Cir. 2007)	11	As a principle of decision binding on federal and state courts alike, the act of state doctrine requires that, in the process of deciding, the acts of foreign sovereigns taken within their own jurisdictions shall be deemed valid.	As "a 'principle of decision binding on federal and state courts alike,' " the act of state doctrine "requires that, in the process of deciding, the acts of foreign sovereigns taken within their own jurisdictions shall be deemed valid." W.S. Kirkpatrick & Co., Inc. v. Env'tl. Tectonics Corp., Int'l, 493 U.S. 400, 406, 409, 110 S.Ct. 701, 107 L.Ed.2d 816 (1990) (citation omitted).	Is there a principle of decision that is binding on federal and state courts alike related to the act of state doctrine?
3317	Hourani v. Alexander V. Mirtchev & Krull Corp., 796 F.3d 1, 14 (D.C. Cir. 2015)	20	A decision by a foreign government to engage in official speech about its own nationals' domestic activities is the kind of distinctly sovereign act and formal governmental action concerning internal affairs that triggers the act of state doctrine's and international comity's traditional concerns.	And that decision by a foreign government to engage in official speech about its own nationals' domestic activities is the kind of "distinctly sovereign" act and "formal governmental action" concerning internal affairs that triggers the Act of State doctrine's and international comity's traditional concerns.	"Under the act of state doctrine, is it not sufficient that a court's factual findings would impugn the foreign state's actions or should the claims call for the invalidation of those actions?"

3318	Von Saher v. Norton Simon Museum of Art at Pasadena, 754 F.3d 712, 725 (9th Cir. 2014)	11	The act within its own boundaries of one sovereign state cannot become the subject of re-examination and modification in the courts of another; such action when shown to have been taken, becomes, a rule of decision for the courts of the United States.	"[T]he act within its own boundaries of one sovereign state cannot become the subject of re-examination and modification in the courts of another. Such action when shown to have been taken, becomes, ... a rule of decision for the courts of this country." Ricaud v. Am. Metal Co., 246 U.S. 304, 310, 38 S.Ct. 312, 62 L.Ed. 733 (1918).	Can an act within the boundaries of one sovereign state become the subject of re-examination and modification in the courts of another state?
3320	United States v. Pena, 684 F.3d 1137, 1146 (C.A.11 (Fla.), 2012)	3	The jurisdiction of the nation within its own territory is necessarily exclusive and absolute; all exceptions, therefore, to the full and complete power of a nation within its own territories, must be traced up to the consent of the nation itself.	"The jurisdiction of the nation within its own territory is necessarily exclusive and absolute." Cunard, 262 U.S. at 124, 43 S.Ct. at 507 (quotation omitted). "All exceptions, therefore, to the full and complete power of a nation within its own territories, must be traced up to the consent of the nation itself.	Is jurisdiction of a nation within its own territory necessarily exclusive and absolute and must all exceptions to the full and complete power of a nation within its own territories need to be traced up to the consent of the nation itself?
3321	Doe v. Roman Catholic Diocese of Galveston-Houston, 408 F.Supp.2d 272, 278 (S.D.Tex.,2005)	4	Although not every case impacting foreign affairs is nonjusticiable, cases involving foreign heads of state are routinely found nonjusticiable or justiciable but subject to absolute immunity for the foreign heads of state.	Although not every case impacting foreign affairs is nonjusticiable, cases involving foreign heads of state are routinely found nonjusticiable or justiciable but subject to absolute immunity for the foreign heads of state.	"Although not every case impacting foreign affairs is nonjusticiable, are cases involving foreign heads of state routinely found nonjusticiable or justiciable?"
3322	Credit Suisse v. U.S. Dist. Court for Cent. Dist. of California, 130 F.3d 1342, 1346 (C.A.9 (Cal.),1997)	7	Under current view of act of state doctrine, action will be barred only if (1) there is official act of foreign sovereign performed within its own territory, and (2) relief sought or defense interposed in action would require court in United States to declare invalid foreign sovereign's official act.	Under this current view, an action will be barred only if: (1) there is an "official act of a foreign sovereign performed within its own territory"; and (2) "the relief sought or the defense interposed [in the action would require] a court in the United States to declare invalid the [foreign sovereign's] official act.	"Under current view of the act of state doctrine, when will an action be barred?"
3323	United States v. Louisiana, 394 U.S. 11, 22 (U.S., 1985)	5	Inland waters are subject to complete sovereignty of nation, as much as if they were part of its land territory, and coastal nation has privilege even to exclude foreign vessels altogether.	23 Nearest to the nation's shores are its inland, or internal waters. These are subject to the complete sovereignty of the nation, as much as if they were a part of its land territory, and the coastal nation has the privilege even to exclude foreign vessels altogether.	Are inland waters subject to complete sovereignty of a nation and do coastal nations have privilege to exclude foreign vessels altogether?
3324	Transamerica Leasing v. La Republica de Venezuela, 200 F.3d 843, 855 (C.A.D.C., 2000)	15	The "act of state doctrine" is a substantive rule of law that precludes the district court from inquiring into the legality of a sovereign's public acts; it is not strictly an immunity from suit.	The act of state doctrine is a substantive rule of law that precludes the district court from inquiring into the legality of a sovereign's public acts; it is not strictly an immunity from suit.	Is the act of state doctrine a substantive rule of law that precludes the district court from inquiring into the legality of a sovereign's public acts?

3326	Krengiel v. Lissner Corp., Inc., 250 Ill.App.3d 288, 294 (Ill.App. 1 Dist.,1993)	10	Party whose motion in limine has been denied must object when the challenged evidence is presented at trial in order to preserve issue for review, and failure to raise such objection constitutes waiver of issue on appeal.	Consequently, a party whose motion in limine has been denied must object when the challenged evidence is presented at trial in order to preserve the issue for review, and the failure to raise such an objection constitutes a waiver of the issue on appeal.	Does the failure to raise an objection to a motion in limine constitute a waiver of the issue on appeal?
3328	Choate v. Natvig, 952 S.W.2d 730, 733 (Mo.App. S.D.,1997)	2	Granting motion in limine is interlocutory ruling only, and additional information produced at trial may prompt trial court to alter its pretrial ruling and admit evidence.	"Such a ruling is interlocutory only, and additional information produced at trial may prompt the trial court to alter its pretrial ruling and admit the evidence.	"Is granting a motion in limine only interlocutory, and may additional information produced at trial prompt a trial court to alter its pretrial ruling and admit the evidence?"
3329	Montz v. Hill-Mont Land Co., 329 N.W.2d 657, 657–58 (Iowa,1983)	3	If the pleadings reveal fact issues with respect to law points, disposition under rule governing adjudication of law points is inappropriate unless the parties stipulate the facts. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 105.	If the pleadings reveal fact issues with respect to the law points, disposition under rule 105 is generally inappropriate unless the parties stipulate the facts.	"If the pleadings reveal fact issues with respect to the law points, is a disposition under the rule governing adjudication of law points inappropriate unless the parties stipulate to the facts?"
3330	Katiuzhinsky v. Perry, 152 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1294 (2007)	3	While trial judges ordinarily enjoy broad discretion with respect to the admission and exclusion of evidence in ruling on motions in limine, a court's discretion is limited by the legal principles applicable to the case.	"While trial judges ordinarily enjoy broad discretion with respect to the admission and exclusion of evidence in ruling on motions in limine [citation], a court's discretion is limited by the legal principles applicable to the case.	What limits are placed on the Courts discretion with respect to the admission and exclusion of evidence in ruling on motions in limine?
3331	Great Am. Ins. Co. v. Louis Lesser Enterprises, Inc., 353 F.2d 997, 1001 (8th Cir. 1965)	5	Generally, cause of action is deemed to have accrued when facts exist which enable one party to maintain action against another, or at time when party owning cause of action has legal right to sue thereon.	Generally, a cause of action is deemed to have accrued when facts exist which enable one party to maintain an action against another, or at the time when the party owning the cause of action has a legal right to sue thereon.	Does a cause of action is deemed to have accrued when facts exist which enable one party to maintain an action against another?
3332	United States v. Redzic, 627 F.3d 683, 691-692 (C.A.8, 2010)	10	To prove the payment of an illegal bribe, the government must present evidence of a quid pro quo, but an illegal bribe may be paid with the intent to influence a general course of conduct. 18 U.S.C.A. § 666(a)(2).	To prove the payment of an illegal bribe, the government must present evidence of a quid pro quo, but an illegal bribe may be paid with the intent to influence a general course of conduct.	Must the Government present evidence of a quid pro quo to prove the payment of an illegal bribe?
3333	James Square Assocs. LP v. Mullen, 21 N.Y.3d 233, 247, 993 N.E.2d 374, 381 (2013)	4	A party challenging governmental action as an unconstitutional taking bears a substantial burden, and evaluating whether an action is a taking requires a court to consider the economic impact of the regulation, its interference with reasonable investment backed expectations, and the character of the governmental action. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 5.	"[A] party challenging governmental action as an unconstitutional taking bears a substantial burden," and evaluating whether an action is a "taking" requires a court to consider the "economic impact of the regulation, its interference with reasonable investment backed expectations, and the character of the governmental action" (Eastern Enterprises, 524 U.S. at 523–524, 118 S.Ct. 2131).	Does the plaintiff bear a substantial burden of proving that government action inflicts an unconstitutional taking?

3334	Meek v. Smith, 7 S.W.3d 297, 300 (Tex. App. 1999)	6	If government appropriates property without paying adequate compensation, owner may recover resulting damages in inverse condemnation suit. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 14; Vernon's Ann.Texas Const. Art. 1, SS 17, 19.	If the government appropriates property without paying adequate compensation, the owner may recover the resulting damages in an "inverse condemnation" suit.	"Can the owner recover, the resulting damages in an inverse condemnation suit, if the government appropriates property without paying adequate compensation?"
3335	Nnaka v. Federal Republic of Nigeria, 238 F.Supp.3d 17, 32 (D.D.C., 2017)	27	When act of state doctrine applies, it serves as a rule of decision requiring that such official acts shall be deemed valid in the process of deciding a case.	When the doctrine applies, it serves as a "rule of decision" requiring that such official acts "shall be deemed valid" in the process of deciding a case.	"When act of state doctrine applies, does it serve as a rule of decision requiring that such official acts shall be deemed valid in the process of deciding a case?"
3337	United States v. Brodie, 174 F. Supp. 2d 294, 300 (E.D.Pa., 2001)	3	To make out a foreign sovereign compulsion defense to charged antitrust violation, a party must show that: (1) the behavior violating American law was actually compelled by the foreign government; and (2) the foreign order was "basic and fundamental" to the alleged behavior and not just peripheral to the illegal course of conduct.	To make out a foreign sovereign compulsion defense, a party must show that: (1) the behavior violating American law was actually compelled by the foreign government; and (2) the foreign order was "basic and fundamental" to the alleged behavior and not just peripheral to the illegal course of conduct.	Does the foreign compulsion defense shield from liability the acts of parties carried out in obedience to mandate of foreign government?
3340	Loftus v. Primero Mining Corp., 230 F.Supp.3d 1209, 1229 (C.D.Cal., 2017)	12	The act of state doctrine in its traditional formulation precludes courts from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory.	"The act of state doctrine in its traditional formulation precludes the courts of this country from inquiring into the validity of the public acts a recognized foreign sovereign power committed within its own territory."	"Does the act of state doctrine preclude American courts from inquiring into the validity of the public acts of a recognized foreign sovereign committed on the sovereign's own soil, whether or not the acts conformed to sovereign's own laws?"
3346	PacifiCorp v. Public Service Com'n of Wyo., 103 P.3d 862, 867–68 (Wyo.,2004)	3	The Public Service Commission (PSC) is required to give paramount consideration to the public interest in exercising its statutory powers to regulate and supervise public utilities; the desires of the utility are secondary.	For purposes of this appeal, the most important aspect of the standard of review guiding this Court when reviewing decisions by the Commission is as follows: Speaking specifically of PSC, we have said that PSC is required to give paramount consideration to the public interest in exercising its statutory powers to regulate and supervise public utilities. The desires of the utility are secondary.	Is the Public Service Commission (PSC) required to give paramount consideration to the public interest in exercising its powers to regulate public utilities?
3347	Gary Phillips & Assoc. v. Ameritech Corp., 144 Ohio App.3d 149, 153 (2001)	4	While public utilities are subject to pervasive regulation, and while the Public Utilities Commission (PUCO) is vested with sweeping oversight, such authority is not all-encompassing, nor does it in any manner diminish the jurisdiction of the court of common pleas in other areas of possible claims against public utilities.	While public utilities are subject to pervasive regulation, and while the PUCO is vested with sweeping oversight, such authority is not all-encompassing, nor does it in any manner diminish the "jurisdiction of the court of common pleas in other areas of possible claims against public utilities."	Is the authority of the Public Utilities Commission (PUCO) over public utilities subject to pervasive regulation all-encompassing?

3348	Modesto City Schools v. Education Audits Appeal Panel, 123 Cal. App. 4th 1365, 1381 (2004)	7	To be deemed an underground regulation, which would be invalid because it was not adopted in substantial compliance with the procedures of the Administrative Procedure Act (APA), the agency must intend it to apply generally rather than in a specific case, and the agency must adopt it to implement, interpret, or make specific the law enforced by the agency. West's Ann.Cal.Gov.Code S 11340 et seq.	An 842 underground regulation is a regulation that a court may determine to be invalid because it was not adopted in substantial compliance with the procedures of the Administrative Procedure Act (Gov.Code, 11340 et seq.) (APA). (California Advocates for Nursing Home Reform v. Bont (2003) 106 Cal.App.4th 498, 506, 130 Cal.Rptr.2d 823.) To be deemed an underground regulation, that audit guide must meet two requirements: (1) the agency must intend it to apply generally rather than in a specific case; and (2) the agency must adopt it to implement, interpret, or make specific the law enforced by the agency.	"What is an underground regulation, and what requirements must it meet?"
3349	Jamgotchian v. Slender, 170 Cal. App. 4th 1384, 1400-01 (2009)	9	The tort of trespass to chattels allows recovery for interferences with possession of personal property not sufficiently important to be classed as conversion, and so to compel the defendant to pay the full value of the thing with which he has interfered.	"Dubbed by Prosser the 'little brother of conversion,' the tort of trespass to chattels allows recovery for interferences with possession *1401 of personal property 'not sufficiently important to be classed as conversion, and so to compel the defendant to pay the full value of the thing with which he has interfered.'"	Can there be a recovery for interferences with possession of personal property not sufficiently important to be classed as conversion?
3352	Pittsburgh-Corning Corp. v. Askewe, 823 S.W.2d 759, 760-61 (Tex. App. 1992)	2	"Act of State doctrine" prevents courts of the United States, both federal and state, from inquiring into validity of governmental acts of recognized foreign sovereign committed within its own territory.	Appellant's argument based upon the Act of State doctrine is not supported by the authorities. The doctrine prevents *761 the courts of this country, both federal and state, from inquiring into the validity of governmental acts of a recognized foreign sovereign committed within its own territory.	Does the act of state doctrine prevent courts from inquiring into the validity of governmental acts of recognized foreign sovereign committed within its own territory?
3355	Ball v. Rao, 48 S.W.3d 332, 339 (Tex. App. 2001)	12	The imposition of sanctions for violations of orders in limine is left to the sound discretion of the trial court, and the court of appeals will not reverse such sanctions absent a clear abuse of discretion.	The imposition of sanctions for violations of orders in limine is left to the sound discretion of the trial court and we, as an appellate court, will not reverse a trial court's sanctions absent a clear abuse of discretion. Lassiter v. Shavor, 824 S.W.2d 667, 669 (Tex.App.—Dallas 1992, no writ).	"If the imposition of sanctions for violations of orders in limine is left to the sound discretion of the trial court, will the court of appeals reverse such sanctions absent a clear abuse of discretion?"

3356	Forest City v. City of Oregon, 569 S.W.2d 330, 333 (Mo. App. 1978)	3	Where no administrative body has jurisdiction of regulation, courts do have an equitable jurisdiction to prevent a municipality from enforcing public utility charges which are clearly, palpably and grossly unreasonable; however, such principle applies only when city is acting in nature of a public utility and a city does so only to extent that it supplies utility service to its own inhabitants, as to nonresidents, municipality owes no duty of service, sells in purely private capacity on purely contractual basis and cannot be regulated as to rates charged. V.A.M.S. SS 91.050, 91.060.	Where, as is the situation here, no administrative body has jurisdiction of the rate regulation, the courts do have an equitable jurisdiction to prevent a municipality from enforcing public utility charges which are clearly, palpably and grossly unreasonable. 64 Am.Jur.2d, Public Utilities, Section 128, p. 654; City of Mt. Vernon v. Banks, 380 S.W.2d 268 (Ky.1964); American Aniline Products v. City of Lock Haven, 288 Pa. 420, 135 A. 726 (1927). *334 That principle, however, applies only when the city is acting in the nature of a public utility. A considerable line of cases hold that a city does so only to the extent that it supplies the utility service to its own inhabitants, and that as to nonresidents, the municipality owes no duty of service, sells in purely private capacity on a purely contractual basis, and cannot be regulated as to the rates charged	Do the courts have an equitable jurisdiction to prevent a municipality from enforcing public utility charges that are palpably and grossly unreasonable?
3357	Neal v. Bullock, 538 N.E.2d 308, 309 (Ind.App. 4 Dist.,1989)	2	Measure of damages in case of injury to real estate depends upon determination of whether injury is permanent or temporary; "permanent injury" is one in which cost of restoration of property to its preinjury condition exceeds market value of real estate prior to injury, whereas "temporary injury" is one which is not defined as permanent.	247, 218 N.E.2d 141, this court held that the measure of damages, in a case of injury to the real estate, depends upon a determination of whether the injury is "permanent" or "temporary." A permanent injury is one in which the cost of restoration of the property to its pre-injury condition exceeds the market value of the real estate prior to injury. A temporary injury is one which is not defined as permanent.	What would be the measure of damages in case of a permanent injury of real estate?
3358	Kings Mountain Bd. of Educ. v. North Carolina State Bd. of Educ., 159 N.C.App. 568, 575 (N.C.App.,2003)	7	De facto status arises where a person assumes office under color of authority or where one exercises the duties of the office so long or under such circumstances as to raise a presumption of his right; a de facto officer's necessary official acts are valid as to the public and third persons, but he may be ousted by a direct proceeding.	De facto status arises where a person assumes office "under color of authority" or where one "exercises the duties of the office so long or under such circumstances as to raise a presumption of his right; in which cases his necessary official acts are valid as to the public and third persons; but he may be ousted by a direct proceeding."	When does a de facto status arise?

3360	Com., Dept. of Environmental Resources v. Fiore, 491 A.2d 284, 287, 88 Pa.Cmwlth. 418, 425 (Pa.Cmwlth., 1984)	4	The law which grants authority to conduct warrantless administrative inspections of commercial property must also necessarily provide a predictable scheme of inspection which will be sufficiently certain and regular so that it will provide inadequate substitute for a warrant. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 4.	In Donovan the Supreme Court stressed the fact that the law which grants authority to conduct warrantless inspections must also necessarily provide a predictable scheme of inspection which will be sufficiently certain and regular so that it will provide an adequate substitute for a warrant.	Is it necessary that the law which grants authority to conduct warrantless inspections must also necessarily provide a predictable scheme of inspection?
3361	S. Bell v. MacDonald, 671 So. 2d 207, 210 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1996)	4	Once employer has knowledge of employee's injury, employer is under continuing obligation to place needed workers' compensation benefits in hands of the injured employee and this obligation cannot be met unless employer informs employee of the benefits to which he is entitled.	An employer is under a continuing obligation, once it has knowledge of an employee's injury, to place needed benefits in the hands of the injured worker. Id. This obligation cannot be met unless the employer informs the injured worker of the benefits to which he is entitled.	"Once an employer has knowledge of an employees injury, is the employer under a continuing obligation to place needed benefits in the hands of the injured employee, and is this obligation met when the employer informs the employee of the benefits he is entitled?"
3362	Republic of Philippines v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 43 F.3d 65, 75-76 (C.A.3 (N.J.),1994)	12	Under general principles of international law, tribunal may prescribe laws with respect to conduct outside its territory that has or is intended to have substantial effects within the territory, and where court may prescribe, it may also enforce. Restatement (Third) of the Foreign Relations Law of the United States SS 402, 402(c), 403, 431(1).	Under general principles of international law, a tribunal may prescribe laws with respect to "conduct outside its territory that has or is intended to have substantial effect within its territory." Restatement (Third) of the Foreign Relations Law of the United States 402(c) (1987) (the "Restatement").	"Under general principles of international law, can a tribunal prescribe laws with respect to conduct outside its territory that has or is intended to have substantial effects within the territory?"
3363	Memorial Hosp. v. Heckler, 706 F.2d 1130, 1136 (C.A.Fla.,1983)	6	A court should apply the law in effect at time it renders its decision unless doing so would result in manifest injustice or there is statutory direction or legislative history to the contrary.	A court should apply the law in effect at the time it renders its decision, unless doing so would result in manifest injustice or there is statutory direction or legislative history to the contrary.	Should a court apply the law in effect at time it renders its decision unless doing so would result in manifest injustice?
3364	Log Cabin Republicans v. U.S., 716 F.Supp.2d 884, 968-69 (C.D.Cal., 2010)	23	Review of military regulations challenged on First Amendment grounds is far more deferential than constitutional review of similar laws or regulations designed for civilian society. U.S.C.A. Const.Amend. 1.	"Our review of military regulations challenged on First Amendment grounds is far more deferential than constitutional review of similar laws or regulations designed for civilian society.	Is the review of military regulations challenged on First Amendment grounds more deferential than constitutional review of similar laws or regulations designed for civilian society?
3365	H & M Hennes & Mauritz LP v. Skanska USA Bldg., Inc., 617 F.Supp.2d 152, 159 (E.D.N.Y. 2008)	10	Waiver of subrogation provision is viewed as a device by which the parties merely allocate the risk of liability between themselves to third parties through insurance, and enforcement of such a provision is not precluded by New York law. N.Y.McKinney's General Obligations Law S 5-321.	However, a waiver of subrogation provision is "viewed as a device by which the parties merely allocate the risk of liability between themselves to third parties through insurance," and enforcement of such a provision is not precluded by New York law.	Is the waiver of subrogation provision viewed as a device by which the parties merely allocate the risk of liability between themselves to third parties through insurance?

3366	Parra v. Larchmont Farms, Inc., 932 S.W.2d 68, 72 (Tex.App.-El Paso, 1995)	2	Worker's compensation is security system, rather than double or nothing gambling game, and doctrine of election requires successful selection of inconsistent remedies.	Worker's compensation is a security system, not a double or nothing gambling game, and the doctrine of election requires a successful selection of inconsistent remedies.	"Is workers compensation a security system, rather than a gambling game, and does the doctrine of election require successful selection of inconsistent remedies?"
3367	Franch v. Ankney, 341 Md. 350, 357-58 (1996)	2	Under Workers' Compensation Act, employer is generally required to pay workers' compensation benefits to employee who suffers accidental personal injury in course of employment, regardless of whether employer is at fault for injury. Code, Labor and Employment, S 9-501.	Under the Maryland Workers' Compensation Act, Maryland Code (1991 Repl.Vol, 1995 Supp.), Labor and Employment Article (LE), 9-101 through 9-1201, an employer is generally required to pay workers' compensation benefits to an employee who suffers an accidental personal injury in the course of employment, regardless of whether the employer is *358 at fault for the injury. See LE 9-501.	"When an employee suffers an injury or occupational illness in the course of his or her employment, is the employer required to pay compensation under the terms of the Workers Compensation Act?"
3369	In re Conservatorship of Martha P., 117 Cal. App. 4th 857, 867 (2004)	1	The right to voluntarily dismiss an action or special proceeding before the commencement of trial is not absolute, as statute recognizes exceptions, and other limitations have evolved through the courts' construction of the term "commencement of trial." West's Ann.Cal.C.C.P. S 581(b)(1).	The right of a plaintiff to voluntarily dismiss an action before commencement of trial is not absolute. Code of Civil Procedure section 581 recognizes exceptions to the right; other limitations have evolved through the courts' construction of the term 'commencement of trial.'	"Is the right to voluntarily dismiss an action or special proceeding before the commencement of trial not absolute, as the statutes recognize exceptions?"
3372	Keller v. Reynard, 140 Ind.App. 468, 471 (Ind.App. 1967)	4	Under the state Constitution, the general assembly has the sole power to determine how and by what instrumentalities common school systems shall be administered and carried into effect. Const. art. 8, S 1.	Under the constitution of Indiana our General Assembly has the sole power to determine how and by what instrumentalities our common school systems shall be administered and carried into effect. Constitution of Indiana, Art. 8, Sec. 1.	"Under the State Constitution, does the general assembly have the sole power to determine how and by what instrumentalities common school systems shall be administered and carried into effect?"
3374	Bertram v. Beneficial Consumer Discount Co., 286 F.Supp.2d 453, 458 (M.D.Pa.,2003)	13	Declaration that contract is void nullifies all aspects of agreement, including an embedded arbitration clause, giving neither party the power to ratify or disaffirm its provisions. Restatement (Second) of Contracts S 7 comment.	In contrast, a declaration that a contract is void nullifies all aspects of the agreement, including an embedded arbitration clause, giving neither party the power to ratify or disaffirm its provisions.	Does a declaration that a contract is void nullify all aspects of an agreement including an embedded arbitration clause?

3377	Renfro v. Johnson, 142 Tex. 251, 255–56, 177 S.W.2d 600, 602 (1944)	2	Privilege given by statute permitting plaintiff to take a nonsuit is not without limitation, since policy of law is to avoid needless litigation. Rev.St.1925, art. 2182.	In this connection, we think this case calls for the application of the following equitable rule announced by the Court of Civil Appeals, 175 S.W.2d 92, 94, in this very case: 'Article 2182, R.C.S. 1925, provides that, in a case tried without a jury, at any time before the decision is announced, the plaintiff may take a nonsuit, but the privilege given by the statute is not entirely without limitation. It is the policy of the law to avoid needless litigation, and public policy requires *256 that there be an end to legal controversies.	"Is a privilege given by a statute permitting a plaintiff to take a nonsuit without limitation, since the policy of law is to avoid needless litigation?"
3379	Lands Council v. Powell, 395 F.3d 1019, 1027 (C.A.9 (Idaho),2005)	3	Purpose of National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) is to require disclosure of relevant environmental considerations that were given a "hard look" by the agency, and thereby to permit informed public comment on proposed action and any choices or alternatives that might be pursued with less environmental harm. National Environmental Policy Act of 1969, S 2 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. S 4321 et seq.	The purpose of NEPA is to require disclosure of relevant environmental considerations that were given a "hard look" by the agency, and thereby to permit informed public comment on proposed action and any choices or alternatives that might be pursued with less environmental harm.	Does NEPA require disclosure of relevant information?
3380	Chomski v. Alston Cab Co., 32 A.D.2d 627, 627, 299 N.Y.S.2d 896, 897 (1969)	1	Justice at pretrial term should act as a catalyst in bringing parties together to a fair settlement, and to that end should evince all reasonable exhortation, guidance and direction, eschewing however undue pressure or any coercive measures, no matter how subtly applied.	We derogate in no way from our view, previously expressed, that the Justice at Pretrial Term should act as a catalyst in bringing the parties together to a fair settlement and to that end should evince all reasonable exhortation, guidance and direction, eschewing however undue pressure or any coercive measures, no matter how subtly applied. Wolff v. Laverne, Inc., 17 A.D.2d 213, 233 N.Y.S.2d 555.	How should the Justice at a pretrial term should act?
3381	Connell v. State Highway Commission, 388 P.2d 637, 641, 192 Kan. 371, 375 (Kan. 1964)	7	Primary purpose of pretrial procedure is to define issues and eliminate those that are unnecessary, avoid necessity of proof of purely formal matters that should be admitted, expedite trial, avoid surprise, consider and identify exhibits and documentary evidence, and amend pleadings to conform to issues as defined.	The primary purpose of pretrial procedure is to define the issues and eliminate those that are unnecessary; avoid the necessity of proof of purely formal matters that should be admitted; expedite the trial, avoid surprise; consider and identify exhibits and documentary evidence, and amend the pleadings to conform to the issues as defined.	What is the primary purpose of pre-trial procedure?

3382	Cockrell v. Garton, 507 N.W.2d 38, 40, 244 Neb. 359, 363 (Neb.,1993)	4	Purpose of pretrial conference is to simplify issues, to amend pleadings when necessary, and to avoid unnecessary proof of facts at trial; to that end litigants must adhere to spirit of procedure and are bound by pretrial order to which no exception has been taken.	The purpose of a pretrial conference is to simplify the issues, to amend pleadings when necessary, and to avoid unnecessary proof of facts at trial. To that end litigants must adhere to the spirit of the procedure and are bound by the pretrial order to which no exception has been taken.	To what end must litigants adhere to spirit of pre-trial procedure?
3383	Campbell v. General Dynamics Government Systems Corp., 407 F.3d 546, 552 (C.A.1 (Mass.),2005)	3	A party seeking to stay proceedings or to compel arbitration under the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) must demonstrate that a valid agreement to arbitrate exists, that the movant is entitled to invoke the arbitration clause, that the other party is bound by that clause, and that the claim asserted comes within the clause's scope. 9 U.S.C.A. SS 3, 4.	A party seeking to stay proceedings under section 3 or to compel arbitration under section 4 must demonstrate "that a valid agreement to arbitrate exists, that the movant is entitled to invoke the arbitration clause, that the other party is bound by that clause, and that the claim asserted comes within the clause's scope."	What must a party seeking to stay proceeding or compel arbitration demonstrate?
3384	In re Smallwood, 470 Mass. 1018, 1019 (Mass., 2014)	1	Just as there is no private right of action to obtain discipline of an attorney, there is no private right of action to obtain discipline of a judge, although an individual may file a complaint with the Commission on Judicial Conduct and may be a witness in Commission proceedings; complainant is not a party in the Commission proceeding, and nothing in the Commission's rules or elsewhere in the law authorizes an appeal or other judicial review by a private individual from any decision of the Commission.	First Ass't Clerk of the Supreme Judicial Court for the County of Suffolk, 463 Mass. 1019, 1020, 979 N.E.2d 208 (2012), there is no private right of action to obtain discipline of a judge. The reasoning in those cases applies with equal force here: although an individual may file a complaint with the commission and may be a witness in commission proceedings, he or she is not a party in the commission proceeding, and nothing in the commission's rules or elsewhere in our law authorizes an appeal (or other judicial review) by a private individual from any decision of the commission.	Does an individual have a private right of action to bring disciplinary action against a court clerk?
3386	Shamoun & Norman, LLP v. Hill, 483 S.W.3d 767, 793 (Tex. App. 2016)	43	A duty to preserve evidence is triggered only when a party knows or reasonably should know that there is a substantial chance that a claim will be filed and that evidence in its possession or control will be material and relevant to that claim.	A duty is triggered "only when a party knows or reasonably should know that there is a substantial chance that a claim will be filed and that evidence in its possession or control will be material and relevant to that claim."	Is a duty to preserve evidence triggered only when a party knows or reasonably should know that there is a substantial chance that a claim will be filed and that evidence in its possession or control will be material and relevant to that claim?

3388	Cooper v. Rosser, 207 S.E.2d 513, 515, 232 Ga. 597, 598 (Ga. 1974)	3	Pretrial order should be liberally construed to allow consideration of all questions fairly within ambit of contested issues and where question of precluding issues is raised, matter is within discretion of trial judge. Code, S 81A-116.	A pre-trial order should be liberally construed to allow the consideration of all questions fairly within the ambit of the contested issues. Where the question of precluding issues is raised the matter is within the discretion of the trial judge.	Should a pretrial order be liberally construed to allow the consideration of all questions fairly within the ambit of contested issues?
3389	Great Games v. S.C. Dep't of Revenue, 339 S.C. 79, 84 (2000)	9	The essential characteristics of a "tax" are that it is not a voluntary payment or donation, but an enforced contribution, enacted pursuant to legislative authority, in the exercise of the taxing power, the contribution being of a proportional character, payable in money, and imposed, levied, and collected for the purpose of raising revenue, to be used for public or governmental purposes. Code 1976, S 12-60-30(27).	The essential characteristics of a tax are that it is not a voluntary payment or donation, but an enforced contribution, enacted pursuant to legislative authority, in the exercise of the taxing power, the contribution being of a proportional character, payable in money, and imposed, levied, and collected for the purpose of raising revenue, to be used for public or governmental purposes.	"Does the question of whether a particular contribution, charge, or burden is to be regarded as a tax depends on its real nature and not on its designation?"
3390	Young v. Williams, 47 A.D.3d 1084, 1086, 850 N.Y.S.2d 262, 264 (2008)	2	In order to avoid a release on the grounds of fraud, a party must allege every material element of fraud with specific and detailed evidence in the record sufficient to establish a prima facie case.	With respect to plaintiff's claim of fraud, we note that " '[i]n order to avoid a release on [that] ground[] ..., a party must allege every material element of fraud with specific and detailed evidence in the record sufficient to establish a prima facie case' " (Morby v. Di Siena Assoc., 291 A.D.2d 604, 605, 737 N.Y.S.2d 678 [2002], quoting Touloumis v. Chalem, 156 A.D.2d 230, 232-233, 548 N.Y.S.2d 493 [1989]; see Shklovskiy v. Khan, 273 A.D.2d 371, 372, 709 N.Y.S.2d 208 [2000]).	Must a party allege every material element of fraud to avoid a release?
3391	Straub v. Smith, No. 31955, 2006 WL 1982878, at *4 (Idaho Ct. App. July 18, 2006)	6	A voluntary dismissal is a matter of right and does not require the consent or permission of the district court so long as a notice of dismissal or a signed stipulation to dismiss is filed with the district court. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(a)(1).	A voluntary dismissal under Rule 41(a)(1) is a matter of right and does not require the consent or permission of the district court so long as a notice of dismissal or a signed stipulation to dismiss is filed with the district court.	Is a voluntary dismissal a matter of right and does not require the consent or permission of the district court so long as a notice of dismissal or a signed stipulation to dismiss is filed with the district court?
3392	Kleibrink v. Missouri-Kansas-Texas R. Co., Inc., 224 Kan. 437, 442 (Kan.,1978)	8	Generally, pretrial order controls subsequent course of action unless such order is modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice. Rules of Civil Procedure, rule 16, K.S.A. 60-216.	As a general rule a pretrial order entered by the trial court, pursuant to K.S.A. 60-216, controls the subsequent course of action unless such order is modified at the trial to prevent manifest injustice.	"Generally, does a pretrial order control a subsequent course of action unless such order is modified at trial to prevent manifest injustice?"

3393	Adams v. Bath and Body Works, Inc., 830 N.E.2d 645, 653, 294 Ill.Dec. 233, 241, 358 Ill.App.3d 387, 395 (Ill.App. 1 Dist.,2005)	6	Even prior to the filing of a strict-products-liability action, a potential litigant owes a duty to take reasonable measures to preserve the integrity of relevant and material evidence. Sup.Ct.Rules, Rule 219(c).	Even prior to the filing of such a lawsuit, a potential litigant owes a duty to take reasonable measures to preserve the integrity of relevant and material evidence.	Does a potential litigant owe a duty to take reasonable measures to preserve the integrity of relevant and material evidence prior to the filing of the lawsuit?
3394	Holiday Queen Land Corp. v. Baker, 489 F.2d 1031, 1032 (5th Cir. 1974)	1	A court exercising its discretion in considering a motion for voluntary dismissal must follow the traditional principle that dismissal should be allowed unless defendant will suffer some plain prejudice other than the mere prospect of a second lawsuit; and it is not a bar that plaintiff may obtain some tactical advantage thereby. Fed.Rules Civ.Proc. rule 41(a)(2), 28 U.S.C.A.	a court exercising its discretion in considering voluntary dismissal must: follow the traditional principle that dismissal should be allowed unless the defendant will suffer some plain prejudice other than the mere prospect of a second lawsuit. It is no bar to dismissal that plaintiff may obtain some tactical advantage thereby.	Can voluntary dismissals be allowed without any prejudice to the defendant other than by the mere prospect of a second lawsuit?
3395	In re Collette's Estate, 122 Vt. 231, 231 (1961)	1	Pre-trial court is considered a part of trial procedure and subsequent course of action is controlled by agreements or admissions made at pretrial conference.	The pre-trial court is considered a part of the trial procedure in any cause. The subsequent course of action is controlled by agreements or admissions made at the pre-trial conference.	Is the pre-trial court considered a part of the trial procedure and the subsequent course of action is controlled by agreements or admissions made at the pretrial conference?
3396	Robinson v. Boyd, 288 Ga. 53, 56 (Ga., 2010)	2	A renewal suit filed after a voluntary dismissal is deemed an action de novo, in which defenses to the original action are inapplicable, unless they would render the original action void and not just voidable. West's Ga.Code Ann. S 9-2-61(a).	Most important for the issue presented, it is firmly established that the renewal suit is deemed an action de novo, in which defenses to the original action are inapplicable unless they would render the original action void and not just voidable.	"Is a renewal suit filed after a voluntary dismissal deemed an action de novo, in which defenses to the original action are inapplicable, unless they would render the original action void and not just voidable?"
3397	Bank of America, N.A. v. Mitchell, 139 Cal.Rptr.3d 562, 569, 204 Cal.App.4th 1199, 1209 (Cal.App. 2 Dist., 2012)	7	Upon the proper exercise of the right of voluntary dismissal, a trial court would thereafter lack jurisdiction to enter further orders in the dismissed action. West's Ann.Cal.C.C.P. S 581.	Upon the proper exercise of the right of voluntary dismissal, a trial court " 'would thereafter lack jurisdiction to enter further orders in the dismissed action.' "	"Upon the proper exercise of the right of voluntary dismissal, will a trial court thereafter lack jurisdiction to enter further orders in the dismissed action?"
3398	Hiers v. Mitchell, 116 So. 81, 85, 95 Fla. 345, 352 (Fla. 1928)	24	"Tax" is enforced contribution of money or other property assessed by reasonable rule or apportionment by authority of sovereign state on persons or property within jurisdiction to defray public expenses.	A tax is an enforced contribution of money or other property, assessed in accordance with some reasonable rule or apportionment by authority of a sovereign state on persons or property within its jurisdiction for the purpose of defraying the public expenses.	Is tax an enforced contribution of money or other property on persons or property within its jurisdiction for the purpose of defraying the public expenses?

3400	Great Games v. S.C. Dep't of Revenue, 339 S.C. 79, 84 (2000)	9	The essential characteristics of a "tax" are that it is not a voluntary payment or donation, but an enforced contribution, enacted pursuant to legislative authority, in the exercise of the taxing power, the contribution being of a proportional character, payable in money, and imposed, levied, and collected for the purpose of raising revenue, to be used for public or governmental purposes. Code 1976, S 12-60-30(27).	The essential characteristics of a tax are that it is not a voluntary payment or donation, but an enforced contribution, enacted pursuant to legislative authority, in the exercise of the taxing power, the contribution being of a proportional character, payable in money, and imposed, levied, and collected for the purpose of raising revenue, to be used for public or governmental purposes.	What is the essential feature of a tax?
3402	J.P. v. District Court In and For 2nd Judicial Dist. of Denver, 873 P.2d 745, 751 (Colo.,1994)	7	Sanction of issue or witness preclusion for discovery violation is severe sanction and should only be invoked if there has been serious misconduct by party seeking modification of pretrial order by endorsement of substitute witness. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 16.	However, issue or witness preclusion is a severe sanction and should only be invoked when there has been serious misconduct by the party seeking modification of the pretrial order by the endorsement of a substitute witness.	Should severe discovery sanctions such as issue or witness preclusion be invoked when there has been serious misconduct by party seeking modification of pretrial order?
3404	Harris v. Billings, 16 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1402-03, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718, 721 (1993)	5	Plaintiff may not dismiss without prejudice when, having failed to answer requests for admissions, all issues in case are deemed admitted in defendant's favor.	Nor may a plaintiff dismiss without prejudice when, having failed to answer requests for admissions, all the issues in the case are deemed admitted in defendant's favor.	"Can a plaintiff dismiss without prejudice when, having failed to answer requests for admissions, all issues in the case are deemed admitted in the defendant's favor?"
3406	Ramsey v. Criswell, 850 S.W.2d 258, 259 (Tex. App. 1993)	1	Party seeking to have deemed admissions withdrawn has burden to prove good cause for failure to make timely answers, that withdrawal of admissions would not prejudice opposing party, and that presentation of merits would be subserved by withdrawal; requirement of good cause may be established by showing that failure to file was not intentional or in conscious disregard of obligation to timely file answer, and under this standard, even slight excuse for original failure to answer is sufficient. Vernon's Ann.Texas Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 169, subds. 1, 2.	The party seeking to have deemed admissions withdrawn has the burden to present evidence to the court that establishes good cause for his failure to make timely answers, that withdrawal of the admissions would not prejudice the opposing party, and that the presentation of the merits would be subserved by the withdrawal. Tinney v. Team Bank, 819 S.W.2d 560, 562 (Tex.App.-Fort Worth 1991, writ denied); Boone v. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n, 790 S.W.2d 683, 688 (Tex.App.-Tyler 1990, no writ). The requirement of good cause may be established by a showing that the failure to file was not intentional or in conscious disregard of the party's obligation to timely file an answer. Boone v. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n, 790 S.W.2d at 689. Under this standard, even a slight excuse for the original failure to answer is sufficient.	"Generally, does the party seeking withdrawal of deemed admissions have the burden to establish good cause?"

3407	Est. of Barksdale ex rel. Farthing v. Duke Univ. Med. Ctr., 175 N.C. App. 102, 108–09, 623 S.E.2d 51, 56 (2005)	5	Voluntary dismissal of action strips the trial court of authority to enter further orders in the case, except to enter specific orders apportioning and taxing costs. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(a,d), West's N.C.G.S.A. § 1A-1.	The effects of a Rule 41(a) voluntary dismissal are well-settled in our state. “ ‘A Rule 41(a) dismissal strips the trial court of authority to enter further orders in the case, except as provided by Rule 41(d)[,] which authorizes the court to enter specific orders apportioning *109 and taxing costs.’ ”	"Does voluntary dismissal of an action strip the trial court of authority to enter further orders in the case, except to enter specific orders apportioning and taxing costs?"
3408	Roberts v. General Motors Corp., 140 N.H. 723, 727 (N.H., 1996)	14	Trial court can deny plaintiff's motion for voluntary nonsuit without prejudice, and grant nonsuit only with prejudice, if it would be manifestly unjust to defendant to grant plaintiff's request.	The court can, for example, deny a plaintiff's motion for voluntary nonsuit without prejudice; the court has discretion to grant a nonsuit only with prejudice, if it would be "manifestly unjust" to the defendant to grant plaintiff's request.	"Can a trial court deny a plaintiff's motion for voluntary nonsuit without prejudice, and grant nonsuit only with prejudice, if it would be manifestly unjust to the defendant to grant plaintiff's request?"
3411	Jones v. Boswell, 250 S.W.3d 140, 143 (Tex. App. 2008)	5	The commission of a trespass to chattel does not necessarily mean that the actor is liable for damages; liability does not attach unless the wrongful detention is accompanied by actual damage to the property or deprives the owner of its use for a substantial period of time.	The commission of a trespass does not necessarily mean that the actor is liable for damages. Liability does not attach unless the wrongful detention is accompanied by actual damage to the property or deprives the owner of its use for a substantial period of time.	Does the commission of a trespass to chattels necessarily mean that the actor is liable for damages?
